"A graphic manual on making simple metal articles in which many small drawings interspersed in the text show each step of 42 projects. The author is a director of therapeutic occupations in a hospital, and his book is planned for use in similar institutions." Booklist

Booklist 42:59 O 15 '45
School & Society 62:31 Jl 14 '45 20w

HAAS, LOUIS JAMES. Practical occupational therapy for the mentally and nervously ill. 432p il $6 Bruce pub.
615.851 Occupational therapy. Handicraft. Insane—Care and treatment SG44-257

"Much of the book is based on work with men in hospitals. Chapters on the need for occupational therapy, organizing a department in a hospital, quarters, equipment, supplies, and administering the treatment. Two thirds of the book is directions on specific crafts—metal, wood, reed, string, and concrete. Bibliographies for most chapters." Booklist

Booklist 41:120 D 15 '44

"Excellent illustrations."
+ Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 70w
Wis Lib Bul 41:110 N '45

HABERLY, LOYD. Silent fame, and other poems. 73p $1.75 Macmillan 811 45-3103

A book of brief lyrics by an American poet, born in Oregon. "He favors stars, birds, lambs, bridals, and spring [and] has fallen completely under the spell of the memory-haunted English landscape. This he sees as Rupert Brooke or Robert Herrick saw it; he responds with a simple joy or moralized wonder not unlike that of W. H. Davies; at times a line suggests the cadence, though not the mood, of A. E. Housman." N Y Times

"Glib and studded with old saws and bright sayings, this is hardly an important or valuable contribution."
— Kirkus 13:25 Ja 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by F. C. Flint
N Y Times p8 Ag 26 '45 90w

Reviewed by F. C. Golffing
Poetry 67:227 Ja '46 150w

HABERLY, LOYD—Continued

"A generous volume of gentle, graceful lyrics." Christine Sauer

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 24 '45 120w

HABERMAN, MRS HELEN (LIEBMAN). How about tomorrow morning? 264p $2.50 Prentice-Hall

45-3924

Tina Kelbourne, the central character, is a live wire advertising executive making $40,000 a year. Her husband, a brilliant doctor, is not so sure that money is the most important object in life. A nervous break-down finally proves to Tina that the human body can bear only so much, and that money spent on other people sometimes pays dividends.

"The episode of Tina's nervous breakdown is, from a literary point of view, the best handled and the most convincing part of the book. Unfortunately, however, her subsequent regeneration is too rapid and too thorough to be convincing. The reader has been led to believe that her lust for money dates back to her earliest childhood. Now, after only a few weeks, her sole interest in her money is how it can benefit others." Clare Jaynes

— + Book Week p10 My 6 '45 400w

"A woman's book that is more substantial than some."

+ Kirkus 13:94 Mr 1 '45 150w

"I am sure that the author of 'How About Tomorrow Morning?' intended her novel as an objectified comment upon the sad condition of the successful career woman. But Mrs. Haberman has so little creative superiority to her material—she doesn't recognize, for instance, that the solution of Tina's problems is part and parcel of Tina's whole career—that the book has its considerable interest only as an item of the contemporary confusion. Tina's cultural color, her social ambitions, her mean little educated tastes and values, are dyed deep into the whole of Mrs. Haberman's literary effort. What price then—Mrs Haberman herself forces the question—Emerson, Arnold, and Wordsworth, and volume after volume of James?" Diana Trilling

— Nation 160:550 My 12 '45 1300w

"Unfortunately, Tina is such an unsympathetic and unattractive character that none of this matters very much." M. T. Clarke

— N Y Times p17 My 20 '45 130w

"It seems a pity that the meretricious aspects of a novel's material should flow over into the novel itself. For example, there is no reason why Miss Haberman, in writing of the trashy insincerity of the advertising business, should have permitted her own writing to become trashy and insincere." N. L. Rothman

— Sat R of Lit 28:37 N 10 '45 220w

Reviewed by Rhea Morgan

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 300w

"If Helen Haberman hadn't chosen to write 'How About Tomorrow Morning?' as a novel—and a very good novel, at that—she could have unveiled its ideas in several other forms. . . But by putting all her wealth of material in fictional form, Miss Haberman has made it dramatic, diverting and still not too divorced from reality." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 13 '45 450w

HACKETT, ALICE PAYNE (MRS ALBERT GEORGE HARTER). Fifty years of best sellers, 1895-1945. 140p $3 Bowker

655.473 Publishers and publishing. Bibliography—Best books. Books and reading

45-5674

Facts and figures about the best selling books of the last fifty years in America, based on the files of The Bookman and the Publishers' Weekly. Contents: The structure of the best seller; Best sellers, 1895-1945; Best seller subjects; American best sellers, 1880-1945, in order of sales; Alphabetical list of American best sellers to 1945; Best sellers before 1880; Selective bibliography. The author is associate editor of the Publishers' Weekly.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 176:125 Jl '45 480w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Jl 1 '45 700w

Booklist 41:332 Jl 15 '45

Bookmark 6:3 N '45

"Everyone in the book trade will find these lists invaluable. Most of us will read with eager interest her concise summing up of the salient facts for each of these years—her conclusions as to trends—and many of us will analyze the whole outline for major trends and futures based on past."

+ Kirkus 13:293 Jl 1 '45 150w

"It is a useful book and an amusing and sometimes disconcerting one when we see how mediocre many popular choices have been. It will furnish subjects for essays and discussions for years to come. . . Selective bibliography is excellent. Best sellers before 1880 complete the picture. For all libraries and should not be restricted to reference." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 70:586 Je 15 '45 110w

"Every librarian and teacher and student of American literature will have a keen interest in the facts, figures, surprises and jogs to memory presented in this little volume." A. P. DeWeese

+ Library J 70:681 Ag '45 380w

"Alice Payne Hackett has done her job well. . . While it is possible to differ with a number of Miss Hackett's conclusions, her book presents a fascinating array of data which manage, in a quiet sort of way, to be an overwhelming indictment of the nation's reading habits." Jack Goodman and A. R. Leventhal

+ N Y Times p3 Je 24 '45 1800w

"Miss Hackett has provided us with an excellent reference manual as well as a dream book for publishers." Harry Hansen

+ Publishers' Weekly 137:2510 Je 30 '45 1450w

"An indispensable book for book editors, publishers and the like. It definitely does not tell you the secret formula of how to whip up a tasty dish for the millions, but it offers some interesting observations on American reading habits." Marshall Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 30 '45 600w

Time 45:93 Je 25 '45 1100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:60 S '45 280w

"It would be hard to find another book as small as this, a simple compilation without attempt at literary style, that will start as many people thinking in as many different directions."

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Ag 5 '45 330w

HADAMARD, JACQUES SALOMON. Essay on the psychology of invention in the mathematical field. 143p $2 Princeton univ. press

510 Mathematics. Psychology. Inventions

A45-1177

"This is a very scholarly essay by an outstanding French mathematician, now associated with the École Libre des Hautes Études in New York City. It deals with the creative mental processes involved in scientific discovery and invention. What produces the sudden enlightenment that we appropriately designate as inspiration? How does the subconscious mind cooperate with the conscious in achieving strokes of genius? These and allied questions are considered from the point of view of the mathematician, but they apply with equal validity in every sector of the broad field of scientific research." Scientific Bk Club R

"The psychological processes involved in creative research have been only rarely described by eminent men of science actively engaged in such work. Professor Hadamard's charmingly written little book is therefore a welcome addition to this literature." E. N.

+ J Philos 42:333 Je 7 '45 390w

"It is essential for the mathematician, and the layman will find it good reading."
+ Library J 70:687 Ag '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:25 Ap '45
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 F '45 360w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:48 Je '45 200w

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. Rainbow's end. 168p $2 Macmillan 46-304

"Here is a Maine coast story, beginning with the shipwreck of an old ship's carpenter, named Toby, and his mascot, a cat named Blackie. Safe on the shore, Toby is full of plans for saying farewell to the sea and settling down after years spent in wandering through the ports of the world, with full share of narrow escapes and hazardous rescues. His life ashore in the small fishing settlement is one of kindly friendship for the children, whose toys he makes and mends, and of genial neighborliness to everyone." Horn Bk

Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46

"A pleasant warm-hearted story, written with authentic feeling for life along the shore." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:349 S '45 90w
Kirkus 13:315 Jl 15 '45 110w

"The authors have reached a 'new high' in this book." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 70:953 O 15 '45 50w
N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 100w

"This is a story that is warm with humor and with the natural 'give and take' of natural, kindly people. The scent of apple blossoms is in it and the strong salty smell of the sea. The pictures are in black and white and in color. It is an attractive looking book." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:58 N 10 '45 500w

"While it is for eight-year-olds who read by themselves, parents who read to younger children will find these gracious little adventures, always coming out right, will be treasured by younger little folks if read aloud before bedtime." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 23 '45 360w

HADINGHAM, RONALD. Astronomical air navigation; a comprehensive handbook embodying the latest principles for practical navigators, instructors and students; with a foreword by P. E. Maitland. 132p il $2.50 Crowell [10s 6d Tech. press]
629.1325 Navigation (aeronautics) 44-51203

"This text by a British squadron leader is devoted primarily to practical work in the air with only the minimum of references to the mathematical and theoretical aspects of the subject. It recommended several time-saving procedures for the navigator en route, such as the pre-flight computation of sights for certain points along the way where they are likely to be needed, and the star curve method of plotting position lines without any reference to tables. It presents some elementary astronomy, with the basic principles of 'working out a sight' and solving the astronomical triangle." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:9 Ja '44

HADLEY, EARL J. Magic powder; history of the Universal atlas cement company and the cement industry. 382p il $3.50 Putnam
666.9 Cement industries. Universal atlas cement company 45-3009

"The story of Portland cement is told in a history of the Universal Atlas Cement Co. Nontechnical in nature, it shows how cement and concrete have entered into virtually every activity of engineering and architecture." Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ap 22 '45 220w
Booklist 41:296 Je 15 '45
Chem & Eng N 23:944 My 25 '45 30w

"There are so few literary records of industrial development in the United States that Hadley's 'The Magic Powder', which is a history of the Universal Atlas Cement Co., represents a noteworthy addition, in spite of its restricted scope. It centers around the founding and evolution of the Atlas Portland Cement Co. and its younger competitor the Universal, but the author has clothed this framework with a picturesque assemblage of personalities and events of the industry. The result is a document of unusually wide appeal." F. E. Schmitt
+ Eng N 134:111 Je 14 '45 500w
Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 50w

HAGEN, LOUIS E. Arnhem lift; diary of a glider pilot. 82p $1 Farrar [5s Pilot]
940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 45-9750

A story of the experiences of an English glider pilot during the nine days between landing in the neighborhood of Arnhem, and the withdrawal of whatever force was left.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p8 N 4 '45 270w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 10 '46 270w
Kirkus 13:355 Ag 15 '45 90w
Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 29:80 F 3 '45 900w

"This book, modest as it is both in size and style, has all the kick of an atomic bomb, but differs from the Smyth report in that, when you have read it, the secret is out. Described as the 'Diary of a Glider Pilot,' the author takes the reader through a week behind the enemy lines, during which time he was occupied in preserving his life and fending off the attacks of his adversaries. The author, a German who came to England in 1933 at the age of 16 after an experience in a concentration camp, retains a nice sense of objectivity." Arthur Mallet
+ N Y Times p3 D 23 '45 400w

"This little book is the best description of action by an actual combatant that this present war has produced. One looks to it in vain for an account of the fight at Arnhem as a whole; the fighting man is too near the battle to be able to understand it. But while there is nothing here for the strategist and but little for the student of tactics, there is much that will interest the psychologist."
+ Spec 174:296 Mr 30 '45 180w

"It gives a clear, detailed picture of the ordeal our troops went through, written simply, without eye to effect or to any other purpose than chronicling exactly what happened from hour to hour in the tree-to-tree and house-to-house fighting."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p167 Ap 7 '45 120w

"This is total war as seen from one man's slit trench. It belongs on the shelf next to Ernie Pyle." Richard Match
+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 28 '45 550w

HAGER, MRS ALICE (ROGERS). Brazil, giant to the south; photographs by Jackie Martin. 80p $2 Macmillan
918.1 Brazil—Description and travel 45-1738

"Alice Hager, well-known newspaperwoman, has written the text, while Jackie Martin, one of America's most distinguished photographers, has contributed almost all of the remarkably graphic illustrations. Together they have created the essence of Brazil—a picture of the people, 'gifted with a deeply sensitive imagination, fiery and dreamy in turn, impractical one moment and thriftily down to earth the next'; of the wide variation in geography, the division into states; of products, industry, education; of government, rivers, cities, customs, home life, and artistic creation." Scientific Bk Club R

HAGER, ALICE—Continued

"Here is an attractive and really informative book on Brazil which will interest adults and young people alike." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p18 Ap 22 '45 120w
Booklist 41:227 Ap 1 '45

"An interesting experiment in bookmaking, this integral unity of text and pictures, successfully developed."
+ Kirkus 13:35 Ja 15 '45 90w

"Book is well organized and will be useful to all interested in or studying Brazil. No index but good table of contents. Recommended for ages nine to thirteen." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 70w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 Mr '45 240w

Reviewed by Julia Buxton
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 170w
Weekly Book Review p14 My 20 '45 300w
Wis Lib Bul 41:55 My '45

HAGER, MRS ALICE (ROGERS). Wings for the dragon; the air war in Asia. 307p il maps $3 Dodd

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Asia 45-9180

An account of the air war in the Burma, India, and China theater, the material for which was gathered first hand by an American newspaper woman. Anecdotes of flights, work of the ground crews, and comments on various types of planes, are included. The last chapter outlines the importance of China's postwar potentialities. No index.

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer
Book Week p12 O 28 '45 310w
Booklist 42:182 F 1 '46

"Alice Hager must eat, drink and sleep aviation, so air-minded is she. This book [is] written with her usual racy style." Thelma Brackett
+ Library J 70:819 S 15 '45 110w

"Mrs. Hager, who is one of this country's best known writers on aviation, went to the China-Burma-India area in the fall of 1944 to gather information on the fighting there. She had the background to understand what she saw. This is her report, and a cracking good one it is, of the air fighting in India, Burma and China, the airline over the Himalayas, and all the heartbreaking months of building and supplying and fighting with never enough of anything." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 20 '46 750w

HAIGHT, ELIZABETH HAZELTON. More essays on Greek romances. 215p $2.50 Longmans

880.9 Greek fiction—History and criticism 45-4291

The author of Essays on the Greek Romances (Book Review Digest, 1943) now professor emeritus of Latin at Vassar college, presents in this book a second series of studies on early works of fiction. She treats also of the Alexander Romance, and of Boccaccio's literary debts to Apuleius.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 23 '45 700w

"Although a work of scholarship most likely to be used in college courses in the history of fiction, or for graduate study book is full of interesting sidelights and curious lore. We agree with Dr. Haight that the late John Buchan would have enjoyed it." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 70:218 Mr 1 '45 110w
Times [London] Lit Sup p320 Jl 7 '45 120w

HAINES, DONAL HAMILTON. The fortress; a story of Hillton academy. 248p $2 Farrar 45-3729

The problems of Peter Oakes, discharged from the army minus an arm. Peter returns to his old school, Hillton academy, as housemaster, and in his efforts to help his pupils, finds some compensation for his own troubles. For older boys.

"Donal Hamilton Haines has written another fine book for older boys in 'The Fortress.' It is not only a corking good story, but it deals thoughtfully and wisely with problems current today."
+ Book Week p16 Je 3 '45 270w
+ Kirkus 13:201 My 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by R. M. McEvoy
Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 70w

"The antagonism toward Hilton of the local paper's unscrupulous editor, the rivalry of the town high school, the incautious though innocent utterances of a much tried member of the Hillton faculty are handled with more subtlety than is customary in school stories; the characters, from staff members down to little Peewee . . . are real enough to make us feel we have met and known them all." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p18 My 13 '45 130w

"Most ambitious of Mr. Haines's stories of preparatory-school life, this keeps within the frame of such fiction though the problem with which it deals has wider implications than those involving the dignified institution known as Hillton Academy. . . The scene is faithfully represented, and if the general impression the story conveys is rather of milling around than of getting anywhere, that is just what such schools did do in the difficult months of wartime in which the tale takes place."
+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 20 '45 360w

HALE, CHRISTOPHER, pseud. See Stevens, F. M. R.

HALL, EDWARD TWITCHELL. Early stockaded settlements in the Governador, New Mexico; a marginal Anasazi development from Basket maker III to Pueblo I times. 96p il maps $2 Columbia univ. press [10s Oxford]

913.789 New Mexico—Antiquities. Indians of North America—New Mexico A45-456

"The 'Governador' is an area hitherto little explored (except by 'pot-hunters'), just south of the Colorado line and about midway between the Rio Grande and the Arizona-New Mexico line. The expedition was sponsored jointly by Columbia University and the Laboratory of Anthropology at Santa Fe. Its purpose was to determine the relations between various phases of early culture and to fill in some gaps in the series which, so far as present knowledge goes, extends (with some gaps still remaining) from about 600 A.D. to the modern Navajo." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:145 Ja 31 '45 110w

"While it is far from being a bedside book, it is fascinating reading for anyone who realizes that the tremendous spaces of the American Southwest have served to do more than stimulate songs by people who don't want to be fenced in." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 6 '45 750w

HALL, JOSEF WASHINGTON (UPTON CLOSE, pseud), and BURKE, MERLE. Ladder of history. 825p il maps $2.80 Macmillan

901 Civilization—History 45-7668

This textbook for high school students is in two parts. "Part One is a swift chronological survey of the story of man from the earliest records of the ancient civilizations of Asia and the Near East . . . to the emergence of modern nations. . . Part Two which is topically organized, traces the development of religion, of government and laws, of language and literatures, of science and invention, of arts and music, of war and of efforts to maintain peace." (Authors' preface) Bibliography at end of each unit except the last. Index.

Current Hist 9:549 D '45 60w

School & Society 62:128 Ag 25 '45 40w

"Although the style of the book is attractive and vigorous, there are parts that sometimes lack clarity. Sometimes the vocabulary is not well chosen. The reviewer is of the opinion that this text will be a popular and a useful one. Its general plan and purposes are in line with the interests of the modern world. It has a consistent philosophy and viewpoint. It attempts to make history vital, meaningful, and purposeful." W. F. English

+ — Social Educ 9:377 D '45 600w

Social Studies 36:332 N '45 40w

HALL, MARJORY. Model child; il. by Winifred W. Coffin. 211p $2 Houghton

45-8462

Bunny Wayland, a rather spoiled young thing, decides to try modeling, just because it is glamorous. At first she is a failure because of her own inadequacies, but when she tries again, she has some small successs. For older girls.

"Somewhat strained and talky."

Kirkus 13:317 Jl 15 '45 130w

"Bunny is not entirely convincing. Girls will like the slight romance." E. A. Groves

Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 O 14 '45 230w

HALL, WILLIAM NORMAN. Shoelace robin; with drawings by Robert Lawson. [20p] $1 Crowell

45-9838

Picture-story book for five-year-olds. It describes Michael O'Malley's attempts to learn how to lace his own shoes, and his final triumph, due to the help of a clever robin. Small children can follow the pattern of lacing shoes from the pictures.

" 'The Shoelace Robin' is an example of a good idea perfectly executed."

+ Book Week p6 N 11 '45 180w

Kirkus 13:491 N 1 '45 80w

"A most attractive little book gaily illustrated by Robert Lawson in brilliant reds and black and white. . . This book should be welcomed by parents." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 80w

"The story of how Michael O'Malley received help from a robin will appeal to both parents and children. William Hall has written a pleasing story in which drawings of Michael's shoe and a big, strong robin by Robert Lawson play a big part." L. M. P.

+ N Y Times p10 N 11 '45 90w

"You can't look at this without chuckling, but a very little child can get more than pleasure out of it."

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 11 '45 180w

HALL, WILLIAM NORMAN. Watch the puppy grow; pictures by Ruth Carroll. $1 Crowell

A picture book in which a puppy grows and grows until he's all grown up.

"Ruth Carroll's pictures of Woolly are very winning and the book provides informative entertainment for the youngest." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p17 O 21 '45 110w

Kirkus 13:368 Ag 15 '45 150w

N Y Times p25 Ag 26 '45 80w

HALLER, WILLIAM, and DAVIES, GODFREY, eds. Leveller tracts, 1647-1653. 481p facsims $6.50 Columbia univ. press; Huntington lib [44s Oxford]

342.42 Levellers. Great Britain—Constitutional history—Sources A44-2551

"We may learn something to our advantage from the adventures in liberty carried on by bold pioneers in days when men enjoyed fewer civil rights and held them by even more precarious tenure than now. Among the left-wing English Puritans of the seventeenth century there were such pioneers. Milton was the most famous of these. But the most thoroughgoing and uncompromising champions of individual liberty were the 'Levellers', and the head and front of that group was John Lilburne. . . In the present volume Professor Haller gives, in full, sixteen Leveller documents, with ample introduction, notes and scholarly apparatus." Christian Century

Reviewed by T. C. Pease

Am Hist R 50:315 Ja '45 450w

"The introduction is readable and informing, the notes are helpful, and the tracts themselves are of marked intrinsic interest." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 D 24 '44 90w

"It is a stimulus to one's love of liberty, and to clear thinking about it, to read the bold announcements of these Levellers, sometimes flung in the teeth of the dictator, sometimes delivered at the bar of a subservient Parliament, sometimes published from prison, at a time when the respectable statesmen and churchmen did not pay even lip service to democracy." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:520 Ap 25 '45 1200w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 23 '45 90w

Reviewed by H. N. Brailsford

New Statesman & Nation 30:270 O 20 '45 600w

"This scholarly edition of sixteen of the most important Leveller tracts, in which an American editor has collaborated with the leading English bibliographer of the period, will be welcomed by all students of Puritanism and its political offshoots—if they can gain access to a work as yet published only in America."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Ap 28 '45 270w

HALLERAN, EUGENE E. Prairie guns. 256p $2 Macrae Smith co.

44-7729

Western story.

Booklist 41:90 N 15 '44

"Satisfactory shooting yarn."

+ Kirkus 12:288 Jl 1 '44 90w

"A good story of the old west."

+ Wis Lib Bul 41:21 Ja '45

HALLERAN, EUGENE E. Thirteen toy pistols. 223p $2 McKay

45-8335

Detective story.

"Adequate but somehow mechanical."

Kirkus 13:230 Je 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p10 S 30 '45 90w

"Confusing—but good."

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 22 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p26 S 30 '45 90w

HALLIDAY, BRETT, pseud. See Dresser, D.

HALM, GEORGE. International monetary cooperation. 355p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

332.15 Money. Exchange 45-1519

"The purpose of this book is to explain the importance of the International Monetary Fund and to review the discussion which led to the Agreement of Bretton Woods. Rather than limit the investigation to a commentary on details of the proposed international organization, [the author has] tried to contrast the Agreement with the earlier plans (particularly the Keynes Plan) and the alternative offered by writers who were not willing to compromise." Pref

"It is difficult to gauge the audience for whom the volume was intended; since it demands a knowledge of monetary economics, presumably it was not written for popular appeal. The book, therefore, might have been more penetrating and critical, while in no way weakening its argument. Problems raised by various critics should have received more adequate treatment. . . As the only over-all treatment of an important and current problem the book is valuable." Rita Davidson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1051 O '45 330w

Reviewed by S. D. Southworth

Ann Am Acad 240:139 Jl '45 380w

"His discussion seems to me eminently fair and genuinely informing." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 F 11 '45 90w

Foreign Affairs 23:513 Ap '45 70w

"This is an admirably organized book, lucid, well written, and apparently very carefully thought through; but largely beside the point. The author has a thorough grasp of international payments problems and a clear view of the analytical points involved. He is a native of Germany who has been in this country for only eight years; he deserves to be especially complimented both on the lucidity of his exposition and on the clarity of his style." I. de Vegh

+ Pol Sci Q 60:285 Je '45 2150w

"The sympathetic appraisal of the Bretton Woods proposals is based upon the theory that the marked interdependence among nations requires the extension of the principles of central banking into the world realm of finance. The subject is presented in less technical language than the briefer treatises which have thus far appeared."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:18 Je '45 280w

HALPERN, ADA. Conducted tour; with foreword by Eleanor F. Rathbone [Eng title: Liberation—Russian style]. 145p $2 Sheed [7s 6d MaxLove]

940.5481438 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Polish. Russia—Description and travel. World war, 1939-1945—Russia 45-10375

"It is the story of a young Polish woman, a Doctor of Mathematical Science, who, with her mother, sister, and many other Poles, was deported by the Russians in 1940 to Kazakhstan, where she was forced to labour in a 'Sov-Khoz,' or Soviet Management Entity, until she was permitted to join the Polish Army in Russia." Manchester Guardian

"It is a story of unbelievable hardship written so camly, with such humour and with so little resentment, that is compels belief. No one can doubt that the events which she describes took place and the reader is wisely left to draw his own conclusions. It is not, perhaps, fair to judge the Soviet union from Kazakhstan, but at least one can assume that this is a fair example of how political deportees are treated. It is not a good advertisement." J. M. D. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 19 '45 180w

"All authentic news of events within the great enclosure of Soviet Asia is of value, and Miss Halpern, though naturally a hostile witness, is also honest." Tom Paine

New Statesman & Nation 30:64 Jl 28 '45 900w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 21 '45 270w

HALSEY, GEORGE D. Making and using industrial service ratings; practical suggestions for measuring and rating individual performance of executives and employees, incl. how to use these ratings in improving performance; foreword by Samuel W. Reyburn. 149p $2.50 Harper

658.322 Employment management 44-7453

"This book by George D. Halsey, personnel officer of the Farm Credit Administration of Columbia, South Carolina, is comprehensive in its coverage. It gives an exposition of current practices in employee rating plans as applied to factory, store, and office. Early chapters discuss the objectives of rating and point out the merits and uses of a number of different rating forms. Chapter VII is an outline of the Efficiency Rating System used by the Federal Government. In the next two chapters, on installing and administering service rating programs, much emphasis is laid on conference or supervisors for planning the program as well as carrying it out. The final three chapters include: Typical Statement from an Employee's Handbook, Using Service Ratings in Training and Correction, and The Supervisor's Problem Cases." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by F. H. Kirkpatrick

Ann Am Acad 238:219 Mr '45 600w

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 70w

HAMILTON, ELIZABETH. P-zoo; il. by Peter Hurd. [26p] $1 Coward-McCann

When Mina (Mrs Hamilton's daughter) was six years old she had difficulty in telling p from b. This is a book made especially for her to help her and it stresses p in many ingenious ways.

Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45

"Mr. Hurd has caught perfectly in his drawings the idea of the story. The incongruous plot (which more than serves its purpose) does not seem to faze any of his composed creatures. . . Author and artist do not intrude in this book—it is completely Mina's book. All they have done is put down on paper the experience of one child, for the amusement of all children." Rose Dobbs

+ Horn Bk 21:357 S '45 1900w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:451 N '45 60w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 21:447 N '45 40w

"A very different sort of story picture book, with Peter Hurd's drawings and Flavia Gag's hand lettering. A nice book on all counts. Beginning readers will like to spell it out and there's a word game angle. And younger children will like the nonsense read aloud."

+ Kirkus 13:435 O 1 '45 100w

"Recommended for third graders. Also for reading aloud for picture book age." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 70:980 O 15 '45 70w

"No child ever will forget the appearance of the letter P after enjoying this book." L. M. P.

+ N Y Times p10 N 11 '45 60w

New Yorker 21:127 D 8 '45 50w

"This is the kind of picture book that one wants to share instantly with small boys and girls. From the end-papers to the final word of the text it is logical, funny, and interesting." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 O 20 '45 360w

"The pictures are clear and brisk, like the text; even the cover helps a young vocabulary." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 7 '45 230w

HAMILTON, HARRY. River song. 242p il $2.50 Bobbs

45-2564

A tale of river-boat, fisher-folk on the Mississippi, and of how two of their number, brothers, win radio fame with their singing and guitar playing. Some of the characters of the author's earlier book, Banjo on my Knee (Book Review Digest, 1936) reappear in this tale of Newt Holley's grandsons.

"Here is a book of quaint charm and surprising readability. As you follow the story, you will make friends with these shanty-boat men and women of the Mississippi; you will gain affection for lovely, unassuming Dena, and warm admiration for quiet, faithful Lon. And—if the urge to see the far corners of the world has ever seized you—you should follow Stag Holley's ramblings with sympathetic understanding." F. N. Litten
+ Book Week p12 Mr 25 '45 400w

Booklist 41:237 Ap 15 '45

"Two thirds of this book were worth reading and struck a new note; the last third is so incredibly bad that it spoils the whole with a melodramatic finale that pulls all the stops."
— + Kirkus 13:187 My 1 '45 170w

"There are enough local color, humor, romance and song-and-dance hung on this slender tale to make it likely that, in book and cinema form, it will please as many people for as many years as has 'Banjo on My Knee.'" N. K. Burger
N Y Times p24 Mr 11 '45 230w

"Mr. Hamilton is not a startling success as a humorist and he is even less successful as a writer, but he has contrived a cheerful little tale that is easy to read, though perhaps even easier to forget."
New Yorker 21:94 Mr 17 '45 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 22 '45 130w

HAMLIN, HELEN. Nine mile bridge; three years in the Maine woods; with decorations by the author. 233p $2.50 Norton

917.41 Maine—Description and travel 45-1913

When she graduated from normal school the author, the daughter of a Maine game warden, went to teach in a lumber camp settlement in northern Maine. Later she maintained the family tradition and married a game warden, and spent three years in the wilderness, where her main method of travel was by dog team. She records her experiences with much humor and little or no sentimentality.

Booklist 41:285 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:13 My '45

"Tempted by the alliteration, and in no sense trying to be derogatory, you might call Helen Hamlin the backwoodsmen's Boswell. Her book may not be perfect literature but it is good reporting." E. A. Laycock
+ Boston Globe Je 6 '45 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

"Vivid depiction of outdoors life."
+ Kirkus 12:559 D 15 '44 130w

"Moving a 20-year girl into the rough and ready timberland along the Canadian border certainly suggests a story, and when she ups and marries a fish and game warden named Curley the book must have very nearly written itself. Fortunately the experiences came to a most articulate person, one with a gift for explaining the ways of the unheard-of forest with humor and gayety. She's as generous as a woods cook with her high-speed narrative, and as far as real State-o'-Maine stuff goes she's as accurate as her husband would be in counting out poached trout under the statutes made and provided." John Gould
+ N Y Times p7 Je 3 '45 650w

"'Nine Mile Bridge' has a ring of honesty and truth not always found in books of this sort. There is nothing braggart about the Hamlins, and the reader closes the book satisfied that he has had a glimpse of real life, of real people in a real country, not too many miles north of Boston yet as wild and strange as Labrador or the Arctic circle. This book is well and entertainingly written, for folk who want their stories of outdoor life ruggedly undiluted." D. J. Malcolm
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 550w

"Mrs. Hamlin has the happy faculty of reporting local characters, even hermits, without being unduly quaint or sentimental. She has a sympathetic eye, yet with just enough biliousness in it to keep things on a pretty level keel. . . Mrs. Hamlin's book is so good as to leave this reviewer hoping she will next do a volume about the Aroostook as a whole, an empire she patently understands and one that needs treatment by so talented a native daughter." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 27 '45 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:83 Jl '45

HAMMERSTEIN, OSCAR. Carmen Jones; based on Meilhac and Halévy's adaptation of Prosper Merimée's Carmen. 139p il $2.50 Knopf

782.1 Operas—Librettos 45-1439

Libretto of the musical play about American Negroes and Negro life, based on the opera Carmen.

Booklist 41:194 Mr 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

Library J 70:266 Mr 15 '45 40w

N Y Times p16 F 18 '45 400w

"In reading the libretto, of course, you can regard it as only a play and forget that it has any connection with an operatic score. The story is a good one whether it is laid in Spain or the United States; human emotions and reactions are the same the world over. But the better you know 'Carmen' the more you'll enjoy 'Carmen Jones,' for although Oscar Hammerstein has changed the locale, he has taken no liberties with the plot." C. K. Bausman
+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 450w

"Considered as satire on the melodramatics of old style grand opera, Carmen Jones has a certain value even in the study, and it is a fine example of the skillful interweaving of the elements which go into the making of a contemporary musical drama. . . Like most librettos, Mr. Hammerstein's limps in the reading, and the lyrics have a greeting-card quality; both these weaknesses are no doubt disguised by the vigor of the performance and the rich color of the music."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:4 Je '45 160w

"'Carmen Jones' is direct, earthy, realistic, as was the original. Its moods and passions exactly fit the musical score, and its lyrics, if less flowery, are equally significant. Adapted to be sung in an ordinary theater, not a huge opera house, and to communicate dramatic emotion heightened by music, it proved successful in the playhouse and it may be read with as much pleasure as the original libretto." W. P. Eaton
+ Weekly Book Review p10 F 11 '45 270w

HANBURY, HAROLD GREVILLE. English courts of law. (Home univ. lib.) 192p $1.25 (3s 6d) Oxford

347.9 Courts—Great Britain 44-51094

"After a brief excursion into the field of jurisprudence, and a short summary of the legal system before the Norman Conquest, Mr. Hanbury relates the extraordinarily dramatic story of the English courts of law. Before the climax of this story, he has shown the centralization of English government and justice, the development of the jury, the fascinating struggle between the King's Bench and the Common Pleas, the nineteenth-century efforts at judicial reform, and many other aspects of the struggle of the English to achieve justice under law." Harvard Law R

Reviewed by J. N. Frierson
Columbia Law R 45:976 N '45 500w

"This book is a happy product of the English ability at scholarly popularization. It is history written for the layman, as well as for the scholar. It is history which is continually animated by the vivid historical imagination of the author. In short, it is a book which is at once instructive and entertaining."
+ Harvard Law R 58:631 Ap '45 200w

HANBURY, H. G.—Continued

"The first chapter is too tightly packed for the general reader. . . On the other hand, the main part of the book, which traces the history of the judicature from the Curia Regis onwards, is excellent. It is most attractively written, and Dr. Hanbury is to be congratulated on the way in which he has selected his materials. He is not so happy, however, in his treatment of some modern topics which interest the layman. . . The bibliography will not escape criticism." R. A. E.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 23 '44 210w

"The book has the rare merit of co-ordinating a number of facts in law and history and bringing them into their proper perspective. The chapter on the work of Henry II is particularly lucid. The style is terse without being in the least cramped and the passage about the distinction between real and personal property clears up a legal tangle which sometimes puzzles lawyers as well as laymen." E. S. P. Haynes

+ New Statesman & Nation 28:357 N 25 '44 600w

HANKEY, MAURICE PASCAL ALERS HANKEY, 1st baron. Government control in war; with a foreword by G. M. Trevelyan. 88p $1.50 Macmillan [4s 6d Cambridge]

355.28 War and emergency powers. Great Britain—Defenses [45-7866]

"The Lees Knowles Lectures, 1945. A synopsis of the development of government control from the beginning of the century through the two world wars, and the organization of the British Armed Forces." (Current Hist) Bibliography.

Current Hist 9:551 D '45 50w

"It need not be said that [the author] speaks with unequalled authority on this subject, every branch of it, cabinets, war cabinets, committees, to which for a long generation he served as secretary."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Ag 11 '45 900w

HANLIN, TOM. Once in every lifetime. 184p $2 Viking [7s 6d Nicholson] 45-9736

Brief story of the hopeless love of a poor Scottish miner for Jenny, the girl who lived next door, and the tragedy of their lives with its poverty and denial.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p4 N 4 '45 340w

Commonweal 43:29 O 19 '45 130w

"By a young Scotsman, this is a first novel, effective in its simplicity and resignation. Distinctive rather than popular."

+ Kirkus 13:324 Ag 1 '45 140w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 S 21 '45 360w

Reviewed by Paul Griffith

N Y Times p30 O 21 '45 320w

"The love story is told with skill and quiet warmth, but in an apparent effort to heighten the emotional impact of what is already a sufficiently touching tale, he ends up, as they say in the theatre, by chewing the scenery."

+ — New Yorker 21:112 O 20 '45 160w

"This short tragic novel has much merit; its charm and simplicity is similar to that which characterises the proletarian short stories of Leslie Halward; but the author should be on guard against his own fluency, for it sometimes makes him careless and redundant." John Hampson

+ Spec 175:44 Jl 13 '45 270w

"It is a poignant little story, unforgettable in its starkness and simplicity, and, above all, ringing steadfastly true to life."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p425 S 8 '45 150w

"Tom Hanlin's first novel is brief, eloquent, gentle and harsh. It is sometimes compassionate and sometimes bitter. It has moments of poetry and passages of anger, and both are embalmed in the Calvinistic doctrine of predestination. Its virtues are those of a story deeply felt and simply recorded, and its defects those of a writer so determined to press home his message that he climbs up into a pulpit and talks to the reader over the heads of the characters he has created. . . Mr. Hanlin writes many brief scenes of haunting beauty, and his descriptions of accident and swift death in the colliery are stark realism." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 4 '45 650w

HANNAFORD, EARLE S. Conference leadership in business and industry. 289p $3 McGraw

650 Business conferences. Leadership 45-3102

"Practical procedures for conducting day-to-day business and formal conferences. Analyzes phases of handling people, procedures for preparing conference material, guiding and shaping discussions and development in conference leadership." Library J

"The psychological level of this book suggests that it is intended for 'first level' conferences between a foreman and his crew, yet the abstract presentation seems forbidding to any but a highly trained reader. The academe and the public servant are accused of using jargon. It is tragic to find business leaders with a highly developed jargon of their own—one more gap to be bridged on the road to common understanding." C. S. Ascher

Ann Am Acad 240:175 Jl '45 650w

Booklist 41:295 Je 15 '45

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 60w

HANNUM, MRS ALBERTA (PIERSON). Spin a silver dollar. 173p il $3.75 Viking

970.3 Navaho Indians 45-9761

Two young Americans, traveling thru the Southwest, bought an Indian trading post at Wide Ruins, and ran it four years. There they met a little Navaho Indian boy, Beatien Yazz (Little No-Shirt) whose charming paintings of the desert and desert life illustrate the book. The story of the Lippincotts' four years at Wide Ruins closes with World war II.

Book Week p28 N 11 '45 180w

Booklist 42:125 D 15 '45

Kirkus 13:333 Ag 1 '45 110w

"A book about a great many individuals and two distinct ways of life, made harmonious and mutually enriching by good-will, good humor, and intelligence. . . Alberta Hannum has told the story of Wide Ruins with humor and a light touch which in no way obscure the fact that she, like the Lippincotts, has an eye for the special beauties of the Southwestern desert and a deep appreciation of the greatness of the Navahos." Janet Rosenwald

+ Nation 162:78 Ja 19 '46 550w

"This is a curious book. It is a story of adventure—of quiet, mild, almost actionless adventure—but it was not written by the persons who experienced the adventures. Thus it has the as-told-to flavor which is never good tasting. And yet it is highly interesting, well written in spots, and sometimes it has a poetical quality which depicts the scene like a painting." John Weld

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 13 '46 500w

"Does any reader long to be transported, if only for an hour, to a world as candid as childhood and innocent as a morning in May? Then let him discover his magic carpet in Alberta Hannum's quaintly named little book 'Spin a Silver Dollar.' . . Mrs Hannum doesn't just tell you about the desert and the desert dwellers—she makes you know and like them both, as she did and as her friends Sallie and Bill did. On every page there are quotable phrases; but why quote? The only thing to do is to buy the book and read it all, and keep it near at hand for occasional refreshment." E. G. Eastman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 420w

"'Spin a Silver Dollar' has the unique distinction of being a really outstanding piece of literary craftsmanship. . . [It] has another distinction—a dozen full-page color plates, paintings by the amazing Navaho child artist, Beatien Yazz, whose work is already nationally known. These are delightful beyond description and will have to be seen to be appreciated." C. L. McNichols

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 9 '45 1000w

HANSEN, ALVIN HARVEY. America's role in the world economy. 197p $2.50 Norton

338.91 Economic policy. Commercial policy. U.S.—Commercial policy 45-2775

"The author's thesis is, briefly, that the end of political isolationism in America is not enough and that there can be no world peace of mind without international economic coöperation. In this book he tells how we might go about it." New Yorker

"The urgency for a wide understanding of the economic problems with which Professor Hansen deals, and the clarity and readableness of his presentation, place this book high on the required reading list of the informed citizen. It is not bedtime reading, but the citizen who is concerned with world problems will not find himself bogged down in the middle of the book; it will hold his interest to the end." Mabel Newcomer

+ Ann Am Acad 240:135 Jl '45 450w

"Please don't ever complain again that nobody bothered to tell you what the score is on the economic requisites for peace. Hansen did, and now the next move's up to you." Harvey O'Connor

+ Book Week p4 Ap 15 '45 400w

Bookmark 6:5 My '45

Reviewed by R. L. Strout
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 9 '45 800w

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins
Commonweal 42:99 My 11 '45 750w

Foreign Affairs 23:694 Jl '45 100w

Kirkus 13:49 F 1 '45 170w

"There is a great need for authoritative books of this kind, especially designed for laymen. Dr. Hansen has avoided the error of writing down to the general public, but he has sought and achieved a clarity which, all too often, is lacking in popular works by economists. I hope his book will be widely read and carefully studied, especially on Capitol Hill." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 160:452 Ap 21 '45 1100w

"Able and most timely book. No one concerned to understand the basic economic issues underlying America's stake in the postwar world can afford to neglect it. Fortunately for the uninitiated it is written with the utmost clarity and simplicity. Dr. Hansen carries his erudition lightly." A. D. Gayer

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 1 '45 1300w

"An admirably simple and straightforward presentation, written for the layman."

+ New Yorker 21:84 Mr 31 '45 70w

Reviewed by Kan Lee
Pacific Affairs 18:291 S '45 750w

Reviewed by A. B. Wolfe
Pol Sci Q 60:600 D '45 1650w

"As Littauer Professor of Political Economy in Harvard University and Special Economic Adviser to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Dr. Hansen may well be rated as an authority in his field. He nevertheless speaks the language of the 'common man' and this book is not a difficult one to read and comprehend."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 Ap '45 360w

"A heartening aspect of the difficult search for the bases of permanent peace is the appearance of so many (and such well-spoken) men of good will who are trying to get to the bottom of things. One of these men is Prof. Alvin H. Hansen of Harvard who, believing that an end of isolationism in the economic field, must go hand in hand with the new political spirit, has put a definite program into plain language in 'America's Role in the World Economy.'" Alzada Comstock

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 950w

"All in all it is a book which every literate citizen will want to read and ponder." M. S. Stewart

+ Survey G 34:348 Ag '45 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:24 S '45 240w

Reviewed by Michael Heilperin
Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 5 '45 1350w

Yale R n s 35:377 winter '46 210w

HARDWICK, ELIZABETH. Ghostly lover. 278p $2.50 Harcourt

45-4233

"A first novel that explores seriously and with considerable originality, through the mind of a rather frustrated young girl, the complicated relationships of a middle-class Kentucky family." New Yorker

Reviewed by Marion Strobel
Book Week p4 Ap 29 '45 450w

Reviewed by E. A. Laycock
Boston Globe p15 My 2 '45 300w

"In one respect this is a distinguished novel. Miss Hardwick has an extraordinary gift for capturing her characters' fleeting emotions and fantasies and impaling them with sharp words, like so many moths stuck on a cardboard with pins. But she fails in the first requirement of the novelist: her story does not hold the interest. It takes place in a twilight world and its people are ghosts."

+ — Christian Century 62:838 Jl 18 '45 280w

Reviewed by Katharine Marvin
Commonweal 42:222 Je 15 '45 200w

"Interesting but somehow remote from reality."

Kirkus 13:140 Ap 1 '45 150w

"Book feminine in outlook and sensitiveness despite some crudities. Also, padded with detailed surface descriptions like those foreign films which focus on the portentous raising of an eyebrow; and misty, one-dimensional characters, trailing unfinished sentences, never materialize. A short story stretched into a tenuous first novel." H. G. Kelley

Library J 70:355 Ap 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:522 My 5 '45 1000w

"Free from the clichés that usually accompany the problem of a daughter whose family is a block to the fulfilment of her own identity, Miss Hardwick's first novel deals chiefly with the mystery of human relationships made intricate by a tragic reticence that prevents communication. There is a brilliant blending of content and presentation. . . The greatest flaw is that the daughter's recognition of the futility of her emotions is brought about by time and an acoustic accident rather than an intellectual insight. The stripped style, placing the emphasis on the emotional by putting it in a bas-relief of external description, is a technique that can give depth to lives and distinction to novels that do not grapple with explicitly passionate or 'important' subject matter."

+ New Repub 112:686 My 14 '45 150w

"It is a book lacking structure and decisiveness, but of the quietest kind of excellence. . . But the book's serious defects, the roughnesses, the lack of direction, cannot obscure the fact that Elizabeth Hardwick is, however unformed a novelist, a good writer, that she operates in the novelist's true sphere of subtle human relations, that she recognizes our evasions, the hints and revelations we give one another, the sudden conjunctions and isolations of the spirit, the strange, fearful sadness that surrounds and informs us." Gertrude Buckman

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 29 '45 750w

HARDWICK, ELIZABETH—Continued

"Miss Hardwick has a dozen faults, chief among which is an elaborately obfuscated style that may very well put you off her story almost at the start. The novel does, however, manage to generate a certain emotional force, and there are some nice flashes of insight that indicate it may be worth keeping this author in mind."

New Yorker 21:82 Ap 28 '45 80w

"Miss Hardwick is a new writer of great talent and promise, and this, her first published novel, is a brilliant, if over-intense, piece of writing." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:20 My 5 '45 600w

"The characters in 'The Ghostly Lover,' though mostly plausible, are neither moving nor endearing. . . As a title, 'The Ghostly Lover' misleads the reader, since the heroine's true preoccupation is not with a lover but with the unit of the family. Although this story of frustration and of the demoralizing effect of irresponsibility lacks body and breadth, in the portrayal of certain of its characters, it has a sure and subtle sting." Virgilia Sapieha

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 29 '45 600w

HARKNESS, GEORGIA ELMA. Dark night of the soul. 192p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

233 Man (theology). Sin 45-3474

"This is a book which stimulates thought on the theological problems of suffering and sin and at the same time casts light on the practical problem of dealing with the troubled spirit in one of its most distressing phases. The first chapter reprints an article which Professor Harkness published in The Christian Century on January 14, 1942. The other chapters (some parts of which also have been previously published) arise from thought and studies to which the author was led by the correspondence that came to her as a result of that article, revealing, as it did, that many readers had found that it stated their own problem for them and were seeking further help." Christian Century

Booklist 41:294 Je 15 '45

Reviewed by A. C. Garnett

+ Christian Century 62:550 My 2 '45 700w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 159:15 D 1 '45 90w

"This is no easily read, readily comprehended book. But troubled souls with confused intellects would find the mental effort entailed in reading this book amply rewarding."

+ Kirkus 13:243 Je 1 '45 170w

HARKNESS, MRS MARJORY (GANE). A brook of our own; a few notes from the files of a mountain real estate office. 199p $2 Knopf

333.33 Real estate business 45-8817

Informally written, slightly fictionized accounts of the author's experiences as a real estate broker in a New Hampshire farming community which was being invaded by city folks desiring "a few acres and a brook."

Booklist 42:90 N 15 '45

"Slight—but appealing."

Kirkus 13:356 Ag 15 '45 130w

"The varied adventures make highly entertaining and often humorous reading. Their suspense elements hold interest and build up most of the tales to triumphant conclusions that are satisfying to all concerned." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 18 '45 460w

"All who've wanted a brook, all who've got a brook and the rest of mortals who have aspired to owning country acreage will find themselves somewhere between the covers of this book. What's more, it is about time would-be purchasers of rural real estate were put on the block for the rest of us to snicker at. In witty and amusing passages Mrs. Harkness leads the snickering. It is a minor comedie humaine of the realtor's game." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 21 '45 650w

HARNDEN, RUTH PEABODY. Bright star or dark. (Whittlesey house publication) 225p $2.50 McGraw

45-9487

A brilliant young Irish girl, a student at Trinity college, who is deeply involved in the cause of Germany, finds herself in love with a rather naive young American. She pursues him ruthlessly, and is on the point of going with him to America, when she is arrested. She elects to stay in Ireland. The time is 1938.

"Miss Harnden's is a fantastic tale, credible enough perhaps in its substance but a bit highflown in the handling. There is a good deal of smart, sophisticated Irish political talky-talk and some hard, somewhat psychoneurotic love-making. Miss Harnden likes the shock of contrast and uses it like a slap in the face. However, she quite evidently knows what she is talking about when she writes of contemporary Ireland, and she always writes vivaciously if a bit undisciplinedly. She will no doubt grow up, one of these days, into something pretty special in the way of a novelist." F. H. Bullock

Book Week p8 N 18 '45 340w

Kirkus 13:323 Ag 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Times p6 N 4 '45 340w

"In this rather crude tale there is no tragedy because the chief character lacks all dignity; Miss Harnden writes of 'her astonishing mind,' but if intelligence is reflected in conduct Kingsley Blake must rank as one of the silliest heroines in fiction. . . Out of her miserable vanity and incontinence a story could have been made by a master of irony; but as the central figure of an heroic study Kingsley is too shabby and sordid. Miss Harnden is much more successful in her attempts to evoke the spirit of the Dublin streets, the passionate itch for interminable conversation, the 'little worm of laughter that eats the Irish heart.'" R. E. Roberts

— + Sat R of Lit 28:12 D 29 '45 900w

Reviewed by Charlotte Litman

Springf'd Republican p4d D 30 '45 240w

"Miss Harnden's treatment of the sex elements of her story—as opposed to romance with a capital R—is unblushingly forthright and sincere. The political and social background of 'Bright Star or Dark,' however, is what gives the novel its value. Almost any intelligent reader can calmly accept Miss Harnden's highly seasoned dish, I should think, for the sake of the substantial and rich dressing that accompanies it. Furthermore, Miss Harnden can write—and does." F. H. Bullock

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 D 9 '45 550w

HARPER, FRANK. Skiing for the millions. 242p il $3 Longmans

796.93 Skis and ski running 45-10463

"This comprehensive volume, by the author of 'The Military Ski Manual,' [Book Review Digest, 1943] offers the novice all the necessary pointers on equipment and technique to keep him upright on a snowy slope. There is also a history of the sport, tips for experts about map reading and mountain rations, and a lot of other helpful stuff. Photographs and diagrams." New Yorker

Booklist 42:144 Ja 1 '46

Kirkus 13:359 Ag 15 '45 170w

New Yorker 21:68 D 29 '45 80w

"A book for the deliberate and enjoyable digestion of all skiers and ski mountaineers. By combining a gracious writing technic with sensitive description and sound knowledge, the author has built one of the best ski bibles published in the past five years." V. M. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 5 '45 240w

HARPER, SAMUEL NORTHRUP. The Russia I believe in; memoirs, 1902-1941; ed. by Paul V. Harper, with the assistance of Ronald Thompson. 278p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press [21s Cambridge]

947 Russia—History A45-3346

Memoirs of an American student of Russia, who visited and studied the country for over forty years. His father was the first president of the University of Chicago, and it was he who first inspired his son to make Russia the center of his interest. The author died in 1943 and his notes and letters have been arranged and edited by his brother.

———

"This is an interesting and valuable book: interesting because of its author's complex and attractive personality, valuable on account of the glimpses into Russia's past which the volume affords." D. F. White

+ Ann Am Acad 242:177 N '45 700w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p7 Jl 8 '45 550w

Booklist 41:338 Jl 15 '45

"Harper had sound liberal principles, no prejudices, and a vast store of information. His memoirs, skillfully edited by his brother, Paul V. Harper, provide at once the story of a life and personality which well deserve such a record and one of the most enlightening books on Russia." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:759 Je 27 '45 850w

"For those who have some knowledge of the field, these memoirs will make delightful, absorbing reading. In many ways this is the most useful addition to American-Soviet literature that has recently appeared." W. H. Melish

+ Churchman 159:17 O 1 '45 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45

Current Hist 9:128 Ag '45 130w

Foreign Affairs 24:167 O '45 50w

"Unlike his formal books on the Soviet Union, these scattered notes, letters and memoranda are personal and lively. Though not written for publication, they achieve a greater degree of authenticity and honesty than any other recently published book on Russia. Stalin is described as 'hard and ruthless . . . an able and resourceful revolutionary strategist and machine boss.' Trotsky is considered a prima donna, a pathological egoist. Throughout the book there is much criticism, but also much sympathetic understanding of the Soviet experiment."

+ New Repub 113:54 Jl 9 '45 120w

"Nobody can read this excellent autobiography without feeling affection for its modest author and gratitude for his work." Norman MacKenzie

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:114 Ag 18 '45 700w

"It is a highly interesting, worthwhile contribution to our understanding of Russia. Two qualities give it a unique character in the flood of controversial literature on this topic: its perspective and its objectivity. In so far as the title may give an impression of special pleading, it is unfortunately chosen. The faith which Professor Harper came to have in modern Russia—the Soviet Russia of today—is implicit in the judgments he finally reached upon the direction in which Soviet policy, both at home and abroad, was moving. The reader is nowhere asked to accept the book's conclusions. Professor Harper was interested only in trying to understand and interpret Russia, not on the basis of preconceived opinions or ideological sympathies but through close observation." F. R. Dulles

+ N Y Times p21 Jl 22 '45 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Sat R of Lit 28:8 Ag 11 '45 800w

"The present volume is the personal story of Mr Harper's life and studies in Russia, and probably due to his sudden death is not too well integrated. Those who seek ready-made conclusions as to Russia's past and her future intentions will be disappointed, but students of Russia's great political upheaval will find much of value. Even for the lay reader there are many pages of interest in Mr Harper's notes on the revolutionary period, the five-year plans, the Moscow purge trials, the Nazi-Soviet pact and finally the battle of Stalingrad, with the realization by the world that a great new nation had taken its place in the sun." R. F. H.

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Je 27 '45 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Ag 4 '45 850w

"The style throughout is informal and almost chatty. Personalities bulk large; Harper's friends and acquaintances on both sides of the Atlantic represented almost every walk of life. It is in the sidelights upon men, rather than events, that the work makes its principal contributions."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:14 D '45 320w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 22 '45 850w

HARRE, THOMAS EVERETT, comp. Bedside treasury of love. 676p $3 Sheridan

Short stories—Collections 45-5906

This collection of "stories of romance, rapture, and tragedy" contains works by O. Henry, Gertrude Atherton, Richard LeGallienne, A. C. Smith, Rex Beach, Edison Marshall, Louis Bromfield, R. H. Davis, John Russell, Rupert Hughes, W. C. Lengel, W. D. Steele, Achmed Abdullah, Emma-Lindsay Squier, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Washington Irving, Bret Harte, Lafcadio Hearn, Rudyard Kipling, Joseph Conrad, E. Barrington, Thomas Burke, Thomas Hardy, R. L. Stevenson, Thomas De Quincey, Ouida, Guy de Maupassant, Theophile Gautier, George Sand, Honoré de Balzac, Gustave Flaubert, Anatole France, Boccaccio, Andrew Lang, Joseph Bédier, Lucius Apuleius.

———

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p9 Jl 8 '45 150w

Kirkus 13:261 Je 15 '45 90w

"Except for its title, a thoroughly worthwhile volume." R. E. Morgan

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 2 '45 240w

HARRIS, MRS BERNICE (KELLY). Sage quarter. 259p $2.50 Doubleday

45-3928

A story of family life in North Carolina during the early years of the twentieth century. The central figures are the twins, Ruby, the strong and selfish one, and Pearl, nicknamed Tiny, thru whose eyes much of the life of home and school is seen.

———

"The central story of the girl Tiny is broken by an unbridged gap of years, the crucial years between childhood and womanhood. The novel fails to recover from this stroke, and the later chapters seem relatively thin and arbitrary, lacking the firmness and sureness of the earlier projection of the child's world. I cannot judge the validity of the portrayal of community life in this novel, but I suspect that its treatment of social relationships of class and color is essentially truthful and perceptive." J. T. Frederick

+ — Book Week p2 My 6 '45 430w

Booklist 41:340 Jl 15 '45

"Bone clean of any sentimental nonsense about childhood, the novel stands as an honest appraisal of the happiness and terror of childhood, both unreasoning in their way and both the stuff from which every person grows. It's a long look back to where you can't return and it's as fine a book as there's been this year." Elizabeth Watts

+ Boston Globe p19 Ap 18 '45 360w

"Two qualities account for the pleasure this book gives. One is the reality of its characters, as they gradually become clear to the increasingly perceptive eyes of a growing girl; the other is the charm of the North Carolina country diction. The language is not exaggerated, not cluttered with difficult spellings and singularities. Plainer and yet more subtle,

HARRIS, BERNICE—Continued
its peculiar flavor lies in old names for flowers, in a rare Old English ending to a verb, a half-dozen local pronunciations or inversions." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 16 '45 700w

Kirkus 13:72 F 15 '45 110w

"The peculiar charm of this tale lies not in its story-book plot of Tiny's love for Stonewall Williams, but in the series of little plots—the everyday dramas that touch each member of the family in his search for happiness. Through Tiny's eyes the turmoil and conflict are shown in word pictures that have a lyric quality, in prose that sings with color and sound and life." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 22 '45 270w

"The first three-fourths of this one is the story of a large clan of country folk seen through the eyes of a gentle, perceptive little girl. The child grows up and the story loses some of its charm, but Mrs Harris remains clear-eyed, humorous, and sensible, never losing that deep understanding of the people she writes about which gives her novels their quality."

+ New Yorker 21:89 Ap 14 '45 90w

" 'Sage Quarter' has a freshness and convincing localism that gives individuality to its people and the stretch of North Carolina country by which their lives are bounded. Here is a South that has neither the gentility of white-pillared plantation houses nor the sordidness of Tobacco Road. Centered in the childhood and youth of Tiny, the story is a bit on the sweet side, an idyll of a growing up that was happy, all in all, and of the savor and variety of family living." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 13 '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

HARRIS, FREDERICK PHILIP. Neo-idealist political theory; its continuity with the British tradition. (King's crown press bk) 133p pa $1.50 Columbia univ. press

320.1 Political science. Idealism. Philosophy, English A44-5109

"The group of British philosophers known collectively as the Neo-idealists or Neo-Hegelians became important in British thought about 1870, and enjoyed great influence for about a half century. . . This essay [attempts] to make clear that the social philosophy of British Neo-idealism exhibits a fundamental continuity with British liberal thought from the time of Locke. The problem running as a single thread throughout this tradition is that of the status of the individual in the great society, of what his opportunities, rights and duties are to be." (p. 1) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Harris's objective is to redress a balance. It is avowedly not his intent to argue that Idealism was utilitarianism; nor yet is it his object to claim that the issues between the schools in the realm of logic, of epistemology, and of metaphysics are unimportant. What he does endeavor to show, and very successfully, is that an Idealist philosophy does not necessarily mean an omnipotent state and a subjected individual. . . With this thesis, the present reviewer is in large agreement. He feels that, in revealing the specific British success in reconciling systematic logic, a profound sense of ethical obligation leading to a genuine democracy, and a thoroughly experimental and realistic attitude of common sense toward particular and practical problems, Dr. Harris is also effectively combating the tendency of the schools to lead to false issues and false antitheses." T. I. Cook

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:361 Ap '45 1100w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis
Crozer Q 22:188 Ap '45 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Ebersole
Ethics 55:324 Jl '45 110w

"Able and sympathetic study." H. A. L.

+ J Philos 42:136 Mr 1 '45 550w

HARRIS, HENRY WILSON. Problems of the peace. (Current problems ser) 116p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. International cooperation A45-639

"In considering the problems of the peace table, the author feels that even the site of the conference is important, and he favors Switzerland. He discusses the claims that may be expected for territorial boundaries, what shall be done with Germany and possibilities of a Communistic Germany collaborating with Russia. This he does not anticipate, believing rather that Russia will exert a stabilizing influence either way." Current Hist

"Harris, who employs a clear, sincere style, has a flair for using significant details. Not seeking to present new facts, he is concerned with making widely available for laymen, especially lay leaders, scholarly information and views on peace-making problems. He discusses these problems separately—minorities, frontiers, war criminals, reparations, and the new league. Usually gentle and genial, he is at times stern and cavalier. . . A reading of the book left the reviewer admiring the skill which packed so much into so little space." Garland Downum

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:831 Ag '45 340w

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian
Ann Am Acad 240:143 Jl '45 330w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 8:155 F '45 100w

"Into this little book, which forms part of Sir Ernest Barker's series on 'Current Problems,' the author has managed to compress a remarkable amount of common sense suggestions about the method and substance of the peace settlement in Europe."

+ Foreign Affairs 23:511 Ap '45 30w

"Mr. Harris looks to the future of world peace in a mood of caution and uncertain hope. The public who read his book will find in it a brief, clear, and sometimes challenging statement of those things on which they must make up their minds." Frederick Whyte

+ Spec 173:224 S 8 '44 800w

"On these matters Mr. Harris writes lucidly and helpfully; and when he turns to the bearing of the Atlantic Charter and a new league on future security he is dealing with a subject on which he speaks with unusual authority. His little book is indeed a compendium of common sense."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p494 O 14 '44 850w

HARRIS, LAURA. Away we go; il. by Jane Flory. [48p] 50c Garden City pub. co.

Picture book for the very young showing all the devices for moving people from place to place, including trains and escalators, and even elephants and camels.

"A lively book with an original idea."

+ Kirkus 13:515 N 15 '45 70w

"Paper is poor and binding is just plain bad. Otherwise it is a most attractive and interesting book for three- to six-year-old children." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 70w

Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

HARRIS, PAUL. News from north of the Nile; discovering the inside story of the Scriptures. 109p $1.50 Assn. press; Revell

220 Bible. Whole 45-6322

"This is an original presentation of the Bible, which presents it as if it were current news. Various portions of the Bible are presented as if they were newspaper clippings. The brief account of the Gospel according to St. Mark contains the head-lines: 'Short Document may be Revolutionary; Is Rome Threatened by a Dead Man?' The Prophets are Columnists, and the correspondents of the newspaper in Corinth, Rome, Philippi, etc., describe the excitement created by the visits of Paul. There are numerous pages in between that contain ample information regarding the books of the Bible, based on the best scholarship." Churchman

"A modern and scholarly view of the Bible underlies this vivacious treatment, and the reader of the book is encouraged by interspersed pages of 'hints for discoverers' to become also a reader of the Book."

+ Christian Century 62:839 Jl 18 '45 120w

"It is an excellent introduction to the study of the Bible, which would be very helpful as a text-book for a class, or for individual study." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 159:19 Jl '45 150w

"It is a concise little book with a wealth of accurate, well-annotated material and a fine bibliography." J. Z. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 29 '45 120w

HARRIS, SEYMOUR EDWIN, ed. Economic problems of Latin America. 465p maps $4 McGraw

330.98 Latin America—Economic conditions 44-51524

Symposium on the economic problems of our neighbors to the south. Contents: Introduction: Some major issues, by S. E. Harris; Economic problems of the Latin American republics, by F. A. Waring; War and postwar agricultural problems of Latin America, by L. A. Wheeler; Central banking and monetary management in Latin America, by Robert Triffin; Fiscal policy and the budget, by H. C. Wallich; Price stabilization programs in Latin America, by S. E. Harris; Exchanges and prices, by S. E. Harris; Inter-American trade policy, by Henry Chalmers; Argentina, by Miron Burgin; Bolivia, by W. A. Neiswanger and J. R. Nelson; Brazil's economy in the war and after, by C. D. Edwards; Chile, by P. T. Ellsworth; Colombia: with particular reference to price control, by B. W. Lewis and Henry Beitscher; Cuba: sugar and currency, by H. C. Wallich; Haiti, by D. D. Humphrey; Mexico: with special reference to its international economic relations, by N. T. Ness; Paraguay: with particular reference to price control, by G. R. Taylor; Venezuela, by E. G. Bennion. Index.

"Without exception, the analyses are based on intimate acquaintance with fresh primary data. Since the essays are all descriptive and analytical rather than hortatory, the standard, hackneyed discussions of expropriation and exploitation are avoided. All of the material is nevertheless pertinent to a reformulation of the general problem of the relations between industrially advanced countries and their less developed neighbors." W. T. R. Fox

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:610 Je '45 220w

Reviewed by Alfred Manes

Ann Am Acad 240:163 Jl '45 500w

Booklist 41:220 Ap 1 '45

Current Hist 8:250 Mr '45 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:702 Jl '45 50w

"Factual, readable but mainly for the economist."

Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 70w

Nation 161:602 D 1 '45 50w

"Readable and expert symposium. . . This volume is a welcome contribution to our knowledge of Latin America."

+ New Repub 112:238 F 12 '45 150w

"Although this book neither attempts to study all Latin-American countries nor to make an all-inclusive analysis of the economy of any of them, it makes so good a selection of problems and areas and goes so deeply into their background that it is the best study of the economy of Latin America now available." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p32 S 16 '45 800w

"Some of the chapters are written in non-technical style, but the larger number of them are addressed to the economist rather than to the general reader."

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:18 Mr '45 200w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

Weekly Book Review p6 F 4 '45 700w

HARRIS, SEYMOUR EDWIN, ed. Economic reconstruction; contributors, Edward M. Bernstein [and others]. 424p $3.75 McGraw

338.91 U.S.—Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 45-7746

"A collection of public lectures, given at Harvard, on both the domestic and the foreign aspects of the post-war economic problems of the United States. Its authors are an unusually distinguished group of economists. Some of the papers are professional in character, like Professor Haberler's on international trade policies, others are popular and descriptive." (Yale R) Partial contents: Postwar employment outlook, by A. H. Hansen; Agricultural and industrial problems in conversion from war to peace, by Mordecai Ezekiel; Wages and employment in war and postwar, by S. E. Harris; Man power and reconversion, by William Haber; The redistribution of the labor force, by C. D. Stewart; Development of price control and transition price problems, by D. H. Wallace; Central and commercial banking in postwar finance, by H. S. Ellis; Postwar tax structure, by Roy Blough; Some factors affecting the future of international trade and international economic policy, by Gottfried Haberler; Monetary stabilization: The United Nations program, by E. M. Bernstein; The path from Bretton Woods, by H. C. Wallich; Social security, by E. M. Burns; Government contributions, by Alan Sweezy. Index.

"Its twenty-three authors are all economic experts, and almost all of them have been intimately connected with policy-making in the numerous government agencies concerned. . . The book has great value for all those who wish to know the considerations underlying the various reconversion activities of the government and its recommendations for long-term reconstruction. While some of the chapters are concerned mainly with detailed measures and others take a larger view, there is a surprising degree of unanimity among the authorities. . . Among the more thoughtful essays dealing with critical subjects are those of Alvin H. Hansen on the postwar employment outlook, J. D. Black and C. D. Hyson on postwar agriculture, John M. Clark on economic controls and postwar transition, and Gerhard Colm on fiscal policy." George Soule

+ New Repub 113:508 O 15 '45 600w

"The whole has a distinctly professional flavor, but one familiar academic pitfall is avoided: the treatment is satisfying contemporary in its awareness of international economic and financial interrelations. . . Many of the pages are unnecessarily awkward and pedestrian. It is better recognized in Britain than in the United States that a skillful use of our flexible mother tongue does not actually discredit an economist." Alzada Comstock

Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 330w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:21 D '45 260w

"'While there is an inevitable unevenness about such a series, it offers the common reader a convenient opportunity to find out in one book what the conversation of economists is like these days, at Harvard or Columbia, that is, if not at Chicago, Oxford, Paris, or Moscow. Many issues are considered, from agriculture and taxation to the social security system. What the common reader is likely to conclude is that economists—at least, those selected by Professor Harris for the series—are more nearly agreed on policy, more positive in their recommendations, and closer to reality than he had been led to expect." E. V. Rostow

+ — Yale R n s 35:374 winter '46 800w

HARRIS, SEYMOUR EDWIN. Price and related controls in the United States. 392p $4 McGraw

338.526 Prices. U.S.—Economic policy 45-4668

"Complete study of price control in modern war economy and includes a briefer study of related controls, as rationing. Deals primarily with price controls, objectives, techniques, complications of control, control of manpower and exports, control of wages, consumer credit, future of controls and time of terminations." (Library J) Index.

HARRIS, S. E.—Continued

Library J 70:637 Jl '45 50w

"Dr. Harris was exceptionally well qualified to write this comprehensive, scholarly and authoritative study on the basis of his experience as Director of the Office of Export-Import Price Control in the OPA. The lay reader may find portions of the book rather heavy going, for in some aspects price control is necessarily a technical subject; but Dr. Harris writes simply and clearly and lessens the effort required of the non-specialist by constantly summarizing his material and by printing the less important passages in smaller type." A. D. Gayer

+ — N Y Times p30 S 30 '45 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:24 S '45 240w

HARROLD, CHARLES FREDERICK. John Henry Newman. 472p $3.50 Longmans

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal
45-9046

This year marks the one-hundredth anniversary of Cardinal Newman's conversion to the Roman Catholic church. In commemoration, a professor at Ohio State university, has written this "expository and critical study of [Newman's] mind, thought and art." Select bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. B. Heywood
Book Week p24 N 25 '45 450w

Booklist 42:148 Ja 1 '46

"To this book have gone years of study, sound scholarship, and a notable measure of sympathetic understanding. The result is a sincere and meticulously careful piece of work which deserves a high place in the ever lengthening list of books about a great Oratorian." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 162:372 Ja '46 450w

"While not himself a Catholic, the author has been happy in his handling of Catholic terms and doctrines. On rare occasions, of course, there have been slips. . . Harrold's 'Newman' will not replace our standard studies of the Cardinal, but it will be used, long after this centennial year, as a balanced and penetrating introduction to the mind of a parson who became a prelate and passed from Oxford to Birmingham by way of Rome." H. G. J. Beck

+ Commonweal 43:150 N 23 '45 300w

"Anyone interested in seeking to discover the secret of a great soul, would enjoy this book, be he Catholic or Protestant."

+ Kirkus 13:512 N 15 '45 270w

"Recommended for colleges and larger libraries and scholarly collections." A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
New Repub 114:27 Ja 7 '46 190w

Reviewed by F. J. Sheen
N Y Times p6 D 2 '45 650w

New Yorker 21:106 N 10 '45 200w

"This book is a skilful, scholarly job, from now on a major and essential item in any bibliography of the serious studies of Newman, or, for that matter, of any phase of nineteenth-century social and literary history. It may be read in whole or in part, depending on the particular facet of Newman's mind in which the student or general reader is interested. And in passing there are bits of background material to attract almost anybody exploring nineteenth-century literature and thought." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 N 17 '45 850w

"Many today will welcome this new book on Newman. With the increasingly recognized need for stronger and more positive Christian teaching in this postwar era it will be a source of inspiration to Christian leaders of all churches. Then, too, because it is a scholarly work and includes complete notes and an extensive bibliography, students and librarians will welcome it as adding to their material on a great figure, not only of the church, but in English literature as well. And finally other thousands will welcome this opportunity to become better acquainted with the author of 'Lead Kindly Light,' a hymn they have long known and loved. These will find the book interesting, though hardly easy reading, as it deals necessarily with ideas which are for the most part theological and abstract. Be it said, however, that, considering his subject, Mr Harrold has achieved a remarkably readable style." D. J. Campbell

+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 480w

"A commemorative oration in the form of a scholarly, temperate and quite readable book . . His book has sufficient wit never to be dull, and solidness enough not to be merely brilliant." G. N. Shuster

+ Weekly Book Review p20 O 28 '45 1100w

HARSH, PHILIP WHALEY. Handbook of classical drama. 526p $4 Stanford univ. press

882.082 Greek drama—History and criticism. Latin drama—History and criticism
A44-4250

This handbook "gives a general factual background, biographies of the dramatists, and a discussion of the structure, purpose and meaning of each of 45 Greek and 36 Latin plays." Book Week

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ja 21 '45 90w

"The book under discussion deserves high praise, and, after all, what a teacher wants for his students is a guide that gives relevant facts accurately and conveniently. For literary criticism it is actually a help to have an opponent against whom one may tilt. A review in this field is inevitably concerned more with difference than with agreement. The fact remains that the book will be helpful to students and teachers and deserves a warm welcome." L. A. Post

+ Class Philol 40:190 Jl '45 1650w

"This is a book of interpretation which is indispensable for any student of the theatre. . . Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 69:696 S 1 '44 70w

"The volume is meant for reference and as such will be found useful to students in the field. For a sense of the poetry and passion of these plays, for an appreciation of the sheer drama of the emergence of a great art form from the matrix of dance and choral song, one must go elsewhere—to the texts of the plays, especially in such modern translations as those of Edith Hamilton (who has also written illuminatingly about The Greek Way), and to the other interpreters who are themselves poets and artists of the theatre."

Theatre Arts 29:191 Mr '45 280w

HART, HUGH DOAK. Lincoln, the man of the ages; an epic poem in prose. 159p il $2.50 F. L. Seybold & co, 100 N Main st, Monmouth, Ill.

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 45-2312

"In 159 pages of free verse, or what looks like free verse, the author illustrates from history the truth that 'the crisis produces the man' and depicts the high points in Lincoln's career as showing that the crisis of slavery and disunion produced a man not only for that crisis but for all time." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:605 My 16 '45 50w

" 'Lincoln, the Man of the Ages' is not a very successful venture into epic writing. It does not in any sense reach true Lincolnian heights." E. J. Parent

Springf'd Republican p6 My 29 '45 240w

HARTLEY, LESLIE POLES. The west window [Eng title: Shrimp and the anemone]. 217p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Putnam]
45-8329

Story of a small English boy and his relationship with his older sister, beautiful, dominating and puritanic.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p13 S 16 '45 300w

Booklist 42:94 N 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 24 '45 500w

"A strange, uneasy story, sensitively interpreted, and written with the English acuity of phrase—this is a book for a distinctive, critical following."

+ Kirkus 13:302 Jl 15 '45 150w

"There is an unusual touch about this book. For a picture of childhood it is remarkably unsentimental; there is nothing whatever of golden day-dreaming about it. The boy Eustace is a delicate, nervous, fear-ridden child, and through his eyes we see how alarming and unaccountable the world may seem to children. And so, too, with the girl Hilda; a hard and definite character who also shows that childhood has problems as well as pleasures." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 8 '44 120w

"Though a little too cramped by theory to become art, The West Window is an unusually intelligent and well written novel." Marjorie Farber

+ New Repub 113:543 O 22 '45 90w

Reviewed by Henry Reed

New Statesman & Nation 29:27 Ja 13 '45 550w

"Eustace's character is at once the strength and weakness of this novel. We are touched, beguiled and often amused as his personality unfolds, just as we are moved by his emotions which poignantly remind us of our own childhood. . . But even while we sympathize with him, dreading for him the inevitable arid future, we must ask: Did Eustace deserve freedom, and did he really want it? The answer is No, and thus the tragedy-in-the-making is blunted." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p4 S 9 '45 550w

"Mr. Hartley (an Englishman) has told so neatly and with so delicate a wit the story of a gentle little boy, his passionate, possessive sister, and the results of the girl's loving domination that you must look twice to realize that here is something more than comedy. A certain morning freshness about the novel is marred, though not fatally, by a suspiciously literary flavor in the talk of these English children."

+ New Yorker 21:84 S 15 '45 120w

"Mr. Hartley's book is a subtle and skillful study of human relationships—of two very young human beings, it is true, but two who embody a psychological problem which surely has no age limitations."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 S 29 '45 500w

"Mr. Hartley's theme fits smoothly into the period chosen for it; his characters, many and various, reflect their world with nonchalant skill; among these portraits, mirrored with all the coloured brilliance of miniatures, that of Eustace successfully maintains its centre place. An unusual novel which should greatly please those who enjoy unsentimental studies of childhood." John Hampson

+ Spec 173:416 N 3 '44 360w

"Does any other literature produce so many novels about childhood as our own? English novels on the subject, at any rate, are as often as not remarkably well done, and Mr. Hartley's book, the latest of them, is a more than ordinarily charming piece of work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p525 O 28 '44 450w

" 'The West Window' is a little treasure; it belongs on the perennial shelf, along with Sylvia Townsend Warner's 'The True Heart,' 'Serena Blandish or the Difficulty of Getting Married,' and two or three other ironic novels that, no matter how often reread, never surrender all that they have to say." William Maxwell

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 9 '45 500w

HARTLEY, MARSDEN. Selected poems. 139p il $3 Viking

811 45-9705

"Edited and with an introduction by Henry W. Wells, with reproductions of nine paintings by the author, and a bust of Hartley by Jacques Lipchitz. Hartley (1877-1943), born in Maine and well known as a painter, produced these verses as notes by the way. Written in the 'free verse' forms poular twenty years ago, they often reflect an original mind. The Maine poems are particularly vivid." New Yorker

Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45

"If Hartley was, perhaps, a better craftsman with the brush, in his literary output he achieves the same odd, unique, compelling qualities whether writing of Maine landscape, stricken birds, burial at sea, a friend's profile. And always he is himself, uncompromisingly individual, acrid, strong yet tender. This little volume will win a small but eager audience."

+ Kirkus 13:412 S 15 '45 160w

New Yorker 21:68 D 29 '45 80w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ja 19 '46 360w

"The book is admirably introduced by Professor Henry W. Wells and, to the great advantage of the reader, contains excellent reproductions of nine characteristic paintings by Hartley. As Professor Wells remarks, Hartley, like William Blake, valued his poetry as highly as his pictures, though he kept it largely to himself, 'cherishing it as a beloved avocation and at times almost as a secret.' His poems have an independent poetical merit. They require no support from his manifest achievement in the art of painting. But there exists a striking correspondence of theme, insight and expression in the pictures and the poems, so that Hartley's work in the two media constitutes a unity." Lloyd Morris

+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 23 '45 600w

HARTWELL, MARJORIE. Into the ark. [28p] il $1 Watts, F.

45-7907

This ABC picture book of animals includes some not so well known such as the ibex, nasua, urocyon, vark, wombat, xerus and the yak.

Book Week p10 N 11 '45 130w

Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45

"Shows in pleasing rich colors the different animals going into the Ark." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 50w

+ N Y Times p10 N 11 '45 80w

New Yorker 21:122 D 8 '45 40w

"Large, lively animals dashing two by two in lifelike colors across broad pages, distinguish this new Noah's Ark book." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 26 '45 130w

HARVARD UNIVERSITY. Committee on the objectives of a general education in a free society. General education in a free society; with an introd. by James Bryant Conant. 267p $2 Harvard univ. press

370.973 Education—U.S. Education—Aims and objectives A45-4180

"In spite of its origins, the book is not primarily concerned with collegiate education. Rather, it is an inquiry into the problems of general education in both school and college by a Committee largely composed of members of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. . . In other words, the report of the Harvard Committee on 'The Objectives of a General Education in a Free Society,' which is printed here in full, presents a view of the total American educational scene. The recommendations as to changes in the Harvard College curriculum were arrived at only after the Committee had spent months examining the entire problem of providing adequate education for all American youth." Introd

Booklist 42:104 D 1 '45

Current Hist 9:461 N '45 40w

"Formal in presentation, this is neither argument nor solution, but an overall of educational theory and conflict today. An important contribution within its field."

+ Kirkus 13:285 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Required reading for everyone in the teaching profession, and of value to the intelligent layman." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 70:684 Ag '45 80w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

Nation 161:258 S 15 '45 1600w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen

New Repub 113:220 Ag 20 '45 2050w

HARVARD UNIVERSITY—Continued

"'General Education in a Free Society' may well become a landmark in American education. It offers a constructive pattern for educators everywhere. If its sensible suggestions are followed, American education can regain direction, discard the bickering and confusion of recent years and help maintain a dynamic democracy in a world at peace. The Harvard Committee's report shows how these goals can be attained." Benjamin Fine

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 5 '45 1600w

"Perhaps the most distinctive feature of the Harvard study is its definitive statement of the inadequacies of the secondary school experience and the consequent deficiencies of the first two college years. Why the high school has such a formidable bill of particulars against it, is here laid bare in a way which is so lucid and devastating that this particular job will never need doing again." Ordway Tead

+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ag 4 '45 850w

"One of the most important educational documents of recent years." W. C. B.

+ School & Society 62:69 Ag 4 '45 900w

Reviewed by I. L. Kandel

School & Society 62:356 D 1 '45 4050w

"Although there is not much that is essentially new in this report, it will be an influential landmark in the development of general education; for it is basically liberal in view, its proposals are consonant with the democratic spirit, and it will lend the prestige of Harvard College to the movement for providing in American schools and colleges a better education for the common life in a free and progressive society." T. R. McConnell

+ School R 53:495 O '45 2000w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:27 D '45 550w

Reviewed by Hiram Haydn

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 26 '45 1650w

HASLIP, JOAN. Fairy tales from the Balkans; pictured by Dodo Adler. 150p $1.75 Collins

Folklore—Balkan states. Tales, Balkan

Collection of stories which were told to the author by her Yugo-Slav grandmother and are here retold.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 My 6 '45 40w

"Not a must but a welcome addition to the folk-tale and story-teller's collections." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 70:70 Ja 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p22 Mr 4 '45 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 28 '45 50w

HATCHER, HARLAN HENTHORNE. Lake Erie. (American lakes ser) 416p il $3.50 Bobbs

977.1 Erie, Lake 45-7075

Fifth and last volume in this series on the Great Lakes. Mr Hatcher covers the lake and its bordering shores from Buffalo to Detroit, and the period from the days of its discovery by white men to 1944.

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Book Week p9 Ag 26 '45 600w

Booklist 42:13 S '45

Bookmark 6:10 N '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

Current Hist 9:548 D '45 70w

Kirkus 13:238 Je 1 '45 170w

"In the last few years it has been my fortune, and sometimes my misfortune, to read and review a large number of volumes of regional Americana. Of all which I remember, I would rate 'Lake Erie' as the most scholarly—and when I say 'most scholarly,' I mean in effect 'best,' for I am not one to define it as 'dull and poorly written.'" G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p12 S 9 '45 500w

"Dean Hatcher not only compresses a remarkable amount of new and interesting information into his volume, but imparts it with sparkle and literary charm." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 28:51 O 13 '45 950w

"A book which is at once scholarly and stirring in the American tradition." G. W. Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:31 D '45 300w

"The volume which has some good photographs, mostly of the modern scene, is a worthy member of this valuable series of Americana." Stewart Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 26 '45 1100w

HAUSER, HEINRICH. The German talks back; introd. and footnotes by Hans J. Morgenthau. 215p $2.50 Holt

943.086 National characteristics, German. Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 45-35178

A German, a non-Nazi, who has lived in the United States for six years, here presents what he feels is the European intellectual's fear and hatred of American democratic ideals and purposes, especially in the type of peace Americans are desirous of imposing on Germany and central Europe.

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

Book Week p1 S 23 '45 1700w

Booklist 42:35 O 1 '45

Cath World 162:286 D '45 200w

"Mr. Hauser represents one kind of German that makes our problem difficult, and therefore it is just as well to know about it. The immediate reaction of most readers to his book will be to make them feel that Germany ought to be crushed still more completely, and kept crushed. But that would be a false conclusion from insufficient premises. Even after the publication of this diatribe, we still believe in freedom of speech and of the press."

Christian Century 62:1165 O 10 '45 110w

"Whether it was wise to publish The German Talks Back is debatable. The publishers took the precaution of straightening out the author's most flagrant distortions of history by means of footnotes. That may to an extent soften the shock caused by the book's uninhibited demagoguery. But no amount of critical annotation will prevent American Nazi sympathizers from making devastating use of the weapons from Herr Hauser's arsenal of fascism." E. S. P.

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 26 '45 650w

"The publication of Hauser's book in a victorious country and in the victor's language, is yet another example of that internal resilience or 'give,' that leaning-over-backwards in intellectual generosity, which Professor Brogan illustrated by such examples as Emily Hobhouse, E. D. Morel, and G. K. Chesterton. But it is also a pity that such books are published, for the Free State should protect itself against poison as against other enemy weapons." Anne Freemantle

— Commonweal 42:600 O 5 '45 260w

Current Hist 9:458 N '45 250w

"The value and importance of this book lies not in what he has to say historically speaking, of the roots of Prussianism, and its virtues, not even in what he has to say as to the pitfalls into which the occupation program may fall—but in the revelation of the persistence of the very factors that made possible Hitler's Germany, that will make its re-education virtually impossible, that—if not recognized and guarded against—will make World War III inevitable. Not to be considered in the light of dangerous propaganda—but a realistic display of a problem that must be recognized to be handled intelligently."

Kirkus 13:385 S 1 '45 550w

"The interpreter Hauser never sees the world as a whole, nor how much of it exists outside of America, Germany, and Russia. He does not see the creatures called human slowly emerging from a wilderness of scarcity and disease, still obsessed by once reasonable but now obsolete fears; nor is he able to draw useful conclusions from their not so very different phases of development. He does not understand the meaning of the concept that 'all men are created equal,' and he does not perceive that the privileged among men who look down at the 'masses' and mock them, instead of feeling responsible for their plight, are separators, not interpreters." Franz Hoellering

— Nation 161:340 O 6 '45 1300w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann

— New Repub 113:476 O 8 '45 1000w

"Mr. Hauser, instead of writing as a true intermediary between cultures at the moment estranged, is satisfied to write as mischievously as he can about each of them. 'To combat the virulence of the nihilism to come,' he says 'there is almost no spiritual reserve in German people today.' The United States, as usual, is to blame." H. M. Jones

— N Y Times p1 S 23 '45 1500w

"[This] anti-Nazi German intellectual believes that our democracy is a vulgar joke and that it will never be foisted on the German people. . . He says plenty more, now crying in the misty wildernesses of racist and geopolitical thinking, now furiously bowling over a regiment of straw men of his own creation, in the best Goebbels manner. He claims to speak for a great many Germans in Germany. One can only hope, for their sake, that this is not the best case they can make."

New Yorker 21:86 S 22 '45 160w

Reviewed by Lewis Mumford

Sat R of Lit 28:9 S 22 '45 2000w

Reviewed by S. H. Walker

Survey G 34:488 D '45 280w

Time 46:105 S 24 '45 1150w

"This book pretends to be an essay on behalf of a better world. It pretends to tell frankly what the reactions of Germans to Americans are, and why. Professing a stern interest in truth, it pretends to tell what's wrong with the United States, what's right with Germany, and why we are bound to make a mess of it as we try to democratize what's left of the Reich. The subject is obviously important. But Hauser's effort to deal with it is a complete failure in every way. Why the publisher chose to print it is beyond me." J. R. Walsh

— Weekly Book Review p4 O 7 '45 700w

Wis Lib Bul 41:111 N '45

HAWKES, HERBERT EDWIN, and HAWKES, MRS ANNA LORETTE (ROSE). Through a dean's open door; a guide for students, parents, and counselors. 242p $2.50 McGraw

378.11 Deans (in schools). Students. Colleges and universities 45-6855

"This volume was undertaken with two groups of readers in mind: first, prospective college candidates and their parents, who often must plan far ahead and make many sacrifices to ensure a college education; and second, personnel officers and college administrators, who are interested in providing for each student a situation in which he may find opportunity for his best development." (Pref) Partial contents: Choosing a college; The responsibility of the college to the individual; Educational clinics; Flexibility of requirements; Group relationships; Financial handicaps; The college and the student—a reciprocal relationship. Dean Hawkes, who died in 1943, was dean of Columbia college, Columbia university, for many years. The co-author, his wife, was formerly dean of women, George Washington university. Index.

"This is no stiff and stuffy memorial; it is alive and kicking. It kicks vigorously against many contemporary prejudices and foibles, and it is lively with well-remembered anecdotes and incidents recounted unpretentiously and without sentimentality, but with insight and feeling. . . This book will be an admirable gift for students about to enter college, or for those returning from military service and eager for the education which contrasts with indoctrination." James Gutmann

+ Sat R of Lit 28:44 S 15 '45 900w

School & Society 62:63 Jl 28 '45 90w

HAWKRIDGE, EMMA. The wisdom tree. 504p il $3.50 Houghton

290 Religions 45-8952

An informal history of religions for adult readers. The volume is in three parts: Primitive patterns; Development in the western world; Development in the eastern world. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p12 O 21 '45 450w

Booklist 42:103 D 1 '45

"Here is an exciting, colorful study of the religions of mankind, told in the way an artist paints a panorama." W. P. Sears

+ Churchman 160:17 Ja 1 '46 110w

"No adherent of any religion would agree with the author's main thesis or with many of her interpretations of the faiths of mankind. But all would find themselves challenged and stimulated should they have the courage to read a book which is so frankly critical of many of the presuppositions and practices of the religions of the world."

+ — Kirkus 13:512 N 15 '45 380w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 161:740 D 29 '45 300w

Reviewed by Lawrence Lee

N Y Times p20 D 16 '45 850w

"The book is written in what might be called a motherly sociological style, and there appears to be nothing in it that those who have interested themselves in the evolution of the various religious systems do not already know about. But as a refresher course, or as a book for those who have not looked into the matter before (novices, in other words), it is as good as anything I know." Hamilton Basso

+ — New Yorker 21:109 O 20 '45 290w

"This is a surprisingly interesting and a surprisingly well-written book. . . Miss Hawkridge can write an admirably clear and concise account of all the religions there ever were, from the cave man to Christian Science, and make it excellent reading, illumine it with wisdom and wit and a gift for expression which produces often an unforgettable phrase." Edith Hamilton

+ Sat R of Lit 28:19 D 22 '45 1000w

"The work is far above the level of childhood's comprehension. It is distinctly for adults. It is profusely and well illustrated, but its text, while well written, is for the reader who brings to the subject a serious concern and is prepared to do more than casual or superficial thinking. The author has read widely and, in wending her way through the vast literature, has shown, in the main, excellent judgment in her choice of authorities. . . The author often states dogmatically as fact hypotheses which are at best highly debatable. . . Here and there are palpable mistakes of fact. . . While the book, in spite of all the labor which has gone into it, is not a fully trustworthy guide to its subject, it contains some penetrating observations and generalizations which are provocative of thought and discussion." K. S. Latourette

+ — Weekly Book Review p37 N 11 '45 900w

HAWLEY, GESSNER GOODRICH. Seeing the invisible; the story of the electron microscope. 195p il $2.50 Knopf

578 Electron microscope 45-1404

Not a technical treatise but an explanation for the layman of the electron microscope and what can be done with it. Many illustrations of objects too small to be seen by any other medium.

"This little jewel of a book tells in a fascinating way the story of the electron microscope, its development, what it has accomplished and what may be expected of it in the future, and all this is presented in a simple, yet accurate manner." E. B. Zeisler

+ Book Week p8 Ja 28 '45 360w

Booklist 41:182 F 15 '45

"Since this book is not intended to serve as a text or as a reference book, no bibliography is included. The make-up of the book is good, the type is clear and easy to read, and the quality of the photographic reproductions excellent. The author is to be complimented for the preparation of this book." R. B. Barnes

HAWLEY, G. G.—Continued
+ Chem & Eng N 23:278 F 10 '45 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45
Kirkus 12:421 S 15 '44 110w
Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 20w

"Mr. Hawley writes with authority, simplicity and clarity about its inventors, the principles of its operation, its use in synthetic rubber, virus and other investigations, and the future possibilities of this new instrument. Magnifications as high as 50,000 of the tip of a cat's whisker, the windpipe of a honey bee, the 'smooth' edge of your best razor blade, and other photographs help to make this a fascinating little book."
+ New Repub 112:238 F 12 '45 90w

"A good many of the mistakes are due to the author's apparent lack of knowledge of the subject. To the same cause may be attributed also the fact that numerous passages read like publicity releases for certain industrial products. Whereas in such releases a lack of objectivity is the normal and expected way to present a subject, it is regrettable to see the same lack of objectivity used in a general presentation. Perhaps the worst feature of the book is its presentation of the history of the electron microscope which is very distorted and biased. Besides an overemphasis on the role of certain workers in this field, many others who contributed at least as much if not more are very cursorily dealt with or not treated at all, and where they are treated the facts are often misrepresented. . . The second half of the book, describing the applications and limitations of the electron microscope, is considerably better than the first." L. Marton
— + R of Scientific Instruments 16:83 Ap '45 650w

"Eminently good reading for the man who has only a high school knowledge of physics and chemistry, but who wants to know what an electromicroscope is and how it works. Hawley is no wild romancer. With commendable caution he presents both the potentialities and the limitations of the electron microscope. And he knows how to marshal his facts and how to write." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 F 24 '45 500w

"The intriguing subject is presented in such comprehensible terms that the lay reader will have no difficulty in gaining the information that he seeks. Emphasis is placed on fundamental principles and on the application of this new tool of science to present and future problems of a practical nature."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ja '45 180w
Reviewed by W. B. Kirkham
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 390w
Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 14 '45 70w

HAWLEY, GESSNER GOODRICH, and LEIFSON, SIGMUND WALDEMAR. Atomic energy in war and peace. 211p $2.50 Reinhold 541.2 Atomic energy. Atomic bomb
45-10567

"Written for the layman by an author and physicist. An excellent study of the elements of atomic energy, survey of radioactivity, and nuclear fission culminating in the atom bomb made possible by government, industry, labor and science combined. Facts concerning the manufacture of U-235 and plutonium with story of the Clinton installation, the Hanford Plant, Los Alamos, New Mexico, time factor and the bomb explosion, also the personnel of the project. Brief account of military and peacetime future of atomic energy." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 100w

"Stripping nucleonics of most of its difficulties, the authors have done an excellent job of giving an elementary and accurate account of the structure of the atom, the methods used in disrupting it, and what happens during atomic fission. It is a sprightly little primer that will prepare any reader eager to venture into the official Smyth report on the atomic bomb."
+ New Repub 114:62 Ja 14 '46 120w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). Give me liberty; pictures by Woodi Ishmael. 257p $2.50 Appleton-Century
B or 92 Henry, Patrick—Juvenile literature
45-4950

Biography of Patrick Henry for readers of high school age. Into the story of his life the author has incorporated much of the history of the American colonies at that time.

Book Week p16 Je 3 '45 230w
Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45
Kirkus 13:87 F 15 '45 170w
Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 70:588 Je 15 '45 70w
Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p25 Ag 26 '45 130w

"It is time that we had a life of Patrick Henry for the young people of America—perhaps for the youth of other countries. Miss Hawthorne, who has written readable and well documented biographies of . . . other great men, obviously has a great enthusiasm for the golden-tongued Virginian who is her present subject. In some aspects it is, perhaps, so great that 'it runs away with her.' One flaw in the book is, in the opinion of this reviewer, her over emphasis on the quarrel between Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson. . . It seems a pity so to stress it here. What she does do—and very effectively—is to build up the figure of a man who was gracious, virile, vigorous in mind and body." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 Je 16 '45 600w

"The first real biography of Patrick Henry for young people is also the best work of one of their favorite biographers. Henry is a hero throughout to Hildegarde Hawthorne, and in this spirit she has drawn him full-length against the turbulent background of his time. The result is a series of stirring scenes from the Revolutionary period held together by a clear sense of principles involved, and leaving a conviction of the important part played by personal eloquence in the decisions of the time."
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 20 '45 270w

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Canyon passage. 264p $2 Little 45-2268

Western story.

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45
Kirkus 13:44 F 1 '45 90w
Reviewed by James Fuller
N Y Times p25 Mr 18 '45 230w

"Excellent fiction—vivid, compact and unaffected as to style; swift, satisfying and unhackneyed in plot." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 25 '45 150w

HAYDN, HIRAM COLLINS. Manhattan furlough. 208p $2.50 Bobbs
45-3731

An army sergeant came to New York for a week's furlough. He felt himself morally responsible for the death of a man who had trained under him, and wanted to get the visit to the boy's parents accomplished. In New York he very nearly lost his grip entirely, but an understanding friend and an even more understanding girl brought him back to sanity.

"Take one jigger of 'The Lost Weekend,' add another of 'The Voice of the Turtle,' sprinkle liberally with bad grammar, add three or four purple patches and a maraschino of mush, and you have a novel called 'Manhattan Furlough.' " E. D. Branch
— Book Week p8 Je 3 '45 410w

Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45
Kirkus 13:144 Ap 1 '45 170w

"There is some fine, firm writing in the book: a couple of the drunken scenes, an agonized dream-passage, occasional strong and certain touches of atmospheric detail, an authenticity about much of the small talk. On the other hand, there is a good deal of rather earnest metaphysics about being able to handle three dimensions before you tackle a fourth; and the very interesting discussion about the religion of humanity versus the religion of state seems not so much an integral part of the story as a piece stuck in. . . The very craftsmanship revealed in so many separate places makes the in-between spots more noticeable. One is aware of unevenness, not only in treatment but in that over-all understanding which precedes treatment." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p25 Ap 22 '45 450w

Reviewed by Edrie Van Dore
Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 300w

"The plot is slight but Mr. Haydn gives it substance and background. . . There is some good writing in 'Manhattan Furlough'; there is some good characterization. But the plot, seems to this reviewer, to lack reality. Much, to be sure, may happen in a person's life over a period of seven days but in the case of Andrew Carver, regeneration seems to be a matter of the author's will rather than a natural development of events leading to a man's conquest over an evil dream." Rose Feld

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 15 '45 360w

HAYEK, FRIEDRICH AUGUST VON. Road to serfdom; with foreword by John Chamberlain. 250p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press [10s 6d Routledge]

338.91 Economic policy. Totalitarianism A44-4381

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Economists engaged in improving our understanding of the competitive system and/or in sponsoring arrangements which will assure its demise should be grateful to Professor Hayek for taking the time from his major preoccupation with economic analysis to explore the ultimate political implications of abandoning the competitive system. There is no economist writing in English more eminently qualified to do this job. In addition to his unique personal experience (a qualification which he properly notes) and his great repute as an economist, Professor Hayek is our most accomplished historian of the development of economic ideas." Aaron Director

+ Am Econ R 35:173 Mr '45 1100w

"This book has had a remarkable success both in England, where it was first published, as well as in this country, where, since its publication in September, it has been creeping into the best-seller class. This is indeed an achievement for a book dealing with an intellectually difficult subject: one which, notwithstanding the author's attempt to make it as palatable as possible to the general reader, remains fully understandable only to the professionally qualified. . . There is no doubt that Hayek presents his thesis with considerable skill. . . There are large stretches in this interesting book which one can traverse with a feeling of complete agreement with the author. . . However, when all this has been said, the good points of the book have pretty well been exhausted. The remainder, at any rate to this reviewer, appears extremely wrong-headed. One could write many pages exposing in detail the fragile nature of some of Hayek's arguments. His account of the broad, high road of liberalism which we were traveling before Germany corrupted us is far too idyllic to be true. . . The truth is that Hayek's strong political prejudices show through the veneer of reasonableness coupled with high-mindedness with which he tries to impress the reader." Eric Roll

— + Am Econ R 35:176 Mr '45 2500w

Reviewed by C. J. Friedrich
Am Pol Sci R 39:575 Je '45 2300w

Reviewed by Joseph Mayer
Ann Am Acad 239:202 My '45 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '45

"There are two things about this widely publicized book which it appears prudent to deprecate. First, it is hysterical. Second, it is, so far as America goes, 'criticism without a fulcrum.' I call it 'hysterical' because, though calm in exterior, it is agitated at heart and in turn agitates others. It is that overly controlled hysteria which scholarship both conceals and reveals. It agitates rather than activates because it does not so discriminate the signposts as to enable the reader to identify the turnoffs on what is luridly called 'the road to serfdom.' There is little need to tell anybody now that others have gone wrong down the governmental way which all must tread. The reader knows that and is already troubled whether it might not happen here! The reader already fears that his country is going wrong and buys a book of this title because he fears it so. By this book his fears are more increased than directed. That is the over-all impression the book leaves on one reader at least. It is almost the inevitable result of a book written by any European who has fled bondage in one land (Austria, in this case) and carries his fears with him into the land which he does not intimately know." T. V. Smith

Ethics 55:224 Ap '45 1800w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 160:489 Ap 28 '45 1400w

"This little book points out clearly the dangers to democracy which are inherent in an over-all centralized planning such as spread over Europe during the interwar period, and it stimulates discussion on this timely subject." Antonin Basch

Pol Sci Q 60:450 S '45 1500w

Reviewed by L. K. Frank
+ Sat R of Lit 28:5 My 12 '45 2900w

HAYES, CARLTON JOSEPH HUNTLEY. Wartime mission in Spain, 1942-1945. 313p $3 Macmillan

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Spain. Spain—Foreign relations. Diplomatic memoirs. World war, 1939-1945—Spain 45-9957

"A personal account of [the author's] diplomatic mission in Spain from May, 1942, to January, 1945. It deals only incidentally with Spain's internal affairs. Its central concern is with American policy toward Spain during those three wartime years, and with Spain's response. The book is not 'official,' and has not been written as an apologia for an Ambassador or for the State Department or for Spain. It is, rather, an historian's candid and factual record of what he saw and knew at first hand." Prefatory note

Reviewed by Willard Shelton
Book Week p24 N 25 '45 800w

Booklist 42:104 D 1 '45

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 162:277 D '45 750w

"After reading this lively personal record of solid diplomatic accomplishment, I find it hard to conceive of Mr. Roosevelt's having picked a better man for the task." Edward Skillin

+ Commonweal 43:290 D 28 '45 550w

"This book will help silence some critics, though others will say there is more that has not been told. . . His style is pedestrian, colorless; but he has a story."

Kirkus 13:452 O 1 '45 300w

Reviewed by D. F. Lucas
Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 140w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton
— Nation 161:693 D 22 '45 1700w

"As a historian, Professor Hayes wrote well. As a belligerently defensive apologist for some questionable history of his own making, he writes badly. The title of his curiously confused, never dispassionate book implies an admission— his successful mission was a personal

HAYES, C. J. H.—Continued
failure. For he realizes that to the future peacetime relations between the United States and Spain his mission contributed less than nothing." Percy Winner
New Repub 113:718 N 26 '45 1150w

"One is ready to believe that no history professor ever blossomed more brilliantly as an Ambassador, assuming that what we mean by ambassadorial brilliance is the capacity to get on with a government. But the book would be happier reading for some of us—maybe a multitude of us by this time—if Professor Hayes were more broad-gauged in his estimate of democratic public opinion. . . It will seem to many of us that Professor Hayes had and has a blind side. At no time in his book does he give evidence of wide contact with ordinary Spaniards." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p3 N 18 '45 1350w

New Yorker 21:120 N 17 '45 140w

Social Studies 37:48 Ja '46 20w

"The volume is an interesting, enlightening and important document." R. A. Brown + Springf'd Republican p4 D 15 '45 180w

"In publishing so promptly these memoirs of his service as our ambassador to Spain from May, 1942, to January, 1945, Mr. Hayes has given proof of high civic courage. For he must know that their publication will draw down upon him the fire of a hundred hostile typewriters. . . A very great deal of his book is, however, not controversy, but straightforward historical writing, invaluable for the record. Mr. Hayes has written without submitting his manuscript to the Department of State for approval, and has therefore written without the use of official documents in the archives of the department. . . The result is an excellent narrative of American diplomacy in Spain during three critical years." Crane Brinton
+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 2 '45 1350w

HAYES, DORSHA. Who walk with the earth. 322p $2.50 Harper
45-3287

Story of a young Harvard graduate, born and reared in luxury, who tries to find scope for his ideals in the labor movement in New York.

"The latter chapters could have been very gooey and mawkish in the hands of a less skilful craftsman. Mrs. Hayes makes them believable. While her novel may not be epic in scope or even an extremely pentrating social document, it is, within the limitations imposed by its structure, a sincere, competent and rewarding one." Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p5 Ap 8 '45 360w

Booklist 41:340 Jl 15 '45

"'Who Walks With the Earth' is a warm, swift, crowded tale, often violent and frequently not polite in language and incidents. Probably every one could find in it some ground for defending whatever theory or prejudice about the unions he may hold. Thoughtfully read, with a real desire to get at the truth, it ought to throw a little light on a confused and important subject. It is not an arid thesis on economics; but, after a slow start, it shows sharply contrasted, strongly motivated individuals in passionate conflict." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 30 '45 700w

"Portraits in violent color and melodramatic climaxes mar reality of the picture of a local union's activities."
Kirkus 13:70 F 15 '45 150w

"Interesting and original novel with a villain no more melodramatic than some of his counterparts in real life." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 70:306 Ap 1 '45 90w

"The author has drawn a number of vivid and convincing character portraits. She has familiarized herself with the conflicts that arise within the labor movement. But these conflicts she discusses, analyzes and debates—rather than presents in dramatic form—until the very close of the novel, when postponed murder, delayed mayhem and procrastinated love all happen at once." Kenneth Fearing
+ — N Y Times p29 Ap 8 '45 180w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 240w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 15 '45 350w

Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

HAYES, MRS FLORENCE (SOOY). Eskimo hunter; il. by Kurt Wiese. 275p $2 Random house 45-7906

This is a story of life in an Eskimo village with hunting expeditions, family relationships, festivities and government school; and it is the story of Kapoonga, a boy who yearned for a rifle and wanted to shoot a bear.

Booklist 42:22 S '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:459 N '45 120w

"An unusually fine book. . . Sets a high standard for books of this type."
+ Kirkus 13:298 Jl 1 '45 150w

"A book packed full of information about Kapoonga and his life in a small Eskimo village. . . Good for reading aloud to nine- and ten-year-olds. Difficult names and strange setting may prevent children from reading it extensively themselves." M. B. Snow
+ — Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w

"A particularly well written adventure story of Alaska of today, showing not only their way of life but giving a deeper feeling of the hunter's responsibility to his people." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 70:954 O 15 '45 70w

"White traders and school teachers give proper contrast to the native life and emphasize the native viewpoint. There's even a properly subordinated touch of juvenile romance. Add better than average humorous touches, and you have a thoroughly good juvenile adventure story." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p12 N 25 '45 130w

"It has humor and a convincing background."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:60 N 10 '45 30w

HAYES, HARRY GORDON. Spending, saving and employment. 259p $3 Knopf

339.41 Consumption (economics). Saving and thrift. Unemployment 45-9554

The author presents an analysis of modern economic problems leading to a proposal of government ownership of industries as the surest means of preventing unemployment. The author is professor of economics at Ohio State university. Index.

Reviewed by L. B. Krueger
Book Week p12 N 25 '45 130w

"Thought provoking—interestingly written so that the layman can read and learn. Controversial."
+ Kirkus 13:453 O 1 '45 150w

"In spite of minor inconsistencies, the author has written an excellent introduction to the basic economic questions of our time."
+ — New Repub 113:812 D 10 '45 240w

"It would be an amusing irony if a careless typesetter were to mistake one letter and so make Professor Hayes, Professor Hayek. For their respective doctrines are at opposite poles. The present work is among the first of many answers to Hayek's 'The Road to Serfdom' likely to appear in the near future. Its persuasive logic, clean language and occasional wry wit set a standard which subsequent books on the subject might well emulate." Leo Barnes
+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 25 '45 800w

HAYES, MARJORIE. Green Peace; drawings by Manning de V. Lee. 230p $2 Lippincott 45-35220

Story of a young Boston girl who went to live with the family of Julia Ward Howe at Green Peace, near the famous school for the blind run by Julia's father. The time is just before and after the beginning of the Civil war. For ages eleven or older.

Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45

"Though Harmony Warren is a fictional character, she has personality and a responsive nature. Life was never dull with the Howes; they lived joyously and intensely. Drawing upon trustworthy personal narratives, Marjorie Hayes gives a vivid and entertaining idea of the famous family, as well as lighter glimpses of their circle at the beginning of the Civil War." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:460 N '45 150w

"Good story, excellent background, sound values, make this desirable for schools, libraries, etc."

+ Kirkus 13:317 Jl 15 '45 130w

"Ending is careless, with the one mystery character neither developed nor justified. For girls eleven to fourteen. Recommended." Maude Adams

+ — Library J 71:59 Ja 1 '46 100w

"Plot is diffused, and none of the characters actually come to life. For ages ten to twelve. Not recommended." Claire Nolte

— Library J 71:59 Ja 1 '46 100w

N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '46 90w

New Yorker 21:133 D 8 '45 80w

Sat R of Lit 28:79 N 10 '45 30w

"Unlike 'The Little House On Runners' Marjorie Hayes' latest book never seems to 'come alive,' though the historical background of the 1850s—'60s is quite authentic. The fault, perhaps, lies in trying to push too many adult events into a story of eight or 10 very active girls and boys." P. H. S.

Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 130w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 O 21 '45 360w

Wis Lib Bul 41:130 D '45

HAYNES, EVAN. Selection and tenure of judges. 308p $5 Nat. conf. of judicial councils, 744 Broad st, Newark 2, N.J.

347.97 Judges 45-2103

"This volume was prepared by a professor of law in the School of Jurisprudence of the University of California. Roscoe Pound contributes, as an introduction, an excellent general statement of the problem with which the book is concerned. In the several chapters, the author reviews the democratic revolution in America between 1830 and 1850, and the present state of affairs in the United States, with regard to the selection and tenure of judges. Comparative material is presented in chapters dealing with judges under the Stuarts, contemporary English judges, and judges in other foreign systems. The concluding chapters deal with the liberalism of elected judges with short terms, as compared with appointed judges with secure tenure, and with the retirement of judges, in so far as this matter relates to the quality of judicial officeholders." Ann Am Acad

---

Reviewed by W. F. Dodd

Am Pol Sci R 39:197 F '45 230w

Reviewed by W. B. Graves

Ann Am Acad 239:213 My '45 850w

"The great problem is how to select judges in the first instance, and to keep them on the bench in the second instance, who possess the requisite clarity of judicial vision, unaffected by juristic myopia or legalistic astigmatism. For the solution of this problem, of paramount concern to every American, Professor Haynes neither offers nor attempts to offer any universal answer. But he does attempt, with very marked success, to present materials and considerations which are exceedingly helpful. A copy of his book could be read with profit by every legislator, by every member of any group with power even to influence the selection of a judge. And, finally, here is a volume which deserves an honored place in any law library." A. M. Dobie

+ Harvard Law R 58:884 Jl '45 950w

HAYSTEAD, LADD. If the prospect pleases; the West the guidebooks never mention. 208p $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press

917.8 West—Economic conditions. West—Industries and resources 45-5299

"Mr Haystead first defines the West as everything west of the hundredth meridian and then proceeds to examine, with both sympathy and candor, the cow business, agriculture, lumber, oil, and the tourist trade. He sounds notes of optimism, for which we are grateful in these days when everything is a problem. We shan't run out of timber and our oil won't end in fifteen years, he believes. In mining, he sees most clearly the manifestation of the exploitation of the West of which Westerners have long complained. He sees that there is in the future to be no place for cheap labor in the West, but the West is a good place for racial minorities to emigrate to, if they emigrate as individuals or families, not as communities. Mr. Haystead denies that the West is what Turner dubbed it: 'a form of society, rather than an area.' He thinks the West is too large and diverse to be a homogeneous social group." Christian Science Monitor

---

"This book combines lively and colorful writing with acute observation and careful thinking. This means that reading it is entertaining and enjoyable, and that when one is through one has learned a lot of facts and encountered some arresting and stimulating ideas." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Je 3 '45 360w

Booklist 41:321 Jl 1 '45

Bookmark 6:12 N '45

"A brisk and breezy study." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 28 '45 650w

"Ladd Haystead tries valiantly, with the best intentions, to show that the West is not 'a state of mind.' And that is perhaps the only thing in his excellent, long-needed book which does not quite come off—probably because the book contains so many delightful incidents or turns of phrase which can't be explained any other way, if they can be explained at all. The fact that the incidents are quite credible and the phrases frequently funny tells a lot about Mr. Haystead's own Western state of mind." J. K. Howard

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 5 '45 1200w

"His is a friendly tale, written from personal experience and long observation." E. K. P. Stokes

+ Sat R of Lit 28:21 Je 30 '45 1000w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 D '45 200w

"Mr. Haystead's book is easy reading, written in a style that is sometimes pally and sometimes faintly patronizing. Much of what he says may be inconclusive, and even contradictory, but that is inherent in his subject matter, which is of endless and often confusing variety. He still says, with the late Mr. Greeley, 'Go West,' but he seems to insist on the reservation—'if you can stand it.'" Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 17 '45 850w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Betsy and the boys; il. by [the author]. 175p $2 Harcourt

45-35133

Further adventures of the little girl in B is for Betsy (Book Review Digest, 1939). In this story Betsy wants to play on Billy's football team, and finally manages it. For grades two to four.

Booklist 41:344 Jl 15 '45

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

"We confess to thinking this is a rather sissy book, but these Betsy books have built up a following. . . Everybody in the story over 13 is too good to be true, and the gang is a little too clean about the ears for authentic realism. The illustrations are very successful."

Kirkus 13:297 Jl 1 '45 120w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN—Continued

"Little girls from seven to ten will welcome this newest 'Betsy' book with real affection. Betsy is becoming even more real." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 70w

"Complete in itself, this story of Betsy and her friends will have an added charm for the boys and girls who in Miss Haywood's other books have followed Betsy and her playmate Billy from pre-school days through the third grade. . . It is a natural, convincing story, told with humor and with understanding of children from 8 to 9." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p21 Jl 29 '45 100w

New Yorker 21:134 D 8 '45 40w

"These are little children who mean to be good and are encouraged to be so by their parents, not by the methods of the Fairchild Family, but in the goodnatured, contemporary manner. Children can practice in these simple stories not only reading but living." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 29 '45 440w

Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

HAZELTINE, MARY EMOGENE. Anniversaries and holidays; a calendar of days and how to observe them; 2d ed completely rev. with the editorial assistance of Judith K. Sollenberger. 316p $6 A.L.A.

394.26 Calendars. Holidays 44-53464

"The appearance of this standard work in an up-to-date, expanded version that is almost a new book will be assured of a welcome from librarians who have made steady use of the original edition [Book Review Digest, 1928]. The arrangement follows the same general plan, with a general index and an enlarged classified index, but several refinements have been added, which facilitate the book's use." (Booklist) Classified and general indexes.

Booklist 41:154 Ja 15 '45

"A small amount of the material seems not very closely relevant to the theme, though all of it is good to have."

+ — Christian Century 62:145 Ja 31 '45 140w

Reviewed by T. H. Allen, Jr.

El School J 45:418 Mr '45 750w

"The book is a 'must' for all librarians who are faced with the problems of gathering information on and in planning programs, celebrations, and entertainments around notable and historic people, events, customs or special days. It will be particularly useful in answering questions posed by radio stations and networks, magazine and newspaper editors, churches, clubs and various community organizations."

+ Library J 70:116 F 1 '45 120w

"The book is a godsend to all who are gathering information on or planning programs, celebrations and entertainments around famous people, events, customs or special days."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 11 '45 100w

HAZLETT, EDWARD EVERETT. Rig for depth charges! 269p $2 Dodd

45-8598

This story for older boys relates the adventures of a young naval officer on submarine duty, from Pearl Harbor to Guadalcanal.

Kirkus 13:438 O 1 '45 130w

"Quite a good Navy yarn. . . Recommended for ages sixteen and up." Alice Vielehr

+ Library J 70:982 O 15 '45 90w

"There is every evidence of authority in this tale of experience. Commander Hazlett has had thirty years of active duty in the Navy, of which sixteen were in the Silent Service. Since his retirement in 1939 he has been on duty as executive officer of the department of English at the United States Naval Academy." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 21 '45 360w

HEADLEE, THOMAS J. Mosquitoes of New Jersey and their control. 326p il maps $4 Rutgers univ. press

595.771 Mosquitoes 45-35134

"Cloaked under a title that belies its wide geographical and scientific usefulness, [this work] brings within the covers of a single volume the knowledge of a world authority on mosquito abatement. For more than three decades Thomas J. Headlee, now a professor emeritus at Rutgers University, has devoted his unusual abilities as a scientific sleuth and crusader to the elimination of the mosquito hazard. His success in New Jersey has formed the basic pattern for the establishment of operations throughout the United States as well as abroad." Eng N

Reviewed by H. L. Fellton

Am J Pub Health 35:1094 O '45 300w

Booklist 41:317 Jl 1 '45

"The scientific and practical information compiled in this book commends it to sanitary engineers, public health and municipal administrators."

+ Eng N 134:111 Je 14 '45 240w

"Practical and useful for entomologists, control workers, sanitary engineers and public health officials"

+ Library J 70:687 Ag '45 70w

HEALY, THOMAS EDWARD A. Tourist under fire; the journal of a wartime traveler. 301p $3 Holt

940.548142 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 45-1250

Personal narrative of a British journalist, relating his experiences in covering the war first in Burma and then in North Africa.

"On the evidence of this book, Healy is a fine reporter, a writer with considerable grace of style, and a citizen of the world." Frederic Hudson

+ Book Week p7 F 25 '45 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45

Reviewed by W. F. Sands

Commonweal 41:521 Mr 9 '45 600w

Foreign Affairs 23:692 Jl '45 20w

"A record with graphic writing, high vitality."

+ Kirkus 12:558 D 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by J. C. Shipman

Library J 70:117 F 1 '45 110w

" 'Tourist Under Fire' is a minutely written, informative and frequently exasperating account. . . Healy is a rare correspondent in that he realizes that people had been living in the places he writes about long before the tanks and guns and troops arrived. He knows that men in uniform are not robots and that systems are not infallible. He discusses strategy in terms of personality and that is probably as enlightening as any other way. He avoids the ostentatious self-effacement affected by some war correspondents and writes with hearty enjoyment of his personal triumphs. You realize in the end that his title was very well chosen." Russell Maloney

+ — N Y Times p6 F 25 '45 700w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 4 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:46 Ap '45

HEARD, GERALD. The gospel according to Gamaliel. 154p $2 Harper

Gamaliel—Fiction. Jesus Christ—Fiction 45-9986

"The story of Christ's life is told as Gamaliel, the teacher of Paul, might have told it. The purpose of this device is to illumine the relation between the thought of Jesus and the Pharisaic teaching of his day, and thereby to help bridge the chasm between Christianity and Judaism." N Y Times

"Aside from all questions as to agreement with his theology or history, Mr. Heard has written a profoundly moving and quickening book. There is freshness and insight in his novel treatment of some familiar Gospel incidents. In structure and style, the story shows skilled craftsmanship. Reading it is both an intellectual pleasure and a spiritual uplift. It ought to be widely read and its ideas thoughtfully considered." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:1415 D 19 '45 1500w

"The book as a whole is a light, but interesting narrative. Unfortunately it ends with a stupid, arrogant statement by Peter to Jacob and Saul." Clifton Macon

+ — Churchman 160:17 Ja 1 '46 360w

"Gerald Heard gives us an imaginative portrayal of Gamaliel's contacts with Jesus and of his impressions of the Master, even paraphrasing some of the teaching of Jesus and putting it into the language of the man on the street. He reports Jesus as speaking in colloquial, almost slangy speech. But so true is Gerald Heard to the essential spirit of the Master that this interpretation does not offend the reader but throws new light on the great personality. There are also interesting character studies of Peter and Saul, while Gamaliel himself is portrayed most winsomely. There is no trace of sectarianism in this book and it should have a wide appeal."

+ Kirkus 13:508 N 15 '45 260w

"Readers who might share the present writer's prejudice against Heard's quasi-Buddhistic mysticism and are unable to find wisdom in yogi practices, whether new or old, need not shun this volume. It is really quite rewarding. Heard has gifts of art and imagination which are quite independent of his religious dogmas and which are expressed most successfully in such a volume as this." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 6 '46 600w.

HEATH, CLARK WRIGHT, and others. What people are; a study of normal young men. 141p il $2 Harvard univ. press

573 Man—Constitution A45-5513

"Any statement regarding this book must begin with an explanation of the word 'normal' used in the subtitle. For the purpose of this study such an individual 'is regarded as the balanced person whose combination of traits of all sorts allows him to function effectively in a variety of ways.' In conformity with this definition, the participants have been selected since 1938 on the basis of satisfactory records from sophomore classes at Harvard University. Some 256 students have been completely studied during the period under review. . . The investigating of this subject was made possible by the Grant Foundation of New York. Broadly stated, the aims and purposes of the Grant Study are 'to achieve more thorough understanding of human behavior characteristics and to interpret them more precisely and wisely.' " U S Quarterly Bkl

"It is presumptuous for a reviewer to pit himself against a whole platoon of disciplined intelligence working as a unit for six long years. But it does seem that a little more intuitional play should have been allowed, a little less reverence for experimental fact, a little less avoidance for dramatic terminology. For cold fact arranged seriatim seems to bear no fruitful relation to the manifest plasticity of the human flesh. It is rather paradoxical to find physics so exciting and biology so dull." E. B. Garside

N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '46 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:19 D '45 260w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Expert in murder. 192p $2 Doubleday

45-7085

A tale of mystery and adventure in North Africa in which Paul Kilgerrin, investigator for the State Department and Military Intelligence, plays a part.

"Sardonic, sanguine entertainment which is good."

+ Kirkus 13:230 Je 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Jl 22 '45 110w

"More bloodshed than sense."

— New Yorker 21:72 Jl 28 '45 80w

"Good stuff."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Jl 21 '45 40w

"The hero-sleuth is a bit excessive in spots, but his adventures amid strange scenes should please most of those who follow the spies these days." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 22 '45 110w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Vicious pattern. 224p $2 Doubleday

45-10361

Detective story.

Booklist 42:166 Ja 15 '46

Kirkus 13:407 S 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p23 N 25 '45 130w

"Reminiscent of early Hammett, but hardly in the same league."

New Yorker 21:124 N 17 '45 110w

Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

"We see no reason why many customers couldn't get excited over this wide-eyed shocker. Or you could take it in fun, as we often do with this sort of thing." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 N 18 '45 150w

HEBERLE, RUDOLF. From democracy to Nazism; a regional case study on political parties in Germany. 130p $2.50 La. state univ. press

329.943 Political parties—Germany. Germany—Politics and government 45-6690

"In the modest frame of a 'regional case study' analyzing the political developments in Schleswig Holstein, Mr. Heberle, professor of sociology at Louisiana State University, contributes valuable material for an unbiased judgment of the German tragedy. The author shows the fallacy of the popular belief that Prussianism and Junkerism were identical with Nazism." (Nation) Selected bibliography.

Reviewed by Heinrich Hauser

Am J Soc 51:257 N '45 550w

Reviewed by H. L. Childs

Am Pol Sci R 39:1038 O '45 370w

"There are few sociological studies of political movements which compare in intensity and clarity with the study under review. . . Dr. Heberle's study appears all the more significant at this time as it elucidates an important chapter in the sociology of the National-Socialist party in Germany and thus contributes to the understanding of the causes which underlie Fascist movements in many lands." W. J. Cahnman

+ Am Soc R 10:812 D '45 1200w

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder

Ann Am Acad 242:167 N '45 350w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Jl 1 '45 120w

Christian Century 62:887 Ag 1 '45 110w

Current Hist 9:129 Ag '45 40w

Foreign Affairs 24:166 O '45 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 1 '45 90w

"Serious information, strongly recommended to Germany's present would-be educators." Joseph Bornstein

+ Nation 161:65 Jl 21 '45 60w

Reviewed by Taylor Cole

Pol Sci Q 60:474 S '45 230w

"Mr. Heberle's book contains a few mistakes and omissions, but deserves attention for its many good points. The most original part of it is the meticulous analysis of the economic conditions of the three geographic strips of Schleswig-Holstein, the Marsch, the Geest, and the Eastern Hillside, and the relationship between these economic and ethnic conditions,

HEBERLE, RUDOLF—Continued
and the success of National Socialist ideology. It is worthwhile to learn that the political and human solidarity in some districts was so strong that, at certain political turning points, one whole group would be apt to change its allegiance in order to avoid internal personal strife and achieve unanimity." Veit Valentin
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:33 Je 16 '45 1000w
Social Studies 36:332 N '45 10w
Times [London] Lit Sup p351 Jl 28 '45 300w

HECHT, BEN. Collected stories; prefaced by some introductory thoughts by the author. 524p $3 Crown 45-5017

Contents: Concerning a woman of sin; Miracle of the fifteen murderers; Remember thy Creator; The mystery of the fabulous laundryman; The adventures of Professor Emmett; Cafe sinister; The champion from far away; Death of Eleazer; The pink hussar; The shadow; God is good to a Jew; The wistful blackguard; Specter of the rose; The bull that won; Actor's blood; Crime without passion; The rival dummy; In the midst of death; The ax; The lost soul; The heavenly choir.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Je 3 '45 550w
Kirkus 13:209 My 15 '45 130w

"Hecht addicts, of course, will remember that a little of his output goes a long way, and will take it in small doses. Like fruit-cake, a three-ring circus, and moonshine whisky (Mr. Hecht, as a writer, has a remarkable affinity with all three) the present book cannot be swallowed whole without disastrous results." William DuBois
N Y Times p8 Je 10 '45 320w

"Mr. Hecht's style is a medley of styles, all serviceable in their various ways, some more admirable than others. He loves to write with a flourish, he loves to write with a swagger, but he can also write with sobriety and restraint when he chooses. His passion for wordplay, for similes in particular, often leads him into excess, but even his excesses are effective, while his best similes serve, as such figures should, to illuminate or extend the significance of their objects. Mr. Hecht can be loud and flashy when the mood is on him, but these traits are only the obverse of a sensitivity . . . that enables him to write as he does when he describes Father Dominic pretending to be a plant, in the story called 'Death of Eleazer.' " B. R. Redman
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:15 Je 23 '45 1000w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 350w

HEDRICK, ULYSSES PRENTISS. Grapes and wines from home vineyards. 326p il $3.50 Oxford 634.8 Grapes. Wine and wine making
Agr45-333

Study of grapes native to America east of the Rockies. Explains both grape cultivation for the amateur, and wine making at home. The book contains also chapters on serving wine and wine cookery. Index.

"Dr. Hedrick is admirably qualified to produce a valuable and well-written book in this field. He is the author of the excellent companion volume, 'Fruits for the Home Garden,' and of the monumental 'Grapes of New York,' a scholarly and thorough study which with its handsome colored plates is a treasure in any horticultural library. He has studied fruits and fruit-growing in the United States for 50 years, and has devoted no small part of his attention to grapes and to wine-making, especially the process as it may be carried on at home. He writes clearly, sensibly, with gusto and with humor." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 S 16 '45 900w
Booklist 42:33 O 1 '45
Bookmark 6:6 N '45
Kirkus 13:153 Ap 1 '45 170w
Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 70w

"An urbane and comprehensive book on what best to do with the blood of the grape." Richardson Wright
+ Weekly Book Review p10 S 23 '45 400w

HEILBRON, ISIDOR MORRIS, and BUNBURY, HUGH MILLS, eds. Dictionary of organic compounds; the constitution and physical and chemical properties of the principal carbon compounds and their derivatives, together with the relevant literature references. new rev & enl ed 3v ea $30; set $75; also separate suppl to v2-3 ea $1 Oxford [ea £6 6s; set £15 15s Eyre]
547.03 Chemistry, Organic—Dictionaries. Chemistry—Dictionaries [43-15802]

"This new edition is entirely rewritten, with much additional material included. The present volume, although it covers the same section of the alphabet as the first volume of the first edition (1934), contains 350 additional pages. The aim has been to cover the literature up to the end of 1940 and to include a reference, wherever possible, to papers appearing in 1941 and 1942." N Y New Tech Bks

"The 'Dictionary' is more than a handbook; it is less than Beilstein. In its place there is nothing to compare with it, and the editors and compilers are to be congratulated on their valuable addition to the chemical literature." R. B. Woodward
+ Am Chem Soc J 67:1044 Je '45 390w
Chem & Eng N 22:1872 O 25 '44 20w
Chem & Met Eng 52:263 S '45 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45
N Y New Tech Bks 28:61 O '43

HEIMANN, EDUARD. History of economic doctrines; an introduction to economic theory. 263p $3.50 Oxford
330.1 Economics—History 45-5288

"Professor Heimann's book is a compact introduction to theoretical developments in economics, from Aristotle to Lord Keynes, and succeeds in giving such writers as Quesnay, Malthus, von Theunen and Oppenheimer their proper places in the history of ideas. The author's approach is essentially neo-classical: economics consequently becomes a matter of logical techniques rather than a reflection of social phenomena." New Repub

"Ordinarily it is something of a chore to read a volume on the history of economic thought. This is not the case with the present book. For several reasons it is a remarkable feat of condensed exposition. Probably the foremost reason is the author's mastery of his material. . . Second is the grouping of economic thinkers around developments in thought, rather than the thoughts around the thinkers, although the two sides of the combination are identified clearly enough with each other. Third is the method of giving unity and continuity to the presentation. . . The book is made the more pleasing by the author's sense of values and perspective." Bruce Knight
+ Ann Am Acad 242:192 N '45 450w

"The logical method doubtless has its pitfalls; the critique of Marxian theory seems lost in detail, and sociological economists such as Veblen and Commons are given inadequate treatment. The Veblenian satire apparently disturbs Professor Heimann, yet it exposed capitalist shortcomings more effectively than any logical approach. The discussion of the marginal-utility theory is considerably more successful. In spite of its limitations, the book is an absorbing work of scholarship."
+ — New Repub 113:142 Jl 30 '45 240w

"The theories of the economists included in the survey are so diverse, and the treatment accorded to each is so brief, that the book may be confusing to readers with only a slight background in economics. Its usefulness will probably be greatest among those who have a considerable knowledge both of modern economics, and of the writings of early economists. Such readers will find the book rather a well-integrated discussion of the development of economic thought than an 'introduction.' "
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:25 S '45 350w

HEINE, HEINRICH. Germany, a winter's tale, 1844; English version by Herman Salinger; introd. by Herman Kesten. 156p $2.75 Fischer, L.B.

831 44-41879

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by E. R. Bentley
Nation 160:163 F 10 '45 180w

"When we take up Heine coolly as a great poet and critic, as we take up Goethe or Matthew Arnold, we shall also, it is to be hoped, translate him better. Unlike most translators of Heine, Mr. Salinger is lively and knowing. But he jazzes Heine up with 'funny' rhymes for which there is no warrant in the original, and so lowers Heine to the level of Ogden Nash." E. R. Bentley
New Repub 112:269 F 19 '45 700w

"Herman Kesten, the well-known German novelist, has prefaced the translation. His study of the poet is intelligent, though he slightly oversimplifies Heine's position as a precursor of modern revolutionary thought." F. C. Golffing
Poetry 66:56 Ap '45 550w

HELLMAN, CLARISSE DORIS (MRS MORTON PEPPER). Comet of 1577; its place in the history of astronomy. 488p $6 Columbia univ. press

523.6 Comets—1577

"This book is devoted to a description of the controversy on the nature of comets. In two introductory chapters, an outline of cometary theory in antiquity and the Middle Ages is given. There follows a description of the writings opposing and defending the Aristotelean attitude; this subject is augmented by chapters on general publications concerning the comet. The non-technical method of presenting the dispute occasionally makes the subject difficult to understand; for example, it might escape the attention of the reader that the arguments concerning the parallax brought forth by both sides were based on tacit assumptions which are almost equivalent to the assertion to be proved. More than a third of this work is devoted to a bibliography of publications about the comet, of general literature in the history of astronomy, and other material consulted. Extensive bibliographical references are also given in the notes." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"A history of cometary theory comparable to Dreyer's History of the Planetary Systems has yet to be written. Dr. Hellman's study will be a mine of information for such a historian, as well as a useful and valuable guide and tool for other students of the sixteenth century." Dorothy Stimson
+ Am Hist R 51:141 O '45 280w

"The book should be of importance to persons interested in the period and subject."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:54 Mr '45 240w

HEMPEL, EDWARD HENRY. Top-management planning; methods needed for postwar orientation of industrial companies. 414p $4.50 Harper

658.01 Industry—Organization, control, etc. 45-5925

The purpose of this book is to set forth the principles of top-management or company orientation planning. It contains sections or chapters on size planning, sales forecasting, product planning, process planning, patent analysis and appraisal, machine planning, plant location and plant planning. The author is assistant professor of industrial engineering at Columbia University. Index.

Reviewed by R. L. Dodge
Chem & Eng N 24:101 Ja 10 '46 500w
Library J 70:637 Jl '45 100w

HENDERSON, ALFRED JAMES. London and the national government, 1721-1742. 242p $3 Duke univ. press

942.072 London—Politics and government. Great Britain—Politics and government. Walpole, Robert, 1st earl of Orford 45-7872

"Mr. Henderson is an American professor of history who began life as a Yorkshireman, and his book is a study of Walpole's great administration of 1721-1742 as it appeared to the City of London." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

"The interest of the reader is smothered at times by the long lists of candidates and election statistics. An all-too-short summary (three pages) recalls what in the book is most worth remembering. The historical value of the study is enhanced by the voluminous footnotes and an excellent bibliography listing unpublished manuscripts, current periodicals, and pamphlets." O. C. Hormell
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1236 D '45 300w

"A scholarly study." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 S 23 '45 90w

"It is thorough, careful, fully documented, and it contains many interesting things."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p592 D 15 '45 600w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus saves a ship; il. by the author. 136p $2 Bobbs

45-4151

The irrepressible Augustus has a new adventure. He and his family become involuntary stowaways on a ship and it proves a lucky thing for the Western Star. When the ship is attacked by a submarine, Augustus saves the ship.

"Illustrations mostly in color are by author and add charm and humor to the story. Recommended for ages eight to ten." V. W. Schott
+ Library J 70:534 Je 1 '45 40w

"Augustus isn't quite as funny and spontaneous as usual, but no small boy will stop following him through this most breathless of his exploits." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p23 Ag 5 '45 110w

"The title sounds as if this were one more of a series that has become difficult to review because each book, cut to the same pattern, is so much like the others. But the pattern is so popular, and for such good reasons—action and irrepressible small boyishness—that children who seize each story as it comes will find in this one a shift in the familiar construction." M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Je 10 '45 280w

HENLE, FRITZ. Mexico; photographs. 10p 62pl $4 Ziff-Davis

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel 45-4713

"The surfaces of Mexico form a protective covering of such charm that few observers try to penetrate beneath them. . . Fritz Henle, who works impartially for fashion editors and the OWI, presents in this book sixty-two camera studies of Mexico's surfaces. . . They are arranged to show the contrasts between new and old—the basic Indian civilization and the overlay of gorgeous Spanish baroque, the helmeted old stone Conquistador and the helmeted young tank commander." N Y Times

Booklist 41:321 Jl 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"The theme is scarcely new, but these illustrations of it have great charm. As tourist photography of a high order the book speaks for itself and should be allowed to. The text, in Spanish and English, which are not always equivalent, is divided between a simple account of Mexico's history and an equally simple set of paragraphed captions. It is happily set so as not to interfere with the photographs." Mildred Adams
N Y Times p7 My 27 '45 400w

HENLE, FRITZ—Continued

"To anyone who has ever visited Mexico, the book brings back a nostalgic sentiment and expertly fills those regretted blanks in his personal picture album. To one who has yet to visit this neighbor, here is a delightful highlighted study of some of the visual experiences which should lure him to create the opportunity to travel south." L. S. Burack

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 240w

"Exciting and inclusive as the record is, there are some deficiencies to be noted. The portraits of people are sometimes a bit posy, theatricalized rather than dramatic. The attempt to convey social struggle, as in the contrast between herds grazing on a hacienda and herds grazing on a collective ejido, is ineffectual. . . What one misses most is a sense of the grim, light-hearted jest with life and sex and danger and especially with death, which is at the core of Mexican life." B. D. Wolfe

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 8 '45 450w

HENNE, FRANCES, and PRITCHARD, MARGARET. Librarian and the teacher of home economics. (Experimenting together) 63p pa 75c A.L.A.

027.8 School libraries (high school). Home economics—Study and teaching 45-4319

"The story of some of the ways in which a librarian, a home-economics teacher, and the students enrolled in the home economics classes in one high school—the University High School of the University of Chicago—worked together for educational advancement." School & Society

"Although a vast amount of detailed information and much educational philosophy is included, the organization of the material is so logical and the style so clear that the pamphlet makes interesting reading besides being a valuable professional tool." Martha Parks

+ Library Q 15:263 Jl '45 1300w

School & Society 61:238 Ap 14 '45 60w

HENNEY, KEITH. Principles of radio. 5th ed 534p $3.50 Wiley

621.384 Radio 45-5494

"The fundamentals of electricity and radio, written primarily for home study and requiring a knowledge in mathematics of only arithmetic and simple algebra. In this edition the chapters have been rearranged, and the material relating to direct-current circuits, electrical measurements, transmitters and oscillators has been expanded. New material dealing with frequency phenomena and electronic instruments has been added, while the chapter on facsimile and television transmission in the earlier edition has been omitted." (N Y New Tech Bks) For fourth edition see Book Review Digest, 1942.

Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:38 Jl '45

HENRI, RAYMOND. Iwo Jima; springboard to final victory. (U.S. camera bk) 95p il $1.75; pa 50c World pub.

940.542 Iwo Jima, Battle of, 1945 45-6511

"To say that this record of the conquest of Iwo Jima is illustrated from photographs is an understatement, for the photographs occupy more space than does the text, and they tell the story fully as well. Most of them are by members of the Marine Corps. Others are by members of the Coast Guard and by photographers of the press associations. . . Joe Rosenthal's famous picture of the Suribachi flag-raising is, of course, included, as are several other pictures by the same photographer." N Y Times

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer
Book Week p6 Jl 15 '45 270w

Booklist 42:13 S '45

Kirkus 13:293 Jl 1 '45 60w

+ N Y Times p29 Ag 5 '45 250w

"The many magnificent photographs are official and the text is warmly human."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 12 '45 180w

HENRI, RAYMOND, and others. U.S. marines on Iwo Jima; drawings by Tom Dunn. 294p maps $3.50 Dial press

940.542 Iwo Jima, Battle of, 1945 45-35210

The story of the taking of Iwo Jima, told by three marine corps combat correspondents and two marine corps public-relations officers, all of whom were there. The book contains a list of dead and missing marines of Iwo Jima and an index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p12 O 21 '45 360w

Booklist 42:73 N 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"One of the best of the war books, written simply and straightforwardly, with full tactical detail, maps, and photographs."

+ New Yorker 21:115 O 20 '45 100w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
Weekly Book Review p27 N 25 '45 500w

HENRIQUES, ROBERT DAVID QUIXANO. Home fires burning [Eng title: Journey home]. 241p $2.50 Viking [8s 6d Heinemann]

45-7502

Novel dealing with the problems of demobilization in England. It is just before Christmas, the first after the end of the war, and a returned nurse and four returning soldiers join forces to get home for Christmas. At the journey's end they part to go their several ways, but meet again the next day. Nothing has turned out as they expected. Shall they resort to fascism? They debate the question, and the answer is no.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 S 2 '45 500w

Booklist 42:19 S '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 27 '45 360w

Kirkus 13:276 Jl 1 '45 300w

"It is not a hopeful picture of what we may expect a year from now, but it has a very convincing air of being a true one." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 15 '44 100w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 161:187 Ag 25 '45 600w

"Genuinely excellent reading, the novel disappoints because its exciting world has existed not fully enough and only for the sake of a problem, because its characters are intended as signs in an algebra." Paul Griffith

+ — N Y Times p27 Ag 26 '45 450w

"The incidents of the novel, expertly constructed as they are, are not really very important except as a framework for Mr. Henriques's brilliant writing, which often cascades into near-poetry, and his emotional (but never sentimental) consideration of the human spirit when confronted with the necessity for choosing between two fundamentally different manners of behavior. Not a wholly successful novel, but an exceedingly interesting one that has, for all the author's concern with effect, a warm reality."

+ New Yorker 21:58 Ag 25 '45 160w

"There is no doubt of the clarity of exposition here. Henriques has laid bare his questions and answers, his concern with them, and his wish that we concern ourselves as well. It is a tensely written tract complete with moving figures as vital as a good timely tract can be, if never quite a living novel." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:32 S 1 '45 450w

"This book is sad and grave in tone, and debates the questions of peace and of leadership without optimism but with a very real sympathy for the fighting men. The story-form into which the debate is fitted is somewhat portentous and laborious, but the characters of the soldiers are lively and well differentiated, and no one can fail to be interested in the huge problem which they stand for." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 174:64 Ja 19 '45 140w

Time 46:102 S 3 '45 650w

"The book is, in fact, strongly felt, searching and without facile comfort. Yet as a novel—a work of art, if you like—it does not quite come off. Judged, as this author's work should be judged, by the highest standards, it is too irresolute of aim, at once too explicit and too poeticized a statement of intelligible fears."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p605 D 16 '44 1200w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 19 '45 700w

Wis Lib Bul 41:112 N '45

"Home Fires Burning is a deadly serious warning, though not an unduly pessimistic one. It is beautifully written and thoroughly interesting. But it is as coldly intellectualized as a proposition in algebra. You do not read it to see what happens to its characters, but to see what Mr. Henriques thinks of the political future." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 35:191 autumn '45 440w

HENRIQUEZ URENA, PEDRO. Literary currents in Hispanic America. 345p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [15s Oxford]

868.998 Spanish American literature. Latin America—Civilization A45-2956

"The eight lectures which make up the eight chapters of the book represent a lifetime of study and thought, being the latest version of a series of lectures delivered almost twenty years earlier and published as 'Seis ensayos en busca de nuestra expresión ('Six Essays in Search of Our Expression,' Buenos Aires, 1928). . . The author does not limit himself to literature alone but finds space for relevant comments on philosophy and politics, architecture, sculpture, painting, music, the popular arts and the zeitgeist that distinguishes each particular age. Nor does he limit himself to Hispanic America, since Portuguese-speaking Brazil, with quite a different cultural history, is examined in each period for purposes of analogy or contrast." N Y Times

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Je 10 '45 100w

Booklist 42:10 S '45

"An urbane, scholarly, and seasoned work of a quality hitherto unknown in English writings on this subject. The author treats of Latin-American literature as though it was as much a part of the stream of world literature as anything written in England, France, or Russia. He presents Hispanic-American writers not as clever children or sublime geniuses—two classifications hitherto favorites among critics—but as talented men seeking the forms of expression suited to their needs. His history has form, substance, wit, authority. It gives literature its proper status as a generic part of the development of civilization in the southern hemisphere." Mildred Adams

+ Nation 161:184 Ag 25 '45 600w

"As 'Seis ensayos en busca de nuestra expresión' was recognized on its first appearance as a ground-breaking work in Hispanic America's exploration of its own spirit, so today in its present form, 'Literary Currents in Hispanic America' is the most compact and comprehensive introduction to that spirit available in English." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p4 Je 3 '45 950w

"The project is an ambitious one. . . It is a task from which the bravest might shrink. That Mr. Henriquez-Ureña has performed it with remarkable success will surprise no one familiar with his mature scholarship and unfailing skill in the arrangement of innumerable dates and names. He belongs, after all, to a family in which intellectual achievement is a tradition." Dudley Poore

+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ag 4 '45 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:5 D '45 200w

"In the briefest space conceivable for such a huge task Henriquez-Urena has presented a generous measure of the main cultural currents in Hispanic-America. Granted that it is a provisional work, it is nevertheless important at this particular moment when so many of us want to know more about our Latin-American neighbors and have so few books to consult." Angel Flores

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Jl 29 '45 550w

HENRY, JOHN FREDRICK, ed. Your future in aviation; foreword by Mrs James H. Doolittle. 329p $3 Prentice-Hall

629.13069 Aeronautics as a profession 45-11188

"Compiled from 800 official sources. Optimistic book on aviation as a career with numerous opportunities cited for men and women in tomorrow's military, commercial and air transportation and private flying. Jobs outlined with salaries and includes air cargo, underwriting, service stations, traffic control and insurance. Directories of civil flying schools, aircraft mechanic schools and aircraft manufacturers." (Library J) Index.

Book Week p4 D 23 '45 150w

Booklist 42:180 F 1 '46

Kirkus 13:464 O 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 90w

HENRY, LEWIS C., ed. 5000 quotations for all occasions. (New home lib) 346p 69c Blakiston

808.8 Quotations 45-3728

A collection of quotations in prose and poetry from writers ancient and modern. The arrangement is by subject with an index of authors which includes dates and an identifying phrase or two.

Booklist 41:303 Je 15 '45

"Despite its low cost, this collection is well worth shelf room in any personal library. . . It obviously has not been merely copied out of other collections, and contains many quotations, fresh and apt, which this reviewer had not seen before. . . For convenient reference of speakers, writers and compilers of 'club papers' this book is valuable. It is also a pleasant volume for browsers."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 23 '45 200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:67 Je '45

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Justin Morgan had a horse; il. by Wesley Dennis. [89p] $2.50 Wilcox & Follett

Horses—Legends and stories Agr45-372

Story of the brave little Vermont work horse from which came the famous American breed of Morgan horses. Justin Morgan first owned the horse, but it was the boy Joel Goss who loved "Little Bub", later called "Justin Morgan", followed him thru his career, rescued him from a cruel master, and finally had the pleasure of having him ridden by James Monroe when he was president of the United States.

"In a book that is rich in human values—the sort of book that makes you proud and sometimes brings a lump to your throat—Marguerite Henry has told the story of the common little work horse which fathered a line of famous American horses."

+ Book Week p19 N 11 '45 310w

Booklist 42:151 Ja 1 '46

"Will appeal to horse-lovers from nine years up. Picture-book size, beautifully illustrated in sepia by Wesley Dennis, it is an addition to any library, public or private." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 70w

HENRY, MARGUERITE—Continued
"Seven to 12-year-olds will warm to this story and so will a good many older readers. They will understand from Wesley Dennis' pictures of Bub just why Joel loved him." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 N 25 '45 180w

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Little fellow; drawings by Diana Thorne. [58p] $2 Winston

Horses—Legends and stories A45-4589

Picture story book about the daily life of a roan colt, showing the course of life in the pasture, and his learning of manners. For grades three and four.

Book Week p22 Je 3 '45 180w
Booklist 41:273 My 15 '45

"With fine pictures in color or black and white on every page, the experiences of Chip, the baby colt, will attract all animal-loving children. His story is a simple one of growing-up days among other horses in a home where he is petted and where he learns to be friendly toward a younger companion."
+ Horn Bk 21:194 My '45 40w

"Diana Thorne's illustrations in color charmingly illustrate this delightful story of an 'only child' (though equine) adjusting to a new arrival."
+ Kirkus 13:85 F 15 '45 130w

"Diana Thorne, who is noted for her horse drawings, presents here many beautiful illustrations both in black and white and in color of horses and colts, singly and in groups." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 70:415 My 1 '45 70w

"An amiable little story. . . The pictures on every page, most of them in color, are uneven in quality. On the whole the artist seems less familiar with horses than she is with dogs, and considerably less successful in transferring them to paper." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 29 '45 90w

"The pictures, printed in a bright reddish-brown and in black and white, have a good deal of humor. The end-papers with Chips and his mother on one side and Strawberry Jenks and his mother on the other will lead small boys and girls on into the story." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:39 Je 16 '45 230w

"The pictures have not only charm but distinction: color excellently reproduced has so much to do with both that reproduction in black and white would not do them justice. The pages are large, the horses completely lifelike, the humor unforced—as in a scene all children will love, in which the head of Chip is on one page and that of Fanny on the one facing it, the colt gazing entranced at the progress of a horsefly up the other's nose. You can fairly see the snort gathering that will dislodge it."
+ Weekly Book Review p18 My 20 '45 270w
Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Robert Fulton, boy craftsman; il. by Lawrence Dresser. 187p $1.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Fulton, Robert—Juvenile literature 45-8648

"Another in the 'Childhood of Famous Americans Series.' Simple text and large print make this another biography that third and fourth graders can read. Robert Fulton is a real boy who comes alive in the first part of the book. The final chapter sums up his life from seventeen on, as is the custom in this series." Library J

"In adding the story of Robert Fulton to [this] series, Marguerite Henry had to match her skill against that of a number of illustrious predecessors who have contributed to the list. It is delightful to find that she has made good to the extent of writing one of the best of the series."
+ Book Week p17 N 11 '45 180w

"There is excellent detail on manufacturing processes, materials, schools and family life. Library and school material. Third and fourth graders may be able to read it themselves for the type is clear and good and the paragraphs and chapters short."
+ Kirkus 13:340 Ag 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson
Library J 70:1027 N 1 '45 50w

HENRY, ROBERT SELPH. "First with the most" Forrest. 558p il maps $4 Bobbs

B or 92 Forrest, Nathan Bedford 44-9824

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Mr. Henry several years ago achieved the distinction of writing the best history of the Confederacy. He now has merited recognition as author of the best biography of Forrest. He has unearthed much material not available to other biographers. His narrative is generously documented and illumined by a series of excellent maps. The author maintains a high level of accuracy and scholarliness without once being obscure or dull." B. I. Wiley
+ Am Hist R 50:565 Ap '45 550w

Reviewed by H. D. Dozier
Atlantic 175:135 Ap '45 700w

Reviewed by Daniel Aaron
New Repub 112:339 Mr 5 '45 30w

"Mr. Henry has written a scholarly, detailed biography of a major military figure, one whose importance has grown with the years." R. A. Brown
+ Social Educ 9:235 My '45 400w

"The military actions, and not the character of the man, have been the author's primary interest. The tone is detached and undramatic, and the profuse detail will be interesting and meaningful only to close students of military problems. The book belongs, therefore, rather in the category of military history than of biography."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:11 Mr '45 160w

HERBERT OF CHERBURY, EDWARD HERBERT, 1st baron. De religione laici; ed. and tr. with a critical discussion of his life and philosophy and a comprehensive bibl. of his works, by Harold R. Hutcheson. 199p $3 Yale univ. press [15s Oxford]

211 Deism. Herbert of Cherbury, Edward Herbert, 1st baron A44-1546

The Latin text and an English translation of a late work of this English philosopher and historian, who was born in 1583 and died in 1648. The editor's long introduction furnishes a treatment of Lord Herbert's life, an analysis of his philosophy, and a criticism of deism from the period of Lord Herbert to Blount. Index.

Reviewed by C. H. Lytle
Christian Century 61:806 Jl 5 '44 700w

"De Religione Laici contains no new ideas for those familiar with Lord Herbert's major works, De Veritate and De Religione Gentilium. There are the same distinction between universal and particular providence, the same acceptance of the former and rejection of the latter, the same desire to promote religious peace through restraining people from imposing their chosen faiths on others, the same confidence that the essentials of sound religion rest on innate notions within the mind, the same hope that sound religion will promote a moral and spiritual harmony within the persons who accept its tenets, namely, the five articles which De Veritate enunciated and Locke made famous by attacking." S. P. Lamprecht
+ J Philos 42:193 Mr 29 '45 360w

"It would be hard to imagine a more thoughtful and thorough study of every aspect of Lord Herbert's thought than that provided in the chapters preceding the translation and in the Bibliography and Appendixes. . . Dr. Hutcheson's translation virtually, yet accurately, transfigures Herbert's terrible Latin. He is discriminatingly sympathetic toward his author and rightly perceives, like Jordan, that with Herbert, as with so many of the humanist Academicians and anti-trinitarians, charity and righteousness counted more for salvation than orthodoxy and ritual worship." C. W. Lyttle

+ J Religion 25:301 O '45 550w

HERRELL, WALLACE EDGAR. Penicillin and other antibiotic agents. 348p il $5 Saunders

615.3292411 Penicillin. Antibiotic substances SG45-175

"Among the first American students of the therapeutic value of penicillin was Dr. Wallace E. Herrell of the Mayo Foundation and Clinic. He has now summarized not only his own work and that of his clinic, but also the vast literature which has appeared on the subject of substances produced by microorganisms which have an antagonistic action upon bacteria and are generally known as 'antibiotics.' Herrell's book is written from the clinician's point of view primarily for the medical practitioner." U S Quarterly Bkl

"In spite of minor criticisms a vast amount of work upon the medical aspects of penicillin has been abstracted, then carefully followed by a forthright statement item by item of the author's own conclusion. The user is grateful for clear recommendations in the clinical field, which are obviously based on first-hand knowledge of the subject." Charles Thom

+ — Chem & Eng N 23:2148 N 25 '45 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:45 S '45 240w

HERRICK, ARTHUR DONALD. Food regulation and compliance. 2v v 1 646p $10 Revere pub. co, 32 Broadway, N.Y. 4

614.3 Food law and legislation (44-46012)

"This book is primarily designed to assist the producer and the distributor in his efforts to comply with the present Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act if he is engaged in interstate commerce or engaged in intrastate commerce in any of the states which have adopted a similar act. . . In preparing the body of this work the author has utilized the Trade Correspondences of the present U. S. Food Administration as well as the Service and Regulatory Announcements and the Food Inspection Decisions of the old Bureau of Chemistry. He quotes extensively from decisions of the courts as found either in the notices of judgment of the department or elsewhere." Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by H. C. Lythgoe
Am J Pub Health 35:528 My '45 360w

Booklist 41:182 F 15 '45

"The book is readable and nonlegalistic in style, with many cases and situations given as examples of interpretative problems. . . Although the book is not written from the standpoint of the consumer, it is interesting and useful. Home economists concerned with consumer problems and with foods should read it carefully. It should make a useful reference for college home economics students." J. V. Coles

+ J Home Econ 37:594 N '45 250w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:33 Mr '45 240w

HERSEY, JOHN RICHARD. Bell for Adano; dramatization. See Osborn, P.

HERSHBERGER, GUY FRANKLIN. War, peace, and nonresistance. 415p $2.50 Mennonite

261 Peace. Mennonites. War and religion. Conscientious objectors 44-47707

"Today the Mennonite peace testimony is caught between the cross fire of liberal pacifism and fundamentalist militarism. Members of these churches have a measure of sympathy with both the ethical basis of modern pacifism and biblical fundamentalism, yet cannot fully accept the pre-suppositions of either. This volume seeks to rescue Mennonite thought from this painful dilemma. It is the initial attempt by a writer of this denomination to present a comprehensive and systematic statement of its outlook. The writer is a Mennonite scholar whose doctorate was done in American history at the University of Iowa. His approach to the problem is both historical and theological." Christian Century

"The exposition of the subject is very ample and well-written, and its value is considerably enhanced by the inclusion of an excellent bibliography at the end of each chapter listing general treatises on the subject, as well as the more specialized Mennonite literature. . . However one may care to quarrel with the basic thesis of this book, the reader will be impressed with its sincerity and with the goodwill which suffuses it." David Fellman

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:402 Ap '45 500w

"The book has an excellent bibliography. Professor Hershberger has done a splendid job in presenting the point of view of the nonresistance churches, and shows no bitterness against the many who oppose the position these churches have taken in the present and preceding wars." F. R. Yoder

+ Am Soc R 10:810 D '45 180w

"As history, the book is disappointing. As apologetic for Biblical non-resistance, and as a presentation of one of the chief religious and moral problems of our day, it is excellent." F. A. Norwood

+ Ann Am Acad 239:190 My '45 400w

"If I am not mistaken this book will draw its main criticism from liberal pacifists. Dr. Hershberger agrees with Reinhold Niebuhr and Umphrey Lee when they argue that modern pacifism is in partial conflict with the Sermon on the Mount and the non-resistant convictions of the early Christian church. . . The book deserves widespread discussion. It is a distinct contribution to the literature dealing with the church's major ethical challenge today." D. E. Smucker

+ Christian Century 62:550 My 2 '45 750w

"This carefully written and edited work of Professor Hershberger succeeds in being informative without being particularly enlightening. Chapters five through nine will be valued by students who are interested in the heroic story of the Mennonites, but those portions of the book which deal with nonresistance can only bring disappointment to those readers who are not addicted to biblical literalism." M. C. Westphal

+ — Crozer Q 22:184 Ap '45 600w

Foreign Affairs 24:161 O '45 20w

Reviewed by R. H. Bainton
J Religion 25:303 O '45 750w

Reviewed by L. L. Bernard
Social Forces 24:117 O '45 1100w

HERTZ, FRIEDRICH OTTO. Nationality in history and politics; a study of the psychology and sociology of national sentiment and character. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 417p $6.50 Oxford [25s Routledge]

320.15 Nationalism and nationality 44-5058

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by Halvdan Koht
Am Hist R 50:776 Jl '45 800w

"This latest study in its field makes a significant contribution. Nationalism (nationality is the more appropriate term) is plainly a very complex subject, and the best writers have sometimes been guilty of various kinds of intellectual astigmatism. It is therefore gratifying that Professor Hertz has his material so well in hand, has no major blind spots, and has no subtle, hovering prejudices. His pages abound with pithy sentences and he is to be congratulated on his economy of expression. . . The imperfections of this work are minor. There is no full-blown thesis as such; neither is the treatment intended to be

HERTZ, F. O.—Continued
definitive. The study surely will take a place beside the studies of Hayes, Kohn, Toynbee, and the Royal Institute, but in a sense it is in a class by itself. Political scientists, philosophers, historians, and sociologists will want the volume handy." R. C. Snyder
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:170 F '45 750w

Reviewed by Joseph Schneider
Am Soc R 10:442 Je '45 550w

"Firmly written, rich in historical perspective and meaty in analysis and observation, this is a book for careful and fruitful study." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 O 29 '44 150w

"This is a book of fundamental importance —scholarly, dispassionate and realistic. Dr. Hertz has examined and analyzed the literature on all phases of this subject without losing his sense of balance."
+ Foreign Affairs 23:331 Ja '45 40w

"Dr. Hertz promises to deal with his conclusions and practical suggestions in further studies which are shortly to be published. For delegates to the San Francisco conference this volume as well as its sequel should be required reading, for it will help them to recognize the warlike rapscallion which likes to be mistaken for nationality, the creator of precious cultural values." Rustem Vambery
+ Nation 160:460 Ap 21 '45 480w

Reviewed by C. J. H. Hayes
Pol Sci Q 60:279 Je '45 1950w

"The work has the qualities of an abridged encyclopaedia, rather than of a monographic treatise which, according to its subtitle, A Study of the Psychology and Sociology of National Sentiment, it purports to be. It contains a wealth of historical and theoretical information composed lucidly and appraised dispassionately, but, like every encyclopaedia, it is fundamentally sterile. Lacking thesis and conclusion, it is an analysis, not a diagnosis." Philipp Weintraub
Social Forces 23:464 My '45 1150w

HERZBERG, GERHARD. Infrared and raman spectra of polyatomic molecules; forming the second volume of Molecular spectra and molecular structure. 632p $9.50 Van Nostrand

539.1 Spectrum analysis. Molecules (40-116)

"As in Molecular spectra I, [Book Review Digest, 1940] which dealt with diatomic molecules, this investigation is restricted mainly to the spectra of gases and vapors. The treatment presupposes a limited knowledge of wave mechanics, but the mathematical developments have been reduced to a minimum. Certain discussions for advanced students are printed in smaller type and may be omitted by the beginner who wants to familiarize himself only with the more important principles. There is an extensive bibliography, also an author and a subject index, the latter containing symbols, and quantum numbers, as well as the chemical compounds discussed in the book." (N Y Tech Bks) Bibliography. Indexes.

"Those who have read Herzberg's other books will find the same excellence which one expects from one of the foremost authorities in spectroscopy. The book is packed with detailed facts about molecules which cannot be kept within the bounds of 600-odd pages without a considerable amount of the fine print. . . The book is clearly written and should be valuable reading for all graduate students of physics and physical chemistry. It will be indispensable to the research worker in this field." Henry Eyring
+ Chem & Eng N 23:1671 S 25 '45 250w
Library J 70:119 F 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:29 Ap '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:52 S '45 280w

HESS, FJERIL. Wacs at work. 183p il $2 Macmillan

45-2183

"In a story loosely holding together the experiences of three girls who meet in their training period and carry on as members of the first contingent of Wacs assigned to a large Eastern air field, a girl at the age that reads career stories—say twelve or fourteen—finds what duties go with the uniform that so attracts them. These young readers will come, through the experiences of Angela Borelli, Sue Bates and Josephine Barrows, girls with diversified backgrounds, as near to taking part in such experiences as a book for them is likely to go." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 41:241 Ap 15 '45

"Good job of current appeal."
+ Kirkus 13:36 Ja 15 '45 70w

"Recommended for young people." Maude Adams
+ Library J 69:940 N 1 '44 100w

"Chief value is the career interest." Marian Herr
+ Library J 70:356 Ap 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p29 Mr 11 '45 120w
Sat R of Lit 28:74 N 10 '45 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 4 '45 270w
Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

HESSE, HERMAN CARL, and RUSHTON, JOHN HENRY. Process equipment design. 580p il $7.50; text ed $6 Van Nostrand

621 Mechanical engineering. Chemical plants —Equipment 45-1838

"Basic principles of engineering design. Practical methods for design of wide range of chemical engineering equipment, pressure vessels, piping, gearing, wood, nonmetallic and concrete construction and handling equipment —from the construction of high-pressure autoclaves and modification of building trusses to the correct designation of the smallest fitting. Well illustrated and simple formulas for calculations." (Library J) Index.

"The book probably is useful in teaching advanced drafting room techniques in the middle of an engineering course (not especially chemical), but would seem to be of use to few graduates." Z. G. Deutsch
Chem & Eng N 23:482 Mr 10 '45 250w
Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:5 Ja '45

HETH, EDWARD HARRIS. Any number can play. 193p $2.50 Harper

45-35209

Novel about the proprietor of an honest gambling house, and his son whom he loved, but could never reconcile to his profession.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p5 O 28 '45 650w
Booklist 42:76 N 1 '45

"The author conveys the contagious fascination—he draws his main characters in sure strokes, though some of his minor characters are shadowy.. He fails—in building the conflict between Charley and Paul into a vital factor. But the feel of Charley's place is the dominant atmosphere of the book, a book that will find a male audience chiefly. A Harper 'Find', and will be extensively promoted as such."
+ — Kirkus 13:345 Ag 15 '45 300w

"Mr. Heth evidently wishes to make Charley King a symbol of the emptiness which underlay the boom period. This is a familiar theme which would require more energetic treatment to achieve freshness. On the whole the book falls between two stools. Symbolism and mood alone are not rich enough or varied enough to carry it. On the other hand, it lacks drama and plot development which could give it the surface excitement of a thriller." H. R. Hays
N Y Times p28 N 4 '45 320w

"Short, glum, and generally unremarkable novel. The relationship between the gambler and the boy, who is ashamed of his father's occupation, provides the author with a theme that is not without a certain emotional interest, but it is one that he seems to have neither the inclination nor the ability to develop. Mr. Heth does, at least, have a talent for atmosphere, and he manages to present very vividly indeed the controlled hysteria of a no-limit crap game and the frigid passion that distinguishes the professional gambler from the amateur. Unfortunately, this is hardly enough to compensate for his evident willingness to take most of his characters at second hand."

New Yorker 21:112 O 20 '45 160w

"Mr. Heth has written a fascinating and sympathetic book, vivid in its story and brilliant in its characterization. . . One can but feel the deepest interest and pity for these people who are torn between the desire for material success and loyalty to their families. The book is written with an intensity as deep as the gamblers' love for their cards." E. R. Weltman
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 450w
Time 46:106 N 5 '45 100w

"It would be tempting to seek an allegory in the story of Charley King, and one is there for the taking. But for intense narration alone, for compact story-telling, full of suspense, 'Any Number Can Play' is a book that gets under your skin and stays there. Even Mayor La Guardia might make an exception for it." Herbert Kupferberg
Weekly Book Review p10 O 21 '45 600w
Wis Lib Bul 41:127 D '45

HEWSON, MRS ISABEL (MANNING). Land of the Lost; il. by Olive Bailey. (Whittlesey house publication) 60p $2 McGraw 45-4450

An imaginative tale of a land at the bottom of the sea where lost objects go and live a happy life of their own. Two children with the aid of Red Lantern, a large fish, visit the Land of the Lost and there find a doll and a jack knife, lost by the children.

"This is the imaginative sort of thing most children love and it has a humor which not only delights young readers but which lifts the stories far above so many less happy efforts along these lines."
+ Book Week p23 Je 3 '45 230w
Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

"An ingenious story, which occasionally descends into puns which will bother grown-ups more than children. And the colored illustrations by Olive Bailey are sure passport to popularity. The story recalls some of the flavor of that magic tale of years ago, The Little Spotted Seal—story of the land where imaginary playmates go."
+ Kirkus 13:108 Mr 1 '45 210w

"Not a landmark in the literary sense, this is, nevertheless, fantasy of the kind children love, cleverly worked out in terms of the homely things of everyday life." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p15 Je 3 '45 180w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 110w

"There is every reason to believe it will be popular, not only because it results from a popular radio program, but because it represents, as every now and then some book must do, the imaginary kingdom of a child's own creation to which he retreats for recuperation from a grown-up world." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 13 '45 270w

HEYLIGER, WILLIAM. Home is a one-way street. 188p $2 Presbyterian bd.
45-9194

"This is the story of Johnny Allen, from Hill 263 on Sicily, where he got nicked in the leg and face by Nazi bullets, through a series of hospitals to home." Book Week

"Heyliger should try his hand at more adult fiction, for he has polish and ability far beyond that of many of his best-selling contemporaries who have been dabbling in the stuff for years while Heyliger scored millions of touchdowns for Local High." Ralph Peterson
+ Book Week p18 O 21 '45 400w
Booklist 42:94 N 15 '45

"Years of writing juveniles seems to have tripped up William Heyliger in this novel, apparently written for adults. 'Home is a One-Way Street,' the story of a scarred and crippled veteran's readjustment to normal life, not only is right out of those pamphlets on how to understand the returning veteran, but it also is cast in the mold of teen-age fiction in plot, character and dialogue." Lewis Funke
— N Y Times p35 O 28 '45 120w

HEYMANN, HANS. We can do business with Russia. 268p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

382 U.S.—Commerce—Russia. Russia—Commerce—U.S. 45-9862

An analysis of the problems of our postwar trade relations with Soviet Russia. It is the author's belief that trade with Russia is not only possible, but obligatory, and he explains why this is so, and how the gap between the two nations may be spanned. He includes as background material the story of the American pioneers in the breaking down of barriers: the engineers, business men, and industrialists who introduced American ideas into Russia. Index.

Reviewed by H. Y. Williams
Book Week p10 D 16 '45 310w
Booklist 42:142 Ja 1 '46
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 30 '45 600w
Kirkus 13:505 N 15 '45 210w
Reviewed by Louis Fischer
Sat R of Lit 28:12 D 29 '45 70w

"Few will find fault with Dr Heymann's main point, that the U. S. S. R. and the United States complement each other in many ways and that close relations in business should and must be maintained between the two great nations, for the best interests of both, but the chapter on the Russian-American 'five-year-plan' is provocative of controversy. It is doubtful if many readers will care to go along with the author in promoting a system which seems to approach very closely, in implication, the plan for common citizenship put forward by Winston Churchill for French and English, at the time of France's fall in 1940." R. S. Ullery
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 550w

"There can be no question that economic collaboration holds out one of the most promising prospects for stabilizing Russian-American relations, and therefore world relations, in the coming years. Nor is there any doubt of the tremendous advantages which may accrue to both the United States and the Soviet Union if we can successfully develop the conditions that will at once open up the tremendous Russian market for American manufactures and provide the means whereby the Soviets can finance their purchases. In emphasizing this phase of our policy toward Russia Dr. Heymann has performed a very useful service. His book, nevertheless, leaves a good deal to be desired in the organization of its material and the general presentation of its thesis." F. R. Dulles
+ — Weekly Book Review p14 D 16 '45 600w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. Woman in the house [Eng title: Harps in the wind]. 224p $2.50 Macrae Smith co. [8s 6d Cassell]
45-9097

Peter Vallance, an English author, has a recurring dream of a Georgian house, and a woman's presence, but he does not see the woman. On a visit to another part of the country, in search of a house to let, he finds the house of his dreams and the woman who owns it. She is on the point of leaving her comfortable home because she has sensed the presence of Peter. Together they work out the mystery.

Kirkus 13:324 Ag 1 '45 130w

"Mr. Hichens' style has a grave portentous quality which lends weight and interest to this fancy. But Vallance's pursuit of his dream lady

HICHENS, R. S.—Continued
—via a neurologist and a reader of palms—is so fumbling and faint-hearted that teasing mysticism turns to thin-trickling Victorian romance." Beatrice Sherman

— + N Y Times p44 D 2 '45 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p473 O 6 '45 240w

"The man who wrote 'The Garden of Allah' has not grown stale in his craft." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 18 '45 150w

HICKS, FREDERICK CHARLES. William Howard Taft, Yale professor of law and New Haven citizen; an academic interlude in the life of the twenty-seventh president of the U.S. and the tenth chief justice of the Supreme court. 158p il $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Taft, William Howard A45-4632

"The law librarian of Yale and dean of American law librarians has with industrious care collected facts and anecdotes about Taft's eight years at Yale. His relations to the college, the law school and the community and his outside activities are described through the personal recollections of many of his colleagues and students." (Library J) Index.

"A likable and admirable human being emerges in these pages—most of all when, with vision too rare in those days, he rose above personal and party considerations to tour the country in support of Wilson's League of Nations. This book adds a needed chapter to the published record of Taft's life." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 O 21 '45 130w

"This intimate account of his years between the presidency and his service as chief justice of the Supreme Court is a valuable addition to the public's knowledge of his personality and of his relations with some of his contemporaries."

+ Christian Century 62:1130 O 3 '45 140w

Reviewed by R. J. Purcell

Commonweal 43:243 D 14 '45 490w

Kirkus 13:266 Je 15 '45 100w

"Narrowness of subject matter will make for limited appeal. Recommended for big law libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ — Library J 70:684 Ag '45 80w

HIGGINS, ALEX. Boiler room questions and answers. 139p il $3 McGraw

621.184 Boilers 45-10104

"Primarily for the power plant operator who wishes to pass examination for licenses or certificates, but useful as a reference volume to aid power plant engineers in efficient operation of plant. Mostly question and answer form. Well illustrated." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 42:143 Ja 1 '46

"Particularly useful for men studying for operating engineers' certificates but valuable for plant owners and others." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 100w

HILBERSEIMER, LUDWIG. The new city; principles of planning; with an introd. by Mies van der Rohe. 192p il maps $5.95 P. Theobald, 5 N. Wabash av, Chicago 2

711.4 City planning 45-1132

"As preface to his own theories of city design, the author discusses the many technical, economic, and social problems involved in city planning today and reviews the major basic types of planning that have been developed—such as the centric system, the ribbon system, and the satellite town. The author demonstrates his own ideas with suggestions for redesigning various cities, giving special attention to Chicago." Booklist

"Although written for the architect and city planner, 'The New City' is not too technical for the interested layman. It is evident that Hilberseimer has language difficulty, but it is of little consequence compared to the value of what he has to say. Some of the discussion in the first and fourth parts of the book is repetitious, some of the ideas obscure and inconclusive, but the main thesis as postulated in Sections Two and Three is clear, significant and convincing." Klaus Grabe

+ — Book Week p5 Mr 11 '45 750w

Booklist 41:265 My 15 '45

HILER, HILAIRE, and others. Why abstract? 100p $2.50 New directions

701.1 Art, Abstract 45-9108

"Purported to be for the intelligent, interested layman, these sketches explain Hiler's revolt from most modern painting, his study of color analysis by scientific techniques and subsequent abstract painting. He affirms artists must know the scientific method, utilize everything science offers, abide patiently the possible popularity of decadent art in the immediate postwar world. The true function of painting is to record our times adequately and challengingly. To do this the artist must eventually collaborate with the engineer. Saroyan and Miller contribute undistinguished bits, adding little to Hiler's testament of color and design." Library J

"There is one important shortcoming to Hiler's book—it has no illustrations. The reader, unfamiliar with Hiler's paintings but willing to be persuaded of the value of abstract art, is left completely up in the air. I cannot imagine what the publisher was thinking of in issuing a book in so incomplete a form." S. I. Hayakawa

Book Week p12 N 4 '45 500w

Kirkus 13:418 S 15 '45 80w

"Limited appeal." H. S. Taylor

Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 110w

HILL, KATHARINE. Case for equity. 190p $2 Dutton

45-8331

Detective story.

Booklist 42:129 D 15 '45

"As a whodunit, only so so; but a good yarn."

Kirkus 13:442 O 1 '45 90w

"The story is too clumsily constructed to please the discriminating mystery fan." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p28 O 21 '45 130w

"Fearless widow supplies most of interest in eventful but otherwise undistinguished yarn . . . in which, however, action mounts high. Entertaining."

Sat R of Lit 28:39 O 20 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p26 O 14 '45 70w

HILL, LELAND HALSEY, and HOOK, CHARLES RUFFIN. Management at the bargaining table. 300p $3 McGraw

331.116 Collective bargaining 45-3174

An extensive examination of collective bargaining procedures and results. The authors are respectively Vice-President of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company and Secretary of the Rustless Iron and Steel Corporation. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:4 S '45

Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 70w

Management R 34:157 Ap '45 140w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:19 Je '45 280w

Wis Lib Bul 41:98 O '45

HILL, NORMAN LLEWELLYN. Claims to territory in international law and relations. 248p maps $3 Oxford

320.12 Territory, National. Boundaries 45-941

"It is not the purpose of this volume to advance solutions to particular territorial disputes either as they have existed in the past or as they have been brought to light during World War II. It has rather been the intention to analyze such disputes with a view to a better understanding of their nature and the procedures available for their solution. The major controversies of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries have furnished the basis for the study, both those involving legal claims and those of a non-legal character." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Claims to Territory in International Law and Relations is an interesting little book on a very timely subject. It is nontechnical and easy to read, though carefully annotated. The book may be widely read by diplomats for their own edification (but not that of their staffs) and by students (but not necessarily, I hope, by their teachers). . . One point of weakness, if it can be called that, is the rather extended treatment Professor Hill gives to the subject of strategic claims in his book without referring to any more recent source than George Fielding Eliot (1941 vintage.)." J. T. Lowe

+ — Am Hist R 50:785 Jl '45 550w

"The author has covered extensive ground in a concise and lucid fashion. That the underlying treatment is largely of a classificatory nature does not detract from the informativeness of the study." Ernest Manheim

+ Am J Soc 51:171 S '45 180w

"Current history and future events are bound to heighten interest in territorial questions and settlements throughout the world. Viewed in this light, Professor Hill's latest book is most timely and enlightening regarding the nature of territorial disputes and the procedures available for their solution. Its value for this purpose is not impaired by the fact that the analysis has been restricted to the major European and American controversies of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, because they have been, as the preface points out, more numerous, more troublesome, and better documented than other disputes." George Manner

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:598 Je '45 900w

Am Soc R 10:576 Ag '45 130w

"The book is not a definitive treatise on territorial claims, but students and teachers of international relations will find it a valuable monograph; harassed technical delegates preparing memoranda on frontiers will find it a useful handbook; and the layman can turn with confidence to its simply and clearly written pages for enlightenment in the coming months." H. W. Briggs

+ Ann Am Acad 241:176 S '45 450w

"The book is clearly and extremely cautiously written. The author is quite obviously well aware of the fact that a writer on international law and relations who is determined to remain within the somewhat narrow compass of pure scholarship can do little more than attempt a succinct, complete, well-organized, unbiased, and objective description and analysis of the territorial disputes. And this goal has been as perfectly attained as it is possible in a relatively small book. However, the reviewer has somehow the feeling that there is still the danger that the vehemence and the sometimes deeply-rooted feeling of whole generations in some nations on certain territorial issues might not be appreciated sufficiently." S. A. Riesenfeld

+ Columbia Law R 45:489 My '45 550w

Foreign Affairs 23:512 Ap '45 20w

"The book covers a wide range of matters, bringing into the picture most of the causes of war and of rivalry between nations, and it is very difficult to tie them into one system logically related to territorial questions. The effort obviously required much research, and it provides a useful assemblage of materials, even though the logical connections between them are sometimes hard to follow." Clyde Eagleton

+ Harvard Law R 58:754 My '45 320w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:35 Je '45 320w

HILLEBOE, HERMAN ERTRESVAAG, and MORGAN, RUSSELL HEDLEY. Mass radiography of the chest. 288p 93il $3.50 Year bk. pubs.

616.2460757 Chest—Diseases—Diagnosis. Radiography. Diagnosis, Radioscopic SG45-11

"The development of equipment for the x-ray examination of large groups of individuals at a reasonable cost has provided public health workers and phthisiologists with the most practical means for the early diagnosis of tuberculosis since the original discovery of the x-ray. . . This small volume covers all phases of mass x-ray surveys, from the preliminary planning, through the detailed routine to be followed during the actual survey, to the study and care of the persons found to have x-ray evidence of pulmonary disease. All types of equipment are discussed." Am J Pub Health

"The subject matter is presented clearly and the book should serve as an excellent reference work for public health workers interested in mass chest x-ray surveys, particularly for those with some technical training or interest." R. E. Plunkett

+ Am J Pub Health 35:868 Ag '45 360w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:42 Je '45 260w

HILLYER, LAURIE (MRS E. B. ARMSTRONG). Time remembered. 175p $2 Macmillan

45-9825

Records in diary form the life of a happy American family, beginning in 1932 when the oldest son is fourteen and ending with the second World war. The mother of the family is the narrator.

Book Week p8 N 18 '45 90w

Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45

"As a very charming example of New England, it is good to have the Greenwoods on the record. It is also impossible to have the conviction that Mrs. Greenwood hasn't a great deal in common with Mrs. Elias Benjamin Armstrong (Laurie Hillyer)." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 43:317 Ja 4 '46 280w

"There is an authenticity in the lack of stress on fictional qualities, and a pleasant appeal in its family portrait."

+ Kirkus 13:322 Ag 1 '45 150w

"If too good to be true, it is a welcome reminder of home as it should be." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p22 D 9 '45 110w

HILTON, JAMES. So well remembered. (Atlantic monthly press bk.) 309p $2.50 Little

45-5780

This story of George Boswell who became Mayor of the small English city where he was born and grew up, spans the twenty years between two world wars. When the story opens George is about to learn that his wife wants to divorce him; twenty years later he learns what that strange woman has done to the career of the man she married after the divorce, and to the son of that marriage.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

Book Week p5 Ag 5 '45 550w

Booklist 42:19 S '45

Bookmark 6:15 N '45

"This is a thoroughly readable novel with strong characterizations and full of human and timely interest."

+ Cath World 162:93 O '45 180w

Christian Century 62:934 Ag 15 '45 280w

"It is impossible to open a new novel by James Hilton without the hope that now, at long last, he may have written the book which he could write if only the tide of his literary capacity would rise a little higher. So Well Remembered is not that book." E. W. G.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 1 '45 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 42:485 Ag 31 '45 550w

"Hilton has the faculty for engaging one's interest and affection—his characters are appealing as human beings. While this is not top drawer Hilton, it is a thoroughly readable tale, and it is rather a relief to have a woman like Livia, bent on possessing and controlling the people she cares for, fail of her purpose before the inflexible goodness of George Boswell, her one-time husband."

HILTON, JAMES—Continued

+ Kirkus 13:256 Je 15 '45 250w

"Lacking the charm of Mr. Chips, the fascination of Lost Horizon, the uniqueness of Random Harvest, So Well Remembered is still entertaining reading." E. P. Nichols

+ — Library J 70:685 Ag '45 100w

"James Hilton's gift as a raconteur has reached a pitch where he could if necessary tell an absorbing and expert story about almost nothing. He has now perfected a technique for keeping an everyday secret until it flowers into a full-blown enigma. He has evolved a smooth blend of worldly wisdom, charming simplicity and delightful ease with words which could conceivably carry the multiplication table to dramatic heights." Isabelle Mallet

N Y Times p5 Ag 5 '45 700w

"Not much of a story, really, but turned out as deftly as you would expect of an author who knows all the tricks of narrative."

New Yorker 21:68 Ag 4 '45 130w

"The reader may journey through Mr. Hilton's novel without encountering anything but the gentlest emotions—a gentle love for the good poor, a gentle irony for the unfortunate rich, the merest melancholy reminder that it is, after all, easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle. Ideas like this are dropped into the book and disappear at once, leaving no echoes. The general effect is restful, reassuring, and comfortably haunting, like a familiar melody. We remember only the tune, and the words do not matter." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 28:9 Ag 4 '45 700w

"Mr. Hilton has not disappointed his readers, for he has given them 'a good story to read' in every sense of the word, and for added measure he has introduced not too much philosophy about the world at war and man's place in it." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 700w

"Whatever drama there is in this book lies in the characterization of George and Livia, the conflict between the individual who finds fulfillment in serving mankind and the one who seeks it in personal satisfactions. It's a conflict of ideas and ideology, and Mr. Hilton ably shapes it to his ends." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 5 '45 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 41:101 O '45

HIMES, CHESTER B. If he hollers let him go. 249p $2.50 Doubleday

45-10120

In a first person narrative, a young, educated Negro tells of his experiences in Los Angeles in wartime. Employed in a war factory where he had a responsible job, in love with a girl who is the daughter of a respected Negro physician, he yet finds himself constantly combatting racial prejudice until he finally gives up the struggle and goes off to war.

Reviewed by H. R. Cayton
Book Week p3 N 4 '45 700w

"Unpleasant."

— Kirkus 13:378 S 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld
+ — New Repub 113:909 D 31 '45 600w

"The denouement is brought about with the help of melodramatic clichés which one could readily spare, though they are credible enough. The important thing is that the character of Bob is sincerely and solidly drawn, and that his character, his state of moral being, is a function of his social situation." J. W. Beach

+ — N Y Times p7 D 2 '45 360w

"An honest, bitter, but not very original book."

+ — New Yorker 21:102 N 3 '45 90w

"Gall and wormwood have gone into this book, the bitterest we have come across in a long time. Chester B. Himes, a young Negro from Cleveland, has written a short novel of racial protest as hair-raising as a shriek in the dark. And snuggling deeper under the blankets will not stop the piercing reverberations. . . This book is another cry out of the depths. Despite war wages and all the silk shirts, more of which we read about than see, the depths are still with us. We can understand what makes the Bob Joneses. Let us hope they are individuals rather than types. In any event Detroit, please note." W. S. Lynch

Sat R of Lit 28:53 N 17 '45 650w

"It is Bob Jones's inability to keep on an even keel that alienates a good deal of the reader's sympathy for him and makes him seem less of a tragic figure than Mr. Himes intended. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Himes gets across his main point, which is that in a different sort of world the Bob Joneses would be able to lead wholesome and happy lives. Pointing a way out isn't always a novelist's function, and if Mr. Himes doesn't solve the problem he is dealing with at least he states it in graphic terms." Herbert Kupferberg

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 N 4 '45 500w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. The Cossacks; the story of a warrior people. 321p il $3 Doubleday

947 Cossacks 45-9748

Survey of the five hundred years of the Russian Cossacks. Beginning with their earliest days, when they were known as wild Asiatic barbarians, the author traces their history in episodic style, bringing the story down to the part they played in World war II. He considers folklore, manners, and customs and their stand on present day questions. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p26 N 11 '45 700w

Booklist 42:145 Ja 1 '46

"The vitality, humor, and emotional richness of the Cossacks are but dimly reflected in the book, owing to the author's apparent inability to distinguish the important from the trivial, the significant from the commonplace. Hindus himself is apparently aware of this deficiency and is, therefore, constantly assuring the reader that the Cossacks are fine warriors and splendid horsemen, instead of allowing the story to speak for itself. Nevertheless, Hindus has had unusual opportunities for observation, and, despite shortcomings of presentation, the book does include much that is fresh and informative." Edmund Stevens

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 4 '45 420w

Reviewed by Helen Iswolsky
Commonweal 43:268 D 21 '45 700w

Kirkus 13:390 S 1 '45 150w

"In 'The Cossacks' Maurice Hindus has attempted to combine history and reportage. As in his other books on Russia, he is eminently successful as a reporter when he is on the farms, pausing on the dusty roads, drinking tea in private homes—whenever and wherever he is using his special talent for talking to the Cossack people in their own language. But when it comes to Cossack history, Mr. Hindus is frequently more confusing than informative." Richard Lauterbach

+ — N Y Times p6 D 9 '45 800w

"Since [Hindus] is much more interested in the romantic, colorful, and hell-bent-for-leather aspects of the Cossacks' story, his book is a combination of Gogol, Tolstoy, and Buffalo Bill. Most readers should find the mixture pleasing."

+ New Yorker 21:105 N 3 '45 140w

"The story of his adventurous and colorful people is packed with human drama. Maurice Hindus, in his latest book, 'The Cossacks,' has worked hard to set it down. He has drawn on many sources, folklore, literature, and his own copious notes from three widely separated trips to the Kuban Cossack country, the last in 1944. Unfortunately he has not succeeded in weaving his copious and cumbersome material into a connected whole. He mingles the past and the present in a manner that is, to say the least, confusing. . . Despite structural and literary shortcomings, 'The Cossacks' still provides some useful fill-ins for the broad canvas of contemporary Russia. Hindus's industry deserves commendation, and much of the information he has gathered is interesting and fresh." Edmund Stevens

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:30 N 24 '45 650w

Springf'd Republican p4 N 24 '45 240w

"Mr. Hindus is vigorous, picturesque and accurate in telling a bloody, though colorful tale. . . There is very little literature in English concerning the Cossacks. Gogol's 'Taras Bulba' and Sholokhov's 'Quiet Flows the Don,' come at once to mind, though written as fiction and depicting different centuries. Mr. Hindus is writing fact, past and present, authentic history and portrayal of the present. Occasionally he becomes too grandiloquent but, then, the Russians and the Cossacks have always been people to arouse exaggeration." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 4 '45 1350w

HINKLEY, LAURA L. The Brontës: Charlotte and Emily. 376p $3.50 Hastings house

B or 92 Brontë, Charlotte. Brontë, Emily Jane 46-697

Biographical study of the Brontës in which the author attempts "to follow the vital connective threads" between their lives and their works. In the final section of the book each of the novels of Charlotte and Emily is analyzed in detail. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Book Week p5 D 23 '45 450w

"Miss Hinkley possesses the prime requisites for her work: enthusiasm for her subject and intimate knowledge of it. But she has also a fine critical insight and is aware of the defects and limitations of these geniuses as well as of their greatness. She writes with real distinction of style, though she might have done well to prune the luxuriance of her adjectives and resisted to some degree the temptation, suggested by the contrasting sisters, to be antithetical. A good bibliography is supplied for those who desiderate verification or wish to inquire further. The format is unusually attractive, though the printing is not quite impeccable." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 28 '45 1000w

"Infatuated, disputatious, but readable biography. Miss Hinkley is a conscientious historian; nothing escapes her. The reëxamination of the Branwell affair (did he or didn't he write 'Wuthering Heights'?) is a scholarly piece of reasoning, and the author's analyses of the Brontë sisters' novels and characters—in both meanings of the word—are intelligent and convincing."

+ — New Yorker 21:75 Ja 5 '46 160w

"Although the author gives in passing the essential facts about the Brontes, the reader who is unfamiliar with the Haworth parsonage family may feel unable to enjoy the book to the full. This is especially true in regard to the analysis of the novels, which Miss Hinkley deals with in great detail. It is a carefully and thoughtfully written book and a fine addition to Bronte literature." C. K. Bausman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 600w

"Miss Hinkley has traced with sensitive understanding the workings of imaginative genius in the four children. . . Her special contribution, and a very important one, has consisted in the minute overhauling of the whole shelf of Brontë books and subjecting them to an exceptionally sound judgment." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 13 '46 1100w

HINSHAW, DAVID. Man from Kansas; the story of William Allen White. 305p il $3 Putnam

B or 92 White, William Allen 45-9378

A loving and understanding analysis and interpretation of one of America's best-known journalists and authors—William Allen White of the Emporia Gazette. The author, who was a friend and coworker of White's, begins by interpreting the state of Kansas, which was practically synonymous with its great son. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Book Week p13 N 4 '45 450w

Booklist 42:109 D 1 '45

"Others have dealt with his life before this, but one has the warm friendly feeling of having actually lived with 'Bill' White after reading David Hinshaw's book. . . The author is a Kansan who worked for and with 'Bill' White, his close friend for 46 years. He has made his character lovable and delightful, because he has covered up none of the White human failings or idiosyncracies." M. W. Bayley

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 30 '45 650w

"A warm, human picture of the man in the making. . . A competent, well-intentioned biography—one could wish it had been more objective and dispassionate."

+ — Kirkus 13:412 S 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman

Nation 161:632 D 8 '45 360w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p8 D 2 '45 800w

"A great editor by the very nature of his craft is a difficult subject for biography, as so much of him is in his daily writings. Nevertheless, Hinshaw has done well in presenting the essentials of William Allen White, a force for good, and typically American." J. C. Long

+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 N 10 '45 900w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 420w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 34:487 D '45 1550w

"It is a pleasant and gracious thing to find an account of [White's] life written from a full heart by one who knew him intimately. If Mr. Hinshaw is uncritical, it is easy to forgive him because it is so plainly apparent that this is a labor of love dedicated to a man who richly deserved it. With love and pride he presents to the world the portrait of a great-hearted gentleman, and he has done it with an artistry that makes the picture credible. This is a feat that would far outweigh defects more serious than the most captious critic can find in his book. . . Mr. Hinshaw tells his story clearly and succinctly and his copious quotations from White's writings are chosen with discrimination. They illuminate instead of cloud his pages. His book deserves the praise that one knows he most desires for it—it does great credit to William Allen White." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 4 '45 1350w

HINSIE, LELAND EARL. The person in the body; an introduction to psychosomatic medicine. 263p $2.75 Norton

616.8 Psychology, Pathological. Psychoanalysis SG45-327

A study in psychosomatic medicine, stressing the relationship between the emotions and bodily ills. The author is professor of psychiatry at Columbia university, and assistant director of the New York state psychiatric institute and hospital. Index.

Booklist 42:180 F 1 '46

"Just as it is wiser to prevent diphtheria than to cure it, so is it better to improve the relations of parents to children than to attempt only to treat the ill effects of bad upbringing. It is for this reason, that Dr. Hinsie's exposition should be widely read." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 D '45 850w

"An excellent introduction to psychosomatic medicine. . . 'The Person in the Body' is notable for clarity of writing and careful construction. One of its best features is the liberal and illustrative use of case histories. They are always to the point and are sufficiently complete to be of great intrinsic interest." Harry Daum

HINSIE, L. E.—Continued
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 600w

HIRSCHMAN, ALBERT O. National power and the structure of foreign trade. 170p $3 Univ. of Calif.

380 Commerce. Economic policy. World politics A45-4673

"Here is a realistic appraisal of the role of international trade in power politics. After touching briefly on the 'supply effect' of foreign trade aimed at enhancing the military potential of a country; for example, concentrating imports on goods needed for a war machine, Dr. Hirschman goes on to a detailed exposition of what he calls the 'influence effect' of international trade—the use of commerce as a direct source of power. Included here are a wide range of practices running the gamut from monopolization of the trade of small countries to creating vested interests in the aggressor nation's exports—a commercial fifth column—to the familiar monetary and exchange manipulations." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman
New Repub 114:100 Ja 21 '46 300w

"The author's statistical investigations into the geographical distribution of world trade and its commodity structure are aimed at giving quantitative support to his argument and prove to be extremely informative as well. The general framework of his theme can be followed by the lay reader; the technical detail and the statistical inquiries call for a more basic groundwork in the theory of international trade."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:22 D '45 280w

HITCHENS, MRS DOLORES (BIRK) (DOLAN BIRKLEY, NOEL BURKE, D. B. OLSEN, pseuds). Bring the bride a shroud. 184p $2 Doubleday 45-9321

Detective story.

"Good pace and characters."
+ Kirkus 13:326 Ag 1 '45 90w

"The setting of this story would have been a perfect one for D. B. Olsen's spinster detective and her cat, but the author has chosen to introduce a new sleuth who is not nearly so amusing." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p28 O 21 '45 150w

"Fair."
Sat R of Lit 28:34 O 6 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p40 D 2 '45 130w

HITCHENS, MRS DOLORES (BIRK) (DOLAN BIRKLEY, NOEL BURKE, D. B. OLSEN, pseuds). Cats don't smile. 187p $2 Doubleday 45-3440

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 Ap 8 '45 100w
Booklist 41:270 My 15 '45
Boston Globe p18 Ap 18 '45 50w
Kirkus 13:22 Ja 15 '45 50w

"One of the most delightful of the many spinster detectives in fiction is Miss Rachel Murdock, who makes no bones of admitting that she loves to snoop. . . The motive for the murders in this story is probably unique; incidentally, it is very thin, the only weakness in a tale that abounds in mystery, suspense and humor." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 25 '45 110w

"Routine stuff for all but readers who dote on brisk little old lady detectives."
New Yorker 21:99 Mr 24 '45 80w

"Fair enough."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 31 '45 40w

"This smoothly written, fast-paced story is highly recommended." H. J. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 150w

"Soft-boiled, romantic, pleasing." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 1 '45 80w

HOAD, MRS LOUISE (GREEN). Kickapoo Indian trails. 129p il $2.50 Caxton printers

970.6 Kickapoo Indians—Juvenile literature 45-2309

"These stories have been written down by the author as they were told to her and three other little girls by her mother, who had been a pioneer teacher on the Kickapoo Indian reservation in Kansas. They give interesting glimpses of Indian life in the period when the Red men were being pushed farther and farther back by the whites and also reveal an unusually broad and understanding point of view in the young teacher who learned to ride Indian ponies bareback and without bridle so that she could visit about among her charges and share their ceremonials and daily life." Wis Lib Bul

---

"Authentic but uninteresting."
Kirkus 12:520 N 15 '44 90w

"Her simple and sincere accounts of that life have been treasured by her daughter for many years. The book has 21 striking illustrations." E. G. E.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 11 '45 180w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Je 17 '45 400w

"Told with a simplicity which gives them a certain charm; with illustrations by Cecil Smith that add distinction."
+ Wis Lib Bul 41:46 Ap '45

HOBART, MRS ALICE TISDALE (NOURSE). Peacock sheds his tail. 360p $2.75 Bobbs 45-35157

A novel of international marriage, the scene of which is Mexico. The aristocratic Navarro family of Mexico City, were Catholic, conservative, and traditionalists. In the late twenties the heads of the house were trying to hold the three grandchildren to the old beliefs, but the children's beautiful mother believed in the lower classes. Gradually the wants and needs of the people became important in all their lives, and the old order changed. Concha married an American, Jim Buchanan, of the diplomatic service and brought another problem to the proud family. The book ends when, after Jim's death, Concha's brother completes Jim's plans for friendship between Mexico and the United States.

"Through her picture of the effect of social change on three generations of an aristocratic Mexican family, Alice Tisdale Hobart has opened a revealing window on the troubled course of our Good Neighbor to the South. The prose is sensuous and rich enough to suggest the traditional opulence and color of Mexico, yet vigorous and straightforward enough to impart a sense of the stirring of vital, image-shattering forces. Broad in scope and sensitive in perception, 'The Peacock Sheds His Tail' is likely to rank as one of the most stimulating novels of 1945." Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p4 S 16 '45 550w
Booklist 42:19 S '45
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 9 '45 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

Reviewed by Norah Piper
Commonweal 43:241 D 14 '45 180w

"Good story—thin characterization."
+ — Kirkus 13:273 Jl 1 '45 290w

"The incidents of Mexican life, rich and poor, are beautifully told, but the total effect is as disturbed as a pan of jumping beans.

After a time the reader is likely to become hard pressed, unable to see or remember whence and to where the last ones jumped." E. T. Wallace

N Y Times p32 S 30 '45 550w

"Soundly constructed, highly intelligent novel of modern Mexico."

+ New Yorker 21:82 S 29 '45 120w

"No better setting could be provided for sharp personal conflicts and emotions as well as for bizarre drama in the grand style. The result is a colorful and moving story. In addition, the work is a tract of our times. It is a tract against the rapacity of American oil companies, against the secular politics of the Catholic Church, against evil German agents trying to barter for oil, against the Spanish Falangists and the local clerical Sinarquistas; and above all it is a tract for the good-neighbor policy. But the novel is not too earnest, and certainly is not solemn, but a well-balanced tale of great insight into Mexican social customs and classes as well as the human heart." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 O 20 '45 1300w

"Mrs. Hobart records with vividness the expropriation of land and its division among the peasants, the organization of the Confederation of Workers and Peasants, the confiscation of oil wells by the Mexican government, the forward march of reform in education. Her characters, developed and changing with the years carry the weight of the novel's action and representative opinion. That she has portrayed them all objectively without regard to personal sympathies is not the least of her accomplishment." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 16 '45 900w

Wis Lib Bul 41:113 N '45

HOBBS, WILLIAM HERBERT. Fortress islands of the Pacific; their geography and strategic importance. 200p il $2.50 Edwards bros.

919 Islands of the Pacific 45-35137

"The author, now Professor Emeritus of Geology in the University of Michigan, was permitted by the Japanese government to study the geology of the Japanese mandated islands in 1921. Many of the sketches in this book are based on photographs taken at that time. The book is crammed with factual information concerning the geography, geology, climate, and resources of the islands of the Pacific, and illustrated with scores of detailed maps. The islands are analyzed from the point of view of their geologic origin, and are classified in two groups, arcuate and strewn. Brief accounts of the discovery and occupation of the various islands are given, and their strategic importance in the coming years is appraised." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

Booklist 42:183 F 1 '46

"Dr. Hobbs has performed a real service in making available in such clear and non-technical, yet withal authoritative, manner the unique store of knowledge that he has gained."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 S '45 420w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:29 D '45 170w

HOBSON, WILDER. All summer long. 179p $2.50 Duell

45-8644

A slightly Victorian gambling establishment in Brooklyn is the scene of this short novel. The story is concerned chiefly with the love affairs of some of the establishment's habitual visitors, especially the beautiful Estelle.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p13 S 16 '45 450w

Kirkus 13:281 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Some of the lines are quite good but a little too racy for some tastes, and the plot too thin to carry the philosophical conversation. Not essential." Katharine Shorey

Library J 70:749 S 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 161:292 S 22 '45 270w

Reviewed by Hilda Lake

N Y Times p17 D 16 '45 90w

"One of those flip novels, all bright talk and no story, of which there was a spate in the twenties and which seem something of an anachronism now. A well-written and occasionally entertaining trifle, though the author's tireless conversationalists are seldom out of their cups and seldom quite as good company as their creator seemingly thinks."

— + New Yorker 21:113 O 20 '45 60w

"Readers who like their novels to have plot and purpose will not find much of either in All Summer Long, which is essentially a roving comedy of manners. . . [This] deliberately meandering story is often witty, and stylishly tailored to a cast of characters who are unable to grasp anything more complicated than a highball."

Time 46:108 S 10 '45 440w

"Wilder Hobson's style is fluent, flexible, flecked with irony, and he describes the surface and texture of superficial people with precision. Often, he says, there is 'no way of telling' whether one of Mr. Upham's guests with a cocktail glass in his hand is having his first or his fifth, but the talk is amusing even when alcoholic and quite detached from the story. The author himself is quite detached from the story, which has no emotional impact. He ends the novel without arriving anywhere and the reader is left holding an empty glass."

Weekly Book Review p6 S 9 '45 230w

HODGES, HERBERT ARTHUR. Wilhelm Dilthey; an introduction. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 174p $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Routledge]

193.9 Dilthey, Wilhelm [45-1180]

"This is the first book in English to deal with the work of the German philosopher Wilhelm Dilthey, who lived and worked in the 19th and early 20th centuries. But little known in England or America, his influence in his own country, where he was both pioneer and innovator, has been profound. . . He made a critical study of the methods pursued in historical and cultural studies and in the social sciences, showing them to be distinct from the methods of natural science. He also studied philosophy from a historical and sociological point of view, showing how it is the expression of a vital urge which inevitably fulfils itself in several ways, and that complete agreement between philosophers is not to be expected. This book gives a connected and comprehensive account of Dilthey's work in these spheres, followed by translations of selected passages which illustrate and amplify the main text and which serve to reveal a philosophy of real originality, depth and power." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Hodges deserves praise for attempting to present the British reader with an estimate of the philosophical life-work of Wilhelm Dilthey, a figure who, like Jacob Burckhardt or Lord Acton, had hardly any contemporaries. . . Those who have studied Dilthey will find several points highly debatable." J. P. Mayer

+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:178 Mr 17 '45 950w

"That Dilthey is ever likely to rank among the eponymous heroes of philosophy may be doubtful, and there is a certain significance in Professor Hodges's remark that Nietzsche would probably have stigmatized him as dull; but the earnest and penetrating nature of his thought is unquestionable, and one learns without astonishment that it was the Master of Balliol who first brought him to the notice of Professor Hodges."

Times [London] Lit Sup p106 Mr 3 '45 1150w

HOFF, RHODA. Silver answer. 211p $2.50 Dodd

45-1830

The contrast between physical and spiritual love is portrayed in this story of an American girl married to a philandering Frenchman. After her divorce Margaret centers her attention on a very fine, upright and understanding priest, and in a remote corner of northern India the two work out their destinies.

HOFF, RHODA—Continued

"Unfortunately, this struggle against falling in love is stormy but unmoving; the author is neither skilled nor selective enough to give it the depth it needs. The sentences are weighted with clichés; the philosophies are platitudes that make for easy reading and unruffled thinking." Andrea Parke
— N Y Times p28 Mr 25 '45 200w

"The novel is quietly written and touched with mysticism." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 Je 10 '45 130w

HOFFMAN, FREDERICK JOHN. Freudianism and the literary mind. 346p $4 La. state univ. press

809 Literature—History and criticism. Psychoanalysis. Freud, Sigmund 45-5266

"After a brief summary of the original Freudian theory, Mr. Hoffman traces the journey of psychoanalysis from Vienna to Greenwich Village. He portrays the popular reception of Freud, the reaction to his more arresting suggestions, and the curious mixture of sympathy and misunderstanding which marked his debut in the intellectual world. A large part of the book is taken up by studies of individual writers of the twentieth century who have demonstrated an interest in or admitted a debt to Freudian theory. These writers include James Joyce, D. H. Lawrence, Dylan Thomas, Thomas Mann, Franz Kafka, Sherwood Anderson, Waldo Frank, Conrad Aiken, Ludwig Lewisohn, and Henry Miller." (Publisher's note) Selected bibliography. Index.

"This study is quite objective. The author's acceptance of Freudian theories is not evident and certainly does not obtrude to offend the neutral reader. Anyone who penetrates this compact, detailed, and therefore not too exhilarating study will probably repent of some of the lightly tossed aspersions which at some time or other he has undoubtedly made on the subject. It may be doubted that the influence of Freud was as pervasive as the author sometimes implies, but that it was an interesting epoch and provocatively portrayed by this author cannot be questioned." J. H. Mueller
Am Soc R 10:570 Ag '45 400w

"This extremely painstaking, and therefore not exactly exhilarating, study of the influence of Freud on literature in the past few decades will exercise, I hope, an important influence on literary scholarship. Scarcely ten years ago, when I was undergoing my own scholarly apprenticeship, my teachers never mentioned Freud except in derogation. When we were told that a critic or writer was 'Freudian,' we were to understand that he need not be taken seriously. Now that Prof. Hoffman's study has appeared, I am sure that a somewhat more enlightened view will become general in academic circles." S. I. Hayakawa
Book Week p3 Je 10 '45 750w

"The book discusses illuminatingly a number of modern writers—Sherwood Anderson, Waldo Frank, Kafka, Lewisohn, Arthur Koestler, Joseph Freeman. All these chapters are important literary and cultural history, and they are also aesthetic criticism of a high order. The cream of the book, however, is in the last chapter, which gauges the place of Freudianism in the whole contemporary scheme and hazards a prediction as to its place in the future." Cecelia Gaul
+ Christian Century 62:1009 S 5 '45 850w
Current Hist 9:128 Ag '45 100w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling
Nation 161:234 S 8 '45 850w

Reviewed by R. G. Davis
New Repub 113:260 Ag 27 '45 900w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer
N Y Times p14 S 2 '45 700w

"Mr. Hoffman has written a sound, sensible, and scholarly study of the interrelationships between a psychological theory and a number of selected literary productions. One applauds him both for the sobriety of his analyses and for his staunch defense of the esthetic integrity of the individual artist. The book is a most useful contribution to the history and to the society of ideas." Robert Bierstedt
+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 Je 9 '45 900w

Reviewed by E. R. Groves
Social Forces 24:120 O '45 200w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS). Nicodemus and the goose; pictures by [the author]. [42p] $1 Dutton 45-3443

The little Negro boy, Nicodemus, had annexed a new pet, a goose, and the hound dog was disconsolate. He was afraid of the goose. But in due time the goose had three little goslings to take care of and the hound was back in his rightful place. Ages four to seven.

Kirkus 13:158 Ap 1 '45 120w

"Not a necessary purchase, but children will enjoy this as much as they do all the Nicodemus books." Olive Brain
Library J 70:492 My 15 '45 70w

"These are small matters, but very satisfying to the young fry who will find the folk and creatures of the cabin yards as personable as ever." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 22 '45 110w

"The author's illustrations are, as usual, attractive and funny." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 29 '45 180w

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Farm animals, and working and sporting breeds of the United States and Canada; il. by Nils Hogner. 194p $3.50 Oxford

636 Domestic animals Agr45-339

"This is not particularly for children but for everyone. It is a scientific biography, with illustrations, of the different breeds of the domestic animals who live on the farms, in the houses, and in the fields of the United States and Canada. Each breed is shown in a drawing and, in many cases, a chart." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"The information is presented in brief and interesting form that makes good, instructive reading. This is a book, not only for library reference, but for hours of family reading at home."
+ Book Week p5 N 11 '45 90w
Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45

"An uninspired but very useful book—of purely reference interest."
Kirkus 13:493 N 1 '45 130w

"Well indexed. Excellent for reference, general reading and home purchase." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 70:1140 D 1 '45 80w

"Excellently organized, this is a fascinating compendium of information and a useful reference book." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p26 N 11 '45 100w
Sat R of Lit 28:72 N 10 '45 50w
Weekly Book Review p26 N 11 '45 230w
Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Rags' day; pictures by Diana Thorne. [22p] $1 Veritas

When Betty and Jack said goodbye to Rags, their little fox terrier at the school gate, they supposed his day was a blank until they came out of school again. But Rags had a secret life of his own and the book describes his day in text and pictures.

"There is a fresh slant to Helen Hoke's story and no one can top Diana Thorne when it comes to drawing dogs." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p9 D 16 '45 180w
Kirkus 13:469 O 15 '45 70w
N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '46 90w

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH (LANGLAND). Take it easy before dinner. 98p $1 Crowell

641.5 Cookery 45-8778

Recipes for casserole or other dishes which can be prepared before the guests arrive, so that the hostess may have as good a time as her guests. Index.

"This little collection has great appeal—particularly to those who find themselves in front of a hot stove while others have a pre-dinner cocktail." E. R.

+ Book Week p16 O 28 '45 110w

"Plenty of business women and family cooks will appreciate the relaxation this offers."

+ Kirkus 13:328 Ag 1 '45 170w

Wis Lib Bul 41:110 N '45

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH (LANGLAND). Wonderful voyage; il. by Phillis Cote. 208p $2 Doubleday

45-10299

"When Captain Briggs sailed out of Gloucester on a whaling cruise, taking his wife and children with him, a new world opened for Jay and Miranda. Jay was a born sailor, but delicate little Randy found rough going at first. A graphic picture of life aboard a whaler of the Eighteen Fifties." N Y Times

Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:349 S '45 120w

Kirkus 13:369 Ag 15 '45 110w

N Y Times p14 N 11 '45 50w

"The book is rich with the details and the talk of a nineteenth century whaling ship. Even the business of trying out the whale oil is vividly described. . . In contrast to this is the calm beauty and color of the islands where the native boys and girls sang for Jay and Randy their plaintive songs and danced for them on the moonlit beaches." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 Ja 19 '46 500w

HOLBROOK, MARION. Crime wind. 201p $2.50 Dodd

45-3501

Tale of international intrigue, in which an American State department clerk, newly arrived in a South American republic, finds herself the central figure in a series of plots, all because of a mystery package of which she was guardian.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p7 My 20 '45 90w

"Best of the week."

+ Boston Globe p13 My 23 '45 40w

"The story is melodrama, and very timely melodrama at that."

N Y Times p27 Ap 22 '45 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 29 '45 110w

HOLBROOK, STEWART HALL, ed. Promised land; a collection of Northwest writing. (Whittlesey house publication) 408p $3.50 McGraw

810.8 American literature—Collections. American literature—West 45-8155

Collection of regional literature about the Pacific Northwest. Partial contents: Before the covered wagon, by P. H. Parrish; Hurry, Honyocker!, by J. K. Howard; Joaquin Miller crosses the mountains, by Howard McKinley; Saloon hells, by James Stevens; The tramp printer, by B. H. Lampman; A boy in a sawdust city, by Max Miller; Miss Opal Whiteley, by Elbert Bede; The eight o'clock shift, by Lawrence Pratt; A salmon mounts Bonneville dam, by R. L. Haig-Brown; Trouble in Butte, by John Sullivan; Custer pulls away, by Ernest Haycox; Hell's canyon, by R. L. Neuberger; An editor in Snohomish, by G. E. Macdonald; A cook goes over the side, by Archie Binns; The Yukon drive, by R. O. Case; Homer Davenport's home town, by Homer Davenport; If the Japs had landed, by Roderick Lull.

"I believe Stewart Holbrook is justified in his assertion, in the introduction to this collection of Northwest writing, that the Pacific Northwest is less known to the people of other regions than any other part of the United States. His book will go far both toward rectifying that lack and toward causing people to want to 'come and see for themselves.' It's an exciting region that these pages picture so vividly: a land of violent and dramatic contrasts, with more of the primitive America about it than any other part of the country." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p15 S 23 '45 400w

Booklist 42:53 O 15 '45

"A long-time resident of the section, and a skilled and colorful writer himself, Mr. Holbrook in this volume makes a real contribution to that understanding of the separate areas of our literature which must precede any real understanding of the whole." R. A. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 22 '45 600w

Kirkus 13:265 Je 15 '45 130w

"The reader will be entertained and will come to know a good deal about the Northwest—the exhilarating air of great and wonderful places, the fresh, wet air of coastal regions, the courage of brave people (what could be braver than Abigail Scott Duniway's campaigning for woman's suffrage in the Eighteen Eighties?), the rough-and-ready meeting of life. The book definitely adds to the recognized stature of Northwest literature." H. G. Merriam

+ N Y Times p6 S 16 '45 950w

Reviewed by Bernard De Voto
Weekly Book Review p2 O 14 '45 500w

Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Net of cobwebs. 248p $2 Simon & Schuster

45-1697

Psychological mystery story.

"Readers who like mysteries to be puzzles neatly put together and tied up in a small box had better stay away from this one. One tenth of it concerns plot; nine tenths concern the incredible and sometimes shocking workings of the human mind. From the first page on, nothing short of a major catastrophe could have made me lay the book down until I'd finished the last word." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p11 Ja 21 '45 150w

Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

"Best of the week."

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 24 '45 100w

Kirkus 12:540 D 1 '44 110w

New Repub 112:158 Ja 29 '45 80w

"This is more of a psychological novel than a detective story, even though it does have a murder plot." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Ja 28 '45 160w

"A fine job, in spite of an inconclusive ending."

+ — New Yorker 20:72 Ja 27 '45 70w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 180w

"This decidedly unusual item may be the novelty you're hunting. The punch lies in the author's handling of Malcolm Drake, a young merchant seaman in a mental and emotional tailspin following a wartime experience, with murder complicating the symptoms and mystery problems always on hand." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 28 '45 300w

HOLLAND, MARTY. Fallen angel. 224p $2 Dutton

45-3537

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:98 Mr 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p19 My 13 '45 90w

HOLLAND, MARTY—Continued
"For hard-boiled addicts."
Sat R of Lit 28:28 Je 2 '45 40w

"Miss Holland sustains a hard-boiled mood in some pages better than in others as she approaches a dubious solution." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p12 My 13 '45 90w

HOLLAND, RAYMOND PRUNTY. My dog, Lemon [il. by Wesley Dennis]. 85p $1.75 Barnes, A.S.

Dogs—Legends and stories 45-10491

In a series of related short stories the author tells the story of a bird-hunting dog, how he was bought and sold, how it was discovered what was the matter with his nose, how he won one National Championship and why he didn't compete in the next.

Reviewed by Peter Quinn
Book Week p19 O 21 '45 230w

Kirkus 13:443 O 1 '45 60w

"'My Dog Lemon' is a pleasant, if ephemeral, hour's reading; not a major contribution to the literature of the dog." R. M. C.
N Y Times p23 D 9 '45 250w

New Yorker 21:108 O 13 '45 50w

HOLLAND, RAYMOND PRUNTY. Shotgunning in the lowlands; with a foreword by John Taintor Foote and il. by Lynn Bogue Hunt. (Countryman press bk) 213p $7.50 Barnes, A.S.

799.242 Shooting. Game and game birds Agr45-304

"The author, who is regarded by many as the national authority on duck hunting, devotes most of this volume to a discussion of the sport, including such matters as whether birds can smell a man and the art of luring them into range by quacking into a mouthpiece made for the purpose. In addition, there are informative chapters on how to shoot geese, jack snipe, rails, and crows, the last an extremely tricky target which affords a sportsman valuable training in handling a gun. Pencil sketches and illustrations in color by Lynn Bogue Hunt." New Yorker

"The tips on shooting and blinds and decoys and the rest of the paraphernalia of duck hunters ought to be authentic, though I am no judge of such things. Incidentally, the author is editor of Field & Stream, the bible of the fishing and hunting fraternity." L. D.
Book Week p8 Ap 29 '45 130w

Kirkus 13:17 Ja 1 '45 130w

New Yorker 21:91 Ap 21 '45 80w

Reviewed by L. E. Bigelow
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 9 '45 200w

HOLLANDER, LEE MILTON, ed. & tr. The skalds; a selection of their poems; with introductions and notes [pub] for the American-Scandinavian foundation. 216p $2.75 Princeton univ. press

839.608 Icelandic and Old Norse poetry 45-8261

"Of the three great bodies of Old Icelandic literature that have come down to us—the collection known as the Edda, the prose sagas and histories, and the Skaldic poetry—the third is the most difficult. . . This art form originated almost full-blown in Norway early in the ninth century and was practiced until the fourteenth, especially by Icelanders. . . Dr. Hollander's book tells all this and more about the skalds. Some parts of it will interest only specialists, but the body of the book, which consists of biographies of a dozen or so of the greatest skalds, together with amazingly skillful translations of some of their work, ought to find many readers." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 26 '45 150w

Booklist 42:125 D 15 '45

Christian Century 62:1064 S 19 '45 330w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 43:171 N 30 '45 480w

Current Hist 9:327 O '45 20w

"Primarily, and seriously, intended for the student of Old Norse, this book contains matter of interest to the general reader, especially if he has an ear and a passion for metrics." Rolfe Humphries
+ Nation 161:409 O 20 '45 210w

"Does the mention of the Poetic Edda thrill you with nostalgic vibrations? Do such words as Thrymskvida or Sigurd Fafnirsbane stir your heart 'more than with a trumpet?' Then you will probably enjoy Professor Hollander's book about the skalds, the Icelandic court poets who flourished, roughly—very roughly—from the tenth to the thirteenth century, A.D. It must be admitted, however, that the going here is fairly hard, even for the most Germanic-minded reader." C. W. Stork
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:18 Ja 19 '46 700w

HOLLES, EVERETT. Unconditional surrender 366p $2.50 Howell, Soskin

940.54 World war, 1939-1945 45-5472

A chronological, factual history of World war II as it was fought in Africa and Europe during the months from November 1942 to May 1945.

"One of the astonishing characteristics of the book is that it reads as well as a mystery yarn—a technique in writing that professional historians disdain and yet one that would lift their accounts out of the dull chronology class. There is one major objection. The book is excellent and therefore should have been indexed. It isn't." David Karno
+ Book Week p3 Je 24 '45 270w

Booklist 42:34 O 1 '45

"Considering that Germany surrendered on May 8 and that, a scant two-and-a-half weeks later, Everett Holles's 115,000-word history of the Allied conquest is presented to the American public, the blue ribbon for speed writing should be bestowed upon the author. And more than that. He is not only the first on the book market with his presentation of World War II, but he has produced an eminently readable and, on the whole, an authentic book." E. S. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 19 '45 480w

Foreign Affairs 24:162 O '45 40w

"Evidently 'Unconditional Surrender' is a high-spirited rush job; it will give little real satisfaction to a serious reader." Ralph Bates
Nation 161:112 Ag 4 '45 240w

"For the person who wishes the unadorned record of the military movements, as the journalist, not the technician, would present them, this book will be useful. It keeps the chronology straight and the details, with a few minor slips, exact. . . The publishers, incidentally, performed a minor mechanical triumph of bookmaking by setting a publication date of May 25 on a book which recounts the surrender in Berlin on May 8. Myself, I wish they had taken a little more time." Waverley Root
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:14 Je 16 '45 1000w

Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 12 '45 130w

HOLLIS, HAROLD C. Bass tackle and tactics. 147p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

799.1 Bass fishing Agr45-322

"The author, an experienced angler, advocates very light equipment to make fishing for bass sportier. His obviously sensible book is full of tips about things like when to use dark-colored surface lures, when to fish deep lakes, and other matters of moment. Drawings and photographs." New Yorker

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p2 S 9 '45 500w

Booklist 42:33 O 1 '45

Kirkus 13:293 Jl 1 '45 130w

New Yorker 21:67 Jl 7 '45 40w

"In simple easy style he tells about bass and their haunts; casting and fly rods; variations in tackle and technic for stream and lake. He also discusses night angling, wading gear, hooking and playing of bass, and the science of sportsmanlike casting. For seasoning he includes many personal experiences that are instructive, dramatic and humorous. His book rates space on the Waltonian's shelf." Lenox Bigelow

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 240w

Wis Lib Bul 41:111 N '45

HOLMAN, HUGH. Trout in the milk. 218p $2 Mill

45-4808

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:167 Ap 15 '45 50w

"An ingenious idea, and the author makes the most of it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Je 10 '45 120w

"Smoothly written and capably concocted tale of family squabbles with murderous outcome. Visitor from Nawth helps sheriff solve crime."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 Je 23 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p19 Je 17 '45 100w

HOLMBOE, JORGEN, and others. Dynamic meteorology. 378p $4.50 Wiley

551.5 Meteorology 45-5067

"Topics common to books on dynamic meteorology, such as the meteorological applications of thermodynamics and hydrodynamics, are presented here. The material is based upon lectures delivered at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of California from 1936 to 1945. The purpose of the book is to provide a self-contained treatment of the subject for students with a background of general physics and calculus. . . A consistent effort has been made throughout to direct attention to the practical applications of theory." U S Quarterly Bkl

N Y New Tech Bks 30:26 Ap '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:54 S '45 180w

HOLMES, ARTHUR. Principles of physical geology. 532p il maps $4 Ronald [30s Nelson]

551 Geology 45-3690

"Not only for schools, but also for the 'general reader who wishes to see something of the "wild miracle" of the world we live in through the eyes of those who have tried to resolve its ancient mysteries.' The book is in three parts: a—the earth, its surface, minerals and rocks; b—processes taking place on its surface due to wind and water; c—earth movements, volcanic action and continental drift." Library J

"Very readable. Recommended."

+ Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:24 Ap '45

HOMAN, PAUL THOMAS, ed. Financing American prosperity. See Twentieth century fund

HOME mechanic's handbook; an encyclopedia of tools, materials, methods, and directions. 804p il $5.95 Van Nostrand

680 Building—Repair and reconstruction 45-8501

"Practical information on how to carry out a great variety of repair jobs, alterations, and new constructions, involving painting and decorating, carpentry and woodworking, plumbing, masonry, and electrical work. Numerous illustrations picture details of the use of tools, and the application of methods." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 42:70 N 1 '45

N Y New Tech Bks 30:39 Jl '45

"Eight authors collaborate on this encyclopedia in one volume. . . Each is a practitioner of his craft, and all but one teach it and have made a reputation at doing so. This results in a book not only for reference but for home study and practice, not only a help in time of trouble but a preparatory course along six major lines of work. Each subject is taken step by step from tools and materials onward: vocabularies are explained and everything that needs a picture has a good one, either photograph or drawing. It is a fine piece of teamwork in manual education."

+ Weekly Book Review p29 S 30 '45 180w

HOOD, THOMAS. Letters; from the Dilke papers in the British museum; ed. with an introd. and notes by Leslie A. Marchand. 104p $2 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 45-7104

"It is a common belief among readers of Thomas Hood that somewhere there is a collection of his letters awaiting discovery. If this is wishful thinking, it is encouraged by the present collection, reprinted from the Dilke papers in the British Museum. It is a small collection, three long letters and about a dozen short ones and a few notes. In addition there are some early drafts of verses which give a glimpse of the methods of a professional writer of comic verses. The collection is well edited and there is an able introduction." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Jl 29 '45 80w

"The collection may be of interest to readers already interested in Thomas Hood, but it will scarcely attract new readers to him. Mr. Marchand tells us that a vast number of letters are still unpublished, not having been used in the Memorials or in Walter Jerrold's biography of the poet-humorist. Perhaps it is as well to leave them unpublished."

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 29 '45 480w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p400 Ag 25 '45 420w

HOOKS, ARAH. Mr Nosey; il. by Esther Goetz. $2 Appleton-Century

"Mr. Nosey had lost his smile! The birds failed to sing, the flowers and grass drooped, but, worst of all, the people became sad and the children cried, for Mr. Nosey no longer whistled cheerfully or danced and skipped down the street. [The story is of] how he searched everywhere and finally found his smile again." Library J

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p7 Ja 6 '46 130w

"Esther Goetz' full color illustrations are skillful, sharp and delightful, but not wholly related to a somewhat saccharine text for which they compensate admirably."

— + Kirkus 13:391 S 1 '45 130w

"A pleasant story for young boys and girls." R. M. Davis

+ Library J 70:1138 D 1 '45 70w

"There is plenty of action in the pictures which children from 7 to 9 may enjoy, but the tale is heavy footed and lacks the quality of authentic nonsense." A. T. E.

+ — N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 50w

"This skipping little book is basically a sort of fable or whatever you call a brief story that in the course of making happy hopes to do good. The pictures are just naive enough—not too much—to fit the mood of the text, and little children will be especially pleased with the one where Mr. Nosey, bending over a duck pond, at last sees the reflection of his fine natural smile."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 11 '45 270w

HOOLE, WILLIAM STANLEY. Sam Slick in Texas. 78p il $2 Naylor

B or 92 Hammett, Samuel Adams 45-7880

In 1835 a nineteen-year-old New York boy named Samuel Adams Hammett set out for the new lands of Texas. There he lived for twelve years as surveyor, land locator, and merchant. In 1847 he returned to New York and wrote sketches, stories, and articles for the magazines. These sketches were later collected in two books, one of them entitled: Piney Woods Tavern, or Sam Slick in Texas. In this biography Stanley Hoole has collected all the material now available on Hammett's life. Index.

HOOLE, W. S.—Continued

"This little book is at once sound in scholarship and eminently readable. Hoole has done a remarkable job of literary detective work in tracing the career of Hammett and has written of his books with verve and sympathy as well as critical insight. I can only echo the wish expressed by J. Frank Dobie in his fine foreword: 'Stanley Hoole has had such a good time trailing down his man and has brought him back so much alive that I hope he will go after some of these other escapees.' " J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 O 14 '45 650w

"The humor of Sam Slick would probably be too broad and obvious for our entertainment today; but such works, their authors, and the attendant scene have historical value in giving us an insight into the background and philosophy of an element in our development as a democratic nation. Such earnest and difficult researches as were conducted by Mr. Hoole deserve appreciation and commendation." M. T. Martin

+ N Y Times p10 N 25 '45 220w

"The author deserves much credit for rescuing in a scholarly and entertaining book an American writer who deserves something better than oblivion." Cyril Clemens

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 550w

HOOPER, ALFRED. The river mathematics. 401p il $3.75 Holt

510 Mathematics. Mathematics—History 45-35197

An outline of mathematics covering its growth and development thru 4000 years, from the simple abacus to the marvels of modern engineering. Each branch of the service is shown in its relative position. Basic techniques from simple arithmetic to the calculus are included. Index.

"Although involved mathematical proofs are avoided, 'The River Mathematics' is remarkably accurate and complete. The author is subject to the common weakness of using the expression 'indefinitely large' which befuddles rather than clarifies the calculus, but he is otherwise precise in his point of view and language. The experience which Alfred Hooper, R.A.F. officer and schoolmaster, has gained in writing best-seller refresher books for the armed services and laymen has made his present work an outstanding exposition of a difficult field. For the reader interested in a background to equip him for the modern technical world, Hooper's latest effort is to be highly recommended." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p13 O 14 '45 270w

Booklist 42:70 N 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

Library J 70:891 O 1 '45 60w

"Ever since Hogben's 'Mathematics for the Million' became a best-seller we have been inundated with popular works on mathematics. Hooper's is one of the best that has appeared of late. Though his is intended for the general public it will probably be a boon to many a student who finds the formal class-room text none too clear. Hooper is always simple, clear, and practical. He has made mathematics in its lower and higher phases as interesting as it can be made." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ Sat R of Lit 28:20 N 10 '45 310w

"Mr. Hooper is exceptionally adroit in his selection of material and his simplification of principles. Whether you want to learn how to use logarithms, manipulate a slide-rule, interpret graphs of functions, differentiate an equation, or merely get a bit of enjoyment out of the magic of numbers, you will find this a most valuable and stimulating book."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 N '45 180w

"To those who enjoyed mathematics in school or college Alfred Hooper's 'The River Mathematics' will be highly welcome. Many who used his earlier 'A Mathematics-Refresher' before entering the service or getting a war job will greatly enjoy his new book." D. D. Miller

+ Weekly Book Review p28 N 25 '45 550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

HOOTON, EARNEST ALBERT. Young man, you are normal; findings from a study of students [made by the Grant study of Dept. of hygiene of Harvard university]. 210p il $2.50 Putnam

573 Man—Constitution. Students 45-4528

"This book is the result of the clinical studies carried on for six years, at the instigation of Dr. Arlie Bock, professor of hygiene at Harvard, by a highly trained group of experts. The studies were devoted to the examination of 268 'normal' young men to determine certain physical, mental and cultural things about them. Dr. Hooton undertakes the task of describing how the scientists went about the selection of the men, gives in some detail the data assembled on their physiques, health, social and economic backgrounds; their intelligence, personalities, tastes and activities; their worries, problems, religious beliefs and attitudes. He then relates 'how the elements are mixed in "normal" youths' in regard to the above-mentioned attributes. Lastly, he reports on the continuing careers of these young men, over eighty-five per cent of whom are in the armed services, makes comments on personality traits and physiological tests, and considers how the future study of the whole man might be conducted." (Scientific Bk Club R) No index.

"Dr. Hooton, social anthropology's contribution to American wit, has written a book in the field of the social sciences in a manner designed to banish dullness and enchant the reader. That he has done so at no expense to the validity of his material is a tribute not only to his urbanity, but to his competence as well." R. J. Bender

+ Book Week p9 Jl 1 '45 650w

Booklist 42:7 S '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

"For once Harvard's scientific enfant terrible, Dr. Earnest Hooton, is hobbled by the complexity and inconclusiveness of his subject-matter. He has tried to transform a gray mass of statistics and listings into a lively narrative form, and to do this without going overboard on pure theory. In view of these trammels, he has worked up a readable book." E. B. Garside

+ — N Y Times p12 S 16 '45 450w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 Je '45 320w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:19 S '45 240w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 29 '45 1350w

HOOVER, CALVIN BRYCE. International trade and domestic employment. (Committee for economic development. Research study) 177p $1.75 McGraw

337 U.S.—Commercial policy 45-8573

"Fifth book in the series of Research Studies for the Committee of Economic Development. Relationship of international trade to our domestic prosperity and our role in a sound long-term program. Author discusses our merchant marine, reduction or elimination of tariffs, appraises international cartels and domestic monopolies and presents suggestions for settlement of lend-lease and appraises an international monetary fund." (Library J) The author is dean of the graduate school of arts and sciences, Duke university. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 70w

"In general, little quantitative data is presented in the book and we are left wondering just how much is 'necessary' or 'desirable' in the way of exports, imports, tariffs, international lending, etc. Probably it is wishing for the impossible to desire more definitive answers at the present time." P. L. Gamble

Springf'd Republican p6 O 6 '45 550w

"Professor Hoover recognizes the strength of present trends towards foreign nationalization of external trade. His case for American resistance to such trends, the weakest section of his book, rests less on the politics of the world situation than on his desire for 'the maximum degree of laissez faire.' With that qualification, 'International Trade and Domestic Employment' can be recommended as a straightforward review of the items on the agenda of foreign economic policy. It is not, and does not pretend to be an original work of scholarship. It is a summary of a good economist's conclusions on issues which must soon be decided." E. V. Rostow
+ — Yale R n s 35:376 winter '46 420w

HOOVER, HERBERT CLARK, and GIBSON, HUGH. Basis of lasting peace. 44p $1 Van Nostrand
341.1 Peace. International federation 45-3977

The authors advance a number of proposals for the revision or amplification of the Dumbarton Oaks plan, among them the possible revision of peace treaties, an international Bill of Rights (founded on the principles enunciated in the Atlantic Charter), absolute disarmament of enemy powers, relative reduction of armaments of all nations, etc.

Booklist 41:267 My 15 '45

"It is a quick-reading little book with its points clearly stated." L. M. Lyons
+ Boston Globe p15 My 2 '45 80w

"Recommended for serious study by all concerned with the nature of the permanent world organization."
+ Christian Century 62:683 Je 6 '45 90w

"'The Basis of Lasting Peace' is almost essential reading for those who desire a full understanding of what is now happening at San Francisco and what will emerge from it." H. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 11 '45 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45

"The Hoover-Gibson thesis on the postwar world now appears in book form. The American public is well served by it. We could hardly have any better lead for the momentous conference at San Francisco. Their little volume strikes to the heart of the problem before us, wasting no words and setting the alternatives in the clearest light. It is written so simply that none can misunderstand, and behind its persuasive simplicity there is the statesman's vision." R. M. MacIver
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 29 '45 1500w

"Although the articles which comprise a part of this little book have been enthusiastically acclaimed in certain quarters, it is not clear just what the enthusiasm is about."
New Yorker 21:90 My 12 '45 160w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
Sat R of Lit 28:9 My 5 '45 750w

"'The Basis of Lasting Peace,' for all its appeal to idealism (as well as to some less worthy fears and prejudices), lacks the substance which would have made of it a really significant contribution to the present debate on world peace and security." H. W. Baehr
+ — Weekly Book Review p3 My 20 '45 500w

HOPKINS, GERARD MANLEY. Selections from [his] note-books; ed. by T. Weiss. (Poets of the year) $1 New directions 828

Excerpts from a larger book, Note-books and Papers, published in 1937 (Book Review Digest, 1937). Most of them are prose notes on nature.

"'The Note-Books and Papers of Gerard Manley Hopkins' . . . cast considerable light on Hopkins' poetical development. It had continuity and, above all, Hopkins' own dates for the reader's guidance. In its revelations of the poet's methods and cerebral and emotional mechanisms, it was a very satisfactory book. But the selections by T. Weiss from the Humphrey House text do not even make a satisfactory sampler." Leo Kennedy
— Book Week p8 N 25 '45 310w

"[These notes are] accurate yet suffused with the power of Hopkins' passionate and devout imagination. A valuable selection from the complete edition of the 'Note-Books' published in 1937. This is in the Poets of the Year series and has an interesting essay by the editor."
+ New Yorker 21:68 D 29 '45 40w

HOPKINS, JOHN APPLETON HAVEN, comp. Diary of world events. 20v il maps pa $38.75 per set; supplementary volumes ea $2 c1942 The compiler, c.o. Nat. advertising co, 306 S. Hanover st, Baltimore
940.53 World war, 1939- (42-19535)

"A 'chronological record of the Second World War photographically reproduced from the American and foreign newspaper despatches as reported day by day, including maps, pictures, cartoons, anecdotes, official messages, reports and declarations, and congressional acts. . . .' —Subtitle. The first two volumes of this set were reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1942 [Book Review Digest, 1943]. This review brings the set through volume 20. The set is divided into two parts. Part I, 'The Twilight Zone,' consists only of volume 1 and covers the period from September 22, 1938 to October 13, 1939. Part II, 'The War Period,' consists of volumes 2 to 20 and covers the period from August 24, 1939 to May 31, 1942. Clippings before these dates are occasionally reproduced to add background material." Subscription Bks Bul

"The format of the set leaves much to be desired. The material has been reproduced photographically and the results are not uniformly satisfactory. Through lack of ink, parts of some pages are illegible; other sections are blurred from too much ink. The results are such that the material on some pages can be used only with difficulty. The set is bound in paper covers. The binding will stand very little hard use. As stated in the Committee's earlier review, the set seems to have little value for libraries, most of which maintain their own clipping files. Existing newspaper indexes used in conjunction with the newspaper files which are maintained by most medium-sized and large libraries make available similar accounts of events of the war period. In view of these considerations and of the limitations of the set as indicated in the foregoing review, Diary of World Events is not recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 16:3 Ja '45 500w

HOPLEY, GEORGE, pseud. See Woolrich, C.

HOPPER, STANLEY ROMAINE. Crisis of faith. 328p $2.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury
201 Christianity—Philosophy 44-7601

"This book is a theological treatise. Its author is a young scholar seeking to understand the fundamental causes of the chaotic conditions of today. To find them he examines critically a number of the philosophical, theological, and metaphysical doctrines of the past—ideas that have ruled the world. In them he finds errors: errors that have led mankind astray." (Am Soc R) Index.

"The author of this book frequently quotes the world's great poets who express beautifully the deepest beliefs, hopes and aspirations of mankind. The book is not easily read, but he who studies it carefully, whether Christian or pagan, will find a challenge to his views." S. C. Ratcliffe
+ Am Soc R 10:119 F '45 220w

"It is significant that the author of this book thinks highly of Alice in Wonderland; highly enough to entitle a critical section

HOPPER, S. R.—Continued
'Alice and the White Knight.' The entire book is akin to Lewis Carroll's masterpiece: it tells a lot of solid homey truths in a weird and distorted fashion; its many new insights either flash by in tantalizing glimpses or are embalmed in an inexcusably intricate vocabulary; its conclusions—when their meaning is clear—are valuable reaffirmations of classical Christian positions in philosophy and theology." Harold Bosley

+ — Christian Century 62:463 Ap 11 '45 1450w

"For students and thinkers, heavy going for the average reader. Large libraries." G. W. Hill

Library J 69:602 Jl '44 110w

HORAN, JAMES DAVID. Action tonight. 171p il $2.50 Putnam

940.45 O'Bannon (destroyer). World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-4672

In semi-fictional form this book tells the story of the American destroyer O'Bannon in the Pacific.

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 4 '45 300w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 21:366 S '45 50w

"For this particular reviewer, who rode 'the Mike O'Bannon' on one of her runs up 'The Slot' and operated in the same destroyer squadron with her for several months, 'Action Tonight' has a somewhat artificial ring. Sailors tell a story or relate an incident; they don't spin yarns. . . I do not believe the Navy sent to sea a radioman second class who didn't know the Morse code or any other rated men who never had sailed blue water before. Mr. Horan would have you believe all these things. In addition there are numerous technical errors and errors of fact on operations, which might have been due to the faulty memory of the men who supplied the information." Foster Hailey

N Y Times p12 Jl 15 '45 650w

"Out of many interviews and from a study of battle reports actually written during action James Horan has built up a narrative of true adventure, one of outstanding courage and endurance. The human element is predominant with characters as real on the book's pages as they are in life." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 24 '45 1200w

HORLER, SYDNEY. Dark danger. 272p $2 Arcadia

45-1217

Spy story of the present World war.

"There is nothing subtle about this story of Nazi espionage and British counter-espionage. . . One of the silliest spy stories of this war." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p22 Ja 28 '45 150w

"Low mocking laughter, guttural cries of rage and so forth punctuate the various kidnapings, violent deaths and other routine happenings in this somewhat wooden affair." Will Cuppy

— Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 21 '45 120w

HORNEY, KAREN. Our inner conflicts; a constructive theory of neurosis. 250p $3 Norton

132.15 Neuroses SG45-299

"A distinct advance in this well-known analyst's theory of the genesis of psychic disorders. The neurotic personality syndrome is seen as a struggle to mediate between contradictory sets of compulsive trends. Four types of attempted solution are described: moving toward people, moving against people, moving away from people and moving toward realization of an idealized image of the self. Horney's theory is constructive in that she recognizes the difficulty, yet believes in the possibility of progressive modification of the neurotic character structure." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p16 O 28 '45 950w

Reviewed by C. T. Holman
Christian Century 62:1352 D 5 '45 1650w

"I know of no other writer today in the field of psychoanalysis with a directness, a clarity, a reasonableness devoid of professional jargon and technical trim which equals that of Karen Horney—whose New Ways in Psychoanalysis was an important modern contribution."

+ Kirkus 13:330 Ag 1 '45 210w

"Recommended for intelligent adults with some reading background as well as for the specialist in human adjustments." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 70:819 S 15 '45 140w

"Careful reading forces the conclusion that Dr. Horney does not veer away from the Freudian schema nearly so much as she claims. Disregarding the extent to which she has improved, or failed to improve, on Freud, Dr. Horney's thesis is developed with skill and really extraordinary compactness. Her book is highly readable. Considered in this light, it is rather beside the point to bicker too much about the precise nature of her debt—which she takes pains to announce—to the Freudian literature. If there is any grave shortcoming, it is an inadequate treatment of the concrete application of therapy." E. B. Garside

+ — N Y Times p16 O 21 '45 650w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 O '45 430w

Reviewed by Harry Daum
Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 600w

HOROWITZ, MRS CAROLINE. Child's treasury of things-to-do. 182p il $2.50 Hart

790 Amusements. Handicraft 45-35187

A collection of suggestions for things children can make or do, alone or with playmates, and with or without help and supervision of older people. The suggestions are grouped by ages ranging from playing with pots and kitchen spoons for the 2 year olds to making a stage for a puppet show for the early teen agers. A final section gives instructions for simple party games. Illustrated with simple line drawings and diagrams.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p62 D 2 '45 100w

Booklist 42:61 O 15 '45

+ Kirkus 13:368 Ag 15 '45 130w

"A real find in home entertainment for children from two years up." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 70:1092 N 15 '45 60w

HOSKEN, CLIFFORD JAMES WHEELER (RICHARD KEVERNE, pseud). Coroner's verdict: accident [Eng title: Lady in no. 4]. 238p $2 McKay [8s 6d Collins]

45-4660

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 120w

Kirkus 13:209 My 15 '45 80w

"A lively and literate job, with some nice English countryside thrown in."

+ New Repub 112:798 Je 4 '45 60w

"The story begins quietly enough, but it gathers momentum and suspense as it goes on to a climax sufficiently thrilling to satisfy the most exacting mystery fan." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Je 3 '45 130w

"Readable, convincing, and pleasantly atmospheric combination of blackmail, murder, and dipsomania. Writing is good and detecting commendable."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 Je 23 '45 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p105 F 26 '44 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 1 '45 130w

HOSTOVSKY, EGON. The hideout; tr. from the Czech by Fern Long. 112p $1.75 Random house

45-1694

In the form of a long letter to his wife, whom he will never see again, an exiled Czech engineer pours out the story of his flight to Paris and his two years spent in a dark French cellar. In the course of his narration the tale of his mental and spiritual agony is traced, until the eve of his act of heroism which brings his spiritual regeneration.

"This book, by one of the finest writers of Czechoslovakia is hardly more than a novelette, a mere 112 pages, but it is of greater significance than many a heavy tome I have read. Great in its modesty, it is a veritable little masterpiece, like one of those incredibly delightful miniatures on ivory, except that the motif is not as pleasant." H. L. Reich

+ Book Week p7 F 25 '45 310w

"This is a character study of first rank, the story of an ordinary mortal trapped by his own weakness and by events beyond his control. Its tenseness holds you in its grip from start to finish. You will be tremendously moved by it."

+ Boston Globe p7 F 21 '45 210w

"An odd, isolated incident of personal drama and devaluation, foreign in manner, fervent in tone. For a limited audience."

Kirkus 12:549 D 15 '44 130w

"Rather bizarre, curiously remote from reality, and handicapped by an unidiomatic translation, it reminded this reader of some of the Central European dramas which the Theatre Guild used to inflict on its bewildered and restive subscribers." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 70w

"The plot is not perfectly coördinated with the symbolism, coincidence is overplayed to save time, and the difficulties of exposition . . . prevent a full development of character. But Hostovsky's literary economy is excellent. He makes no attempt to embellish his narrative, accepts its limited means and works out whatever richness it does actually contain." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ — New Repub 112:428 Mr 26 '45 700w

"The first story by this able Czech writer to be published in this country, 'The Hideout' shows a new talent of very considerable proportions. The theme is not new; yet Hostovsky contrives, without heroics but with a subthematic, semi-religious fervor, to make the engineer's journal letter to his wife read like a soliloquy from the troubled heart of modern Europe." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 F 18 '45 500w

"Mr. Hostovsky is unquestionably an original and thoughtful writer, but this novel—brief as it is—is composed in too many keys to be entirely successful. At times the ghostly feeling of Kafka's 'The Trial' impinges on the straightforward narrative, with a disturbingly inharmonious effect."

+ — New Yorker 21:73 F 24 '45 160w

"A melancholy but by no means desperate or defeatist observer of our time, a strong believer in human dignity and human rights, Mr. Hostovsky delights in discoveries of the depths and oddities, the strange courses and subtle transformations of human souls. His fancy and his passion for mystery and symbols would often lead him astray were it not for a strong sense of irony, self-irony included. A forceful language rich in images adds to the pleasure of reading, and this quality is preserved to a very considerable extent, also in the English version, although even such an expert translation as that of Miss Fern Long cannot but muffle certain sounds and colors of the original." F. C. Weiskopf

+ Sat R of Lit 28:25 F 24 '45 650w

"From among the many books by exiled Europeans about life under the Nazi heel, this short novel has a distinction all its own, for it deals with a man who was frankly afraid of war and revolution and sought to escape, rather than join the fight. . . In the brief, taut story of one moral victory Mr. Hostovsky underlines a truth which cannot be repeated too often, a truth which we all know but do not all acknowledge, that only those who are ready to die in this battle will earn the right to peace." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Weekly Book Review p4 F 18 '45 700w

HOSTOVSKY, EGON. Seven times the leading man [tr. from the Czech by Fern Long]. 251p $2.75 Fischer, L.B. [9s Eyre]

45-9240

The setting is prewar Prague at the time of the beginning of fascism. The writer Kavalsky is the central figure, and the story is of the seven lives in which he plays the chief role.

"With vivid imagery, often straying into the bosky fens and ghoul-haunted tarns of tormented minds at the breaking point, Hostovsky has created the feverish, Walpurgis-Night atmosphere of the tragic and irresolute days just before the capitulation of Czechoslovakia. His novel, however, accomplishes more than it may appear to at first glance. It is an eloquent and disturbing analysis in human terms of the cowardice and vacillation that plunged the world into the maelstrom—a strong and bitter warning that it must not happen again." Jack Conroy

Book Week p4 O 14 '45 450w

Kirkus 13:321 Ag 1 '45 150w

"Not recommended for libraries with limited funds." M. P. McKay

Library J 70:749 S 1 '45 70w

"Mr. Hostovsky's book is, throughout, hysterical; one might expect to make allowances for this, since the betrayal of Czechoslovakia is its subject; but the aspect of the tragedy which preoccupies Mr. Hostovsky—the behavior of intellectuals who 'run away or betray or submit'—needs a treatment at once more sober and more subtle than Mr. Hostovsky provides." Henry Reed

— New Statesman & Nation 29:393 Je 16 '45 70w

"The tale's the thing; and this is not too bad a tale. It is, on the contrary, quite good. There are atmospheres and tensions which remind one of Schnitzler's exquisite small novels of psychic stress. Mr. Hostovsky, with less skill has nevertheless made us feel and suffer with these characters of his. He himself is a part of his narrative and at times he becomes chaotic with its chaos." Lawrence Lee

+ — N Y Times p4 O 14 '45 750w

"[This] book is more interesting as a promise than as an accomplishment."

New Yorker 21:105 N 3 '45 80w

"It would have been pleasant to be able to commend the author's style of fantasy and to say unreservedly good things about his literary performance as a whole. Unfortunately, although one can sympathize with the evident motive of the novel and appreciate something at least of what may fairly be called its message, it must be said that Mr. Hostovsky has carried his ruling idea to portentous lengths and dressed it up in showy and not very effective guise."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Je 2 '45 500w

"Highly individualistic in style and built up of successive layers of meaning this book is not likely to appeal to every one. Some will find it difficult, others annoying. Few will fail, however, to be swept along by its frenetic rush of events and no thoughtful reader is likely to miss its power and passionate conviction. The picture it gives of European civilization as a spiritual waste land in the year immediately preceding the war is an unforgettable one." Jennings Rice

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 O 14 '45 850w

HOTCHKISS, WILLIAM OTIS. Minerals of might. 206p $2.50 Cattell

553 Mines and mineral resources. War—Economic aspects 45-7798

"Natural resources from earliest times, particularly strategic minerals, their development in peace and war through industry and technology. Told in the delightful, interesting fashion of a forum. Author, in anticipation of World War III, urges conservation of oil, increase of our supply, and suggests that iron and scrap steel and 300 million tons of Lake Superior iron ore be stored in strategic points in our country, that 9 other necessary minerals not possessed by us be procured and that all these be kept ready for defense. Authoritative tables." (Library J) Index.

HOTCHKISS, W. O.—Continued

Booklist 42:143 Ja 1 '46

Kirkus 13:235 Je 1 '45 130w

Library J 70:637 Jl '45 100w

"Here the reader will find a well-rounded picture of the part that mineral resources have played in the war and their role in the post-war period."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 S '45 420w

Weekly Book Review p9 D 23 '45 180w

HOUF, HORACE THOMAS. What religion is and does; an introduction to the study of its problems and values. rev ed 413p $3 Harper

201 Religion. Christianity 45-3473

"In the revised edition of this popular textbook for introductory college courses in religion, the viewpoint and general plan are unchanged. Some of the material has been placed more usefully and considerable repetition has been eliminated. A complete chapter on 'Religion of the Jews' has been added, as well as sections on several topics such as miracles, humanisms, etc. The entire contents have been revised, and book lists and numerous data brought up to date." (Publisher's note) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

"After ten years of use, this 'textbook for introductory college courses in religion' has been revised in the light of experience. It was a good book before and is better now."

+ Christian Century 62:464 Ap 11 '45 230w

"This is a better book than its predecessor. It provides, save at the one point, a comprehensive and orderly account of the problems and values of religion. No teacher should overlook its value for an introductory course in religion, and the intelligent layman will find it an excellent guide in his quest for a better understanding of its theme." I. R. Beiler

+ — Crozer Q 22:277 Jl '45 700w

HOUGH, DONALD, and ARNOLD, ELLIOTT. Big distance. 255p maps $3 Duell

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-9749

"A very informal, highly personalized story of the building up of the Army's air strength in the Pacific from Pearl Harbor to Luzon '. . . Concerned largely with the Fifth and Thirteenth Air Forces, and the people in them, in their handling of the Army Air job through the Southwest Pacific campaign.' No attempt at balanced history, but great picturesqueness in detailed description of particular exploits and the following through of one unit, the 49th Fighter Group." Library J

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer

Book Week p6 N 25 '45 360w

Booklist 42:146 Ja 1 '46

"This might be called another Battle Report of Army Air force in the Pacific. I don't think it can be surpassed. . . There's humor and pathos—and grim reality."

+ Kirkus 13:408 S 15 '45 250w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '46 300w

"In our preoccupation with our primary enemy, the Nazis, we have done scant justice to the men of the Southwest Pacific. This book establishes a better perspective." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 28:87 D 1 '45 400w

"America cannot overemphasize her debt to the brave flyers of the steaming, lonely Pacific tropical campaigns. The authors have rendered a needed service in presenting that story in this withal entertaining book." Barrett McGurn

+ Weekly Book Review p18 D 9 '45 550w

HOUGH, HENRY BEETLE. Roosters crow in town. 266p $2.50 Appleton-Century 45-2946

Study of life in a New England coastal town shortly after Pearl Harbor. What little plot there is centers around the death of Chris Shearard's father, and Chris' awakening interest in the life of the town after he went to work in the newspaper office.

Booklist 41:255 My 1 '45

"Henry Hough has done a meticulous portrait of the New England home front in war years, a good piece of Americana." D. G. Wayman

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 25 '45 300w

"Slow moving but plausible portrayal of a community affected by the war effort."

Kirkus 13:40 F 1 '45 170w

"Interest lies in narration of day-by-day events, occasionally melodramatic, rather than in character development or well-knit plot. Unimportant." J. S. Cleavinger

Library J 70:266 Mr 15 '45 80w

"The plot, with its thread of mystery, is slight, but the armchair pleasure of the tale lies in the remembrance and recognition of events only recently past. With wit, irony and indulgence, the author brings back those first confused days of air-raid wardens, practice drills and conflicting orders; of experiences with citizens like Cheney Cunningham, who, with patriotism as their shield, became little Caesars. There's a little bit of every town and every community here that more than one reader will recognize and relish." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p28 Ap 1 '45 260w

"Henry Beetle Hough is a native New Englander, and has been for twenty-three years editor of a small country newspaper. So when he writes about a small New England town, the town paper, and the people whose lives it touches, the background is authentic, full of perceptive detail, rich with accurate observation of personalities and the social, civic, and political activities of a rural community. . . The incidental writing of this book is immensely superior to the plot. As a picture of a small New England community in wartime it is superb; as a drama of human relationships and emotions it is something far less." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:11 Ap 21 '45 300w

"It is real, it is warm with human understanding, it is essentially a microcosm of small-town America. While no heroic figures people its canvas, it is heroic in its implications of the stability and integrity of the American way of life." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 1 '45 800w

Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

HOUGHTON, WALTER EDWARDS. Art of Newman's Apologia; pub. for Wellesley college. 116p $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal A46-372

"Highly ingenuous addition to persistent opinion in Newman criticism that he was a self-centered, insincere and unscrupulous user of English language, by associate professor of English literature at Wellesley. Apologia is considered as work of art and not spiritual autobiography significant as history and controversy, as Newman intended it to be. Analyzes principles and style, examines text and estimates success. Contends that the Apologia is neither logical nor rational, is exploited by style of highest order. Concludes conversion due to resentment and psychological factors, not logic, not Grace of God." (Library J) Index.

"Because no other study has devoted either as much space or as much critical acumen to the 'Apologia' as has this present essay, Mr. Houghton's book should find favor among Newmanites. One feels, indeed, that it can scarcely be otherwise. For within these hundred-odd pages, the author has succeeded in giving, if not a complete evaluation of the Cardinal's autobiography, at least a discerning analysis of the various stylistic and rhetorical devices employed therein. Of especial import is the first part of the treatise which shows convincingly that Newman was not unprepared for his undertaking in 1864. . . That is not to say that the essay is faultless. For one thing, it is more a comment upon special aspects than an examination of the whole of the 'Apologia.' For another, the historical background to Newman's book is presented inadequately so that there is never gotten a real awareness of the tension under which he worked and which makes his writing so exceptional." H. G. J. Beck

+ — Commonweal 43:388 Ja 25 '46 390w

"Recommend Harrold's 1945 John Henry Newman, chapter 12, as antidote. Highly controversial and use restricted to iconoclasts in rarefied literary circles." R. J. Hurley

Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 140w

HOUSELANDER, FRANCES CARYLL. Flowering tree. 144p $2 Sheed

811 45-8260

A volume of religious poetry, "a collection of what [the poet] calls 'rhythms.' These are meditations or prayers in the form of free verse. Attractively phrased and cadenced, they are easily mastered, stay in the mind and enable one to reflect and to pray in the midst of every kind of distraction and interruption." (N Y Times)

"Here is a book which displays the author's sensitiveness to common beauty and unites deft craftsmanship with simple faith."

+ Cath World 162:188 N '45 240w

"The thought is fresh and arresting. It stems from the central mysteries of the Christian religion. Miss Houselander is one of those unusual thinkers and writers, like Chesterton, who delve into the capacious and solidly packed treasure chest of orthodoxy, draw forth treasures old and new, and display them in a manner that is striking and memorable." J. S. Kennedy

+ N Y Times p24 O 28 '45 280w

"Miss Houselander brings something new and quite exciting—if I may put it that way—to devotional poetry. . . This is a living and human book. Read it for itself, even if you are an infidel, and you will be nourished by it." W. R. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 28:41 O 20 '45 230w

HOVDE, BRYNJOLF JAKOB. Scandinavian countries, 1720-1865; the rise of the middle classes. 2v 428;435-823p $10 Chapman & Grimes

948 Scandinavia 44-7277

"A history of the ascendancy of Scandinavian bourgeois society in its cultural, religious, and philosophical, as well as its political and economic aspects. The destinies of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark have been peculiarly interrelated, and a particular value of this study lies in the fact that, while it distinctly points the individuality of each of the three countries, at the same time it underlines certain fundamentals that have made them basically a unit when referred to the whole pattern of European society. . . Formerly associated with the Department of History at the University of Pittsburgh, B. J. Hovde is at present Administrator of the Housing Authority of the City of Pittsburgh." (Publisher's note) Index

"This first comparative history of the Scandinavian countries is a work of impressive scholarship. It makes available to English-speaking students of modern European history a vast amount of hitherto inaccessible information, the results of a generation of Scandinavian research, and presents them with all the skill and acumen at the command of a distinguished American scholar. The point of view is almost severely economic, and no one need fear that he is being snared by a Scandinavian bias. There is rather a sobering tendency to emphasize the sharp edge of class conflict and economic self-seeking. . . It is a pity that so important a work should have had so long a travail. Publishing difficulties alone can account for its barrenness of format: the book bitterly lacks charts, maps, and pictures to illustrate and implement the statements made (the end-paper map is shockingly inaccurate, even unhistorical); the make-up and the price are equally forbidding. The index is poor, with widespread omission of important references." Einar Haugen

+ — Am Hist R 50:795 Jl '45 1150w

"It is no mere reviewer's phrase to say that this study fills a long-felt need and should prove of value not only to historical students but to all who are interested in the dynamics of social development. But owing to the very breadth of the field covered, a critical appraisal of details lies beyond the scope of a brief review. . . It is unavoidable that the treatment should be somewhat uneven, but the author has made judicious use of available sources, and the picture given appears correct in its details. It is the opinion of the present reviewer, however, that the presentation would have gained by a fuller treatment of the demographic aspects." John Lindberg

+ — Ann Am Acad 237:217 Ja '45 600w

" 'The Scandinavian Countries: 1720-1865' is erudite, complete, monumental, but it is hardly the right thing for the average reader. Yet there would seem to be a definite need for just such a book. There have recently been published excellent, popularly written summaries of the history of Russia, Germany and other countries. Dr. Hovde's 'The Scandinavian Countries' does not render the same service; it is not for general consumption, but will be highly regarded by specialists." Joachim Joesten

+ — Book Week p6 S 3 '44 500w

"While the book is well written, interesting and amply repays careful study, it invites reflections that challenge part of the author's approach to his subject. For instance, Sweden is treated almost wholly in terms of her boundaries since 1809. . . Another aspect of this history which raises doubts is the basis on which the author has, in part, chosen the chronological limits of his study. . . Some of the detail likewise invites a note of dissent." J. H. Wuorinen

+ — Pol Sci Q 60:141 Mr '45 900w

"The book is not only painstakingly detailed; it is also sagely and carefully planned. Dr. Hovde sets a large and orderly stage—colorful but not bizarre—and slowly raises the curtain on a three-act drama of numerous and memorable scenes. He is a good director, for not once does he permit the action to get out of hand. . . Dr. Hovde's style, where facts and figures do not raise too high a barrier, is lively and discursive, and the narrative is crowded with fascinating sidelights. The chapters on art and literature, religion and philosophy, education and labor, are meaty and authoritative." Holger Lundbergh

+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 My 19 '45 360w

HOWARD, FRED, and HOWARD, JANET. Whistle while you wait; with interludes by Janet Howard. 188p $2.50 Duell

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-4830

Letters written by an American army air man to his wife, during his period of overseas duty from February 1943 to June 1944. They are candid and full of humor. Contains a few letters from Mrs Howard to her husband.

"The letters reveal with unusual honesty and sincerity the reactions of one soldier to the war, and though no two soldiers have the same reactions, these may be taken as typical of the sensitive thinking man who is knowingly fighting for the future of the world. And because Fred Howard was an enlisted man serving as a bombardier, he was uniquely able to write both as a G.I. and as a flight officer. . . 'Whistle

HOWARD, FRED—Continued
While You Wait' is an unusually fine collection of war letters, in style as well as in content." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p3 Ap 22 '45 700w

Booklist 41:319 Jl 1 '45

Bookmark 6:14 My '45

"Decidedly more literary than other books of this kind, this has a very perceptive approach to the problem of separation and the efforts to make letters answer that problem."

+ Kirkus 13:148 Ap 1 '45 180w

"The letters are predominantly humorous in tone. Not in the wise-cracking sense, but in the sense that here are two people who can look at anything, including pain, with objectivity and good humor." Barbara Klaw

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 22 '45 700w

HOWARD, GEORGE P. Religious liberty in Latin America? foreword by John A. Mackay. 170p $2 Presbyterian bd.

261.7 Religious liberty 44-40208

"To answer objections raised in certain circles that Protestant missionaries have brought more harm than good to Latin-American life and relations, the author, who was born and reared in Argentina, traveled from country to country questioning all sorts of people on the subject. The result is a convincing array of responsible opinion that only those who fear progress in religion as in other things have spread anti-Protestant sentiment and that both Catholics and Protestants of good faith are working together to promote spiritual, social, and cultural well-being in Latin America." Booklist

---

"It is indeed very seldom that one finds nowadays a book dealing with Hispanic America so biased, so utterly misleading, so superficial and on top of it all so meekly arrogant. One does not have to take a part in the strictly religious issues between Catholicism and Protestantism to accept frankly that Catholicism is the backbone of Hispanic American culture, or better still, that it is the very essence of its being. The enormous historic significance of this obvious truth is either ignored or maliciously overlooked by the author. His book is fundamentally based on the assumption that Catholicism in Hispanic America is at the root of all its evils, a sort of chronic cancer which hinders progress and makes democracy impossible. But of course it is progress and democracy as he understands them." Edmundo O'Gorman

— Am Hist R 50:584 Ap '45 550w

Booklist 41:118 D 15 '44

"Readers who care to go into the subject further may easily find persons whose opinion would destroy the unanimity of view recorded by Mr. Howard." Joseph McSorley

Cath World 160:478 F '45 250w

"The religious Book Club did its subscribers a good turn when it gave them this volume as the monthly selection a little while ago. The subject is vital and timely, public interest in it is keen and yet needs to be further kindled and fed with accurate information, and Mr. Howard's treatment of it meets every reasonable requirement. . . Mr. Howard writes with calmness and restraint. His book is in no sense an anti-Catholic tirade. It is merely vigorously and intelligently pro-Protestant and pro-religious liberty in the sense of freedom and legal equality for all faiths." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:206 F 14 '45 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p15 My 19 '45 10w

HOWARD, ROBERT WEST. Two billion acre farm. 209p $2.50 Doubleday

338.1 Agriculture—U.S. Frontier and pioneer life—U.S. 45-2083

"An informal history of American agriculture." (Subtitle) It is told in terms of the men and women who have established and maintained the farmer's place in the economics of the nation.

"Two decisive factors keep Howard's book from being the real achievement in the history of American agriculture which it largely approaches. The first (and lesser) is his style. . . Much more serious is the distortion of the latter part of Howard's book because of its political animus." J. T. Frederick

+ — Book Week p8 Mr 4 '45 550w

Booklist 41:205 Mr 15 '45

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons

Boston Globe p13 F 14 '45 420w

"Agriculturists who received government benefices for scanting their crops in the heyday of the New Deal will take no pleasure reading Two Billion Acre Farm. All other people should find delight in it, except possibly a few persons of extreme literary sensibilities who take offense at fine writing in the modern humorous, semi-vulgarian style. Those who hold opposite political views to the author's can hardly make objections; all they have to do is to disagree and rebut his opinions in silence or aloud to whomever may chance to be within hearing distance, and stick it out to the end. For the book is jammed with social information about the American past, too interesting to let slip and evidently too well authenticated to ignore." W. P. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 1 '45 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

Kirkus 12:542 D 1 '44 230w

"There is a bitterness in this book which underrates many of the constructive forces at work, and which somewhat dulls the edge of an otherwise interesting and important story." P. A. Waring

+ — Nation 160:392 Ap 7 '45 550w

New Repub 112:798 Je 4 '45 150w

"A forceful and interesting book which, with the exception of a prediction that 'the path of America's future leads back to the land,' is factual in its kaleidoscopic account of the development of our 1,940,000,000-acre farm between 25,000 B. C. and 1944 A. D." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p8 F 18 '45 500w

"The author displays an amazing industry in conference and reading. His lively journalistic style and sense of interest give force to his account of the bumptious nineteenth century and the breathless twentieth. The chronicle of personalities and events is, on the whole, authentic; beyond question it is interesting. It can be made of permanent value if author and publisher can be induced to take the bugs out of it for a new edition. The tradition of big farm families did not begin in the forest clearings of the Ohio basin. . . Dirt is not soil. Chlorophyll does not come from the roots of plants. The reviewer notes such defects, simply because he is in essential agreement with the author's general intent and does not want to see it clouded." P. B. Sears

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:18 Mr 3 '45 650w

"The few slips in referring to scientific phenomena must not be allowed to raise doubts with respect to the reliability of the book as a whole; doubtless these will be corrected in future editions. The general reader will find this book entertaining as well as informing."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:19 Je '45 120w

"Mr. Howard has done a remarkably readable little book, packed with historical oddities. For many readers it will expose the tremendous panorama of American history from an entirely novel point of view." P. M. Wagner

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 8 '45 750w

Wis Lib Bul 41:51 My '45

HOWENSTINE, EMANUEL JAY. Economics of demobilization; with an introd. by Alvin H. Hansen. 336p $3.75; pa $3.25 Am. council on public affairs

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Veterans. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 44-7860

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Generally speaking, the book is a valuable contribution to the growing literature about transitional readjustment. The author writes in a forward-looking spirit and is sincerely anxious to help prevent a repetition of mistakes made after the last war; a repetition which might have much more serious consequences in view of the greater magnitude of the task ahead. In this endeavor he may find some encouragement from the progress made in post-war preparations since the completion of the book." Albert Lauterbach

+ Am Econ R 35:203 Mr '45 1150w

"In small issues as in great, Dr. Howenstine does not hesitate to distribute, in forceful language, praise as well as blame. Since he fails, however, to present an integrated and systematic picture of the economic developments of the period under discussion, one is inclined to interpret his critical remarks and general observations as expressions of deep-seated convictions rather than as results of factual analysis. Although many figures are scattered through the pages of the book, it does not contain a single systematically organized table or graph." Wassily Leontif
Ann Am Acad 239:186 My '45 400w
Foreign Affairs 23:516 Ap '45 20w

"The volume has merits for work on the college level and will be of value in future years as a survey for those who have not passed through the experiences of this war." E. E. Nemmers
+ Pol Sci Q 60:606 D '45 900w

Reviewed by F. R. Flournoy
Social Educ 9:332 N '45 350w

HOWENSTINE, EMANUEL JAY, ed. Post-war markets; a guide based upon official information. 184p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

658.8 U.S.—Commerce. Income 45-6719

"When the CED was first organized, it sponsored a study of markets after the war which was published under the aegis of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. This cautiously optimistic brochure is reprinted here, together with the Bureau's analysis of postwar prospects for 30 major industries." New Repub

"The economic statistician and analyst is no prophet. But his data, carefully compiled and interpreted, furnish the soundest foundation in planning for the future."
+ Christian Century 62:1097 S 26 '45 70w
New Repub 113:445 O 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by C. F. Hughes
N Y Times p14 O 14 '45 800w

HOWES, ROYCE. Case of the copy-hook killing. 223p $2 Dutton 45-5843

Detective story.

"Save for the crackpot catechism, which is sometimes amusing, this is routine."
— + Kirkus 13:261 Je 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Jl 8 '45 180w

"Adequate."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Jl 28 '45 30w

"For authentic atmosphere and clever plotting, this is among the season's better detective tales." M. L. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 240w

"This tale contains lots of lively newspaper atmosphere in addition to a sterner note as Captain Ben Lucas closes in for the finish. Light, pleasing item with an almost too unexpected killer." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 15 '45 90w

HRDLICKA, ALES. The Aleutian and Commander islands and their inhabitants. ltd ed 630p il maps $5 Wistar inst.

572.9798 Aleuts. Aleutian islands. Commander islands 45-3639

"A few centuries ago, the desolate and foggy Aleutian Islands were one of the most thickly inhabited sections of North America, with a population between fifteen and twenty thousand. . . Here the late Dr. Aleš Hrdlička of the Smithsonian Institution spent the summers of 1936, 1937, and 1938, excavating, and collecting mummies on many of the islands from Unalaska to Attu. The results of Hrdlička's investigations are presented in this posthumous work. . . The larger section of the book consists of diary notes recording day by day events. Particularly valuable is the 186-page survey of other works, especially those containing descriptions of the Aleuts by the early Russian and other explorers. In a final section on physical anthropology, the skulls and bones from the old sites are described and compared with those of Eskimos, Indians, and Whites." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by E. M. Weyer
Geog R 35:511 Jl '45 750w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:20 S '45 240w

HROMADKA, JOSEF LUKL. Doom and resurrection. 128p $2 Madrus house, 3401 Brook rd, Richmond, Va.

230 Religious thought. Civilization, Modern. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 45-1857

"A small volume of lectures [delivered] at Princeton Theological seminary. . . Dr Hromadka frames his lectures around the personalities and work of various moderns whose names are familiar in science, politics and literature, notably Stefan Zweig, Dostoyevski, Masaryk, Emanuel Radi, Czech philosopher, and not least, Karl Barth." Springf'd Republican

"A vigorous thinker and writer, new to American readers, appears in the person of a Czech professor of theology formerly at the University of Prague and now teaching at Princeton. This is his first publication in English, but he is under no linguistic handicap. . . We shall expect to hear more, and profitably, from this exponent of the crisis theology."
+ Christian Century 62:273 F 28 '45 140w

Reviewed by E. A. R. Rumball-Petre
Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 22 '45 700w

HUBBARD, FREEMAN H. Railroad avenue. (Whittlesey house publication) 374p il $3.75 McGraw

385 Railroads—U.S. 45-35182

These "stories and legends of American railroading" include a biography of Casey Jones, the story of Jesse James, and accounts of the Johnstown flood, the Hinckley fire, a locomotive chase in the Civil war, etc., along with chapters on railroad trademarks, raildogs, railroads at war. There is a glossary of railroad lingo and an index.

Reviewed by R. E. M. Whitaker
Book Week p4 O 7 '45 500w
Booklist 42:52 O 15 '45

"At the end, Mr. Hubbard prints a thesaurus of railroad lingo, which will interest the student of the American language. Some interesting photographs complete a book which is both good reading and good Americana." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 17 '45 850w
+ Kirkus 13:309 Jl 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 90w

"These old tales gain renewed interest in the expert and sympathetic telling of Mr. Hubbard, and the many drawings and photographs, old and new, with which the book is illustrated add much to its effectiveness." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p8 O 21 '45 440w

"'Railroad Avenue' is a useful contribution to Americana. It makes no literary pretensions but it is full of good lore—especially in its songs and ballads—and the redolence on every page of the whole smoky romance which is inseparable from the nation's growing story gives it significance." Roger Burlingame
+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 O 20 '45 750w

HUBBARD, F. H.—Continued

"There are many illustrations, some of them seldom, if ever, seen in a book before, and woodcuts which add a flavor such as no photographs can. The volume belongs on every railroad man's shelf. Non-fans who tackle it casually are sure to sit up late, for this book carries the magic inherent in the hoarse cry of a freight climbing a mountain valley at twilight." Stewart Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 23 '45 1050w

HUBBELL, RICHARD WHITTAKER. Television: programming and production. 207p il $3 Farrar

621.388 Television 45-5717

The author of 4000 Years of Television (Book Review Digest, 1942) presents the story of the directing of television programs, including such aspects as camera technique, lighting, sound effects, staging, and historical background. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 41:334 Jl 15 '45

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:31 Ap '45

"Mr. Hubbell's book is unusually important. For the first time, a writer with extensive practical and theoretical experience has coordinated in book form the facts established and basic methods evolved in the surprisingly extensive work already done. It provides a foundation on which television plans and projects may be more rapidly and astutely built."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 Ag '45 240w

Special Libraries 36:252 S '45

"Television Programming and Production could have used a strong editor's hand. Practical hints are mixed in with sketchy aesthetics in a way to weaken the effectiveness of both. There is too free a use of loosely conceived distinctions—between 'objective' and 'subjective' camerawork, programs of 'creation' and 'transmission'—that involve the author in unnecessary convolutions of thought. However, there is plenty of good red meat in the 200 pages of this book, and the gap in writings on television is so enormous that a book such as this cannot help but make a substantial contribution towards filling it."

+ — Theatre Arts 29:670 N '45 600w

HUBER, RAPHAEL M. Documented history of the Franciscan order [v 1, 1182-1517]. 1028p il $7.50 Newman bkshop

271.3 Franciscans—History (45-13007)

"This book, whose author is a dignitary of the Franciscan Conventuals, is divided into three parts, the first two of which trace the development of the Friars Minor to the final division of the order into Observants and Conventuals in 1517; the third is made up of ten studies on matters Franciscan of varying interest and importance. There are four indexes: of persons, of authors and artists, of places, objects, and doctrines, and of papal documents; and chronological tables of ministers general, general chapters, vicars general of the Observants, popes, cardinal protectors, and Franciscan saints and 'blessed.'" Am Hist R

"There is much sound stuff in this book and it gives evidence of great industry on the part of its author; that makes more regrettable the fact that at times the author's judgment and at other times the slipshod work of printer and proof-reader (who have served him very badly) deprive it of much of its potential value." A. H. Sweet

+ — Am Hist R 51:106 O '45 700w

"Under way for some thirty years, written by a man whose scholarly qualifications are of the best, this first installment of what will be the outstanding history in English of the Franciscan Order well fulfills the promise of the word 'Documented.'" Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 161:520 S '45 300w

HUDSON, HOYT HOPEWELL. Educating liberally [ed. by John W. Dodds]. 120p $2 Stanford univ. press

378.01 Education—Aims and objectives. Education, Higher. Colleges and universities—U.S. A45-2087

"Planned in two parts, this essay begins with a statement of principles and purposes of good college teaching, and continues with a discussion of the means available in American colleges for their realization. The second part, left unfinished by the author at the time of his death, does not demand the radical reforming of educational institutions. Instead, the author would accomplish his aims within the present framework. . . Discussing his themes with dialectical versatility, the author finds in an opponent's position that which many reconcile it to his own, and looks at complicated matters from many points of view. He draws on a perceptive teaching experience to find example and analogy illuminating his meaning. The last chapter vindicates an honored position for the liberal college which will turn its back upon ambition to become a university, will suppress departmental exclusiveness, and resist vocational pull." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

School & Society 61:286 Ap 28 '45 80w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:23 Je '45 240w

HUDSON, MANLEY OTTMER. International tribunals, past and future. 287p $2.50 Brookings; Carnegie endowment

341.1 International courts 45-2232

"This volume is not a history of international tribunals, and it is not a treatise on the pacific settlement of international disputes. It essays the less ambitious rôle of summarizing the past experience, and of applying what is to be learned from that experience to the immediate problems with which the world is or may be faced. The author has attempted to subordinate his personal predilections to what appear to him to be the attainable goals of present-day effort, if a will exists to revitalize international law." Pref

---

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau

Am Pol Sci R 39:802 Ag '45 800w

Reviewed by A. J. Lien

Ann Am Acad 240:141 Jl '45 270w

"No earnest reader of this book can fail to profit from the author's wealth of experience in this field, from his judicial approach to its many problems and from his conservatism in separating the practically realizable from the ideally desirable." A. K. Kuhn

+ Columbia Law R 45:673 Jl '45 490w

Reviewed by E. M. Lynskey

Commonweal 42:169 Je 1 '45 750w

Foreign Affairs 23:689 Jl '45 30w

Reviewed by C. E. Wyzanski

Harvard Law R 58:749 My '45 900w

New Repub 112:853 Je 18 '45 180w

"Planning for peace has become an imminent responsibility. Law must have a place in it, and a court to apply the law will be essential. Here is a practicable, readable, handy guide for approaching the problem. Judge Hudson is outstanding as an exponent of peace under law. For thirty years he has plugged at the task. His ripe scholarship is reinforced by a rich experience. Paraphrasing Bacon's remark about Coke, never was a man's person and his work better met." R. N. Wilkin

+ N Y Times p29 Mr 4 '45 450w

Reviewed by P. C. Jessup

Pol Sci Q 60:289 Je '45 950w

Reviewed by Dexter Perkins

Sat R of Lit 28:11 Mr 10 '45 450w

"While the book, with its unquestionable mastery of the subject, is eminently suited as an introduction to the general problems, the layman may well be irritated by the absence of idealism and the coldness of the presentation, and specialists in the field would probably take issue with the narrow legalistic approach and the absence of a positive philosophy of international relations for which international law is more an objective than a function of society. Nor will the reader find an answer to the problems centering on the punishment of war criminals by international tribunals—the vital issue is hardly mentioned—because the author adheres strictly to the concept of international law as applying primarily between states. However, to many readers the author's aloofness from value judgments and idealism may seem rather a virtue than a vice." Karl Loewenstein

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p299 Je 23 '45 60w

"In spite of its brevity the book is full of factual data, and is balanced by the wide experience of the author. Some criticism may be made of the absence of detailed documentation in the descriptive and analytical parts of the book, and to a few rather conservative or timid positions in the conclusions concerning future developments. Although addressed primarily to the professional, the book is so written as to be readable and helpful to the intelligent lay citizen, not to mention the academic student."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:34 Mr '45 200w

HUDSON, RALPH GORTON. Introduction to electronics. 97p il $3 Macmillan
621.38 Electronics 45-1785

"An explanation of the science of electronics, and a description of its applications in the fields of radio, television, photography, navigation and medicine. A final chapter also discusses such applications as are found in the electron microscope, the radio compass, and the radiosonde. Although intended for the layman with a limited knowledge of physics and chemistry, the use of technical terminology is not avoided. The author is professor of electrical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology." N Y New Tech Bks

Current Hist 9:327 O '45 30w
Library J 70:119 F 1 '45 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:7 Ja '45

Reviewed by M. T. Martin
N Y Times p21 Je 3 '45 270w

"The author has assumed no previous study of physics or chemistry so it will afford excellent instruction for the business man, advertising writer or student who wants to find out what electronics is all about." James Stokley
+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 16 '45 230w

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). No shortage of men. 208p $2.50 Bobbs 45-7759

A story about a slightly daft family, told alternately by the four main characters: Gram, sometimes called the Duchess; Eileen, her daughter who did not inherit her mother's impulsiveness; David, Eileen's husband, an army officer; and Ellena, daughter of Dave and Eileen, who falls in love with "the fifteenth GI to the left of the second lieutenant in the front row."

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p8 Ag 26 '45 260w

"Romantic unreason and upset dressed up with light pleasantries for rental readers."
Kirkus 13:324 Ag 1 '45 130w

"With the problem of a hasty war marriage, an epidemic of divorce fever and the dilemma of the returning veteran, there is no shortage of plot." Andrea Parke
N Y Times p28 Ag 26 '45 130w

"Miss Hueston tells her story by letting the characters in turn take up the narrative, and she has managed very skilfully to weave their individual reactions, their motives, and their secrets from each other into a swift, amusing, and highly romantic plot which has, for all its lightness, more than a touch of serious implication. 'No Shortage of Men' is a fine book for the guest bedroom table; the only trouble is that the guest will probably sit up far too late into the night reading it." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 S 22 '45 400w
Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 180w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 19 '45 110w

HUFF, DARRELL, and HUFF, MRS FRANCES MARIE (NELSON). Twenty careers of tomorrow. (Whittlesey house publication) 281p il $2.50 McGraw 371.425 Occupations. Technology 45-3039

Material for the general reader on twenty postwar vocations, describing the jobs, where they will probably be, training needed, and financial returns to be expected. Includes questions and answers, short bibliography, and index.

Booklist 41:281 Je 1 '45

"Highly simplified, this is a surface job whose value lies in assembling the possibilities of a wide variety of choices rather than in its definitive information."
Kirkus 13:89 F 15 '45 90w

"One of the best books on vocations which has come to my attention recently. . . Recommended for public libraries, for college and senior High school libraries." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 70:218 Mr 1 '45 70w

"If some of these prophecies turn out to be over-optimistic the Huffs will at least be able to point to leading figures in each of the industries surveyed as the authorities upon whom they relied. Meanwhile, they have gathered considerable useful data for career-planners and stressed throughout the importance of specialized training and study—a most useful lesson if only they can drive it home." Francis Scott
+ N Y Times p14 My 20 '45 400w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). Dread journey. 180p $2.50 Duell 45-8807

Mystery story.

"An exciting and absorbing novel. There is a great deal of suspense but more important are the people involved and what happens to them. Other mystery writers may fall into stereotyped formula after a few books, but not Dorothy Hughes." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p15 S 16 '45 270w

"Grade A."
+ Kirkus 13:381 S 1 '45 90w

"The clash of personalities, the tension and the terror of [the book] are such that few will be able to lay the book down unfinished." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p36 S 16 '45 270w

"A frightening story, since Miss Hughes is expert in conveying the feeling that at any moment everything is going to cave in on the reader."
New Yorker 21:92 S 15 '45 80w

"Not too good."
Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 22 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p23 S 16 '45 90w

HUGHES, PAUL. Challenge at Changsha. 311p $2.50 Macmillan 45-10159

In the late days of 1941 and early 1942 the Japanese made a third futile attempt to take Changsha in Hunan Province. The book is a novel describing the impact of this attempt upon the Chinese, Americans, and Japanese taking part in it.

"Hughes has done an amazing lot with second-hand information. His story is convincing, his characters sound. His epic has impact, his tone the conviction of the old

HUGHES, PAUL—Continued
China hand. For the second time, he has been successful in writing out of a map." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p3 N 25 '45 360w

"A long, close-patterned mosaic that in spite of a huge gallery of characters does hold reader interest. For a boy that has never been there—he can do an amazing job of country, people and events."

+ Kirkus 13:323 Ag 1 '45 170w

"Paul Hughes brings this battle alive in terms of little people who were drawn into its vortex and in terms of opposite ways of life . . . but his circuitous style will stop many readers cold. Has more depth and less finish than Rickshaw Boy." R. E. Kingery

Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 70w

" 'Challenge at Changsha' mixes action and philosophy without serious injury or benefit to either. The novel has no scenes that have not been presented more convincingly elsewhere, and often. But it makes a vivid tale, and having selected China for its locale, Mr. Hughes nowhere dispels the illusion. He has done a bang-up rewrite job." Kenneth Fearing

+ — N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 190w

"The scene is China at war; the characters are an unwieldy conglomeration of Chinese, Japanese, and Occidentals (all examined by the author with the same and often incredible omniscience); the total impact is moderate to weak."

New Yorker 21:106 N 24 '45 100w

"Cut down to three quarters of its present length, and stripped of encyclopedic background detail and philosophical pedantry, this would be an excellent novel. Even as it stands, plethoric and academically constructed, it is an interesting one." A. F. Wolfe

— + Sat R of Lit 28:9 D 29 '45 550w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Springf'd Republican p4d D 30 '45 650w

"The Americans in the book are much more convincing than the Chinese. It may be a tour de force to write a novel about China without having been there, but I hope Mr. Hughes will write his next book about Oklahoma." Eleanor Lattimore

Weekly Book Review p7 D 23 '45 380w

HUGHES, WILLIAM LEONARD, and WILLIAMS, JESSE F. Sports; their organization and administration. 414p $4 Barnes, A.S.

796 Sports 44-4907

"Both theoretical and practical considerations on the subject of sports enter into the discussion in this book. The early chapters consider the place of sports in American life; the later ones take up matters of organization and management. Covers not only school and college activities, but recognizes the recent spread of sports into social organizations and industry." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by H. D. Meyer

Social Forces 24:131 O '45 120w

Wis Lib Bul 40:158 D '44

HUIE, WILLIAM BRADFORD. From Omaha to Okinawa; the story of the Seabees. 257p il $2.75 Dutton

940.541273 U.S. Navy. Construction battalions 45-10553

The author of Can Do (Book Review Digest, 1944) has written another collection of anecdotes and stories about the Seabees, describing their work and their relaxation, if any, from Omaha Beach in Normandy to Okinawa. Index.

"The new book is ribald and hearty. It gives the reader absorbing stories of the skilled workers' astounding achievements right in the face of the enemy and a clear conception of what kind of men they are. I like the way in which the author lets these Americans speak for themselves." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p3 D 23 '45 360w

Booklist 42:142 Ja 1 '46

"Good reading."

+ Kirkus 13:465 O 15 '45 130w

"Book unorganized and mediocre writing, but does indicate enormous accomplishments of Seabees in the war effort." Thelma Brackett

Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '46 180w

" 'From Omaha to Okinawa' is a rather rambling and discursive book, mostly made up of small incidents and anecdotes, and all dealing with the Seabees. . . Apparently written while the censorship restrictions were still in force and not revised since they came off, it omits the one most important thing about the whole Seabee set-up—how it happened that they were able to appear on a beach soon after its capture with the correct number of (for instance) motor mechanics and telephone linemen. The result is that the book is disconnected to a degree; there are no personalities, there seems very little central scheme to the whole thing, and it is of value chiefly for the statistics assembled in the appendix." Fletcher Pratt

— + Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ja 12 '46 320w

"It is the best war book there is to give you a belly-laugh on every page along with some solid facts on solid achievements and on one of the most fabulous manifestations of the American spirit." G. M. Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 950w

"Too little has been written about the Seabees and consequently two books telling of their exploits are more than welcome. Most people think of a Seabee as a man who ran a bulldozer. They did plenty of that under the most strenuous conditions, but the story is a thousand times more extensive. . . William Huie served with the Seabees as an enlisted man, later as an officer and, finally, as a civilian war correspondent, and, as his earlier 'Can Do' showed, is well qualified to tell their story." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 23 '45 500w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Sibby Botherbox; with il. in black and white by Marjory Collison. (Stokes bk) 174p $2 Lippincott

45-7910

Hannah has an imaginary playmate and they both spend a delightful summer at Gladbrook.

Book Week p20 N 11 '45 270w

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

Churchman 159:8 N 15 '45 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:455 N '45 70w

Kirkus 13:370 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Delightful drawings by May Collison give the reader a feeling of the warmth and happiness that permeate the story." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 70:893 O 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p22 O 14 '45 180w

"The nine-year-old heroine of this book has such a gusty set of elders and the author writes with so breezy a humor that the story is entertaining in spite of its rather difficult central theme—a lonely child and her imaginary playmate."

+ New Yorker 21:133 D 8 '45 60w

"There is a quality to this story that gives it a lasting value. Behind Uncle William's nonsense and the easy laughter of Mattiebelle lies a deep feeling for the things that are important to a child, family love and trust, concern for the little pleasures and 'surprises' that are remembered as long as memory lives, respect for that 'over the border' world that a child slips into so easily. There is in the story, too, a convincing picture of a family in the early days of the twentieth century." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:58 N 10 '45 450w

"The one word Sibby wouldn't put up with was 'real'; when she heard it she wasn't there. For she was that invisible companion far more familiar to only children than their mothers like to admit. and the reason why this is Mabel Leigh Hunt's best book is that this is the best treatment—at once robust and delicate—that the subject has received since William Canton."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 11 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

HUNTER, ARCHIBALD MACBRIDE. Message of the New Testament [Eng title: Unity of the New Testament]. 122p $1 Presbyterian bd. [5s Student]

225.6 Bible. New Testament 44-9806

"Scholarly analysis has discovered differences of view and emphasis among the New Testament writers and has charted the distinctive features of, for example, the Pauline and Johannine theologies. Not denying the validity of these studies, Dr. Hunter thinks it more important to recognize the essential unity of the gospel message. He aims to construct a synthesis which will incorporate and transcend the differences." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:1257 N 1 '44 350w

"This book is not a complete presentation of the New Testament message. Moreover, its omission of James and Revelation from the books used in exploring the theme of unity (p. 21) raises the question of whether the author has adequately valued the ethical vigor and eschatological note of the New Testament. But he has made his main point. We must work toward a new statement of the New Testament message, critically grounded, aware of diversities of thought, yet alive to the common basic message which is the adequate support of effective preaching and living." F. V. Filson

+ — J Religion 25:141 Ap '45 450w

HUNTER, MRS BLUEBELL MATILDA. Manchu empress. 355p $2.75 Dial press

Tzŭ-hsi, empress dowager of China—Fiction 45-5842

Novel based on the life of Tzu Hsi, the last empress of China. It is a story of oriental court life with all its attendant magnificent splendor, cruelty, intrigue, and grossness, in which the corrupt and ambitious Tzu Hsi moved like an evil genius. It was her ambition to rule China alone. To further that end she stopped at nothing—the death of her only son and his beloved wife, the exile of her lover, murder and cruelty raised to a fine art.

Reviewed by J. N. North
Book Week p4 Je 10 '45 360w

Kirkus 13:229 Je 1 '45 80w

"Out of this morally uncongenial material Mrs. Hunter has fashioned a novel which, though it does not sympathize with Tzu Hsi, gives her the benefit of objective treatment. The psychology of total evil is as difficult to fashion as the psychology of total good, and Mrs. Hunter wisely stays away from Tzu Hsi's mental processes except when the passion is obvious and the object of it large and in full view. . . Mrs. Hunter is neither an interpreter nor a moralist, but the broad and colorful picture which she paints of the decadent Manchus is helpful in bringing an understanding of the present difficulties of the Chinese government. It is too much to expect a nation to be adapted to democracy when so recently it emerged from so long a period of complete submission of the will, the mind, and the body. The shadow of Tzu Hsi is not completely lifted from the land. Pu Yi, puppet Emperor, is her grandnephew." Thomas Sugrue
Sat R of Lit 28:32 Je 23 '45 550w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p18 Je 17 '45 110w

HUNTER, RUTH. Come back on Tuesday. 265p $2.50 Scribner

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-2821

Autobiographical account of a young actress' years of struggle, finally reaching a culmination in "a stinky little part" (but one she loved) as Ellie Mae in Tobacco Road.

"The frank honesty of this lively human document makes it one of the truest books ever written about the theater. You may find it amusing or shocking, according to your taste, but as an accurate representation of theater life it is gripping." Dorsha Hayes

+ Book Week p3 Ap 1 '45 360w

Booklist 41:254 My 1 '45

Commonweal 42:98 My 11 '45 90w

Kirkus 13:79 F 15 '45 170w

"A sympathetic and revealing glimpse behind the scenes into the lives of the 'little people of the theater' whose years are spent in trudging from one casting office to another in high hopes of being chosen for a part, but who never attain stardom. Recommended." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 70:357 Ap 15 '45 70w

"The point of Miss Hunter's saga is that she is an actress no better and no worse than a hundred others you could name if you put your mind to it. She has been one of the little people of the theatre who are kicked around to the limit of Equity's laws. . . It was quite time this typical story was told, and she has told it very well, in an informal if sometimes slightly arch and consciously naïve style." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 11 '45 700w

"Miss Hunter phrases her narrative in easy-reading style without forcing any literary gems. It all slips out in friendly, casual manner, yet withal, it carries the drive of serious ambition." L. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 29 '45 300w

Theatre Arts 30:63 Ja '46 40w

"This is not Ruth Hunter's life so much as it is the life of Broadway. She has written a fascinating account of the folklore of the theater and of the magic that is felt on both sides of the footlights. Her book won't stop any of the young hopefuls from legging it up Broadway, but now they can't say they haven't been warned." Lorine Pruette

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 25 '45 950w

Wis Lib Bul 41:52 My '45

HUNTINGTON, ELLSWORTH. Mainsprings of civilization. 660p maps $4.75 Wiley

573 Man—Influence of environment. Heredity. Civilization 45-5027

" 'This book is an attempt to analyze the role of biological inheritance and physical environment in influencing the course of history.' It embodies the matured concepts arising from the content of Professor Huntington's well-known, previously published books and articles, but includes also a considerable amount of new material, notably that in the several chapters on cycles. Thus in a sense it is 'a résumé of the author's entire life-work, including what seem to him the most significant ideas' that he has gleaned from the highly original investigations to which he has set his mind and hand." (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. B. Reuter
Am J Soc 51:252 N '45 1200w

Booklist 41:334 Jl 15 '45

Kirkus 13:191 My 1 '45 110w

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 70w

"You may not completely agree with his ideas about the effect of atmospheric ozone, for example, on animal reproduction. You may not accept his conclusions regarding the interrelation of electricity in the air and the rhythm of business cycles. But Huntington will make you think along new lines. His explanation of the selective action of migration, nomadism and religion which led to the formation of 'kiths,' or groups of people with a similar language and culture will fascinate you if you like fairly heavy reading."

+ New Repub 113:85 Jl 16 '45 120w

" 'Mainsprings of Civilization' is Professor Huntington's most important book. Into its production has gone an enormous amount of

HUNTINGTON, ELLSWORTH—Continued
reading, analysis and interpretation. No sociologist or historian can afford to ignore it. It is well within the grasp of any educated person, but it is not easy reading. Almost on every page statements are made that will cause the biologist, the geneticist, the historian and the sociologist to raise a skeptical eyebrow." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 19 '45 1400w

"Dr. Huntington's patience, enthusiasm, and determination are monumental. Sometimes these qualities out-run his critical faculty, and readers of this book who are competent to know when he is on solid ground and when he is far out on a speculative limb will hardly fill a jury box." Robert Cook

Sat R of Lit 28:11 Ag 4 '45 1400w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Je '45 330w

"As is characteristic of a Huntington book, this one is packed with interesting data, most of which are intriguingly arranged on the strings of hypothesis. If the strings occasionally seem a trifle thin for their load of facts or if the data themselves do not always appear to be perfectly matched pearls, the total effect is nevertheless an exciting and instructive experience for those interested in human life and culture. . . An inconvenience of presentation may irritate readers intending to use the work for reference. This is the fact that no precise references are given for many of the statistical data, and for others the reader must examine with some care Dr. Huntington's previous works." John Gillin

+ — Social Forces 24:237 D '45 800w

Reviewed by W. B. Kirkham

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 5 '45 700w

"What distinguishes Dr. Huntington's writings is the ingenuity with which he brings the most diverse applications of modern scientific methods to the service of his hypotheses. Sometimes his reader hurries exultantly beside him as he shows the way to that intellectual infinity where parallel lines of thought meet; sometimes a frail and tenuous bridge like that which joins the rings of Californian trees—our only evidence for climatic conditions 1,000 years or so B. C.—with certain events in old world history inspires a reluctance to follow so impetuous a guide; but always Dr. Huntington is stimulating and provocative. This book, to some extent the climax of his life's work, fully reveals his quality."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Ag 25 '45 3100w

"The present work is encyclopedic in scope, summarizing the results of innumerable investigations, by himself and others. The research cited, which is of varying quality and significance, is not critically evaluated. The book is profusely illustrated with maps, charts, and statistical tables, and contains an extensive bibliography and index."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:21 S '45 160w

"It is perhaps unavoidable that the mass of material presented leaves the reader rather breathless or, to put it in other words, there are so many trees that he does not get the sense of the forest. Professor Huntington, conscious of this, promises another study which will include an interpretation of the main trends of history in the light of his research. This will be a gigantic task. However, he has the knowledge and ability, and it is to be hoped that he will continue his work in order that the facts collected in the book can be applied to history. At present the book, valuable as it is—and I regard it as one of the most important books of our time in its field—leaves one with a slight feeling of dissatisfaction." Samuel Van Valkenburg

+ — Yale R n s 35:377 winter '46 700w

HUOT, LOUIS. Guns for Tito. 273p $2.75 Fischer, L. B.

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Yugoslavia 45-3201

In the fall of 1943 Major Huot was given the task of opening supply routes between the Americans in Italy and the Partisans in Yugoslavia. This book is an account, slightly fictionized, of his adventures and experiences during the three or four weeks it took him to accomplish his mission.

Reviewed by David Karno

Book Week p2 Ap 1 '45 300w

Booklist 41:235 Ap 15 '45

Current Hist 8:440 My '45 60w

Foreign Affairs 23:692 Jl '45 30w

"This is fascinating material, and the first comprehensive story of gun-running exploits as two young American officers cut red tape, skip routine regulations, improvise when they cannot follow accepted paths—and perform the impossible of getting not only 'guns for Tito', but practically everything that the Yugoslav Partisans hope for. . . It is a swift pen portrait of some of the Partisan leaders, including Tito himself—and a loving picture of the country and the people, and their warmhearted appreciation. Definitely 'pro-Partisan' in slant."

+ Kirkus 13:126 Mr 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

Nation 160:420 Ap 14 '45 300w

New Repub 112:598 Ap 30 '45 240w

"'Guns for Tito' is true as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. There is a little too much Richard Halliburton about it. But it is pleasant and readable and it deals honestly with the kind of ordinary people who are really not ordinary at all." Walter Bernstein

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 18 '45 1100w

"The story, sometimes too detailed for comfort, is intelligently written and exciting, and reaches its climax in an account of a meeting with the fabled Tito and some of his men that is more informative than a five-foot shelf of Life articles."

+ New Yorker 21:98 Mr 24 '45 90w

"The major's literary product is a bit puzzling. It is quite well written, and the author has conjured up the various materials at hand for what should be a rousing and spine-chilling adventure story. . . But for all that, 'Guns for Tito' falls quite flat. The people never quite come to life, and the places —those smelly Mediterranean ports which writers like William McFee have literally forced upon the reader's senses—never quite take on their three-dimensional shape." G. W. B.

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 13 '45 300w

Time 45:100 Mr 19 '45 20w

"Apparently, 'Guns for Tito' was written shortly after the conclusion of Major Huot's extraordinary adventure; then was held up by censorship for security reasons. Huot is not only a daring soldier, but a most effective writer. His book has some of the quality of 'They Were Expendable' and 'Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo.'" Louis Adamic

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 18 '45 1100w

HURD, EDITH (THACHER) (MRS CLEMENT HURD). Jerry the jeep; il. by Theodore Friday. [32p] $1 Lothrop

45-6994

Picture story book about a little army jeep which objected to mud, a characteristic which got him shifted from one battlefield after another. Then one night in the jungle Jerry had a change of heart and earned a medal. For readers six to nine.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 My 20 '45 230w

"The episodes are simple, humorous and written in a straightforward style. The illustrations by Theodore Friday are attractive, clear and closely linked with the text. Second and third graders will enjoy reading this to themselves; younger children will like it read aloud to them. A lively and timely book."

+ Kirkus 13:221 My 15 '45 130w

"The pictures which show the jeep's discontented, startled or determined countenance during the various stages of his career have a certain ingenuity, but, like the story itself, are lacking in humor and charm." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p20 My 27 '45 130w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 60w

HUSZAR, GEORGE BERNARD DE. Practical applications of democracy. 140p $2 Harper

301.1535 Association and associations. Democracy. Social psychology 45-2848

A discussion of the manner in which the techniques of democracy can be applied to the functions of daily living. The author, who until recently was on the faculty of the European and Asiatic area study of the University of Chicago, advises every citizen to take his part in democracy every day, not merely at the polls. Index.

"A wealth of charts is introduced to show group combinations for participation and other matters. But the reader is left with the feeling that the author pictures a rural or suburban community, that he minimizes the difficulty of making contacts such as he describes in urban centers where the population is heterogeneous and people do not know each other, and where the mobility of the population precludes a real community spirit. In his discussion of educational techniques, one also feels that he relies too much upon the opinion of others, that in his endeavor to secure self-expression in the young he minimizes the importance of obedience and discipline. But in spite of the impracticability of some of his suggestions, the book is a distinct departure from the conventional treatment of democracy because to the author the latter is not a theory but a way of life, and he has in large measure succeeded in setting up interesting patterns of coöperation in groups and practical ways of making democratic institutions dynamic." E. A. Weber

+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:835 Ag '45 500w

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian

Ann Am Acad 241:193 S '45 360w

"Practical and stimulating little book. . . The author demonstrates, with proof, that democracy can be more efficient than authoritarianism. This exposition and indeed the entire book provide an antidote for whatever poisons may still be lingering from the old 'Mussolini-made-the-trains-run-on-time' shibboleth and suchlike graspings of the shadow where there is no substance." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p3 Ap 8 '45 330w

Christian Century 62:521 Ap 25 '45 150w

Management R 34:158 Ap '45 80w

"Mr. de Huszar, who knows centralization when he sees it and also knows that a return to the loose agrarian world of the eighteenth century is impossible, has outlined practical ways and means by which the average citizen, working with small groups of other average citizens, can restore to our complex urban society some of the benefits that were derived from the town meeting. His book is simple, well thought out, and, on the whole, makes excellent sense."

+ New Yorker 21:89 Ap 21 '45 180w

"By taking examples from politics, industry, educational and cultural and community life, Mr. de Huszar has turned out an illuminating, if unpretentious, little book that for many should serve as a guide to the perplexed. It points up, in a simple but pungent fashion, that the most effective campaign against the disintegrations that lead to dictatorship is to unify the individual with its immediate environment, to enable him to ask 'why not do it this way?,' instead of yielding to the pernicious, ever-growing tendency to say 'tell me what to do.'" Herbert Harris

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Je 23 '45 300w

School & Society 61:176 Mr 17 '45 30w

"This book should prove a real challenge to social studies teachers as well as to all citizens who wish to make democracy succeed." P. R. Grim

+ Social Educ 9:333 N '45 350w

Wis Lib Bul 41:109 N '45

HUTCHINGS, ARTHUR J. B. Schubert. (Master musicians; new ser) 233p $2.50 Dutton [6s 6d Dent]

B or 92 Schubert, Franz Peter

This volume in a well-known series is not a revision of an earlier work, but a new biography of Schubert, written by a newcomer to the series. "The earlier 'Master Musicians' volume on Schubert has served its purpose faithfully for nearly forty years, and its revised version made a fairly satisfactory compromise for the last ten. But during the latter period it became increasingly obvious that the standard now aimed at by this series called for a new book. . . Mr. Hutchings's biographical facts are reliable, for he has had the benefit of the latest research, embodied in O. E. Deutsch's new edition of the complete Schubert documents, to be published shortly in an English edition containing much material not to be found in the original German one." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 42:167 Ja 15 '46

Manchester Guardian p3 My 11 '45 60w

"Mr. Hutchings knows his material well, makes capital use of letters and diaries, is interesting on the music, and contrives to say things about the 'Unfinished' and the C major Symphonies that are both original and true. Then why doesn't one enjoy his book more? Partly a question of style." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:359 Je 2 '45 950w

"Schubert has not been well served by his biographers or critics, and Mr. Arthur Hutchings in this new volume which replaces in Dents' 'Master Musicians' series the earlier one, has failed to produce the book that is wanted in English on this truly great composer. His book is marred by jaunty, self-assured remarks. . . But there is here no adequate attempt to present Schubert's life to us, except in its social relations. The quotations from Schubert's own letters are scrappy and incomplete. It is true that our knowledge of Schubert is scanty, but that is all the more reason for our being given every scrap that is available." W. J. Turner

— Spec 174:434 My 11 '45 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p224 My 12 '45 350w

HUTCHINSON, RAY CORYTON. Interim. 186p $2 Farrar [7s 6d Cassell]

45-3707

An English artillery sergeant is the narrator. On a dark stormy night he and his gun crew crashed into a Cumberland country house, and had to spend the night. When he returned later to apologize he found himself caught up into the life of the inmates of the house. His story is of those inmates and what happened during the leave he spent with them.

"For all his absorption in the war, Mr. Hutchinson has not lost his touch as an artist of character, and to my mind Interim is by all odds the best novel England has sent us since the blitz."

+ Atlantic 176:133 Ag '45 600w

"The story is expressed with strength and richness. Its style can be laconic and flintily matter-of-fact or luminously pictorial. It is sometimes wittily grotesque and broadly humorous; many scenes are sharply dramatic. It is always energetic and vibrant, sustained by Hutchinson's dynamic intelligence, refinement and sympathies." Warren Beck

+ Book Week p11 Je 10 '45 500w

Booklist 41:301 Je 15 '45

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught

Canadian Forum 25:96 Jl '45 500w

"Not very much happens, but the story is tense—the author has the gift of understatement, is vivid and perceptive in his approach to life, and knows how to make characters and scenes live. At times the understatement is carried too far and there are occasional lapses

HUTCHINSON, R. C.—Continued
into bad taste, but the story is worth reading because of its clear vision and its dramatic restatement of Christianity."
+ — Cath World 161:282 Je '45 180w

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 12 '45 390w

Kirkus 13:94 Mr 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 31 '45 70w

Reviewed by Philip Toynbee
— New Statesman & Nation 29:245 Ap 14 '45 850w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
N Y Times p3 My 13 '45 1050w

"Mr. Hutchinson not only manages to endow his characters with an interior reality but has a feeling for the subtle connections binding the members of the family together, all of which gives the book genuine distinction."
+ New Yorker 21:86 My 12 '45 140w

"For one who has known Mr. Hutchinson only through his long, powerful novel, 'Testament,' with its crowding life, its dense texture, and its dramatic action, this brief book comes as a somewhat surprising proof of its author's versatility. There is here a modesty of treatment and development, an economical manner, that seems to verge almost on mock-modesty. Scenes and characters are sketched, significances pointed up, and situations lit in passing, with a kind of careless-careful emphasis. But the unpretentious manner is calculated to make 'Interim' one of those books that grow in stature, in retrospect, after we have done with their printed pages; and artistic calculation is, in this instance, notably successful." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 My 19 '45 1000w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 174:320 Ap 6 '45 260w

Time 45:102 My 21 '45 550w

"The flow of the narrative is so skilfully controlled, the grave, thoughtful accents are so evenly measured, that Mr. Hutchinson is likely to have no difficulty in carrying a temperamentally sympathetic reader along with him. And, indeed, there are felicities of thought and manner, comic felicities among them, which will impel even a reluctant reader forward. Nevertheless, something obstinately critical may persist through the appreciation of Mr. Hutchinson's careful effect. However philistine it may appear to fall back upon taste as a determinant of aesthetic value, there is a sound case for preferring in fiction a degree of emotional spontaneity."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 31 '45 1100w

" 'Interim' is purely an adventure of human contacts: it is all mood and the projection of personality, devoid of romance as of melodrama or (in the usual sense) plot. Its earnestness occasionally comes near to being embarrassing: one might almost wish, as when people suddenly tell their life stories to strangers, that a little less had been revealed, since some of it [is] painful and a little of it verges on the mawkish. Yet it reflects, I believe, a true war-time mood and sentiment; and it is written with an uncommon penetration and eloquence." Iris Barry
Weekly Book Review p3 My 20 '45 650w

HUTHEESING, KRISHNA (NEHRU). With no regrets; an autobiography. 160p il $2 Day

B or 92 India—Politics and government
45-6317

Autobiography of the younger sister of Jawaharlal Nehru, in which she tells also the stories of the other members of her famous family, and especially of the part played by her brother in the recent history of India. Illustrated with family photographs.

"Once in a blue moon, there comes a book on India that is fascinating without being polemical. 'With No Regrets,' by Krishna Nehru, is such a work." David Karno
+ Book Week p9 S 16 '45 550w

Booklist 42:16 S '45

Bookmark 6:13 N '45

"Krishna's helpful and sympathetic attitude toward her fellow internes of the criminal class reveals her in an attractive light. She has a cheerful, independent disposition, with a sense of fun; and, even in telling of the series of tragedies as, one after another, members of the family are casualties in the hopeless assault upon entrenched authority, there is no bitterness or recrimination. . . This is a modest little volume, but the great distinction of the household it tells of lends it some genuine interest." H. J. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 30 '45 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45

Kirkus 13:266 Je 15 '45 170w

" 'With No Regrets' is an engaging human document. It reveals clearly the common human soul, common to all under God's heaven irrespective or race, color or creed. It shows the rightful resentment against the bondage imposed by Britain on a proud and ancient race. . . But the book also discloses great lacunae in the social interests of the author. The plight of her own sex under the Hindu social system has apparently not aroused her, and the degradation of the depressed classes has not stirred her sympathy. Nowhere does she offer evidence of a realization that India's fight for freedom is a twofold one. India must strike off both the fetters of foreign masters and the shackles of her own past." Paul Knaplund
+ — N Y Times p7 S 2 '45 1800w

"The author, like her brother, writes with an easy grace, and she has made what she has to say about herself, her family, her upbringing, and her political opinions into a constantly interesting personal narrative that is certainly as important a book as has been published about India this year."
+ New Yorker 21:62 Ag 25 '45 60w

"You feel as you read this remarkable recital that it is all one to [the author], that they will all go to prison again and again, until their health has been destroyed or until their cause has conquered. But curiously enough there is no word of bitterness against the British in her book, nor does the figure of any white person enter her pages. She is solely concerned with her family and its iron determination to suffer as much as is necessary to gain complete Indian freedom." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 S 1 '45 1000w

"It is not a long book, but its relatively few pages reveal as much about the hopes and aspirations of modern India as many a longer and more stridently informative volume. . . This is a very personal narrative, a quiet book, although it is concerned with people whose lives are far from restful. The inner certainty which those must feel who are sure they are on the right path illuminates its pages and what such dedication means in terms of daily sacrifice and struggle is here set down without apology or heroics." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 28 '45 360w

Time 46:99 S 3 '45 800w

"At the head of most chapters Krishna Nehru has chosen to set lines from western poetry. But her manner of writing derives from eastern poetry and she is often confusing as she weaves dreams and fact together in a sort of formless narrative. Hers is not a first rate introduction to India today, but it is a unique footnote, and beautifully illustrated with a sheaf of Nehru family portraits." Ernestine Evans
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 S 9 '45 700w

HUTT, WILLIAM HAROLD. Plan for reconstruction; a project for victory in war and peace. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 328p $4.50 Oxford [18s Routledge]

338.91 Reconstruction (1939-)—Great Britain. Great Britain—Economic policy
[A43-1626]

"After presenting drafts for three Bills, complete in every detail and ready to be introduced into Parliament, Professor Hutt proceeds to explain the plan embodied in these Bills. He first sketches the institutional requirements for efficient conduct of a long total war, and then details a method of undertaking the gigantic task of shifting from war to peace. Professor Hutt maintains that the chief obstacle to progress lies in the restrictionist mentality which characterizes both capital and labor. His plan is accordingly designed to safeguard the community against the effects of this characteristic, and to secure the greatest possible flow of goods for consumption, together with guaranteed economic security for both labor and capital." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Even though the book fails to suggest real improvements in the field of economic policy directed toward the elimination or curtailment of monopolistic practices, it is a careful and sound analysis of all forms of restrictionism, and it is a skilful discussion of some of the most important economic evils of our era." B. F. Hoselitz

+ — Am J Soc 51:345 Ja '46 1350w

"In this skilled product of an experienced economist there is surcease of fiscal panaceas and also of the sort of 'Social Plan' which provoked the famous diatribe of Stephen Leacock. Statesmen can well afford to give this book serious study." Bruce Knight

+ Ann Am Acad 241:192 S '45 850w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Mr 4 '45 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p338 Jl 17 '43 480w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Perennial philosophy. 312p $3 Harper

201 Religion—Philosophy. Religious literature—Collections 45-8579

"An anthology of religious and mystical writings, slightly weighted on the Hindu side, having to do with 'the metaphysic that recognizes a divine Reality substantial to the world of things and lives and minds; the psychology that finds in the soul something similar to, or even identical with, divine Reality.'" New Yorker

Reviewed by William O'Meara

Book Week p3 O 21 '45 450w

Booklist 42:90 N 15 '45

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 62:1384 D 12 '45 1450w

"A book for a religio-philosophical market, for mystics, for students of eastern thought, rather than for the more orthodox religious market."

Kirkus 13:329 Ag 1 '45 190w

"Mr. Huxley's perennial philosophy is at once brand-new, old-hat, and a hodge-podge in which he has put together whatever he wanted to find in his reading. The reader who knows nothing of religion or mysticism will be deceived by this book, and the reader who has some acquaintance with these difficult matters will merely be irritated." Delmore Schwartz

Nation 161:438 O 27 '45 360w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin

New Repub 113:610 N 5 '45 1700w

"It is important to say that even an agnostic, even a behaviorist-materialist, model 1925, can read this book with joy. It is the masterpiece of all anthologies. As Mr. Huxley has proved before, he can find and frame rare beauty in literature, and here, long before Freud, writers are quoted who combine beauty with proud psychology." Signe Toksvig

+ N Y Times p3 S 30 '45 1800w

"Mr. Huxley writes as well as ever, occasionally with brilliance and wit, but now and then, in his absorption with other-worldliness, he soars clean out of sight."

+ New Yorker 21:86 S 29 '45 130w

Reviewed by Sidney Hook

Sat R of Lit 28:12 N 3 '45 1600w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman

Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 700w

"There are certain books that are more interesting as barometers than as works of art or as masterpieces of thought. Mr. Huxley's latest production is such a volume. It is a symptom of a failure of nerve in both the author and in a whole group of intellectuals of our time. It is at once puzzling, absorbing and interesting. It is puzzling that the man who once wrote 'Antic Hay' and 'Point Counter Point,' all skeptical alertness and suspicion of the unctuous and the vague, should now be devoting his talents to the celebration of a way of thinking, all unction, all softness, all scolding moral elevation." Irwin Edman

— + Weekly Book Review p3 O 7 '45 1400w

Wis Lib Bul 41:124 D '45

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Time must have a stop. 311p $2.75 Harper [9s 6d Chatto] 44-7463

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 28 '45 550w

"This is Mr. Huxley's best novel for a very long time. He has recaptured the gaiety, the conciseness, the passionate interest in human beings, in fact the novelist's attitude which seemed to have eluded him. Time Must Have a Stop is admirably constructed; character after character is introduced with casual informality, their repercussions on each other follow with the intricacy of a chess opening. . . Except for too many flashes of the old vulgarity in style Mr. Huxley seems to have been born again." Cyril Connolly

+ New Statesman & Nation 29:228 Ap 7 '45 1200w

"Aldous Huxley, habitually shocking himself more than he shocks us perhaps can yet make us listen to his most exaggerated assaults, because of the unmistakeable and touching humility that inflames them. He is in fact—or so this reviewer has sometimes thought—that extraordinary thing, a nagger who nags generously. . . And if I say that Time Must Have a Stop disappoints, a superficial reason may be because the scolding, strident tone of earlier works is still present in it, and so is the schoolboy desire to cock a snook and see how far the clever author can disgust himself, if no one else. . . But compared with the general run of novels it is indeed a star on a dust-heap—brilliant, bitter, shrewd and in every literary way distinguished and stimulating." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 174:294 Mr 30 '45 700w

"The heart of the book is in Eustace's sudden death, in grotesque circumstances, and in his laughter after death and the laughter of the universe. . . And the conclusion of it all? Religion and politics—politics especially—are silliness and murder. Education is stupidity and destruction. Science produces lies and imbecility. Art alone saves life in our common state of spiritual ignorance and squalor from complete meaninglessness, and art dissolves into nothingness in awareness of the Intelligible Light and unity with the divine Ground. All this is, for Mr. Huxley, the consummation of a deal of cynical japing and gibing in his latest novel. It seems a little odd that so incommunicable a sense of indwelling superiority should lead him to write a novel about human beings at all."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 24 '45 1200w

HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL, and DEANE, PHYLLIS. Future of the colonies. (Target for tomorrow) 64p il $1.50 Transatlantic [4s 6d Pilot]

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies 45-2098

"This is an attempt to put colonial facts and responsibilities before the British people in the briefest and most striking form. A great many of the few pages are therefore given up to well-selected photographs which show many aspects of colonial life, and to diagrams which give quick visual impressions of the relative populations, finances and production of the colonies. Written almost in note form . . . the writers lead up to a summary of objectives which include international control of national administration, a rapid advance towards self-government and vigorous and urgent measures in all social and economic affairs." Times [London] Lit Sup

HUXLEY, J. S.—Continued

Booklist 42:58 O 15 '45

"While there is nothing very new in this book, its general tone is progressive and impatient, but its brevity allows of only very limited space to support the more contentious recommendations. As it is now essential for citizens to understand at least a score of complex problems, it is to be hoped that they may also develop a capacity to make the fullest use of streamlined little books of this kind."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p602 D 16 '44 240w

HYDE, MARIETTA ADELAIDE, ed. Modern biography; 3d ed, rev. by Zuleime Garrett. 324p il $1.32 Harcourt
920 45-2579

"This third edition contains 24 selections, 10 of which are retained from earlier editions on the basis of proved success in the classroom. 'The 14 new selections were chosen for their intrinsic excellence as biography and for their contribution to greater diversity of both vocational interest and national types.' Thus the student is introduced to the achievements and personality of the pioneer, scientist, missionary, artist, soldier, statesman, journalist, naturalist, actor, and novelist." (School & Society) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1926.

Booklist 41:240 Ap 15 '45
School & Society 61:126 F 24 '45 80w

HYND, ALAN. Giant killers. 317p $3 McBride
351.74 U.S. Treasury department. Intelligence unit. Crime and criminals—U.S. Swindlers and swindling 45-5079

Accounts of twelve cases in which the intelligence department of the United States Treasury brought big time criminals to trial because of income tax violations—men who were murderers and swindlers but were too clever to be caught otherwise. Some of the criminals were Al Capone, Tom Pendergast, the Lindbergh kidnapper, and Moe Annenberg.

Booklist 41:333 Jl 15 '45
Kirkus 13:102 Mr 1 '45 150w

"In his eagerness to give full credit to the Giant Killers, Mr. Hynd is coldly harsh with other police agencies that figured in the twelve cases he presents. He tries to add stature to the Giant Killers by reducing the true size of the men who worked with them, which is not honest reporting. This defect is particularly noticeable in the long chapter on the Bruno Hauptmann case." Meyer Berger
N Y Times p14 Ag 19 '45 400w
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 25 '45 440w

"Informative, but not very lively, book." John Rogers
Weekly Book Review p11 Je 3 '45 400w

I

ICKIS, MARGUERITE. Pastimes for the patient; il. by Reba Seldon Esh. 284p $3 Barnes, A.S.
680 Handicraft. Amusements 45-35089

"A collection of occupations—some creative and of varying degrees of physical activity, some passive, and some in the pure amusement category. It is addressed to the individual, but education and recreation leaders as well will find it exceedingly useful." (Pref) Partial contents: Chip carving—ancient and modern craft; Leather work on a shoe string; Photography in your room; Entertaining yourself with music; Weaving; Fly making; Carving in the round; The hooked rug; Games and puzzles.

Booklist 41:296 Je 15 '45
Bookmark 6:8 My '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45
J Home Econ 37:523 O '45 40w

"This seems unusually successful; despite the broad coverage, there is no sense of superficiality, and each subject is handled competently, with adequate information as to tools and equipment."
+ Kirkus 13:240 Je 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by H. D. Meyer
Social Forces 24:130 O '45 300w
Springf'd Republican p6 My 24 '45 170w
Wis Lib Bul 41:82 Jl '45

ICKS, ROBERT JOSEPH. Tanks and armored vehicles; ed. by Phillip Andrews. 264p il $4.75 Essential bks
623.43 Tanks (military science) 45-3382

"Companion volume to Air News Yearbook and Navy Yearbook and like them illustrated with several hundred photographs. Story of the tank and all forms of armored military vehicles from antiquity to the present, but chiefly concerned with the tank, the armored tractor vehicle. The American light tank with its mechanical transverse and stabilizer will outmaneuver any vehicle. Historical chapters followed by design and construction and minute details of equipment given by country. Bibliography." Library J

Booklist 41:283 Je 1 '45
Foreign Affairs 24:160 O '45 20w
Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 15 '45 900w

"There is much of lively popular as well as technical interest in this, the first extended account which the present reviewer has seen of the origins and development of the grim, clanking monsters which have left their mark so deeply upon all the battlefields of the war. Tank information is not too readily available; and here a large amount of it has been assembled in permanent form by an American ordnance officer with a thorough knowledge of the subject." Walter Millis
+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 13 '45 1050w

IDRIESS, ION LLEWELLYN. Dog of the desert; written from the diary of Private VX13091 J. B. Moody, A. I. F. 247p il $2.50 Bobbs
Dogs—Legends and stories 45-9771

Story of an appealing little dog found in the Egyptian desert, during the early days of the war, by a couple of Australian soldiers, and kept as a company mascot. Horrie developed into a bang up fighting dog, learned to detect enemy planes and give the alarm, and also managed a romance on his own. When the orders came to leave all pets before the return to Australia, the company managed to smuggle Horrie along until he reached Australian soil.

"You don't have to love dogs to love this story. You can even hate and fear the animals and still read the book with mounting interest, for while a dog is the principal character, the narrative deals with the emotions of hard-pressed, lonesome, resolute fighting men." Eddie Doherty
+ Book Week p20 N 18 '45 360w
Booklist 42:149 Ja 1 '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"A story for all dog lovers, in spite of heavy Australian slang and style."
+ Kirkus 13:330 Ag 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Alice Vielehr
Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 80w

"The real-life photographs of the wog-dog and his friends will add to the pleasure of the older boys who will enjoy this true account of ordinary soldiers and their mascot." L. R. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 180w

"It is the Australian soldiers, their chaff, their jokes, their buoyant, blatant youth, who make the book not only good to read but well worth keeping."

+ Weekly Book Review p38 D 2 '45 130w

ILIN, M., pseud. See Marshak, I. I.

INFIELD, HENRIK F. Cooperative communities at work. 201p $3 Dryden

334.683 Agriculture, Cooperative. Communism 45-35021

"The author advocates voluntary cooperative communities as a means of postwar rural resettlement in the U.S. and surveys several modern communities for their purpose, social and economic organization, and reasons for success or failure. The communities studied are: the Hutterites, New Llano, Sunrise community, Farm security administration projects, the Mexican ejido, Russian kolkhoz, and Kvutza of Palestine. Basic factors for founding and developing the cooperative communities on a national scale are roughly outlined." Booklist

Reviewed by H. H. Gerth
Am J Soc 51:347 Ja '46 300w

Reviewed by J. O. Hertzler
Ann Am Acad 239:197 My '45 380w

Booklist 41:204 Mr 15 '45

"The documentation is thorough and the writing lucid. This is a valuable book for those interested in postwar resettlement."

+ New Repub 112:566 Ap 23 '45 120w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:20 Je '45 200w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 11 '45 550w

INGALLS, JEREMY. Tahl. 621p $3.50 Knopf

811 45-5161

"American poetry has produced nothing like Jeremy Ingalls' 'Tahl,' an epic account of the search in modern times for the meaning of life. Miss Ingalls, a native of Gloucester and a graduate of Tufts College, began work on 'Tahl' some 12 years ago, and has in the meantime published other distinguished work, had a Guggenheim fellowship, traveled and taught in schools and colleges." Boston Globe

"Though Tahl may be full of strain and misdirected effort, though it is more an aggregate than an organism, though its technique and motivation can easily be torn apart, it is not a book to be sneered at and dismissed. No coward soul could have undertaken it or put it through, and if its metaphysics and symbolism go up in smoke, the human relationships it describes remain firm. On this level the poem is a success." Theodore Spencer

+ — Atlantic 176:147 O '45 480w

"It is not the sheer bulk of the book, unusual in these hasty times, but the tremendous reach of the whole poem, always strictly controlled by the poet, that commands serious attention. It is very readable, but not to be read casually. It is very understandable, but not to be comprehended quickly. It is a world in itself, created by a rich, vigorous, modern mind, and it demands thought from the reader in proportion to the thinking so long and so skillfully built into it by the author." John Holmes

+ Boston Globe Je 13 '45 500w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 42:434 Ag 17 '45 360w

"Whatever the content, the verse is poor, the story sophomoric, not redeemed by recurrent references to the sea, unicorns and thunder."

— Kirkus 13:164 Ap 15 '45 130w

"It is difficult to decide. I do not think this is the great poem of American letters in the twentieth century—if there is any such entity. And I doubt that this poem will become popular: to read it takes too much effort, and the initial rewards may seem not sufficiently impressive. But, equally, I am persuaded that the poem, both for what it is intended to be, and for what it in considerable part is, deserves high praise. It is a poem that grows on one in retrospect, when one looks back over the ground traversed." F. C. Flint

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 24 '45 1550w

"A fantasy of this kind, almost totally unembarrassed by conscious checks and balances, has its value and interest. Miss Ingalls' style unfortunately becomes more and more incoherent and elliptical as the work progresses, so the reader finally almost stifles in the very act of reading."

New Yorker 21:71 Je 23 '45 230w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
Poetry 67:106 N '45 700w

"'Tahl' is a difficult book and it does not seem to be exactly what Miss Ingalls intended it to be, but it is the work of a true poet and it is full of very genuine wisdom very beautifully expressed. Anyone who has the desire and the patience to look for it and who is willing to forget the humiliation of being forced to stir himself a little in the looking will find something that will make him remember and admire Miss Ingalls as a poet. Now that she has gotten 'Tahl' off her chest she should be able to infuse American poetry with a great deal of beauty, a great deal of strength and intellectual vitality." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 Je 23 '45 900w

"Somehow one cannot help feeling that it is too abstruse to be appreciated by many readers. The author's two previous volumes, which she now considers offshoots of 'Tahl,' have been well received, and her promise as one of the best of our younger poets is unquestioned." C. M. Sauer

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 26 '45 420w

"Tahl will not appeal to the general reader because of its difficulty and obscurity. The student of poetry will find it an interesting venture in the creation of a modern epic."

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:12 S '45 200w

"Aside from the lack of distinction in Tahl's language (although he and his friends do a great deal of talking, none is a witty conversationalist), the verse itself shows no musical felicity whatsoever. I conclude that Tahl and his author are young and enthusiastic, and that they have more delight in believing they are talking about music than they have in writing it. The talk is clumsy and a little bit foolish, but in her prologue Miss Ingalls warns the reader that her hero is 'the colt of God,' and colts, as any one will agree, are clumsy creatures." Horace Gregory

Weekly Book Review p4 Je 10 '45 1950w

INGHAM, TRAVIS. Rendezvous by submarine; the story of Charles Parsons and the guerrilla-soldiers in the Philippines; with a foreword by Carlos P. Romulo. 255p $2.50 Doubleday

940.542 Parsons, Charles. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—Philippine islands 45-8622

"One of the most thrilling stories to come out of the war is this account of the planning and execution of guerrilla warfare in the Philippines by a former resident of the island and member of the United States Armed Forces." Library J

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Book Week p14 O 28 '45 600w

Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45

"A story of military and morale building that paid dividends to our advantage, told with the flourish and zest it deserves."

+ Kirkus 13:237 Je 1 '45 170w

"Make this a must book for young or old." Mary Clark

+ Library J 70:634 Jl '45 50w

"There is no love interest in this book. And little glamour. Only a very brave man tackling a backbreaking, very dangerous job and licking it, keeping his temper and his head under trying conditions and living to see come true that for which he had worked and risked his life, the final liberation of the Philippines." Foster Hailey

INGHAM, TRAVIS—Continued
+ N Y Times p10 O 7 '45 550w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 28:26 N 24 '45 450w

Reviewed by G. W. Bragdon
Springf'd Republican p4 O 29 '45 330w

"The story of the guerrillas is one of heroism, persistence and ingenuity. And much of the achievement is due to a mining executive and 'boss stevedore' named Parsons. His story is unique and the telling worthy of the man." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 23 '45 650w

INGRAM, BOWEN. If passion flies. 250p $2.50 Dodd
45-8643

The scene is a Southern town, and the actors are members of its first families. Chief among them are two sisters: Linnie who was calm and gentle, and Theo who was passionate and beautiful. The courses of their marriages did not run smoothly, but shock and a war death finally paves the way for a more peaceful future for both sisters.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Book Week p11 O 14 '45 50w

"Writing lucidly in a style replete with spontaneous imagery, Bowen Ingram has handled a peril-laden theme—the emotional frustration of middle age—with percipience and understanding. And since her setting is a small Tennessee town in the month following Pearl Harbor, Mrs. Ingram has incidentally drawn an acutely observant picture of a mid-South community in wartime." J. F. Smith
+ N Y Times p37 N 4 '45 160w

"The novel is a natural for the lending libraries, whose clientele will be sorry for the sisters and still think, as they no doubt should, that there's something to be said for the husbands." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p22 O 14 '45 130w

INN, HENRY. Hawaiian types; photographed by [the author]; introd. by Andrew W. Lind. 47pl $6.50 Hastings house
779.24 Women in the Hawaiian islands—Portraits. Photography, Artistic 45-6138

"A book of photographs of young Hawaiian women. . . The publisher [calls it] a record of 'the characteristics resulting from the free meeting and mingling of many cultural and racial strains.' " New Yorker

"It may be that the way to make anthropology interesting is to undress it as attractively as possible, but if this sort of thing keeps up, Congress will have to pass a pure-blurb-and-jacket law. Andrew W. Lind, professor of sociology at the University of Hawaii, contributes a two-page introduction, but he seems rather embarrassed about the whole thing."
New Yorker 21:67 Jl 7 '45 120w

"More than a collection of forty-seven large photographs, this is an imposing proof that whatever may be said about mixed marriages, in Hawaii it certainly does something special for beauty."
Weekly Book Review p27 Jl 29 '45 180w

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INSTITUTE FOR ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICERS OF HIGHER INSTITUTIONS. Higher education in the postwar period; comp. and ed. by John Dale Russell. 169p pa $2 Univ. of Chicago press
378.73 Education, Higher. Colleges and universities 45-1581

"This little lithoprinted volume comprises thirteen papers given at the 1944 meeting of the Institute for Administrative Officers of Higher Institutions held in Chicago. Most of the papers are written by college and university administrative officers who explore the possibilities and the probabilities of postwar curriculums, of admissions procedure, and of student counseling. Naturally the veteran comes in for a large share of attention. The general impression is of intelligent men struggling valiantly to cope with a future that is still so uncertain as to make detailed planning impossible." Am J Soc

Reviewed by R. C. Angell
Am J Soc 51:172 S '45 420w

"Higher Education in the Postwar Period, thirteen papers by representatives of all types of educational institutions, offers an excellent summary and survey for the harassed administrator or faculty member. . . The entire book deserves wide distribution among educational administrators, faculty members, and librarians. Particular attention is called to the predictions of major expansions in visual aids and of a tremendous increase in adult education." A. M. McAnally
+ Library Q 15:256 Jl '45 1600w

INSTITUTE OF PACIFIC RELATIONS. 9th CONFERENCE, HOT SPRINGS, VIRGINIA, 1945. Security in the Pacific; a preliminary report of the Conference. 169p $2.50; pa $2 The institute
950 Pan Pacific relations. Reconstruction (1939-)—East (Far East) 45-4382

"This is a partial account of round-table discussions held, by delegates from the Pacific area, at the IPR's January conference. The delegates define the term 'security' broadly to include: the future of Japan; world trade and general standards of living; race and cultural relations between peoples and nations; the future of the colonial areas of Asia and the Pacific; and collective action by all nations to correct the causes of war and prevent aggression. The major value of this useful volume is that it admits a variety of different points of view so that the extreme complexity of the issues is emphasized." New Repub

"The report of this conference is well worth study in revealing the nature and scope of postwar Far Eastern problems and the special interests of the nations around the Pacific. The Institute is to be commended for making available this summary so soon after the Conference and at a time when Far Eastern problems are bound to command more and more attention." W. C. Johnstone
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1032 O '45 550w

"For a thorough orientation in the problems of the Pacific as seen by several scores of our leading authorities in this field, Americans can do no better than to study carefully 'Security in the Pacific.' " M. S. Stewart
+ Nation 160:724 Je 30 '45 150w

Reviewed by Helen Mears
New Repub 113:52 Jl 9 '45 400w

Reviewed by M. S. Farley
Pacific Affairs 18:190 Je '45 1750w

INTERNATIONAL RUBBER REGULATION COMMITTEE. History of rubber regulation, 1934-1943; ed. by Sir Andrew McFadyean. 239p $3.25 Norton [10s 6d Allen, G]
338.47678 Rubber industry and trade 44-10126

"A compilation, by members of the International Rubber Regulation Committee and its staff, of useful information and opinion on the operation of rubber control schemes." Foreign Affairs

"[This] is a disturbing book. It tends to establish the point that no matter how well-intentioned and well-informed the manipulators may be, prices of industrial staples cannot be kept reasonably stable by controlling supply and trying to outguess changes of demand and speculative dealings. It impresses the reviewer with the improbability that we shall be able to coöperate with the English, Dutch, etc., with whom we have to coöperate —those responsible business leaders and civil servants who can undeviatingly pursue self-interest or local interest (to some extent enlightened long-run interest) while complacently believing that they are giving full satisfaction to public interest." B. B. Wallace

Am Econ R 35:197 Mr '45 380w

Foreign Affairs 23:513 Ap '45 30w

"Compiled by members of the International Rubber Regulation Committee, this book should be welcomed by all students of rubber, international commodity agreements, and the economy of the rubber-growing areas of the East. It is the official history of rubber control, and, like all official histories, it is not only an exposition of facts but also an apologia. Once this factor is taken into account by the reader it does not greatly detract from the value of this work. Indeed, it must be admitted at the outset that, in their attempt at justifying the scheme and its administration, the authors have exercised commendable restraint—quite absent, for example, in the history of the International Tin Control Scheme recently published by the Tin Producers Association." K. E. Knorr

+ — Pacific Affairs 18:194 Je '45 420w

IRVINE, HELEN DOUGLAS-. See Douglas-Irvine, H.

IRWIN, MARGARET E. F. (MRS J. R. MONSELL). Young Bess. 274p $2.50 Harcourt [9s 6d Chatto]

Elizabeth, queen of England—Fiction
45-35025

Historical novel based on the childhood and young womanhood of Elizabeth Tudor, later Queen of England. The time covered is from Elizabeth's twelfth year, to the death of her brother Edward VI, in 1553.

"If the present book does not succeed in unlocking the major mystery of Elizabeth's heart, it is, at any rate, an inspired invention in excellent taste and of high interest." Robert Hillyer

+ Atlantic 176:131 Jl '45 180w

Booklist 41:225 Ap 1 '45

Reviewed by G. C. Bartter

Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 350w

Cath World 161:187 My '45 180w

"Admirable as this book is for its tense drama and its brilliant picture of life in the age of the Tudors, it has the defect inherent in the historical novel: it can be taken neither as pure fiction nor as sound history. To be sure, Miss Irwin knows her history. Many of her main characters' speeches are taken directly from their letters or recorded conversations or other original sources. Yet one cannot but suspect that her novelist's instinct for drama has worked at cross-purposes with her conscience as a historian."

+ — Christian Century 62:684 Je 6 '45 320w

"Miss Irwin's characters are drawn in the round, action is swift and exciting, language is quick and warm. In the story are the boisterous gayety and strident color that were sixteenth century Court life in England, and the swirl of intrigue. Much of it is based on documents preserved by the Seymour family, on Elizabeth's letters, and young King Edward's journal." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 22 '45 550w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright

Commonweal 41:592 Mr 30 '45 700w

"It is an enchanting book, with better pace and more color than anything Margaret Irwin has done."

+ Kirkus 13:77 F 15 '45 170w

"Vivid and graceful it makes up in intensity for a partial lack of interpretation of character. Young Bess will go along with author's Mary Montrose and Rupert." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 70:219 Mr 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 D 22 '44 240w

"The precarious quality that the king's ill-health consistently lent to his shadowy reign could be emphasised and the result, in fact, might be an exciting, chill, chiaroscuro book. But Miss Irwin, determined to show that the Tudor royal children and their cousins were as dull and bouncing as any suburban family to-day, misses this opportunity. . . Her characters lack gravity and conviction. Her central figure is indeterminate. Her scandal about Queen Elizabeth very cheap scandal indeed." James Pope-Hennessey

— New Statesman & Nation 28:440 D 30 '44 420w

"Miss Irwin's people, for the most part, seem all dressed up with no place to go. Bess, a prisoner of events, is of course the worst offender. The author has offered her book as a novel, and it must be judged as such. This reviewer came away with the craven conviction that Amber St. Clare would have enjoyed herself much more in the same impasse. Of course, both Bess and Amber knew exactly what they wanted. But Amber would have taken what she wanted, history or no history." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p4 Mr 25 '45 480w

New Yorker 21:97 Mr 24 '45 90w

"'Young Bess' is full of great scenes, deftly and cleverly written—right at the beginning is a fine passage of the great banquet and dance at which Henry receives his death stroke. . . Miss Irwin does not subscribe to the absurd opinion that these men and women of the sixteenth century were wholly different from us." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Mr 31 '45 1100w

"The tone of the book is lavishly hearty and there are sprightly touches of what one may best describe as girlish coarseness. . . But not all is whimsey: the screen needs glamour and Miss Irwin supplies her heroine with a generous dollop, and provides her with three romances suitable for film 'close-ups.'" John Hampson

Spec 173:604 D 29 '44 130w

"Miss Irwin has, as usual, sketched a colorful background and created a warm and lively cast of characters. Not only Elizabeth and Seymour but the sulky, uncle ridden Edward, the drab Princess Mary, kind-hearted Catherine Parr, the Lord Protector and his disagreeable wife, and the little Jane Grey are skillfully drawn. 'Young Bess' is, in short, a really good historical romance which will not disappoint the admirers of 'Royal Flush' and 'The Gay Galliard.'" W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 400w

"Miss Irwin in her previous books has carried off her prize with nice thought and care; her portraiture, whether or not it commands full assent, is studied and telling, her period properties are well chosen and unobtrusive, and she is sensible in sticking to the plain, lettered diction of our own day and making no bones about it. She is at her very best in 'Young Bess.' . . The book is as gracefully written as any of the earlier ones and rather more vivid and psychologically intimate in effect. The portrait of an age is still what for want of a better word must be called romantic; where, one might ask, is the squalor of Tudor England that went with the splendour? But that omission does not impair the force of the sort of picture Miss Irwin has drawn. What is damaging is that history has been so personalized here that almost everything in the way of the great issues and great movements of the age has been left out."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p593 D 9 '44 1000w

IRWIN, M. E. F.—Continued

"It takes the art of a highly creative writer to turn [historical characters] into human beings. Miss Irwin possesses the rare gift of charging her image of the past with the beat of the immediate present." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 25 '45 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

ISHERWOOD, CHRISTOPHER. Prater Violet. 128p $2 Random house

45-9732

A novelette in which the author presents a character sketch of an Austrian-Jew, a movie director, who comes to London to produce a Viennese film-play for a British firm. Christopher Isherwood, English writer, is one of the characters in the tale.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 177:151 Ja '46 330w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
Book Week p5 N 25 '45 550w

Booklist 42:165 Ja 15 '46

"An item for collectors of moderns, but not a book for a wide public."

Kirkus 13:375 S 1 '45 210w

Reviewed by E. L. Lewis
Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 110w

"Christopher Isherwood's 'Prater Violet' is not only a very short novel which is yet the most completely novelistic novel I have read in a long time, but also the most charming novel I have read in a long time which yet reverberates with the widest and deepest meanings. Nor are these the only scores on which Mr. Isherwood's new book contradicts the present-day order of literary things and is a lovely achievement. It is a book written in the author's own person, yet utterly without ego; it is a novel about movie writers which is yet a novel about the life of every serious artist; it is a book without a political moral, but a profound moral-political statement; it is gay, witty, sophisticated, but wholly responsible." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 161:530 N 17 '45 1400w

"The simplicity of the plot is deceptive. This is a complex work, operating on more than one level. It is not merely a fable of the artist in relation to a commercialized mass medium. It deals with the relation of man to other men and to the world around him." Walter Bernstein

+ N Y Times p3 O 28 '45 1250w

"'Prater Violet' is one of his longish short stories, which resembles the episodes in 'Goodbye to Berlin' and keeps up the same high level of excellence. It is perhaps a little more dramatic and more of a deliberate historical parable than the earlier stories were." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 21:97 N 10 '45 400w

"This deceptively slight book has caused something of a critical flurry. There have been varying interpretations of the story and of Bergmann's character and success. Perhaps instead of crediting the author with cosmic meanings we should be content to hail him for having written a book which is never pretentious or boring or empty—which is far more than can be said of most recent productions by his compeers in fiction." T. M. Purdy

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 N 17 '45 550w

Time 46:102 N 5 '45 1450w

"The little book—it is only a long short story—is worth attention not merely because it is a witty and painful exposition of contemporary and ancient evils, but because Isherwood steps out of his role of 'ventriloquist's dummy' to speak intimately of fundamental things about the position in this evil world of the responsive and compassionate intellectual, about the reason for living, about the possibility of the renunciation enjoined by mystics and some philosophers, about love. On the last-named subject he writes more like a sophisticated school-boy than like a mature man, but his candor is always grateful and sometimes provocative." Babette Deutsch

+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 11 '45 1350w

ISSERMAN, FERDINAND MYRON. This is Judaism. 238p $2.50 Willett

296 Jews—Religion 45-1689

The purpose of this book by an American rabbi is to "state the principles of Reform Judaism. . . Part I deals with the historic beginnings of Judaism and indicates acceptance of the tenets of biblical criticism. . . Part II outlines the fundamental tenets of prophetic religion, its belief in God, its view of man, its concept of prayer, immortality, etc. There is also a section on Jesus, which will surprise only those not familiar with Reform Judaism. Part III deals with the application of prophetic religion to life and presents attitudes and views on social issues which have frequently been endorsed by the Central Conference of American Rabbis and can be found in the reports of its Commissions on Social Justice, International Peace, and Justice and Peace." (Foreword)

"Primarily, the book is written for laymen, both Jews and Christians; but the Christian minister and churchman should be especially grateful for its publication." L. C. Snyder

+ Christian Century 62:302 Mr 7 '45 1400w

"The scholarly and distinguished rabbi gives the public a book that tells a great deal that the public does not, but should undoubtedly know about the Jew. . . It is a flaming challenge to all those who are inclined to belittle one of earth's greatest people." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 159:14 Mr 15 '45 240w

IVES, VERNON. Turkey; il. by Rafaello Busoni. (Lands and peoples ser) 25p $1 Holiday

915.6 Turkey—Juvenile literature 46-181

Brief introduction to modern Turkey, showing the changes which have taken place in politics, education, and social life during the last twenty-five years.

"Vernon Ives has written this brief but comprehensive and thoroughly interesting history of Turkey."

+ Book Week p24 N 11 '45 180w

"Thoughtful, interesting."

+ Kirkus 13:472 O 15 '45 60w

"Though brief, this book is thoughtfully and constructively written. . . Uniform with others in this series, valuable for illustrations and map endpapers by Busoni. For ages ten to fourteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 70w

IVEY, JOHN ELI. Channeling research into education; prepared for the Committee on southern regional studies and education. 187p $1.50; pa $1.25 Am. council on educ.

307 Education—South. Educational research. South—Economic conditions

E45-52

"This little volume is the report of the Committee on Southern Regional Studies and Education of the American Council on Education and is edited by its executive secretary. Its purpose has been to determine how research on southern resources and problems can be channeled into the educational process, 'thus stimulating research findings to become a vital factor in the thinking and action of the region.' How, for example, can Vance's Human Geography, Odum's Southern Regions, the publications of the National Resources Planning Board, of experiment stations, boards of health, and departments of education be made more useful?" Library Q

Reviewed by H. C. Nixon
Am Pol Sci R 38:1243 D '44 260w

"There is sound advice here for southern states. Most of the recommendations are within their reach. They are applicable as well to other regions. The monograph deserves wide distribution." B. E. Powell

+ Library Q 15:162 Ap '45 1000w

"In a time when change is running faster than investigation and when 'practical' and pseudo-scientific or magical formulations are gaining ascendancy through the techniques of advertising and propaganda there is genuine need for Channeling Research Into Education. It may be an entering wedge to crack educational inertia and lead to changed conceptions and policy in a lagging institution. However, the basic assumption and narrow orientation of the book are serious faults. It fails to recognize that it is more important to 'translate' the conceptions and frames of reference used by science for interpreting facts than facts themselves." W. J. Hayes

+ — Social Forces 23:479 My '45 1000w

J

JACKSON, JESSE. Call me Charley; il. by Doris Spiegel. 156p $2 Harper 45-9807

To Arlington Heights came a colored boy. This is the story of his ups and downs, his friendship with Tom Hamilton, his problems in the local public school and of his adventures in living among some who were intelligently friendly—and some who were not.

"Jesse Jackson tells a rousing good story and he knows what boys are like and how they talk. The author takes no soapbox, does no preaching. But the hurt and bewilderment of a boy who is treated differently because of the color of his skin gets across to the reader with an impact he is not likely to forget."
+ Book Week p3 N 11 '45 230w
Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45
Kirkus 13:423 S 15 '45 90w

"Recommended." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 70w

"Will arouse the sympathy and sharpen the understanding of 10 to 14 year olds." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 80w
New Yorker 21:122 D 8 '45 10w

"A straight story of American boy-life, it is told largely in dialogue; the young author, whose ear is uncommonly sensitive, reproduces the staccato touch and distinctive turn of Negro speech without attributing dialect to educated Northern Negroes. His book is a contribution to understanding."
+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 11 '45 450w
Wis Lib Bul 41:130 D '45

JACKSON, JOSEPH HENRY, ed. Portable murder book. 570p $2 Viking
343 Murder. Crime and criminals 45-8414

Anthology of eighteen "real" murder stories. Contents: The man who was too clever, by Edmund Pearson; The cruise of the murder ship, by Milton Mackaye; They put him where potatoes would not freeze, by Richard Dempewolff; The mystery of the hansom cab, by Alexander Woollcott; The Wilkins case, by Angelica Gibbs; Belle of Indiana, by S. H. Holbrook; A memorable murder, by Celia Thaxter; The master of the murder castle, by J. B. Martin; Hell benders or the Story of a wayside tavern, by Edmund Pearson; Poison in the pantry or Dr. Pritchard revisited, by William Roughead; The self-help of G. J. Smith, by William Bolitho; Constance Kent, by John Rhode; The murder of Julia Wallace, by Dorothy Sayers; The red and white girdle, by Christopher Morley; Murder for elimination: The de Quérangais, by F. T. Jesse; The philanthropy of Fritz Haarmann, by William Bolitho; Susi Olah's flypaper, by Joseph Gollomb; The Dunedin murders, by H. B. Irving.

Book Week p15 S 16 '45 270w
Booklist 42:58 O 15 '45
Kirkus 13:311 Jl 15 '45 120w

"This new collection and Pocket Books' True Crime Stories constitute the best anthologies so far published in the absorbing field of actual criminal cases."
+ New Repub 113:358 S 17 '45 90w

"This is a brilliant selection, and most of its chapters are set down by writers with their heart in their work. If you have an appetite for murder this is unquestionably your dish, rich and red and full-flavored—to be more exact, it is an elaborate meal of many courses, chosen with the taste of the true connoisseur in crime." Russel Crouse
+ N Y Times p3 S 23 '45 1550w

"An especially good job of its kind."
+ New Yorker 21:90 S 15 '45 80w

"Good stuff."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 22 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p23 S 16 '45 270w

JACKSON, MYRTLE STRODE-. See Strode-Jackson, M. B. S.

JACOBS, HELEN HULL. Laurel for Judy. 211p $2 Dodd
45-7530

Story of a teen-age California girl whose main interests in life, outside her devoted family, were tennis, her beloved horse, and a boy named Gordon. When she concentrated on tennis and won the United States Junior tennis championship, Gordon lost out. The book, by an American tennis champion now a lieutenant in the Waves, contains much information on winning the hard way. For older girls.

Kirkus 13:437 O 1 '45 90w

"You couldn't, of course, ask for a more authentic story of the making of a girl tennis champion than one by Lieutenant Jacobs." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p12 N 25 '45 130w
Sat R of Lit 28:68 N 10 '45 40w

"There is the ring of experience in all advice offered Judy by those who have been through it before, even the diet Dave worked out for himself which he admits may have been screwy but he 'figured it out that way.' The collapse of her admiration for Gordon, who asks her out the night before a final, and the masterly way she calls him down over the telephone, are so lifelike you can hear her. In fact, the whole story is lifelike, and the tennis scenes like watching it." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 30 '45 400w

JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS, ed. Chemistry and technology of food and food products. v2 890p il $10.50 Interscience
641.1 Food—Analysis (44-6722)

"Volume I of this ambitious work [Book Review Digest, 1944] dealt with the fundamental aspects of chemistry in relation to foods in general and with the composition, standards and particular chemical relations of separate food groups. The present volume, not so chemical in treatment, comprises discussions of unit operations of food processing, sanitary and quality control, preservatives and production methods for common foods." Am Chem Soc J

Reviewed by A. G. Woodman
Am Chem Soc J 67:696 Ap '45 300w

"Despite the fact that the book was written by co-authors, it has a free, easy-reading style. Volume [two] should be useful to every food technologist." H. W. von Loesecke
+ Chem & Eng N 23:670 Ap 10 '45 1300w
(Review of v 1-2)

"For a general overview of the broad general field of food technology, this book and its companion volume should prove very useful. They cover a wide range of plant engineering, biological, and biochemical interests. So far as the reviewer's knowledge justifies a judgment in this very inclusive area, the material presented appears to be adequate and up-to-date." C. H. Bailey
+ J Phys Chem 49:261 My '45 500w

JACOBY, GERHARD. Racial state; the German nationalities policy in the protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia. 355p $3 Inst. of Jewish affairs

940.53437 World war, 1939—Czechoslovakia. Jews in Czechoslovakia 45-1069

"A detailed description of the results of the Nazis' attempt to impose their racial doctrines in western Czechoslovakia." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by Paul Honigsheim
Am J Soc 51:259 N '45 360w

"Mr. Jacoby's book is limited to a description of the Czech and Jewish tragedies resulting from the legal methods used by the German rulers and locusts; being written by a jurist and not by a historian and therefore not being based on extralegal sources, the treatment of the subject is necessarily incomplete. Nevertheless, Mr. Jacoby's book is recommended to historians of Hitlerite Germany and Europe for its solid documentation, for its clear, well-ordered, and logical exposition, and for the uncompromising legal convictions of the author." Vlastimil Kybal
+ Ann Am Acad 240:156 Jl '45 1050w

"Jacoby's 'Racial State' is frankly written from the Czech and Jewish point of view and the author's evidence convinces me that in this case it is the view of humanity. He has sifted his tremendous material well and carefully and fulfills all requirements of a scholar in his notes and his bibliography. Even the careful reader of magazines and reporters' and refugees' odysseys will find a tremendous amount of substantiated facts that are widely unknown." H. A. Reinhold
+ Commonweal 41:451 F 16 '45 650w

Foreign Affairs 23:519 Ap '45 20w

Reviewed by Aurel Kolnai
Harvard Law R 58:747 My '45 1050w

"A number of useful statistics, official documents and a long, careful bibliography increase the value of this timely and important book." Oscar Jászi
+ Pol Sci Q 60:591 D '45 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:35 Mr '45 280w

JAEGER, EDMUND CARROLL. Source-book of biological names and terms; il. by Merle Gish and the author. 256p $3.50 Thomas, C.C.

574.03 Botany—Terminology. Zoology—Terminology 44-7966

"Fully 12,000 elements from which scientific biological names and terms are made are alphabetically listed in this publication, which will contribute to an easier remembrance of the correct spelling of such terms and a more facile understanding and appreciation of their use in speaking as well as writing." School & Society

Booklist 41:193 Mr 1 '45

School & Society 60:160 S 2 '44 60w

JAEGER, ELLSWORTH. Wildwood wisdom. 491p il $2.95 Macmillan

796.54 Camping. Outdoor life Agr45-100

A manual for the amateur woodsman or camper. Covers clothing, packing, tents and camp sites, camp cooking and sanitation, hunting, etc. Illustrated with many line drawings showing how American Indians and frontiersmen fashioned their clothing, built their shelters, made fire and followed woodland trails.

Reviewed by Leonard Dubkin
Book Week p5 F 4 '45 220w

Booklist 41:183 F 15 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"Mr. Jaeger has spent many summers in the outdoor world and has been a leader of woodcraft groups throughout the country. His wise book, with its multitude of detailed drawings, advises the camper about clothes and equipment, fire making and shelters, cookery and sanitation. It includes also clear information about useful animals and birds, edible and poisonous plants and protection against insect bites. A chapter on the woods in winter closes this valuable book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:112 Mr '45 120w

"Invaluable for Boy Scouts, summer camp libraries, similar organizations."
+ Kirkus 13:9 Ja 1 '45 170w

"Comprehensive and readable handbook." Anita Moffett
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 29 '45 280w

Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 15 '45 120w

Wis Lib Bul 41:36 Mr '45

JAFFE, PHILIP J. New frontiers in Asia; a challenge to the west. 375p $3 Knopf

950 Asia—Politics. Reconstruction (1939-)—Asia 45-9686

"Mr. Jaffe, editor of the magazine Amerasia and a long-time student of Far Eastern affairs, outlines a challenging plan for creating world prosperity under the present system of finance capitalism. Briefly, his scheme is to develop—in the industrial, not the colonial, sense—the backward nations of Eastern Asia, chiefly India and China, and thus advance the standard of living in those areas so that world buying power will keep world productive power fully employed." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by Mark Gayn
Book Week p10 N 25 '45 650w

Booklist 42:126 D 15 '45

"Mr. Jaffe is editor of Amerasia, in which the Left Wing point of view on the Orient has been presented with force and vigor for the past nine years. His political viewpoint is clearly indicated in his book, in which he is bitterly critical of the British, is by no means enthusiastic over American policies; it makes only friendly references to the Soviet Union and writes of the Chinese and Indian Communists with a warm regard. While his prejudices should be kept in mind by readers, his book is persuasive and well documented." Floyd Taylor
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 D 22 '45 750w

Kirkus 13:483 N 1 '45 150w

"Mr. Jaffe's analysis is both sound and illuminating. The only conspicuous omission, from this reviewer's standpoint, is the author's failure to give more space to the implications of American and British Far Eastern policies with respect to the system of political democracy which both profess to cherish." M. S. Stewart
+ — Nation 161:668 D 15 '45 330w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 113:873 D 24 '45 750w

"Mr. Jaffe's book reflects a considerable and scholarly research. The charge made against him by some reviewers that he hasn't the background for such a study because he has made only one trip to the Far East, and that many years ago, is not a sound one. But those who have charged Mr. Jaffe in other of his writings with being a Russophile and with writing too close to 'the party line' will find considerable evidence in this book to substantiate their claim." Foster Hailey
+ — N Y Times p6 D 23 '45 800w

"The author argues his case convincingly and furnishes impressive data; only the most virulent imperialist, the most didactic Marxist, and the most ferocious Black Dragon are likely to disagree with him."
+ New Yorker 21:136 D 1 '45 120w

"The opinion of any reviewer of Philip Jaffe's provocative arraignment of Asia's political and economic ills will bear little weight with the reader. It is an ably conceived presentation of what the American leftist school seeks for Asia. Consequently, if you already agree with the author, you will sing the praises of 'New Frontiers in Asia.' If you disagree, you will be irritated into apoplectic denunciation." John Goette

Sat R of Lit 28:22 D 1 '45 1220w

"Mr. Jaffe's penetrating study is such a highly valuable contribution to our understanding of India and China, of post-war Japan and of British and Russian policy in Asia that it should have the widest possible reading." F. R. Dulles
+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 16 '45 850w

JAGENDORF, MORITZ ADOLF, comp. 20 non-royalty mystery plays. 318p $3 Greenberg 812.08 45-3587

Twenty plays, featuring mystery, detective, or supernatural subjects. Suitable for home, club, or school amateur production.

Booklist 41:283 Je 1 '45

"This is a lively if not particularly distinguished collection of scripts dealing with mystery, always a popular subject. . . Recommended for drama collections, particularly schools."
+ Library J 70:267 Mr 15 '45 70w

JAMES, HENRY. Short stories of Henry James; selected and edited, with an introd. by Clifton Fadiman. 644p $3 Random house
45-9328

Seventeen of the short stories of Henry James, arranged chronologically. Contents: Four meetings (1877); A bundle of letters (1879); Louisa Pallant (1888); The liar (1888); The real thing (1890); The pupil (1891); Brooksmith (1891); The middle years (1893); The altar of the dead (1895); "Europe" (1899); The great good place (1900); The tree of knowledge (1900); The tone of time (1900); Mrs. Medwin (1902); The birthplace (1903); The beast in the jungle (1903); The jolly corner (1909).

Reviewed by Bergen Evans
Book Week p6 O 28 '45 450w
Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45

"The editor's introduction and the short commentaries supplied after some (not all) of the stories are informative and to the point, though the praise is generally pitched in too high a key. . . But in the main Mr. Fadiman's remarks are sound enough, provided that one transposes them into a minor key. There is a little irony in the fact that he is at his most persuasive when he draws up an indictment against Henry James. His answer to the indictment is less convincing." S. C. C.
Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 12 '46 900w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 43:364 Ja 18 '46 550w
Kirkus 13:303 Jl 15 '45 130w

"Mr. Fadiman has 'done well' by James's shorter fictions; and he himself is not the least interesting, or the least Jamesian, of the characters to be met with in the pages of this book." Margaret Marshall
+ Nation 161:434 O 27 '45 1150w

"This is the third anthology of James' work that has recently been published, but only two of the stories in Mr. Fadiman's selection also appear in Philip Rahv's 'The Great Short Novels of Henry James,' and only two in F. O. Matthiessen's edition of 'Stories of Writers and Artists.' All the major stories are here, and all stories that represent the important types and themes, arranged chronologically to cover a period of forty-two years, and to give the reader a richening, ripening sense of James' formal and spiritual progress." R. G. Davis
+ N Y Times p1 O 21 '45 2000w

"A first-rate introduction to James and a valuable supplement to the small body of the writer's work that has, after so long an absence, been returned to print in the past two years."
+ New Yorker 21:97 O 27 '45 230w

Reviewed by H. S. Canby
Sat R of Lit 28:9 O 20 '45 1200w

"The seventeen short units of fiction that Mr. Fadiman has chosen from the eighty more or less that Henry James wrote are unhackneyed choices. We miss some titles that have had a long career in anthologies. But that is all to the good. These stories contrive to exhibit the curve of the author's development from the relatively uncomplicated 'Four Meetings' (1877) to the manifold implications and interfoldings of 'The Beast in the Jungle' (1903) and 'The Jolly Corner' (1909). Mr. Fadiman has supplied discreet program notes by means of which a reader may check his interpretation of each story with that of an expert." G. F. Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 6 '46 380w

JAMES, HENRY DUVALL, and MARKLE, LEWIS EDWIN. Controllers for electric motors; a treatise on the modern industrial controller with typical applications to the industries. 324p il $3.50 McGraw 621.3174 Electric controllers 45-6063

"This volume incorporates parts of James's Controllers for Electric Motors, Van Nostrand, 1926 (now out of print), which are still applicable, and deals at length with recent developments in methods and design. It aims to give technical students and operating engineers a general idea of the various types of control apparatus and their functions. The discussion includes electron-tube control, magnetic contactors, the time-limit method of motor acceleration, the development of plugging control, motor-generator control of motor voltage, types of resistors, and manual controllers. There is a list of five references for supplementary reading." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45
Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:22 Ap '45

JAMES, MARQUIS. The Cherokee strip; a tale of an Oklahoma boyhood. 294p $3 Viking
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-8200

"Marquis James, who has twice won the Pulitzer Prize for biography—with his lives of Sam Houston and Andrew Jackson—here tells the story of his boyhood in the pioneer town of Enid, Okla., a story which ends with the night when he bought a ticket for Kansas City and set out, with high hope and much inward misgivings, to see the world and amount to something." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by J. A. Brandt
Book Week p3 S 23 '45 550w
Booklist 42:55 O 15 '45

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 62:1320 N 28 '45 450w

" 'The Cherokee Strip' is not merely a story of early days in Oklahoma Territory, its development and admission to Statehood in 1907 and subsequent evolution; it is the personal story of the return of the native and the education of a writer." A. H. W.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 15 '45 300w

"All who know Marquis James's delightful prose style, from reading his wonderful biographies, 'The Raven' and 'Andrew Jackson,' will expect much from any work of his. It is my opinion that all expectations will be realized by reading the 'Cherokee Strip.' It is written with delightful charm and skilful simplicity, and is, indeed, an epic of the last cattle kingdom."
+ Commonweal 43:47 O 26 '45 2200w

"Here is the perpetual variety of small town Oklahoma characters, incidents, changes; the self-confidence of an American boyhood; in honest, winning revelation."
+ Kirkus 13:292 Jl 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by E. N. Nichols
Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 161:438 O 27 '45 240w

Reviewed by O. D. Duncan
New Repub 113:685 N 19 '45 360w

JAMES, MARQUIS—Continued

"As a piece of writing 'The Cherokee Strip' is less than distinguished. It will not rank among the important memoirs of the last of the frontier. The historian-newspaper man in Mr. James makes good copy of the lives and legends of others; it does not prevent him from being dull for pages at a stretch when he is dwelling in extensive detail on himself when adolescent, his school days, his life as a boy soldier, etc. It is when his remembering eye looks afield at the stirring scene around him that 'The Cherokee Strip' has the undeniable interest of good Americana." J. K. Hutchens

+ — N Y Times p5 O 7 '45 450w

"A wholly satisfactory book that is more than an amiable tour de force."

+ New Yorker 21:90 S 15 '45 100w

"This reviewer, who was himself born in Enid, Okla., and was a fellow resident of the town with Marquis James (although too young to know him) has read nearly everything ever written on the Cherokee Strip, and to him this is the best book by all odds ever done on it, not only as a record, but as sheer reading pleasure." P. I. Wellman

+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 O 20 '45 1050w

"This is a rich, colorful and heartwarming book and one of the best adventures in pleasant reading to come out of the days when the Southwest was young." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 700w

Time 46:100 S 24 '45 1100w

"Mr. James's recollections, to be blunt about it, are superb. No other book of childhood reminiscences published in recent years, with the possible exception of H. L. Mencken's 'Happy Days,' is comparable to it in simple charm, perfect taste and richness of detail." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 16 '45 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:112 N '45

JAMES, SIR WILLIAM MILBURNE. Admiral Sir William Fisher. 159p il $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Fisher, Sir William Wordsworth. Great Britain. Navy—History A44-574

"Admiral Sir William Fisher was, perhaps, the most distinguished of the flag officers who came to their high commands in the inter-war period. . . In this short study the family background is skilfully and delicately indicated, and the reader can glimpse both the power and the simplicity of the admiral's personality. The fragments of correspondence bring back the fullness and directness of Admiral Fisher's life as do the admirable photographs. In a sense Sir William Fisher was unlucky in his period, for he was too junior to hold a sea command in the war of 1914-18, and he died aged sixty-two, worn out by the pressure at which he worked, in 1937. He gained his promotions early, and his career went forward with great smoothness. . . His great work was done as Director of the Anti-Submarine Division of the Admiralty from May, 1917, until the close of the war. During his later career Admiral Fisher was Deputy Chief of the Naval Staff and Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet, holding the latter post from 1932 until March, 1936, a period which covered the crucial months of the Abyssinian war. The second part of the book recaptures most successfully the atmosphere of those years in which W. W. Fisher was so great a power in the Mediterranean." Spec

Foreign Affairs 23:520 Ap '45 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 31 '43 120w

"At first glance it seems a little work written only for the record. And yet it says—through the character and career of Fisher—a good deal about the British Navy, about tradition and loyalty and intelligence. Within it he was a symbol of its best." James Fuller

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 28 '45 160w

"This little book is a tribute of friendship, and reflects throughout with great fidelity all the most attractive elements in the naval life. . . In this book the life of the contemporary Navy is well sketched in, but everything is subordinated to the singularly straightforward presentation of a great and engaging character. The admiral's constant humour, some of it dated, is well brought out; we are shown something of his mastery of his profession." David Mathew

+ Spec 171:532 D 3 '43 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p510 O 23 '43 2800w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). Journal of Mary Hervey Russell. 243p $2.50 Macmillan

45-1695

Purports to be the journal of the granddaughter of Mary Hervey, of The Lovely Ship (Book Review Digest, 1927), and the daughter of Sylvia Russell of The Captain's Wife (Book Review Digest, 1939). It pictures the effects of war upon a sensitive English writer.

"This journal is no mere narrative of external events. It is a subjective chronicle of life, as many-faceted, as the endless interest of a highly intellectual and warmly human woman. At first the entries seem unrelated, touching as they do such a multiplicity of subjects and peoples and places, but soon both a pattern and a personality emerge." Edith Roberts

+ Book Week p3 F 18 '45 550w

Booklist 41:237 Ap 15 '45

"There is meat in this book, the kind that is harder to get than that which only a long search, money and red stamps will bring you. If you are interested in literature, this is the kind of meat you want. We must remind you, though, that there is no meat in Yorkshire pudding. Miss Jameson's style ranges from exasperatingly obscure to amazingly lucid. She can be as difficult to read as her Yorkshire ancestors were to get along with, but if you can solve the difficulties, you will be rewarded." E. A. Laycock

+ — Boston Globe p13 F 7 '45 480w

"The book is not easy reading. The style is more involved than Miss Jameson employed in her best novels, but it has a tang that keeps the reader coming back for more and exerting himself to digest it." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 F 17 '45 850w

"There are some gems of writing, sensitive, perceptive, but as a whole, it seems confused, amorphous, unrealized. Limited market."

— + Kirkus 12:379 S 1 '44 210w

"A sense of urgency and of responsibility as a writer have led to this effort to prove the need for safeguarding intellectual and spiritual life and for keeping alive human loyalties. Intimate contact with and discerning analysis of persons and places in Europe, in France above all, before the war, lend depth and breadth to the writer's reflections. Distinguished writing which may not reach a mass audience. Recommended." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 69:762 S 15 '44 100w

Manchester Guardian p3 My 30 '45 420w

"There is very little of the sensational in this narrative. The reader will find no inside information, caught from some pompous and indiscreet diplomat, of what is going on in the chancelleries of Europe. When literary figures, like H. G. Wells, enter the story they are usually afforded the tact of anonymity. The few scenes in which the moral depravity of the fascist-minded before the war arouses the author's distaste are discreetly handled. This approach brings the comment down to the level from which many of us view the events of public life." E. B. Burgum

+ N Y Times p1 F 11 '45 1150w

"The journal is Miss Jameson's own, and while it shows her to be an intelligent and sensitive person, with an interest in modern poetry, abstract art, and the intricacies of the English language, it will be of interest only to the author's more ardent admirers."

New Yorker 20:84 F 10 '45 100w

"'The Journal of Mary Hervey Russell' is not easy reading. The literary style, notwithstanding the clarity of sensuous images and the perfection of its phrase, is often excessively cerebral. Parts of the book, too, seem curiously unrelated. . . The book is really a psychological study, the desperately sincere and painful record of a highly sensitive personality, acutely aware of the trouble of its times and its own obligations, self-condemnatory to the point of spiritual flagellation. Because of its highly esoteric quality it will not have a wide appeal, but Miss Jameson's many admirers will find it profoundly moving and intellectually provocative." Sara Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 Mr 3 '45 650w

Reviewed by C. M. Sauer
Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 4 '45 750w

Time 45:100 Mr 5 '45 30w

"The book wants something of unity, it exemplifies a little too faithfully the disproportion of the romantic temper of our day, but for all that is a most sensitively written and affecting piece of work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p212 My 5 '45 900w

"It is no book to read quickly. Its matter is subtle, intimate and thought provoking. Obliquely set down in entries dated from many places, Bordeaux, Prague, London, Harlech—it is a confession of all that has beset a woman and an artist during and between two wars, in what we know now to be a mighty crisis of human readjustment. The exhilarating ride of narrative is not the reward of turning these pages, nor the easy sequence of chronological reflections. Miss Jameson has decanted anguished memories, fears that have come true, self-pity and self-punishment, and startling moments of political presentiment and revelation of enduring beauty." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p5 F 11 '45 1100w

JANEWAY, MRS ELIZABETH (HALL). Daisy Kenyon. 277p $2.50 Doubleday
45-9584

Study of an emotional tangle involving two couples. For eight years Daisy Kenyon, a successful illustrator was the mistress of Dan O'Mara, a corporation lawyer. They could not marry because Dan was already married, and had two young daughters who adored him. Then Peter Lapham and Daisy fell in love, and Dan was an outsider, for Peter and Daisy married. The book ends with Peter in the army, and Daisy on her way to Dakota, where he is stationed.

Reviewed by Mona Van Duyn
Book Week p8 O 28 '45 550w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 43:78 N 2 '45 260w

"Sound study of emotional currents—a convincing picture of a frequently encountered situation—nothing salacious here, but the frank facing of existing facts in extramarital relations may be distasteful to some of your conservatives."

Kirkus 13:377 S 1 '45 250w

" 'Daisy Kenyon' rings with all the hollowness of pure slickness. Only when one recalls that moral earnestness is itself becoming more and more the commercial taste, that sensibility is more and more a form of present-day slickness, does one begin to realize that perhaps the distance between Mrs. Janeway's first and second novel is not so great as appears on the surface." Diana Trilling

— Nation 161:472 N 3 '45 420w

"The novel lacks a unifying theme. If Miss Janeway was out to prove the superiority of marriage over a liaison, she needed a stronger proof. There is little conviction in the swoonings of Daisy and Peter or in their bright, showy, brittle dialogue, and Peter is a wraith. If she wanted merely to depict character she has been rather unsuccessful. Her most successful creation, the neglected Lucile O'Mara, recalls the more prosperous Irish of James T. Farrell's stories. It is possible, of course, that this talented novelist is going to be satisfied to accept a series of events as a novel." Robert Molloy

N Y Times p6 O 28 '45 480w

"If you read Mrs. Janeway's wholly satisfying first novel, 'The Walsh Girls,' you are bound to be disappointed in this successor. . . This is not merely a glib and foolish little story but an amazingly pretentious one, since it is the author's intention—she describes her book as 'An Historical Novel, 1940-1942'—to offer the highly specialized problems of these three people as typical of the period."

— New Yorker 21:101 N 3 '45 120w

"Miss Janeway's book gets nicely over the hurdle of being the second novel after a brilliant first. It fulfills the promise of 'The Walsh Girls,' and it illustrates, as did that first book, the special qualities of its author's talent. There are warmth and insight, the drama of conflicting personalities, the creating of atmosphere and setting, and in the main, expert characterization." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:12 N 10 '45 700w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 240w

Time 46:106 N 19 '45 230w

"Besides the excellence of her portrayal of her main characters Mrs. Janeway does a fine job in delineating those who play minor roles in the book. One thing only bothers this reviewer and it is admittedly a trivial complaint: This is so notably a psychological study that one wonders why it is labeled 'an historical novel, 1940-1942.' " Rose Feld

+ — Weekly Book Review p2 O 28 '45 1000w

"Mrs. Janeway has the professional touch in abundance. She keeps her story moving, her psychology is convincing, her mastery of the New York and Washington milieu complete. But there is a distressing cheapness, a vulgarity that does not lie only in word or action, in her book. It is caused, I think, by her lack of either a satiric or a brutally realistic point of view." Orville Prescott

— + Yale R n s 35:383 winter '46 400w

JANIS, SIDNEY. Abstract and surrealist art in America. 146p il pl $6.50 Reynal

759.915 Painting—U.S. Art, Abstract. Surrealism
44-51180

"There has long been a need for a book on abstract and surrealist art in this country. Sidney Janis, author of They Taught Themselves [Book Review Digest, 1942] . . . discusses concisely, and entertainingly, prominent individual artists. He traces the development of this new art from its European origin to its present flourishing status here. He has selected one hundred distinctive paintings which are reproduced in ninety full-page halftones and ten full-color plates. Following most of these paintings is brief interpretive comment by the original artist." Publisher's note

"For the uninitiated the almost passionate insistence on technical terminology and nomenclature is tiring and confusing. However, in all fairness to Janis, there are certain sections of his highly condensed descriptive text that come off brilliantly. The chapter devoted to Sources in 20th-Century European Painting is the best short analysis of this material that I have found. His explanation of Futurism, a school of painting too often confused with Cubism, is excellent for its definitive clarity. There is no doubt that this art book has been designed for the intelligent reader and not for the kindergarten." Katharine Kuh

+ — Book Week p3 D 31 '44 450w

Reviewed by J. W. Lane
Commonweal 41:570 Mr 23 '45 480w

Kirkus 12:466 O 1 '44 150w

Reviewed by Clement Greenberg
Nation 161:378 O 13 '45 350w

"I think the survey is very unsatisfactory, but it has one major virtue; it presents ninety-odd paintings by artists from the two main movements in which it seems to me the most advanced painting is being done today; and a few minor ones. Mr. Janis' attitude is unusually non-partisan; he shows a clearer enjoyment than is usually exhibited by critics; and he has as much knowledge of the public's role in art as of the painters'. The text, though, is the most enervating I have ever read, and fails—or hardly tries—to show why

JANIS, SIDNEY—Continued
the abstract artist feels that realism is a dried-up, repressive, too familiar path in painting, or why he believes he can say more important things with greater effect by the abstract method." Manny Farber
— + New Repub 112:151 Ja 29 '45 1350w

JANOWSKY, OSCAR ISAIAH. Nationalities and national minorities (with special reference to east-central Europe); with a foreword by James T. Shotwell. 232p map $2.75 Macmillan

323.1 Minorities. Nationalism and nationality 45-9555

A study of the nationalities problems of East Central Europe with suggestions of a possible means of solving them. It is the author's thesis that "East-central Europe, being heterogeneous in population, must become multi-national in its state structure and decentralized at least in educational and cultural functions." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This book is a work of very considerable scholarship. Its style is rather 'State-Departmentish'—generally abstract, humorless, impersonal, dignified. It smells a lot like paper. Four appendices contain important source materials. Not a book for the best-seller public, it is definitely a volume to be read carefully by serious students of current international complications." W. J.
+ Book Week p14 N 25 '45 230w

"Janowsky writes too abstractly and too legalistically about a subject which seethes with irrational urges, hates, prides and fears. . . Perhaps Professor Janowsky and other humane liberals are not the best interpreters of movements so charged with emotional dynamite as are religion and nationality. The best writers on such subjects are those who know the demonic in themselves and who see boiling everywhere the pot of passion, prejudice and evil." S. B. Barnes
Christian Century 63:15 Ja 2 '46 1150w

"The book is a very disappointing performance." J. S. Roucek
— Commonweal 43:316 Ja 4 '46 470w

Kirkus 13:310 Jl 15 '45 150w

"Recommended for well-considered treatment of an issue vital in maintaining peace." Walter Hausdorfer
+ Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 110w

"The book deals with one of the most vexed and vexing problems on earth and is obviously the product of much complicated thought and research, but it is nevertheless composed in admirable and lucid layman's English."
+ New Yorker 21:74 Ja 5 '46 130w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ja 5 '46 700w

Social Studies 37:48 Ja '46 60w

"The minority problem of east-central Europe has been dynamite in international relations since the beginnings of nationalism in that area. Prof Janowsky presents a timely and challenging exploration of the border, boundary and internal problems which will be involved in the coming peace settlements." R. S. Ullery
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 550w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p16 N 18 '45 600w

JANTA, ALEKSANDER. Bound with two chains. 234p $2.50 Roy pubs.

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Polish 45-37866

"A sequel to I Lied to Live [Book Review Digest, 1944], in which Janta told of his experiences bound out as a French captive to slave labor. Actually, he is Polish, though he sustained his French alias throughout. Transferred from farm labor, physically too much for him, he was sent to a factory, where greed, graft and fear predominated. Charged with sabotage and insubordination, he was next sent to a camp supplying labor to foresters—he endured hunger, exhaustion, cold. Again shifted to a farm, he met—during an illness—two Polish physicians, he simulated tuberculosis, was pronounced hopeless, and was shipped back to France and freedom." Kirkus

Reviewed by Oscar Tarcov
Book Week p6 D 23 '45 400w

Booklist 42:126 D 15 '45

"In two respects the record transcends even an able journalistic account. One is the picture, made vivid with swift characterization, of fellow slaveworkers, a motley group ranging from former professional men to bums. The other is the penetrating study of the Nazi mentality and outlook. Forced to obey his strutting overseers and constantly in danger of his life, Mr. Janta never lost his mental freedom. The volume, though dealing with one of the blackest pages of human history, is therefore encouraging and stimulating." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 29 '45 500w

Kirkus 13:464 O 15 '45 120w

"The author, a Polish intellectual, records faithfully the events of his imprisonment; the Nazi overlords, the sufferings of his French fellow slaves, the bleak working conditions are all here, but the telling is numb and uninspired. . . Recommended with reservations." Scott Adams
Library J 70:1087 N 15 '45 80w

"Though his new book is not as dramatic as the first one and though it hardly adds anything of importance to his analysis of the mind of prisoners of war which gave 'I Lied to Live' unusual atmosphere and originality, it can be said that here too Mr. Janta's observations are precise and convincing, and that they deserve wide attention even at this late time when the Nazi 'masterminds' are facing their judges." H. B. Kranz
+ Sat R of Lit 28:15 D 29 '45 700w

"Mr. Janta has not succeeded in giving us the deeper psychology of Europe's underground fighters. The book seems somewhat superficially written, without any real effort to reach deeply into the things it reports. Even the mentality of the Germans, whom he knew as we know the guardians of an immense jail, is not described with any deep understanding. . . The 'why' of the cruelty of the Nazis, what really smouldered in the souls of the other Germans who were not Nazi but obeyed them only through resignation or fear—these things we do not learn from Janta's book. Notwithstanding these defects, and others of style and narration, 'Bound With Two Chains' is worth reading because of a kind of constructive optimism pervading it and because here and there Janta has the human courage to picture the prisoners not only as people who suffered but also as people who were capable of rejoicing." Leo Valiani
— + Weekly Book Review p8 D 23 '45 800w

JARRELL, RANDALL. Little friend, little friend. 58p $2 Dial press

811 World war, 1939-1945—Poetry 45-9704

Poems by a young American, many of them about the war, in which he took part.

"It is an open secret, and a pity, that Randall Jarrell is known chiefly as the author of overwhelming wisecracks about other poets. Jarrell is not entirely innocent of responsibility for this reputation, nor is the reader: both are perhaps too eager to forget everything for the sake of a good laugh. But only the reader who forgets the jokes and remembers Jarrell's first two books will be prepared for the extraordinary growth in this new book. . . The wit remains absent and the abstractness is not entirely dissolved. But in this new book Jarrell has a much closer, much more intimate grasp of his subject, perhaps because he has actually lived through the war with which his first poems were also concerned, but concerned in terms of intuition and premonition, not of the event and the aftermath." Delmore Schwartz
+ Nation 161:590 D 1 '45 750w

"These smouldering dark poems . . . have energy, satiric bitterness, and weight; they prove that Mr. Jarrell is one of the most interesting poets of his generation. . . There are two weaknesses in this book which mar its general impression of distinguished success. The satirical poems, such as 'Summer' and 'The State'—and certain satirical emphases in other poems—are not successful." Theodore Spencer

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:7 Ja 5 '46 550w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. Garden book, 1766-1824; with relevant extracts from his other writings; annotated by Edwin Morris Betts. 704p pl $5 Am. philosophical soc.

634 Gardening 45-1776

"From 1766, while still a bachelor living with his mother at Shadwell, to 1824, two years before his death, Jefferson kept a garden book, which has fortunately been preserved, and is the property of the Massachusetts Historical Society. In this he recorded every sowing and planting, every blossoming and ripening, every successful crop and every failure, with much other relative detail, so that in time, as Mr. Edwin Morris Betts explains in a scholarly preface, 'The book that began as a diary of the garden became a written repository for numerous interests of Jefferson. The entries range from contracts with overseers, plans for building roads and fish ponds, and observations on the greatest flood in Albemarle, to comments on Mrs. Wythe's wine and figures on the number of strawberries in a pint measure.' The American Philosophical Society has now printed this garden book for the first time, with annotations by Edwin Morris Betts of the University of Virginia." Am Hist R

"The American Philosophical Society and Mr. Betts are to be congratulated on having produced one of the most fascinating and scholarly works on Jefferson that has appeared for some time." E. M. Sowerby

+ Am Hist R 50:403 Ja '45 550w

"This isn't a gardening manual, though there is a wealth of sound observation and good practice in it. It is the patch-work picture of one phase of a remarkable man's life and interests, fascinating in detail, astonishing in scope. It's a book to browse in and enjoy bit by bit." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p34 N 26 '44 450w

JENKINS, DANIEL T. Prayer and the service of God. 135p $1.50 Morehouse [5s Faber]

248 Prayer 45-2239

"Designed to meet the needs of people who ask, 'Why pray?' and those for whom prayer is difficult." Christian Century

---

Christian Century 62:583 My 9 '45 20w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 159:18 Je 15 '45 180w

"This book, with its sane discussion of the real meaning of prayer, its problems and its experience, should be really useful to those who are concerned to teach the Christian message in a world which is in obvious danger of losing all sense of meaning and direction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 12 '44 550w

JENKINS, DOROTHY HELEN. Annual flowers from seed packet to bouquet; phot. by Gottscho-Schleisner; drawings by George L. Hollrock. 223p $2.75 Barrows

635.931 Floriculture Agr45-142

Advice on growing annual flowers in the large garden or the small one. Contains chapters also on cutting flowers, corsage making, window boxes, and flowers for church use. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 41:283 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:9 My '45

+ Kirkus 13:177 Ap 15 '45 130w

"Well executed book."

+ Weekly Book Review p19 Jl 8 '45 100w

JENSEN, JOHANNES VILHELM. Long journey; tr. from the Danish by A. G. Chater; with an introd. by Francis Hackett. 677p $3.50 Knopf

"A reissue of a trilogy by the Danish Nobel prize winner, published in 1933 and out of print for several years." (Booklist) See Book Review Digest, 1923, 1924 and 1933 for earlier reviews of this work.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 22 '45 320w

Booklist 41:240 Ap 15 '45

"In spite of Mr. Jensen's undoubted poetic gift, his epic is often dull. I cannot imagine any human being, even one made human by the ice, not wishing to skip and scan." Sister Mariella

Commonweal 42:125 My 18 '45 600w

"It is an extraordinary blend of myth and legend, of saga and lyrical verse. . . Jensen has a musical quality in his prose which gives it the sweep of ancient sagas, he has a sense of drama—and a pictorial quality that makes even prehistoric landscapes live. Not for a wide market—but rather a literary one."

+ Kirkus 13:92 Mr 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
New Repub 112:648 My 7 '45 1300w

"Americans should find satisfaction and courage in reading this timely new edition of 'The Long Journey,' this epic of mankind which prophetically emphasizes the responsibility of the Free States in the future of the human race." G. W. Allen

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 15 '45 2150w

"Mr. Jensen's trilogy, for all its sprawling six hundred and seventy-seven pages, is a reasonably disciplined book. Considering the sobriety of its theme, it is also a very readable one. It remains an epic, ornate at times and overreaching at others, but I certainly wouldn't let its being an epic frighten me off." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 21:78 Ap 28 '45 1250w

"'The Long Journey' is one of those long novels which many people mean to get around to reading some day, but somehow never do. And yet it deserves reading, and richly repays it. The first part of the trilogy, called 'Fire and Ice,' seems to me an unrivaled reconstruction of the life of primitive man, discovering fire during the ice age. The second, 'The Cimbrians,' deals with that powerful but obscure Teutonic tribe which was the first to invade Italy. The third, 'Christopher Columbus,' assumes that Columbus was of Lombard descent, and that his voyages to America were only a final step in the migrations from the north of Europe."

+ Weekly Book Review p23 Ap 22 '45 350w

JENSEN, OLIVER ORMEROD. Carrier war. 172p il maps $2.50 Simon & Schuster

940.545 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Naval operations. World war, 1939—Pacific ocean 45-35018

"This book is a free-running, easy-reading account of some of the great carrier 'strikes' in the Pacific, from the Marcus raid of September, 1943, to the Second Battle of the Philippine Sea last October." N Y Times

---

Atlantic 175:131 Ap '45 250w

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p6 F 25 '45 230w

Booklist 41:195 Mr 1 '45

Bookmark 6:11 My '45

Reviewed by Ray McPartlin
Boston Globe p15 F 28 '45 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45

Foreign Affairs 23:693 Jl '45 20w

"Recommended to everyone with interest in how carriers fight and how battles are won."

+ Horn Bk 21:209 My '45 70w

Kirkus 13:111 Mr 1 '45 100w

"This is a book which gives cause for pride in our men and ships, but unease, distrust at the Navy's lack of frankness and its selection and manipulation of the facts of war. It is a book that adds many details to our past knowledge of action in the Pacific, but little to the broad canvas. But it is a source record of human interest and a wide-sweeping narrative of the valor of American youth, and as such it must have a place in the library of good books about the war." H. W. Baldwin

JENSEN, O. O.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p7 F 25 '45 1350w

Time 45:97 F 26 '45 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Ag 11 '45 250w

"One of the finest books to come out of the war." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 25 '45 900w

JENSEN, VERNON H. Lumber and labor. (Labor in twentieth century America) 314p $3 Farrar

331.763498 Lumbering. Trade unions—U.S. 45-1190

"The first seven chapters are devoted to a historical survey of the industry up to the first Roosevelt administration. The remaining seven chapters deal with the revival of outside unionism during the N. I. R. A., the reaction of the employers and the development of internal friction within unions, culminating in a split. In the struggle for dominance the faction affiliated with the C. I. O. seems to have, at least temporarily, won the upper hand." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 41:204 Mr 15 '45

"Mr. Jensen's definitive study of the turbulent history of labor relations in the lumber industry lives up to the high standards of the series in which it appears as volume five, 'Labor in Twentieth Century America': readability coupled with scrupulous scholarship." G. G. Higgins

+ Commonweal 42:50 Ap 27 '45 280w

Kirkus 12:558 D 15 '44 130w

Reviewed by Philip Taft

Nation 160:281 Mr 10 '45 230w

"Books of this kind are often burdened with voluminous data; it is to Dr. Jensen's credit that he subordinates statistics while telling the major story of labor relations. The volume is a useful addition to the literature of labor problems."

+ New Repub 112:798 Je 4 '45 130w

Reviewed by Francis Scott

N Y Times p22 F 25 '45 500w

"Professor Jensen has gathered, from innumerable scattered sources, the story of labor relations in this tempestuous industry. It is a story romantic, dramatic, sordid, and at times almost incredible. The author's tremendous store of detailed information tends at times to overshadow the basic narrative. Other than this it is an admirable piece of work that fills a neglected gap in this country's labor history." Paul Eliel

+ — Survey G 34:454 N '45 400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:20 Je '45 240w

Reviewed by Philip Taft

Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 11 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:45 Ap '45

JEWELL, EDWARD ALDEN. Georges Rouault. See Rouault, G.

JEWELL, NORMAN LIMBURY AUCHINLECK. Secret mission submarine, as told to Cecil Carnes. 159p $2 Ziff-Davis

940.545 Seraph (submarine). World war, 1939—Naval operations, Submarine. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 45-2988

Account of the part played by the British submarine Seraph during the hazardous undertaking when General Mark Clark was ferried to his secret conference with the French in North Africa, and when General Giraud was conveyed to Africa. The twenty-nine-year old British submarine commander describes the missions.

Reviewed by W. H. Fetridge

+ Book Week p4 Ap 29 '45 500w

Booklist 41:267 My 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45

"By the time one finishes reading it, the skipper who tells the story, and his crew, and the three commandos are all good friends—and one feels a personal pride in the exploits of H.M.S. Seraph."

+ Kirkus 13:127 Mr 15 '45 100w

"Not one of the most dramatic war books, but it will please those countless submarine euthusiasts among boys and men." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 70:356 Ap 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Lewis Funke

N Y Times p8 Ap 15 '45 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p591 D 15 '45 180w

"What General Mark Clark, assisted by a sizable fund of gold, accomplished on his secret mission to Algiers in October, 1942, has, bit by bit, become general knowledge. What has not heretofore been disclosed is the detailed story of how the American mission journeyed to and from Algiers, and this is part of a longer story amusingly told in 'Secret Mission Submarine.' . . [The author] at last account is again at sea living up to previous performance. His story, which is also the story of the Seraph and its entire crew, is packed with excitement and adventure, spiced with seagoing humor, lacking entirely in egotism or brag and with frequent keenly perceptive thoughts on politics and men." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 22 '45 1250w

JOHN, AUGUSTUS EDWIN. Augustus John, by John Rothenstein. (Phaidon press art bk.) 26p il pl $5.50 Oxford [20s Allen, G]

759.2 Paintings, English 45-173

"The volume contains [nearly 100] plates representing every phase of John's development from his early sketches in chalk and wash to his famous portraits and designs for murals, and all beautifully engraved after the high standards of the Phaidon Press. The short introduction by John Rothenstein, Director of the Tate Gallery, is both critical and appreciative, an excellently tempered essay that is never dogmatic in its reservations nor too extravagant in its praise." Weekly Book Review

"Like all its predecessors, it is dignified and spacious and the illustrations are excellent." E. N.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 20 '44 300w

Reviewed by Howard Devree

N Y Times p5 F 11 '45 500w

"Ninety-five plates, four of them in colour, give a fair, entertaining view of Mr. John's merits and limits. . . But the full effect leaves one a bit uneasy, wondering if one would not be still more uneasy after a collective, actual exhibition on the same scale. . . The flimsiness of the drawings and the energetic flare of the oils exactly accord with an 'occasional' artist, who has fits of seeing more or less disconnected; who accepts what he sees, and waits for the next sight to come along. But 'vision,' 'genius' and 'masterpiece'—those may as well be reserved for the Masters."

Spec 174:66 Ja 19 '45 270w

"It is confusing the issue slightly to say that Mr. John does not share the 'scientific' attitude towards design. The plain truth is that, in view of his genius, Mr. John is an exasperating artist. . . 'Genius' is used advisedly, because no other living or recent artist, British or foreign, is felt to have a better right to the word, which leaves open all questions of whether or not the talent has been cultivated. Mr. John has a genius for painting, and to a great extent he has let it go at that. The results, as shown in the illustrations to this book are enough to win our gratitude, even while regret is felt for what is lacking."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p527 O 28 '44 330w

"Here are drawings almost as fine as those of the Old Masters, drawings with the delicacy and vitality of Leonardo, but with eyes and eyebrows romantically accentuated; here are sketches comparable in spontaneous power to those of Rembrandt, and others graced with the charm of Watteau; here are paintings that rival and suggest the bravura canvases of Goya, and a few portraits that are masterpieces of a sort. In short, here is an eclectic artist who never quite attained the eminence predicted of him, but who, in certain fortunate moments of improvisation, soared above all his contemporaries in the field of portraiture." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 21 '45 1000w

JOHN CRERAR LIBRARY, CHICAGO. John Crerar library, 1895-1944; an historical report prepared under the authority of the Board of directors by the librarian. 206p il $3; pa $1.50 The library

027.4773 45-6054

"One of the truly great libraries of the world has celebrated its fiftieth birthday. . . The John Crerar Library is a reference library (it circulates books only through interlibrary loans, in theory at least) limited to 'the natural, physical and social sciences and their applications—the useful arts, i.e., technology in all its aspects.' The library now numbers approximately 675,000 volumes. . . A fraction of the book is devoted to a narrative history of the library. It is more a series of monographs than a continuous story: The First Librarian, The Library Staff, Books (book selection), Use of the Library, The Catalogs and Classification . . . The book was written for the most part by the present librarian, Dr. J. Christian Bay." Library J

"The book should not be read in course. There is some repetition inevitable in such a subject arrangement. It is, however, a valuable contribution not only to library history but to the literature of administration. It tells how one great library has developed and is now functioning. May Crerar's next fifty years be equally important in contributions to librarianship and to the welfare of the country." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 70:887 O 1 '45 1000w

"To one whose lot it was to be a bystander and an eyewitness to much of what is here recorded and who gratefully acknowledges the many benefits, personal and professional, that accrued to him from his contacts with the Crerar, its distinguished librarians, and their able associates, the book is peculiarly fascinating and full of meaning." C. B. Roden

+ Library Q 15:354 O '45 1950w

Special Libraries 36:252 S '45

JOHNS, ALTONA (TRENT). See Trent-Johns, A.

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Compulsory arbitration of labor disputes. (Reference shelf) 258p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

331.155 Arbitration, Industrial. Industrial relations 45-35038

Contains factual data, selected discussions, and arguments for and against compulsory arbitration, with an extensive bibliography. The book is divided into four parts: General discussion; Case for voluntary arbitration; Case for compulsory arbitration; Bibliography.

Booklist 41:239 Ap 15 '45

Christian Century 62:435 Ap 4 '45 20w

Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 2 '45 200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:81 Jl '45

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Peacetime conscription. (Reference shelf) 327p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

355.22 Military service, Compulsory 45-35195

"An impartial compilation of the most logical pro and con arguments that have been advanced by public leaders. It opens with an interesting discussion of the history of conscription and ends with an extensive bibliography." School & Society

Booklist 42:58 O 15 '45

+ School & Society 62:224 O 6 '45 40w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Postwar wage stabilization. (Reference shelf) 227p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

331.2 Wages 45-35128

"The question of wage stabilization has been examined with respect to some of the leading aspects at stake. For greater timeliness, and since earlier material on wages has been covered in two previous numbers of the Reference Shelf, Wages and Prices, April 1942 and Wage Stabilization and Inflation, May 1943, this book covers mostly the more recent material. It has been the aim to represent without bias, in discussions and in bibliography, varied and diverse views." Pref

Booklist 41:342 Jl 15 '45

Christian Century 62:759 Je 27 '45 20w

Special Libraries 36:210 Jl '45

"The book is an impartial, readable compilation of divergent authoritative opinions on a highly important problem. The catholicity of the selections is suggested by the fact that included among men and publications quoted at length are Marriner S. Eccles, Robert M. Gaylord, Philip Murray, Henry A. Wallace, the AFL Weekly News Service, the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, the Magazine of Wall Street and the Monthly Labor Review. The book is particularly timely."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 22 '45 330w

Wis Lib Bul 41:98 O '45

JOHNSHOY, JOHN WALTER, ed. See Brevig, T. L. Apaurak in Alaska

JOHNSON, BURGES. As much as I dare; a personal recollection. 346p $3.50 Washburn

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-47444

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Bookmark 6:16 Ja '45

"Burges Johnson, college professor, poet and humorist, displays in his memoirs the same talent for entertaining narrative, description and comment that has made him a star after-dinner speaker, and the same sense of humor and delicacy of literary touch that have made him one of the best of contemporary American writers of light verse." R. S. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 300w

"Mr. Johnson sketches vignette after vignette worth the keeping. Nostalgic, to be sure, but part of the pattern of a New York gone for good and pleasant to read about. Meantime, a new generation of editors and writers, creating their own pattern, will probably not vary much from those days when Burges Johnson flitted from one office to another." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p6 F 11 '45 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 41:19 Ja '45

JOHNSON, EDGAR, ed. Treasury of satire. 770p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

808.87 Satire 45-7564

"Including the world's greatest satirists, comic and tragic, from antiquity to the present time, selected and edited, with critical and historical backgrounds, and an introduction on the nature and value of satire." (Subtitle) Index.

Reviewed by Russell Maloney

Book Week p14 S 16 '45 500w

Booklist 42:53 O 15 '45

JOHNSON, EDGAR—Continued

"This is not only a wretchedly poor compilation but it bears something of the aspect of fraud. Here are 770 pages that could easily have been reduced by half and yet have contained the same amount of matter. So meager is the real content of Mr. Johnson's anthology that he had to pad it with unnecessary notes —verbose, ill-written and with Winchellian efforts to be clever—and a long introduction that reveals nothing except his strange idea of what satire is." Theodore Maynard

— Cath World 162:186 N '45 350w

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 15 '45 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45

"Not only are the editor's contributions—critical, biographical and by way of definition —stimulating and provocative reading, but the scope of his selection, the generous abundance of his material makes this a veritable library of satire (and good entertainment)."

+ Kirkus 13:292 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Recommended for all drama as well as literary collections."

+ Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by E. R. Bentley

New Repub 113:548 O 22 '45 1050w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p8 S 30 '45 420w

"For certain of his selections in this anthology Dr. Johnson deserves great praise. It is good to see Lucian, Samuel Butler ('Hudibras'), Voltaire, and Dickens so well represented, and while I would have liked much more of Thomas Hardy and A. P. Herbert, I know only too well some editors would have forgotten them altogether. . . [However] to be quite frank I sometimes, in studying Dr. Johnson's selections, and in reading his notes on the authors, had the uneasy suspicion that the dreadful habit of reading only 'the set books' had spread from the students to the faculties of universities. Dr. Johnson is writing about satires and satirists; but too often he writes of a man who wrote some satires as if that represented the whole man and all his achievements." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:13 S 22 '45 1250w

"The critical comments are always agreeably instructive and frequently make shrewd distinctions, but they are sometimes a bit long in proportion to the length of the excerpts they prepare us for. . . I cannot find any serious ground for complaint so far as the choice of the older writers is concerned, but there are some moderns I should have liked to find and I am not always completely satisfied with the excerpts chosen to represent even some of the ancients." J. W. Krutch

+ — Weekly Book Review p1 S 30 '45 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

JOHNSON, ELIZABETH MCILVANE. La venganza de la Zorra (The vengeance of the vixen); il. by the author. 28p pa 85c Adventure trails publications, Steamboat Springs, Colo.

"This miniature picture book, written and illustrated by a 16-year-old girl, has the direct approach and a good deal of the flavor, if not the substantial body, of a folk-tale. In simple Spanish phrases, with accompanying English text, it tells of a young vixen deprived of her mother by the cruelty of man. Her own efforts at vengeance failed, but a sympathetic fox, hearing her loud grief, brought justice to the hunter in a climax of violent confusion." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p12 O 7 '45 150w

"In its paper covers, with spirited pictures printed in two colors, this childlike story is suited for a child's own library where it will be often reread." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:347 S '45 60w

"Though slight, the story has a naive appeal beyond the aid it gives to quite young Spanish students, and the illustrations, though uneven in quality, are original and lively." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p20 Jl 22 '45 110w

"Senorita-Miss Hija-de-Juan-Johnson, at sixteen, retains the vigorous sense of justice of the very young and illustrates it with a technique interesting at any age. The book gives a small child a sweet sense of control over a foreign language, and an older person a name to bear in mind in either tongue." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 29 '45 140w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Dixie Dobie; a Sable Island pony; il. by [the authors]. 90p $2 Harcourt

Horses—Legends and stories 45-2836

Dixie was a wild pony from an island off the coast of Nova Scotia. One year when the best ponies were rounded up to be sold on the mainland, Dixie was in the catch. But the pony ship was wrecked and Dixie swam ashore and found refuge on a farm. There she was gentled and trained by an understanding doctor. For children of six to ten.

"The story of Dixie's taming makes good reading for children from 7 to 10." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p10 Ap 1 '45 150w

Booklist 41:241 Ap 15 '45

Horn Bk 21:194 My '45 90w

"A good story, with real substance, simply told, and illustrated by the authors. They are always more successful with their animal drawings than their humans. . . .A dependable favorite."

+ Kirkus 13:134 Mr 15 '45 180w

"A quiet story with an unobtrusive theme of kindness, in large type and with good illustrations, for that middle group that likes to read about dogs and horses, and for older slow readers. Recommended." A. M. Anderson

+ Library J 70:357 Ap 15 '45 70w

"Young readers will enjoy seeing how the little horse, made more stubborn by the ill-tempered handling of her first owner, responds to the kindness and wisdom of the doctor who appreciates her spirit and intelligence. . . Many fine drawings admirably illustrate the incidents of the story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p18 My 13 '45 110w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 80w

Weekly Book Review p17 My 20 '45 360w

Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Sir Lancelot and Scamp; il. by Helen Lossing Johnson. 78p $1.75 Harcourt

45-8115

Story of two young dogs, one a greyhound bought by a western rancher to hunt coyotes; the other a little cocker spaniel found and adopted by the greyhound.

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

Kirkus 13:336 Ag 1 '45 110w

"Large type and many pictures plus a good story make this an ideal book for a child who is just beginning to read for himself." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner

Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 70w

"With many delightful drawings, large clear type and simple style, the Johnsons have made another book for the younger children which will prove a fine incentive to the beginner in reading. . . The contrast of cocker and greyhound gives the drawings an especial interest." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 S 9 '45 130w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p4 S 2 '45 150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

JOHNSON, MELVIN MAYNARD. Practical marksmanship; the technique of field firing; with an introd. by Julian C. Smith. 183p il $2.50 Morrow

799.31 Shooting 45-4786

"Instruction in the technique of rifle and machine gun shooting, for war and sporting purposes. The author, in chapters dealing with sights, aiming, firing, moving targets, effective range, and safety precautions, relates the training received on target ranges to actual field conditions. An appendix contains material on the art of sniping based largely on World War II experience. The volume is well illustrated with photographs showing various shooting positions." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 42:9 S '45

Kirkus 13:234 Je 1 '45 90w

Library J 70:637 Jl '45 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:24 Ap '45

JOHNSON, OSA HELEN (LEIGHTY) (MRS CLARK HALLAM GETTS). Tarnish, the true story of a lion cub; il. by Arthur August Jansson. 59p $1 Follett

Lions—Legends and stories 44-51048

Story of three lion cubs in their first few months of life, Tarnish, the oldest and his two sisters, Fat and Thin.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p15 Mr 11 '45 180w

"While the story is a personal one it has no imaginary conversations, is true to lion ways, and is not sentimental." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:112 Mr '45 100w

"An easy, natural style makes the book facile reading, and the pictures, like the story, bring out very clearly the combination of formidable dignity, lithe grace and puckish humor of the cat tribe. Recommended for ages ten to twelve." G. M. Williams
+ Library J 70:268 Mr 15 '45 80w

"Because Osa Johnson has evoked from her own past experience something of the beauty and grandeur of the jungle as a background for her tale of a lion cub, 'Tarnish' stands out among wild animal stories for the younger children." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p28 Mr 18 '45 130w

JOHNSON, PAMELA HANSFORD (MRS NEIL STEWART). The Trojan brothers. 300p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Joseph, M]

45-4837

" 'The Trojan Brothers and Miss Maggie' was a very successful music hall turn in London before 1930, until Sid Nichols, the comic hindquarters of their ridiculous 'horse' fell fatally in love with the wrong woman, his social-climbing cousin Betty Todd. His infatuation split up the partnership and drove him to the gallows." Library J

Reviewed by Dorsha Hayes
Book Week p4 Je 17 '45 320w

"Pamela Hansford Johnson's novels are designed to be entertaining, and sometimes they are more than that. A sparkling and easy style, an acquaintance with London's theatrical, literary, and social background, a tolerant attitude, and the ability to mingle comedy with pathos have earned her the vague and trite, but expressive compliment of being 'readable.' In the case of Miss Johnson's latest novel, 'The Trojan Brothers,' the mingling of comedy and pathos runs into genuine tragedy." W. K. R.
Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 23 '45 750w

"A sad, sordid, squabbling tale."
Kirkus 13:226 Je 1 '45 80w

"Not the usual manipulation of background, character and plot. This reader engrossed. Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 70:355 Ap 15 '45 70w

"Miss Pamela Hansford Johnson carries this story through with admirable verve and wit and an effect of competent knowledge of her people and setting. But we are inclined to deplore her final descent from high comedy to a tragedy that is not truly implicit in the story or, we feel, in Sid Nichols's character." J. D. Beresford
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 O 20 '44 120w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 161:139 Ag 11 '45 60w

"In The Trojan Brothers, a pretentious novel about music-hall personalities, the brutal heroine is in the end brutally murdered. Impeccably emancipated, unexceptionally stark, dealing with a morbid crime passionel, and equipped with all the stock characters of modern life (including a brace of amiable homosexuals), this novel is nothing but the luscious Edwardian novelette in a new and hideously protracted form." James Pope-Hennessy
— New Statesman & Nation 28:342 N 18 '44 180w

"Pamela Johnson's local color can be guaranteed not to fade when it reaches London. In this familiar territory the author has the sure and accurate touch with atmospheric detail which places a story on the likely side of our imaginations. For the purposes of 'The Trojan Brothers,' her latest novel, Miss Johnson has given up the wholesale manufacture of character types in favor of a well-constructed plot. The result is the most tightly knit and satisfying narrative she has yet produced." Jane Martin
+ N Y Times p15 Jl 1 '45 600w

"A tragic story, but one with nice psychological trimmings and a good deal of shrewd cockney humor. . . Nothing important, but lively entertainment in spite of its unhappy ending."
New Yorker 21:70 Je 16 '45 60w

"All the main characters are astonishingly life-like; and Miss Johnson shows unusual skill in giving the reader, by a phrase or an incident, a key to the nature of these people. . . Miss Johnson's only failure, I think, is the portrait of Anna. . . Still, in so ambitious and successful a novel as 'The Trojan Brothers' this hurried disposal of a character who, I fancy, grew more important than her maker intended, is a small fault." R. E. Roberts
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:28 Je 16 '45 700w

"According to the blurb, this is a psychological study of considerable subtlety. Possibly Miss Johnson was being a little too subtle, for the startling dramatic climax comes as a shock at the end of what appeared to be a rather innocuous tale. The trouble may have been in the author's attempt to probe the deeper emotions and reactions of a man, which is risky business for most woman authors. However, the characters are well drawn and the narrative entertaining with its theater background. If you can stomach such typical English expressions as 'cheers' and 'fug' or such ejaculations as 'whoops and double whoops' or 'God bless' (without automatically adding 'America') you'll probably find 'The Trojan Brothers' diverting company." Rhea Morgan
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 300w

Theatre Arts 30:63 Ja '46 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p551 N 11 '44 360w

"What happens in Miss Johnson's latest novel is fascinating but baffling. To the reader it is often hypnotically baffling, and to the author—skilled as she is in the intricacies of sex—it often seems to be psychologically baffling." George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p6 Je 24 '45 400w

JOHNSON, PAUL EMANUEL. Psychology of religion. 288p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

201 Psychology, Religious 45-8728

"Being a text-book, Prof. Johnson includes much that is old, familiar, and valuable from the writings of Allport, Freud, James, Jung, Pratt, Ames and others; but he has come to terms with the Gestalt psychology and the new idea of man as a dynamic whole. He has also developed the insights of interpersonal psychology, which is consistent with the older personalism of the Boston school. The chapters cover religious experience, growth, regeneration, prayer and worship, belief, behavior, normal personality, and the religious community." (Churchman) Bibliography.

JOHNSON, P. E.—Continued

"With this book, the psychology of religion comes back to the main track. . . The greatest single contribution which Dr. Johnson makes is in the discussion of religious experience. . . Since it is a first effort to close a fifteen-year gap, this book will probably be more useful for what it evokes than for what it says. The very circumstances of publication meant that it could be little more than an outline. But it is a good outline, with few gaps." W. B. Blakemore
+ Christian Century 62:1254 N 14 '45 850w

"Interpersonal psychology demands much fuller treatment of the nature of the church and its functions in society, and the author has not come to grips with the social psychology necessary to integrate this with his more or less individualized approach. However, this is a good book, and the only one available to bring one up to date in a most important field." R. C. Miller
+ — Churchman 159:14 N 1 '45 180w

"Clergymen and other students of religion, psychology and social institutions will find in this volume a condensed statement of the position of an outstanding Protestant scholar on the psychology of religion."
+ Kirkus 13:509 N 15 '45 150w

JOHNSON, SIDDIE JOE. Cathy; il. by Mary Lee Baker. 146p $2 Longmans
45-35059

Cathy's father was in the Navy air corps; her young mother worked in an aircraft plant, and Cathy was a lonely small girl. Then she found some children's diaries in the attic and learned what three children had done in an earlier war. That paved the way for Cathy's own contribution. Grades three to six.

"To me this is one of the most satisfying stories of the spring season. Cathy is a very real little girl and I think other little girls will love her. Siddie Joe Johnson writes with charm and imagination and there is just the right tug at the heartstrings."
+ Book Week p22 Je 3 '45 270w
Booklist 41:273 My 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45
Kirkus 13:86 F 15 '45 170w

"Very slight story." E. W. Turpin
Library J 70:492 My 15 '45 50w

"The genuine understanding of this story will warm the hearts of little girls from 8 to 11." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 My 6 '45 150w
Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 120w

"The drawings are lively, clear and really illustrative; the well leaded type-face is what a child needs if the art of reading is a recent acquisition."
+ Weekly Book Review p15 My 20 '45 270w

JOHNSON, WILLIAM HARDING, and FENN, ISADORE M. Popular tools and materials. 128p il $1.50 Whitman, A.
684 Tools 45-1457

In this book for boys and girls about fifty hand tools are described and their use in carpentry or other work, explained. Photographs show boys and girls using the tools described. Part two deals with materials—wood, nails and screws, glue, paints, metal, hinges, etc.

"An interesting source and reference book for children from 9 up." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Ja 14 '45 90w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 70:165 F 15 '45 50w
Wis Lib Bul 41:56 My '45

JOHNSTON, GEORGE BURKE. Ben Jonson, poet. 175p $2 Columbia univ. press
821 Jonson, Ben A45-5258

This scholarly study of the Elizabethan writer, deals with Jonson not as a dramatist but as a poet. "It is not concerned so much with the 'goodness' or 'badness' of the works, but rather with an attempt to find out what kind of poet Jonson is, what his conception of poetry was, what materials he used, and if possible why he was a poet. The clew to most of the answers can be found in the poems themselves; a study of them, however, must be supplemented by an examination of the poet's critical works—his prefaces, prologues, and the essays in the Discoveries." (p.4) Bibliography. Index.

"Here is a study based upon wide reading and acquaintance with the many streams of thought and life in Jonson's age, proceeding steadily, but carefully, to a convincing conclusion." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 23:109 Ja '46 300w
Weekly Book Review p16 N 4 '45 430w

JOHNSTONE, BURTON KENNETH, and others. Building or buying a house; a guide to wise investment. (Whittlesey house publication) 154p il $2.75 McGraw 728 Building. Architecture, Domestic. Dwellings 45-3651

A guide to home owners or prospective home owners, which takes up every aspect from the mortgage to the completed house. Partial contents: Financing; Site selection; Planning; Judging house construction; Cost analysis; Working drawings and specifications; Contracts; Construction contract; Construction hazards. Index.

"People who like to fuss with floor plans will find the section on this subject especially interesting and sound. . . Another valuable chapter deals with cost factors, which are broken down to show where money can best be saved if you are cutting corners. . . If you are vague on the various types of mortgages, architect's agreements, contracts, blueprints and specifications, this book will give you the information which is often taken for granted by experts in the field. It may not make you an expert judge of house construction but, at least, it will teach the general rules of what to look for in a well-built house." Robert Lasch
+ Book Week p3 Ap 29 '45 310w
Booklist 41:283 Je 1 '45
Bookmark 6:7 My '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

"A down-to-earth book which should serve as a practical break on the temptation to plunge into house ownership after the war."
+ Kirkus 13:26 Ja 15 '45 220w

"An excellent guide. . . From the financial problems to the details of construction, the treatment is clear and specific. . . In all, both the pitfalls and pleasures are presented carefully and with understanding. Valuable book in any library." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 70:218 Mr 1 '45 100w

JOHNSTONE, WILLIAM CRANE. The future of Japan [issued under the auspices of the Am. council, Inst. of Pacific relations]. 162p $2 Oxford
940.5314452 Reconstruction (1939)—Japan. Japan—Politics and government. Japan—Economic policy 45-4871

"Analyzing Japan as 'a unique nation—a nation with a modern exterior and feudal insides,' Mr. Johnstone first considers its reactions to defeat. He finds it possible that the most vigorous leadership in any popular revolution against the old Japanese ruling groups may come from prisoners of war who have been indoctrinated and trained in Free China. In any event, the still unpredictable way in which Japan takes defeat must be an important factor in any United Nations measures for Japan's future The author discusses in detail such points as surrender and occupation, disarmament, demobilization, reparations and economic controls, and the problem of enforcement." (Christian Science Monitor) Maps on end papers. Index.

Reviewed by H. W. Bradley
Am Pol Sci R 39:1034 O '45 400w
Reviewed by C. D. Carus
Ann Am Acad 242:168 N '45 500w
Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 1 '45 180w
Booklist 42:13 S '45
Reviewed by Randall Gould
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 12 '45 420w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45
Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 42:264 Je 29 '45 1700w
Kirkus 13:193 My 1 '45 150w

"An authority on the Far East discusses a problem of particular interest to the U. S. once Japan is defeated. This small book is crammed with useful information and intelligent opinions. His tentative conclusions are based on a wide knowledge of Japanese culture, both past and present. . . This book should join Owen Lattimore's Solution in Asia as a required reading." J. H. Berthel
+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 110w
Reviewed by L. K. Rosinger
Nation 161:17 Jl 7 '45 360w

"Because it contains so much calm, objective and intelligent thinking on a subject of vital importance, William C. Johnstone's short book, The Future of Japan, deserves more attention than its quiet manner is likely to attract." Richard Watts
+ New Repub 112:876 Je 25 '45 1150w

"In the aftermath of war the powers that combined to defeat Japan must face problems far more complex than those involved in the actual crushing of the enemy. Though it was, of necessity, written before the actual capitulation, Dr. Johnstone's book deserves careful reading by all Americans interested in a constructive Far Eastern settlement." T. A. Bisson
+ N Y Times p4 S 2 '45 700w
Reviewed by T. A. Bisson
Pacific Affairs 18:384 D '45 1220w
Reviewed by Frederick Rein
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:33 S '45 240w

"The present situation in Germany heavily underscores—if such further emphasis is necessary—the immense importance of determining now just what is to be done with Japan. Mr. Johnstone has tackled this problem with a practical, realistic approach that gives his brief little book great value. . . The extent to which Japanese industry may be disrupted by obliteration bombing does not appear to have been taken into full consideration in his very brief treatment of economic policies. Otherwise, Mr. Johnstone develops his arguments with cogency and force." F. R. Dulles
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 1 '45 850w

"A mature and intelligent analysis of most of the problems that face us in Japan." Gunther Stein
+ Yale R n s 35:342 winter '46 40w

JONAS, CARL. Beachhead on the wind. 212p $2 Little 45-7651

A stranded ship on a lonely Aleutian shore, and seven sailors who attempt to salvage it, oil, wind, and water are the ingredients of this novel. In his stories of the seven men and especially of the one who returned to San Francisco, the author tries to elucidate the difficulties of the returning soldier or sailor, and his inability to bridge the gap between war service and civilian life.

"Though you'll find the action hard to get into, you'll finish this book as I did—convinced it is one of the best combat novels of the war." Ralph Peterson
+ — Book Week p4 S 16 '45 500w
Booklist 42:37 O 1 '45
Kirkus 13:258 Je 15 '45 150w

"Belongs in every library. Consider, though, that men in isolation are earthy." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 70:749 S 1 '45 70w

"Extremely well done. Carl Jonas (he is a boatswain's mate, second class, in the United States Coast Guard) has a good eye and ear for his sailors. The huge desolation of the Aleutians and the desperate efforts of men to maintain a sense of life as well as life itself are described with real power." Saul Levitt
+ N Y Times p7 S 16 '45 500w

"Such narratives are unquestionably a valuable part of the testimony of war, but this one loses some of its effectiveness because of Mr. Jonas's occasional lapses into a self-consciously literary style."
New Yorker 21:84 S 15 '45 120w
Time 46:106 S 17 '45 750w
Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
Weekly Book Review p2 S 23 '45 550w

JONES, ARTHUR JULIUS. Principles of guidance. 3d ed 592p $3.50 McGraw 371.42 Personnel service in education
45-6281

A new edition of a text first published in 1930, revised in 1934 (Book Review Digest, 1931, 1935). This edition has been "revised and brought to date with new and illustrative material involving new methods, devices and other material from current practice. The new features include guidance of out of school youth; guidance of Negro youth; duties; characteristics; preparation for certification of school counselors; impact of war on guidance; and, how to initiate a guidance program." (Library J)

Booklist 42:59 O 15 '45
Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 50w
School & Society 62:16 Jl 7 '45 30w

JONES, DANIEL. An English pronouncing dictionary; containing 54,860 words in international phonetic transcription. new 5th ed 496p $2.50 Dutton
421.5 English language—Pronunciation. English language—Dictionaries 44-3745

"The stated purpose of this dictionary is the recording of Southern English pronunciation, as it is spoken by cultivated people in ordinary conversation. Southern English was selected as the most widely understood of dialects used in England, fostered as it is by the public schools of England, and favored by the B.B.C. In contrast to standard dictionaries, An English Pronouncing Dictionary not only omits all information except pronunciation, but it adopts conversational rather than informal usage as its criterion. The compiler, Professor of Phonetics at University College, London, is a recognized authority in his field. . . The present (5th) edition of the dictionary adds more than 5000 new entries, as well as revisions and amplifications, to the original (1917) edition, although Professor Jones notes that it is 'in the main a reprint' of the fourth (1937) edition." Subscription Bks Bul

"This is the accurate, comprehensive work of a thorough scholar, fulfilling all that it claims. At the same time, with the aid of the explanatory introduction, it is clear and easy to use. For its phonetic uses, the dictionary is recommended for large college and public libraries. As a source of proper name pronunciation, it could well be used in any library to supplement the standard works."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:26 Ap '45 480w

JONES, DAVID BRYN-. See Bryn-Jones, D.

JONES, IDWAL. High bonnet. 184p $2.50 Prentice-Hall
45-9821

Combination of novel and cookbook. There is no plot, and what action there is concerns the narrator's life. He is supposedly a French chef, and he outlines his apprenticeship and education, and the adventures he meets in a life devoted to eating and drinking.

"It contains many highly amusing and fantastic anecdotes about gourmets and gourmandizing—and an immense number of remarkable menus. The book is thoroughly enjoyable. . . During the course of the book I went to the icebox several times, to gaze disdainfully at the miserable huddle of shrunken frankfurters and the package of gummy and tasteless processed cheese—and to return sadly to the study with a glass of milk and an apple. Anyone who plans to read this book had better lay in a good supply of groceries beforehand." S. I. Hayakawa
+ Book Week p20 D 9 '45 600w
Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45

"Read not for the plot—which is scarcely visible—but for the flavor, the wit, the spice."
+ — Kirkus 13:458 O 15 '45 180w

"The plot is nothing much, but the very evident fondness of the characters for haute cuisine closely approaches the enthusiasms of Bemelmans, who could probably agree with this book's obvious belief that there can never be too many cooks."
New Yorker 21:109 N 24 '45 100w

"With so natural a predisposition in favor of literary gourmandise, I refuse to believe that it is any inadequacy in my own equipment that caused me to yawn my way through Mr. Jones's story of a chef, his inspired sauces and his hyperthyroid philosophizing on the subtler aspects of gastronomy. The trouble lies, I think, rather with the author. Since Mr. Jones has chosen not to bother himself much with his characters and even less with his plot, it is not unreasonable to expect that, at least, he make his fine cooking real. This he has failed to do." Sheila Hibben
— Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 20 '46 450w

JONES, JESSIE MAE (ORTON). Secrets; pictures by Elizabeth Orton Jones. [40p] $2 Viking 45-7802

Simple verses expressing a little girl's thoughts about herself and God and about many of the lovely things God has created.

"No one but Jessie Orton Jones' gifted daughter Elizabeth could have brought such completely satisfying illustrations to the book. From the spray of apple blossoms on the title page to the tiny bee at the very end, every picture echoes perfectly the delicate charm of childhood the author has caught in her writing. Especially for little girls." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p19 S 23 '45 230w
Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45

"The secrets of bees and apple blossoms, of seeds and birds, of snails and fireflies, are shared with the little child whose thoughts are expressed in these simple verses. . . The delicate childlike pictures will have a wide appeal and will help to make children sensitive and grateful to the Giver of perfect gifts." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:348 S '45 80w

"A pretty book, with illustrations in conventional vein and full color reproduction—but text and thought are a bit too precious, too studied, for spontaneous child reader appeal. . . The use of the title—Secrets—seems a trifle far-fetched and misleading, but has definite merchandise appeal. The idea back of the book is sound—the results seem oversentimental."
— + Kirkus 13:296 Jl 1 '45 110w

"Recommended especially for small girls." Olive Brain
+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 60w

"The poetry written by Jessie Orton Jones is poor; but many libraries will want the book for the sweetly sentimental pictures of the little girl in high buttoned shoes." M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 26 '45 360w
Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

JONES, MACK MARQUIS. Shopwork on the farm. 486p il $3 McGraw 631.3 Agricultural machinery Agr45-344

"Deals with basic tools, materials, operations, processes and activities rather than with jobs or projects, how to equip a shop, sketching and drawing, tool sharpening, woodwork, metal work, welding, concrete, rope and harness work, machinery repair, and maintenance of electrical equipment." Library J

Booklist 42:7 S '45

"Most complete book on the subject. . . For vocational, agricultural high school classes and useful for rehabilitation work of war veterans in vocational schools and colleges."
+ Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 100w

JONES, MARY ALICE. Tell me about the Bible; il. by Pelagie Doane. 91p $2 Rand McNally
220 Bible. Whole—Juvenile literature
45-10489

Describes in simple text how the Bible came to be written, and applies some of the Bible lessons to everyday life. For ages four to seven.

"I like this book even better than its predecessors, 'Tell Me About Jesus' and 'Tell Me About God.' The inclusion of portions of text from the Bible adds to the volume's richness, and I like in particular the emphasis placed upon understanding between all people."
+ Book Week p18 N 11 '45 130w
Booklist 42:152 Ja 1 '46

"The author's name is a guarantee that, while the children who read it are learning how interesting and important the Bible is, they will not be getting false ideas about it which they will have to unlearn later."
+ Christian Century 62:1355 D 5 '45 60w
Kirkus 13:517 N 15 '45 60w

"Third of a series whose colored pictures and pleasant text answered a little boy's request to be told about God and about Jesus, this large-page book uses these gentle measures so to introduce to him the Bible that he is likely to enjoy it." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 23 '45 110w

JONES, PERRIE, comp. One thousand books for hospital libraries; an annotated bibliography. 58p pa 50c Univ. of Minn.
027.66 Bibliography—Best books. Hospital libraries A44-3122

Annotated list of a thousand books suitable for hospital libraries. Books are arranged under the following headings: Fiction; Reference tools; The adventure within; Science and industry, animals and plants; Art; Music; Hobbies, amusements, and sports; Essays and sketches; Poetry and drama; Travel; Biography; History; World war II; For the librarian. Index of titles.

"Let this list be used as a base from which to branch out, continually searching for material to widen the scope of the collection so no reading needs will be unsatisfied, and so that the coming of the hospital librarian and her book truck will be a treat to all." V. E. Grieson
Library J 69:810 O 1 '44 400w

"Librarians and volunteer workers opening new hospital libraries have long stood in need of a basic list such as this prepared by Miss Jones. Its brevity puts it within the range of even the smallest hospital collection; the arrangement is informal, emphasizing the types of reading demanded by hospital patients; the annotations are ample and will also be useful in judging other books for purchase in that they emphasize the reasons for inclusion. . . The selection of titles is, for the most part, excellent, particularly in nonfiction. . . It seemed to the reviewer, however, that too much effort had been made to concentrate on the light and cheerful type, with a resulting loss of 'meat' in the collection as a whole." M. E. James

+ — Library Q 15:178 Ap '45 900w

JONES, STEPHEN BARR. Boundary-making; a handbook for statesmen, treaty editors and boundary commissioners; with a foreword by S. Whittemore Boggs. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Monograph ser) 268p $3 Columbia univ. press

320.128 Boundaries 45-4928

"The author discusses, with a wealth of concrete detail, such matters as the classifications and functions of boundaries, the human and physical factors in their making, and the technical problems involved in delimitation and demarcation." Foreign Affairs

"As excellent as this volume is—and I agree it is the best introduction in any language—it seldom carries one beyond the mentality of 1919. We need to go further, and one looks to Jones for that progress." Roderick Peattie
+ — Am J Soc 51:345 Ja '46 360w

"The usefulness of Dr. Jones' work is greatly enhanced by a clear and readable style. While intended primarily for boundary-makers, the volume will be of interest to historians, political scientists, and others who concern themselves with territorial problems." N. L. Hill
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1028 O '45 750w
Booklist 42:104 D 1 '45

"This scholarly treatise is an important addition to the literature of political geography."
+ Foreign Affairs 24:159 O '45 50w

"The theoretical treatment has been purposely kept brief. Nevertheless, this first part of the book forms an excellent introduction to the subject. . . The book contains some twenty-five well-chosen maps illustrating particular cases. . . The bibliography is particularly valuable for the inclusion of a large number of treaties and official reports."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:37 D '45 280w

JORDAN, DAVID FRANCIS, and WILLETT, EDWARD F. Spend wisely and grow rich; how to manage your money. 378p $3 Prentice-Hall

332 Finance, Personal. Investments. Saving and thrift

"Some rearrangement and revision, with new chapters on inflation, taxation, and insurance, in a book that first appeared under the title Managing personal finances." (Booklist) For earlier book see Book Review Digest, 1937. Selected readings. Index.

"Whether you are one of those paragons in handling personal finances, who keeps everything budgeted to the last penny, or if you are like many ordinary mortals who do most of their spending direct from their left-hand trousers pockets, you will find real value in this book on how to manage your money." John Pitt
+ Book Week p8 O 14 '45 360w
Booklist 42:59 O 15 '45

"It is a book that any layman could read and understand. Its descriptions and conclusions are well balanced and represent the consensus of opinion of many level headed businessmen." P. L. Gamble
+ Springf'd Republican p4 N 12 '45 120w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. Miss Warren's son. 220p $2.50 Appleton-Century 45-6049

A lonely young woman, just recovered from a serious illness, finds herself the guardian of a charming small boy. Her interest in Tony and her intention to adopt him brings about her full recovery, and a happy ending for all concerned.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p6 Jl 22 '45 230w
Booklist 42:166 Ja 15 '46
Kirkus 13:206 My 15 '45 130w

"Elizabeth Jordan's style leans to the proper and sedate—with her heroine always well garbed and well poised, but occasionally breaking into a gurgling laugh. The little boy is moderately engaging, with his funniest characteristic a habit of saying 'vewy' for 'very.' A lightly entertaining story for readers interested in question-asking little boys." B. S.
N Y Times p14 Jl 22 '45 230w

"If you are looking for light summer reading Miss Warren's Son will fill the bill." H. J. Sloan
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 180w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p23 Jl 29 '45 120w

JORDAN, MARY V. Now and forever. 240p $2 Bruce pub. 45-9932

"Story of a girl trained to be a religieuse who, just before making her final vows, leaves the convent and soon thereafter marries a doctor who is an atheist. Her marriage is a continuing struggle not to adjust her faith to the exigencies of her self-chosen relationship, but to bend her husband to her faith. At every crisis she escapes into her religion, and his human needs—including understanding and companionship, go begging. Just before his death in a Jap-infested island of the Pacific, she converts him to acceptance of her belief, in a very dramatic climax." Book Week

Book Week p35 N 11 '45 140w
Cath World 162:284 D '45 200w

"Too much pious talk inhibits the fast action and clear character delineation necessary to a good novel. And it is too much of a novel to make it a good sermon. It is primarily suitable for the library of a convent."
Kirkus 13:508 N 15 '45 130w
Springf'd Republican p4d D 30 '45 180w

JORDAN, MAX. Beyond all fronts; a bystander's notes on this thirty years war. 386p $3 Bruce pub.

940.52 World politics. World war, 1939-. Germany—Politics and government. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-51444

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Jordan's book, deliberately discursive but always interesting, is as full of lessons as Shirer's Berlin Diary, and deserves as wide a circulation." F. A. Hermens
+ Ann Am Acad 239:189 My '45 500w

"Beyond All Fronts is more than a personal history. It is a valuable document for the thrilling story of international reporting by wireless. Best of all, it is an explanation, by a cosmopolitan who elected to become an American citizen, of the chain of events that unloosed World War II." J. F. Thorning
+ Cath World 160:565 Mr '45 360w
Christian Century 62:145 Ja 31 '45 130w
Foreign Affairs 23:513 Ap '45 50w

"What makes his argument especially interesting is his manner of stating it. Mr. Jordan writes in easy, down-to-earth, conversational style when he is reporting. He had wide personal acquaintance with German

JORDAN, MAX—Continued
liberals and conservatives. He spent many a Bierabend with old cronies and friends, talking about the rise of Hitler, the course of appeasement, the approaching cataclysm. Once the Nazis came to power and war began, a Bierabend had to be passed in the secrecy of a non-Nazi cellar. In time the terror eliminated them." Frederick Gruin
+ Sat R of Lit 28:8 F 10 '45 800w

Discussion by Lewis Mumford
Sat R of Lit 28:5 Ag 11 '45

Reviewed by C. H. Chesley
Springf'd Republican p4 F 12 '45 280w
Wis Lib Bul 41:46 Ap '45

JORDAN, MILDRED A. (MRS J. LEE BAUSHER). I won't, said the king; or, The purple flannel underwear; il. by Roger Duvoisin. 103p $2 Knopf 45-8327

Gay nonsense story about the King of Somewhere who hated the purple winter underwear his firm queen made him wear. One day he rebelled and ran away with his friend Pig, his favorite car, and one of his small sons. But when he caught pneumonia he realized the value of the hated purple underwear. Ages seven and up.

Book Week p23 N 11 '45 180w

"Roger Duvoisin's delightful drawings capture the spirit of nonsense and will delight all ages. Appealing gift book and a sure favorite."
+ Kirkus 13:421 S 15 '45 70w

"Very appropriately illustrated both in color and in black and white. Fun for reading aloud. Recommended for ages seven to eleven." V. W. Schott
+ Library J 70:980 O 15 '45 60w

"A merry, zany fairy tale, a trifle disjointed, but so full of the daft acts and conversation of highly individual royalty as to tickle the funny bones of all but the most solemn of youngsters. Even they should smile at Roger Duvoisin's illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p35 S 30 '45 180w

"The Printuplets seem to me self-conscious, deliberate humor whereas the travels of the King are natural nonsense. The pictures are bright and bold; the characters come out strong." M. L. Becker
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 N 25 '45 270w

JORDAN, MRS NINA (RALSTON). Mother Goose handicraft; il. by [the author]. 149p $2 Harcourt
680 Handicraft 45-35163

How to make Mother Goose characters and gadgets with paper, paste, crayons, cardboard and scissors.

Book Week p4 N 11 '45 130w
Booklist 42:22 S '45
Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

"The do-it-yourself parts are pleasantly simple, but the vocabulary of the directions is beyond the understanding level of the Mother Goose devotees. Black and white illustrations are factual, sound but uninspired, a bit on the dull side. There's some plus interest to craft teachers and primary grade teachers, and a gift appeal for those seeking something for convalescent children, for rainy day occupation, for buyers of 'The Devil makes work for idle hands' school."
— + Kirkus 13:295 Jl 1 '45 110w

"A welcome addition to the limited number of books on handicraft for very small children." Olive Brain
+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w
Sat R of Lit 28:82 N 10 '45 40w

"For the boys and girls who are familiar with and love the Mother Goose people [this book] offers fascinating suggestions for making these characters. . . The creations are simple enough for the nursery school 'artist' to make, and 9 or 10-year-olds could follow the directions themselves." P. H. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 80w

JOSEPHS, RAY. Argentine diary; with a foreword by Allan Chase. 358p $3 Random house [7s 6d Gollancz]
982 Argentina 44-6301

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Bookmark 6:13 Ja '45
Foreign Affairs 23:343 Ja '45 30w

"A highly coloured piece of reporting which though weak in interpretation does convey vividly the strange processes by which the Argentine brand of Fascism has developed."
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 20 '45 200w

"This book does not pretend to be an exhaustive analysis; it contains very little historical background to the present situation; neither the social structure of Argentina nor her foreign economic relations receive much more than passing references—and both of these are vital factors for a full understanding of what has happened. But on the purely political plane, Mr. Josephs has given us a first-class picture of the way Fascism is working in Argentina to disrupt the stability of the post-war world and threaten the security of other Latin-American states. Unless there is a radical change in the near future—and Mr. Josephs is not optimistic about the chances of that—this book may have to go on a shelf alongside Edgar Mowrer's Germany Puts the Clock Back." Norman MacKenzie
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:212 Mr 31 '45 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p326 Jl 14 '45 440w

JOSEPHSON, HANNAH, ed. See Aragon, L. Aragon, poet of the French resistance

JOYCE, JAMES. Stephen Hero. 234p $3.50 New directions [9s 6d Cape, J] 45-2654

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"For the general reader, 'Stephen Hero' is a much more valuable and interesting book than its modest title page would seem to indicate. For the student of Joyce it is a treasure. The general reader will find that it—like 'Dubliners' and the 'Portrait'—is easy to understand, while 'Ulysses' and 'Finnegan's Wake' are not. But students of Joyce and professing or potential writers will appreciate the exposition of his stylistic and literary aims, which gained in complexity, but never changed in direction; and the full portrayal of persons and situations that are alluded to, sometimes mysteriously, in later books." M. L. Hanley
+ Book Week p7 F 11 '45 270w

"This early draft of The Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man is a work of art in itself and, whatever may be the truth concerning the loss of the first part, the remnant is of distinct value. One cannot agree with Joyce that the manuscript was a schoolboy production and should have been destroyed. The accurate and detailed record of a growing mind betrays evidence of the actual transcripts Joyce made of conversations in which he participated or which he overheard but the principles of selection which governed his later work are already apparent." C. Wien and R. Schawlow
+ Canadian Forum 24:290 Mr '45 350w

"It is regrettable that it was published, not only because it clearly makes this writer a heretic, for he was generally so regarded, but also because it falls below the artistic average of his literary work." Barry Byrne
— Commonweal 41:450 F 16 '45 500w

"The history of this early version still is not altogether clear. Is it true that the author once threw it in the fire and that it was rescued from destruction by Mrs. Joyce? Apparently it will never be known for certain. What is clear, though, is that it is a work of genuine literary importance, not only to students of Joyce, but to anyone interested in modern fiction. It is always in its own right an intensely arresting piece of work that deserves to live. Spencer is right in saying that it is 'one of the best descriptions of a growing mind that has ever been written.'" Richard Watts

+ New Repub 112:518 Ap 16 '45 1150w

"For admirers of Joyce, for students of modern literature generally, this is bound to be, in an altogether unhackneyed sense of the word, the most important literary event of the year. And indeed there is hardly an exact parallel for it in all our literary history. Through the joint enterprise of the Harvard Library and the New Directions Press, we have here about one-third of the hitherto unpublished first draft of one of the most influential novels of our time." William Troy

+ N Y Times p6 F 11 '45 500w

"These pages, published now with all the loving care they deserve, must, I am sure, have as much appeal to the completely uninitiated as to those who will be tempted to make their comparisons, philological or historical, between Joyce's final text and the present version. Its being a torso only adds to the admiration for its writer's genius." Robert Post

+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 F 10 '45 550w

"Though Joyce dismissed it as a 'school-boy's production,' it is sensitive and readable by almost anybody's standards. In the early draft Joyce is a more recognizable college student—swaggering, confused, arrogant, emotional, but brilliant."

+ Time 45:99 F 26 '45 500w

JUDSON, ALEXANDER CORBIN. Life of Edmund Spenser. (Works of Edmund Spenser; ed. by E. Greenlaw and others) variorum ed 238p il $4.50 Johns Hopkins press

B or 92 Spenser, Edmund

"This biography forms part of the great 'Spenser Project' of the Johns Hopkins University and is supplementary to the Variorum Edition of the poet's works. . . It is the first 'full-length' life of Spenser to be published since 1884 when Alexander B. Grosart attached a biography to his edition of the poet's works. In the last sixty years, and more especially during the last quarter of a century and in this country, a great deal of scholarly research has been devoted to Spenser. . . Since Grosart's day a good deal of information about the poet's life has been brought to light. . . On the other hand, we are still in ignorance about many problems." Weekly Book Review

---

"The biography is in the same handsome format as the volumes of the Variorum Edition of the Works. The bibliography is useful; the index full; and the illustrations are appropriately chosen and excellently reproduced. Altogether, this is a work which literary scholarship will receive with acclaim and to which American humanists can point with pride."

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 10 '45 750w

"Professor Judson's admirable book should attract a large body of readers." S. C. Chew

+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 21 '45 1550w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). . . Petar's treasure; il. by Ursula Koering. 186p $2 Houghton

45-8890

"This latest tale by Clara Ingram Judson deals with a Dalmatian family who manage to make the long journey from Brac on the Dalmatian coast to Mississippi. . . The Petrovich family, used to the fishing industry at home, find their livelihood in the shrimp and oyster fishing and canning factory in America." (N Y Times) At head of title: They came from Dalmatia.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p20 N 25 '45 230w

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

Churchman 159:8 N 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:352 S '45 120w

Kirkus 13:369 Ag 15 '45 150w

"Style is somewhat forced and stilted, and the book will need introducing. Similar to other books by author in 'They Came from' series." J. E. Lynch

Library J 70:1092 N 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p34 N 4 '45 90w

"This is an appealing story, and a very honest one." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:69 N 10 '45 500w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 110w

JUDSON, HARRY HARLOW, and BROWN, JAMES MADISON. Occupational accident prevention. 234p $2.75 Wiley

331.823 Accidents—Prevention. Accidents, Industrial 44-51268

"A textbook and reference manual for supervisory employees and safety directors, outlining methods for controlling accidents in plant operation. It deals with the training of employees in safe work habits, the improving of plant and equipment to eliminate hazards, and the organizing of safety programs and allied activities such as first aid, plant inspections, and the selection and purchase of protective devices and clothing. The appendix contains a list of some twenty sound slide films for personnel training." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by W. G. Cole

Am J Pub Health 35:870 Ag '45 400w

Booklist 41:166 F 1 '45

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 40w

"This well-written and readable volume is recommended to industrial executives, particularly to those who have general direction of an accident-prevention program. Though not sufficiently inclusive or detailed to permit its use as a text or manual, the book presents accurately and concisely a sound general theory on the subject. Especially commendable is its emphasis on the fact that the creation and maintenance of safe working conditions is a responsibility which supervisory management cannot delegate to others but must shoulder itself." L. C. Miller

+ Management R 34:237 Je '45 380w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:55 O '44

JURAN, JOSEPH M. Management of inspection and quality control. 233p $3 Harper

658.562 Inspection. Factory management 45-3355

"Not a book on the use and operation of inspection instruments, but of management methods employed in setting up departments for inspection and quality control. Includes sampling methods, accuracy of inspectors, control sampling, line inspection, inspection staff functions, and systems of quality control techniques." Booklist

---

Booklist 41:265 My 15 '45

Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 70w

"On the whole, the book is well organized, and it thoroughly treats the subjects covered. Noteworthy are the author's repeated references to the similarity between the principles of inspection and public law enforcement which aptly document his discussion of inspection problems. Also, far from being carried overboard by zeal for statistical sampling and control charts, the author readily admits their limitations and ably defines their areas of usefulness. However, in his treatment of some specific inspection problems, Mr. Juran is on somewhat more dangerous ground. For example, he suggests that the purchasing department may properly determine that an inspector should not reject a lot of material received from

JURAN, J. M.—Continued
'a favored supplier' even though the lot clearly fails to meet technical standards." F. S. Atwater

+ — Management R 34:285 Jl '45 480w

Reviewed by Lee Cooper
N Y Times p22 Jl 8 '45 230w

JUSTUS, MAY. Banjo Billy and Mr Bones; pictures by Christine Chisholm. 63p $1.50 Whitman, A. 44-9334

Story of a Tennessee mountain boy, whose dearest possessions were a banjo and a dog named Mr Bones. Billy was an orphan and longed for a real home, and the story describes what steps he took to earn one.

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 69:1004 N 15 '44 60w
Springf'd Republican p4d F 11 '45 60w
Wis Lib Bul 41:56 My '45

K

KAEMPFFERT, WALDEMAR BERNHARD. Science today and tomorrow. 2d series 279p $2.75 Viking

500 Science. Technology. Inventions 45-4255

"The first series of this book appeared six years ago [Book Review Digest, 1939]. In this second series the science editor of the New York Times has made a careful revision of the first, and added a great deal of fresh material. The topics discussed range from new advances in synthetic chemistry and electronics, new aspects of the sun and other members of the solar system, explorations into the upper atmosphere and beyond in rocket ships, to thoughts on evolution, brain waves and psychology." New Repub

Reviewed by Bruno Gebhard
Am J Pub Health 35:962 S '45 40w
Booklist 42:21 S '45

"The science and engineering editor of The New York Times has won for himself a large audience among the everyday reading public through his ability to discuss chemistry, medicine, astronomy, and engineering progress in a manner which both enlightens and entertains." H. W. Stenerson

+ Chem & Eng N 23:1207 Jl 10 '45 400w
Kirkus 13:55 F 1 '45 130w
Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 70w

"The author indulges in tantalizing speculations concerning the world of countless tomorrows. This is done from a broad and accurate knowledge of present-day science, and with the clarity and restraint that Kaempffert always displays. Added value is given to this provocative collection of essays by the author's long preoccupation with the impacts of an advancing science on a bewildered society."

+ New Repub 112:653 My 7 '45 150w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:29 Ap '45

"The second series of Waldemar Kaempffert's 'Science Today and Tomorrow,' of which half the material is entirely new and the remainder revised to keep it abreast of wartime developments, reminds us that we depend heavily on such writers as he to open our eyes to the drama and meaning of technological advance. His consistent success in spanning the gap between the supremely rational world of the scientist-engineer and the muddled world of Everyman is strikingly apparent in a book crammed with exciting and informative material." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p6 My 27 '45 900w

"Between the first and last chapters, there are essays on all the latest advancements in science, covering a great diversity of subject matter and written in Mr. Kaempffert's well-known breezy manner whereby he translates scientific facts into non-technical language for the layman. Some of the pages deal with discovered data; others contain prophecies based on logical premises. The names of scientists constantly occur to substantiate claims or to point to diversity of opinion. . . The book as a whole imparts the sense of breathless speed with which science today is rushing forward."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 Je '45 420w

Reviewed by W. B. Kirkham
Springf'd Republican p6 My 7 '45 480w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:51 S '45 200w

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt
Weekly Book Review p10 Je 10 '45 500w

KAFKA, ROGER, and PEPPERBURG, ROY L., eds. Warships of the world; with il. by D. R. Merrill. 1038p $15 Cornell maritime

623.825 Warships. Navies. World war, 1939—Naval operations 44-7455

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Warships of the World does not replace Jane's, but it does supplement it. Although in some technical details it is less informative, its emphasis upon American naval craft and events, its readable style, clear illustrations, larger type, and more convenient size lend to it a popular appeal lacking in Jane's. Libraries or reference departments that can afford them will want both volumes. If only one can be purchased, choice can be based upon the type of patron to be served. If a high percentage of patrons are technical men, Jane's will be more useful. If the volume must meet equally the demands of groups with diversified interests, as in smaller, general libraries, Warships of the World would be first choice."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:30 Ap '45 700w

KAHN, EDGAR MYRON. Cable car days in San Francisco. rev ed 134p il $3 Stanford univ. press

979.461 San Francisco—History. Street railroads—San Francisco A44-5206

"A segment of San Francisco history in an anecdotal account of its cable car transportation, illustrated with drawings and old photographs. First published in 1940, now slightly expanded and revised." Booklist

Booklist 41:155 Ja 15 '45

"In this illustrated volume Mr. Kahn has told the story of San Francisco's cable lines, with brief reference to the horse-car lines which preceded them. His account is no doubt of value to historians, but it makes exceedingly dull reading." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 F 4 '45 160w

KAHRL, GEORGE MORROW. Tobias Smollett, traveler-novelist. 165p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press

823 Smollett, Tobias George A45-2737

"Tobias Smollett is an early and excellent example of the novelist-traveler or the traveler-novelist, who . . . wrote both prose fiction and a book of travels. The present study is concentrated on the bearing Smollett's travels and his acquaintance with the literature of travel had on his prose fiction." Pref

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 My 27 '45 360w
Booklist 41:318 Je 1 '45

"Mr. Kahrl's study is of the severer academic sort, exhaustive in its record of details and making no concessions to the nonspecialist. It is not likely to attract readers to Smollett, but will interest those who are attached to him already. It contains also information of value to students of the literature of travel in general."

Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 28 '45 550w

Reviewed by John Senior
Nation 160:628 Je 2 '45 180w

"This book is a contribution to our understanding of Smollett's sources (both what he saw and what he read) and of his milieu. A comparable contribution to our understanding of 'his powers' would require, I think, a more analytical treatment of his fiction than Mr. Kahrl has seen fit to give us. The book is for scholars and readers enough devoted to Smollett to be interested in things both importantly and casually related to him." Edward Hubler

N Y Times p6 My 13 '45 550w

"If Mr. Kahrl has not written to entertain, he has provided many pages that will reward, and thereby please, the non-specialists. . . Mr. Kahrl rides no hobbies and promotes no pet theories. He is eager to discover the personal sources of Smollett's novels, but also determined to distinguish between discovery and speculation; and wary of all dubious identifications of the characters and facts of life with the characters and facts of fiction." B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 28:31 Je 16 '45 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p309 Je 30 '45 500w

Reviewed by Samuel Chew

Weekly Book Review p14 Je 10 '45 270w

KALSEM, PALMER JOHN. Practical supervision; ed. by Norman M. Johnston, jr. 186p il $2 McGraw

658.3 Employment management. Foremen 45-7001

"A guide to personal leadership, primarily for industrial and office supervisors. Written in popular terms and illustrated with cartoons that emphasize the human-relations angle in supervisory problems it offers specific helps in developing subordinates to maximum efficiency and in meeting the requirements of both workers and management. It is based on a series of booklets written for supervisors at the Glenn L. Martin Company. A suggested reading list contains some thirty books with brief evaluations." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 42:143 Ja 1 '46

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:36 Jl '45

KALTENBORN, HANS VON. Europe now; a first-hand report. 187p $2.50 Didier pubs.

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-3516

An account of the author's trip to Europe during the last weeks of 1944 and the early part of 1945. Contents: Flight to Europe; North Africa; Italy's dilemma; Rebirth of France; Western front; Belgium; Unflinching Britain; Summing up. Index.

Reviewed by Sterling North

— Book Week p2 Ap 1 '45 800w

Booklist 41:252 My 1 '45

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 161:362 Je '45 350w

"It's all quite intimate and entertaining. But even such an experienced and able observer as Mr. Kaltenborn can hardly hope to make more than cursory appraisals either of men or events in such a brief period of flitting about. Five weeks is a short period for even a bird's-eye view of the greatest war in history." H. M.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 10 '45 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45

"This is a good example of how not to write a book."

— Foreign Affairs 23:688 Jl '45 40w

Kirkus 13:99 Mr 1 '45 300w

"The peace that will come to Europe before 1945 is out will be only an armistice; while it will end the larger conflict of arms between Germany and the Allied Powers, it will also release pent-up antagonisms. This is the somber warning advanced by H. V. Kaltenborn, dean of radio news commentators, in this plain-spoken, provocative book based on a winter trip through western Europe, in the course of which he interviewed Pope Pius XII and scores of top Allied soldiers and diplomats." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 22 '45 450w

"Mr. Kaltenborn writes here much as he speaks, trenchantly and personally. 'Europe Now' is a readable, fast-moving, hard-hitting little volume." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 28:60 Ap 14 '45 1200w

Reviewed by Beach Conger

Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 22 '45 650w

KANE, HARNETT THOMAS. Plantation parade; the grand manner in Louisiana. 342p il $3.50 Morrow

976.3 Louisiana—History. Plantation life. Louisiana—Social life and customs 45-8859

Descriptive history of the life in the great plantation homes of Louisiana, during the years 1830 to 1860, when living in the great manner was the rule of the country. Illustrated with photographs. Bibliography. Index.

"Kane tells the story persuasively, with neither his tongue in cheek nor with bated breath of the professional Southerner. His manner is good-humored rather than humorous and, while he is perfectly aware of the overall faults of the system he writes about, he also points out that the grand manner had more than a few amenities." Harold Sinclair

+ — Book Week p4 N 18 '45 500w

Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 162:376 Ja '46 370w

"All those who enjoy reading of the American scene owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Kane. In this and two other good books, he has added an exotic chapter to American social history." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 12 '45 600w

Kirkus 13:413 S 15 '45 150w

"It is necessary to know something of this historical background before we can appreciate the quality of Mr. Kane's book. What he has done is, essentially, to write a series of biographies of some of Louisiana's most famous families; it is not to his discredit as a writer that he has stressed the most picturesque and dramatic details that he can find concerning his planters. . . The materials which he has assembled are impressive. . . Yet Mr. Kane, for all his industry, does not quite succeed in giving us a clear picture of the life lived in Louisiana by the French settlers and their descendants." J. G. Fletcher

+ — N Y Times p8 D 23 '45 2000w

"The book is illustrated with a good collection of pictures of the old houses, but good as it is, it seems a little unfortunate. Black and white pictures of what is left of the past are disillusioning beside Kane's vivid prose. The prose seems more true. Time and a photographer are not the artists to take the photograph of the great ghosts of old grandeur. It is Harnett Kane's gift that he has made the old, grand folk and their great houses seem as real as the little, strange, gentle, and tough living folk of Louisiana." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 28:46 N 17 '45 500w

"This is a study of the feudal way of life in old Louisiana, a history of some of its great houses, and account of the doings, tragic and gay, of the plantation owners and their families. Excellent stuff—well documented, cleanly written, and illustrated with thirty-two pages of good photographs." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 25 '45 750w

Wis Lib Bul 41:126 D '45

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. Glory for me. 268p $2.50 Coward-McCann

811 45-35238

This novel in verse tells the story of three American soldiers, discharged from the services for medical causes, and their return to the same home town.

KANTOR, MACKINLAY—Continued
Reviewed by John Holmes
Atlantic 177:157 Ja '46 600w

"It is primarily an exciting and moving story—despite the blankest blank verse you've ever read, despite iambic pentameters that wander off into near prose—and it is as a story that it should be widely and deservedly popular." A. C. Spectorsky
+ — Book Week p25 N 11 '45 1250w
Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45

"If MacKinlay Kantor weren't quivering with indignation, he might have written an interesting post-war novel. I say 'might' because I doubt if any author who disposes of his characters so sentimentally could handle this subject. . . 'Glory for Me' is being made into a movie by Samuel Goldwyn. . . Robert Sherwood is writing the script. No doubt Sherwood will put this verse into straight prose. It is to be hoped that he will also omit the book's bad taste in its sexy passages and explicit descriptions of body functions. Kantor's main subject, the warriors' return, which has already been handled in plays, movies and books, deserves further treatment, but should be stated with thought and understanding, not with sentiment and cynicism in the heat of anger." P. T. Hartung
— Commonweal 43:268 D 21 '45 700w
Kirkus 13:374 S 1 '45 250w

"Fine novel in verse." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Paul Griffith
— N Y Times p20 N 25 '45 400w

"This review is the record of a disappointment. The idea of writing a study of the problems of the returned soldier and sailor in narrative verse is original and might be highly interesting. . . But Mr. Kantor is neither sufficient poet nor novelist to overcome the difficulties in his ambitious undertaking. 'Glory for Me' just doesn't ring the bell." R. E. Spiller
— Sat R of Lit 28:6 D 22 '45 500w

"As for the free verse form, peculiarly there seems to be a tendency to adopt this medium in writing of war, but 'Glory For Me' lacks spontaneity. Mr. Kantor's irratic use of both metrical and nonmetrical versification has occasional flashes of commanding brilliance, but his style of composition is alien to the poetic medium and much of what perforce is termed 'free verse' is merely rhetorical exhortation, and a linear, broken-field, hardboiled prose. Unfortunately, too, portions of 'Glory For Me' are frankly dull, and others inexcusably filthy. What might have been a distillation of the fine scorn and white heat of the author's anger has been poured out in a noisy, self-conscious chant." L. S. Munn
— + Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 480w

"Whatever criticism one may have for Mr. Kantor's solution, there is no question but that he has produced an often eloquent, frequently deeply effective work, which ranks with his very best, a high level of literary craftsmanship indeed. Despite the difficult medium he has used, he has written a smooth, quick-flowing document, the mature product of a writer whose skills, long recognized, have seldom been employed to such deep-felt purpose." Barrett McGurn
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 N 25 '45 650w

KAPLAN, ABRAHAM DAVID HANNATH. Liquidation of war production. 133p $1.50 McGraw

338.91 Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. Industry—Postwar organization. U.S.—Economic policy 44-6382

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"This is a sensible, well written, and useful book. It is not marked by penetrating analysis; a number of difficult problems are skipped over too hastily; and the author is perhaps more optimistic than the facts warrant. Despite these weaknesses, Professor Kaplan is to be congratulated on the good sense, broad perspective, simple style, and considerable expository ability he has blended in this monograph. And the Committee for Economic Development is to be complimented on the high level of its research studies thus far published. It is gratifying to see economists and business men joining forces in this way to bring the objectivity and tools of economic analysis to bear on the critical problems facing government and business in the years ahead." R. A. Gordon
+ Am Econ R 35:465 Je '45 1050w

Reviewed by Lowry Nelson
Am Soc R 10:96 F '45 600w
Foreign Affairs 23:695 Jl '45 60w

"Although the technical problems dealt with in the volume do not easily lend themselves to dramatization, the book is written in a lively style and the presentation is well integrated and organized. Without attempting to settle all the great issues which the economic aftermath of the war will engender, Dr. Kaplan proves himself a competent and enlightened guide to the solution of intricate and controversial problems. The manifest consideration for the interest of the consumer which permeates this volume honors the author as well as the sponsoring organization." H. W. Spiegel
+ Pol Sci Q 60:121 Mr '45 750w
Special Libraries 36:60 F '45

KAPLAN, OSCAR J., ed. Mental disorders in later life. 436p il $5 Stanford univ. press [30s Oxford]

618.97 Old age. Mental diseases A45-4040

"Papers by a group of workers in the allied fields of statistics, psychology, psychiatry, and sociology are here presented to form a symposium on problems of senescence. Among the fifteen chapters, H. W. Dunham's contribution to the sociological aspects is stimulating, and contains an interesting contrast of Chinese and American cultural factors influencing security in the aged. The clinical chapters indicate personal acquaintance with the material discussed: for example, Mental Health and Nutrition in Old Age, Neuroses of Later Maturity, The Involutional Psychoses, The Presenile Dementias, The Aged Subnormal. Bibliographies at the ends of the chapters document the subjects." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"A psychiatrist like myself who is confronted with the almost daily task of making a proper 'disposition' of border-line cases of old people, finds little help or recognition of his difficulties—or rather, the difficulties of his patients—in this book. It is not a delusion of the old, but a grim fact, that so often there is no proper place in our society for the host of old people who show minor and harmless abnormalities of thought or emotion. What happens to them in the mental institutions where they are sent faute de mieux in large numbers is all too often a mixture of neglect and brutality which spells slow extermination. Let the philosophers who are now pondering the problem of collective guilt figure this one out." Frederick Wertham
New Repub 113:538 O 22 '45 650w

"The variety of points of view and the clinical data should interest the physician who sees the patient in his practice, the psychiatrist who is responsible for institutional care, the anthropologist, the social scientist, and the psychologist."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:58 D '45 170w

KARASH, JOSEPH IVAN. Analysis of drill-jig design. 333p il $3 McGraw

621.9 Drilling and boring machinery. Jigs and fixtures 45-1119

"The purpose is to present a detailed examination of the mental processes involved in the design of drill-jigs and thereby suggest a plan of procedure for all tool design problems. The basic steps emphasized are (1) the gathering of information about available machine equipment, and the part to be made; (2) the making of essential decisions, based on this information, in their proper sequence." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 69:815 O 1 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:62 O '44

KARDINER, ABRAM, and others. Psychological frontiers of society. 475p $5 Columbia univ. press

301.15 Social psychology. Ethnopsychology A45-3605

"This book undertakes to describe a technique for studying the reciprocal relations between culture and personality, and to furnish a reliable critique of cultural forms." (Pref) Dr. Kardiner is a member of the Department of Anthropology, Columbia University, and is also distinguished for work in psychiatry.

Reviewed by W. D. Wallis
Ann Am Acad 242:200 N '45 500w

Current Hist 9:324 O '45 70w

Reviewed by Delmore Schwartz
Nation 162:47 Ja 12 '46 950w

"The Psychological Frontiers of Society is ambitious in title and bulk, but its text is full of qualifications, reservations, circumlocutions and terminological vagaries which will disappoint those who expected close scientific thinking." Frederic Wertham
— New Repub 113:578 O 29 '45 600w

"This book represents too important a development in the psychology of society to be paid the dubious compliment of uncritical accolades. Though far from immune to occasional flaws and questionable inferences, it moves along a broad front of perceptive inquiry, in which techniques of analysis are effectively described, important new findings about the development of human nature are made and promising lines of further investigation are clearly set forth. The direction of future work in a basic social science cannot help but be affected by the correlation which has been achieved in this book." R. K. Merton
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 1 '45 1950w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 Jl '45 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:19 D '45 300w

KARIG, WALTER (KEATS PATRICK, pseud). Lower than angels. 370p $2.75 Farrar 45-1224

Detailed, realistic story of a boy's life from the age of six to early manhood. The time covers the first two decades of the twentieth century, the place is the home of a lower middle class family, first in Brooklyn and then in Staten Island.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 175:127 My '45 300w

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p3 Mr 4 '45 800w

"A newcomer, Walter Karig, whose sincere and revealing realism has a certain universality that recommends it, only a lack of warmth, of humor, keeps it from reaching the status of greatness the publishers claim."
+ — Kirkus 12:549 D 15 '44 260w

Reviewed by G. W. Hill
Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 70w

"Somewhere between A Tree Grows in Staten Island and An American Tragi-Comedy, Lower than Angels records an average existence in average prose."
New Repub 112:309 F 26 '45 70w

"The novel is a new form for Mr. Karig, but he is an old hand at writing and at people, having been a soldier, a teacher, a newspaper man, a diplomat, a naval officer, an illustrator and various other things which no doubt helped him to draw so accurate a portrait of our 'common man.'" Thomas Haynes
+ N Y Times p5 F 25 '45 650w

"When you have said that Mr. Karig's novel is an honest effort, you will be hard pressed to find other praise for this exceedingly tedious story."
— + New Yorker 21:94 Mr 17 '45 180w

"'Lower Than Angels' is a 'take-it-or-leave-it' first novel. The reader will either admire the author for his courage and industry in writing it, or he will find it so depressing a chunk of early twentieth-century Americana that he will be unwilling to give it house-room. It is hard to imagine anyone who finishes it being half-hearted about it. But if you start reading it, you will find it as painfully fascinating as a sore tooth and as difficult to leave alone." Harrison Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:18 F 17 '45 1000w

Time 45:97 F 26 '45 650w

"Marvin Long is so deadly typical, so completely average, that he can be multiplied by several hundred thousand and studied as a class. As Walter Karig has depicted him, the details never once depart from reality; the conversation might have been taken down stenographically; the thoughts, the events, the slightest movements, are painted in with complete fidelity. Although this is his first novel, Mr. Karig has been writing for a generation, and his ear for language, his acute sense of color and tone, are here combined with his knowledge of America and her people to produce a fine and an enlightening book." David Tilden
+ Weekly Book Review p6 F 25 '45 700w

KARNEY, JACK. There goes Shorty Higgins. 243p $2.50 Morrow 45-1019

Shorty Higgins is a New York fight manager, whose life's ambition is to come up with a champion. The story is of his career, his women, his friends, and the men who fight in the ring, and often lose.

"'There Goes Shorty Higgins' should suit that undetermined audience whose tastes embrace both box-fighting and moderately light reading. As a plain tale of those for whom the gong rings, it wins a decision. And, despite reliance on the stereotyped, Karney tells his story with some technical skill, sympathy and perspective on character, which suggests he may weigh in more heavily for his next event." Warren Beck
+ — Book Week p2 F 18 '45 450w

"As—and if—novels of the prize ring go, this is good, a highpaced, hard-mouthed inside story of the tactics, the shyster manoeuvers, the fickleness and the feverish fascination of the fight game."
+ Kirkus 12:548 D 15 '44 100w

"Lacking a very convincing story in the first place, 'There Goes Shorty Higgins' is more or less on the ropes over most of the route, which is not the best way to take a decision." J. K. H.
N Y Times p12 F 25 '45 310w

"A good Broadway yarn that pulls no punches." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 4 '45 110w

KARROFF, K. K. DE, pseud. See Cummins, K.

KARSAVINA, JEAN. Reunion in Poland; drawings by Lynd Ward. 126p $1.85 Int. pubs. 45-9834

Wanda Gorska and her engineer father were in Moscow in late 1944. Her mother and foster brother had disappeared somewhere in Poland. When the news of the Lublin government came, the Gorskas went back to their ruined country, to look for their loved ones, and to help in the reconstruction. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 42:113 D 1 '45

Kirkus 13:494 N 1 '45 110w

"Appealing girls' story and one to aid in understanding today's young Polish people. Recommended for young people's collections." M. C. Scoggin
+ Library J 70:1192 D 15 '45 70w

"The author's enthusiasm for the Lublin Government seems at times to over-simplify Polish problems, but this is a moving story, with no punches pulled." M. F.
+ — N Y Times p26 N 11 '45 110w

"This is a novel, a love story. It is, too, a thrilling and beautifully written record of the war." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:68 N 10 '45 600w

KASANIN, JACOB SERGI, ed. Language and thought in schizophrenia; collected papers presented at the meeting of the American psychiatric association, May 12, 1939, Chicago, Ill, and brought up to date; with a pref. by Nolan D. C. Lewis. 133p $2 Univ. of Calif. [12s Cambridge]

132.198 Dementia. Language and languages. Thought and thinking A44-568

Collection of eight articles by different authors on the nature of the disturbances of thought and language in schizophrenia. Contents: The language of schizophrenia, by H. S. Sullivan; Methodological approach to the study of schizophrenic thought disorder, by Kurt Goldstein; The disturbance of conceptual thinking in schizophrenia, by J. S. Kasanin; Experimental analysis of schizophrenic thinking, by Norman Cameron; A method of distinguishing and evaluating formal thinking disorders in schizophrenia, by J. D. Benjamin; Errors in perception and fantasy in schizophrenia, by S. J. Beck; The specific laws of logic in schizophrenia, by E. von Domarus; Disturbances of thinking in schizophrenia, by Andras Angyal.

"The reviewer finds that the contributors have covered fairly well the basic problems of thought-disturbances in schizophrenia; but the difficulties of language have been only casually and superficially treated. Although most of the contributors acknowledge the close relationship between language and thought, they have almost systematically neglected the considerable amount of work done in the former field. Particularly conspicuous is the omission of any but passing reference to the rôle of sign and signal meanings of words, including the important work of Ogden, Schilder, and the semanticists. It is not possible to understand the thinking of the schizophrenic without knowing his language and it is regrettable that it was not possible to include contributions where the writers' primary interests were in the linguistic sphere. In spite of this limitation the volume will be found to be a generally useful handbook. Some psychologists will be particularly interested in it because of the considerable space devoted to the results obtained by the use of tests and of psychometric techniques." David Wechsler

Am J Psychol 58:135 Ja '45 2000w

"It is rather disturbing that not a single author took pains to refer to any of the standard works about language and its relation to thought and mind. If the authors had taken into consideration the basic distinctions between the different forms and symbolic functions of the language, a higher level of clarification of the disturbance of language and thought in schizophrenia could have been achieved. The author of this review wonders whether this lack of integration among the different fields of scientific research should not itself be considered as a grave symptom of a 'cultural schizophrenia' of our age." Gustav Ichheiser

Am J Soc 50:170 S '44 300w

KATES, EDGAR JESSE. Diesel-electric plants. 2d ed 272p il $3.75 Am. tech. soc.

621.436 Diesel engines. Electric plants 45-7157

"Second edition of this book on Diesel plant electrical equipment has been revised to date. Chapters on voltage regulation include information concerning the quick-acting rheostatic type regulators, the electronic units and the simple vibrating types in use. Chapter on engine governors includes new forms of hydraulic and improved mechanical governors. Other data includes automatic synchronizing and electric starting and transmission for Diesel locomotives." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936.

Booklist 42:131 D 15 '45

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 80w

KATZ, ADELE T. Challenge to musical tradition; a new concept of tonality. 408p $7.50 Knopf

781 Music—Theory. Tonality. Schenker, Heinrich 45-9432

"An exposition of Schenker's theoretical principles and their application to a study of tonality as the unifying element in music. Its purpose is to show that tonality as viewed in the light of Schenker is the binding force in the music of certain selected composers—J. S. Bach, C. P. E. Bach, Haydn and Beethoven—all of whom are regarded as innovators. The author further demonstrates how the techniques of Wagner foreshadowed a collapse of the older system, how Debussy contributed to its demise, and how Stravinsky and Schoenberg administered the coup de grace. Finally, Miss Katz goes on record with the assurance that no other theory can so clearly reveal the structure and techniques of music." (Weekly Book Review) Bibliography.

"A scholarly, richly documented work, with detailed studies of key composers significant for their innovations."

+ Kirkus 13:410 S 15 '45 90w

"Miss Katz is indeed challenging in her detailed analyses of works by 18th and early 19th century composers, but increasingly futile as she approaches our own age. Nonetheless, the book is one of the few serious theoretical studies to be published in this country, and is a required purchase for most music libraries." R. S. Hill

+ — Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 140w

"One-sided doctrinaire attitudes inevitably carry with them grave deficiencies, and as usual with the Schenker disciples (as with the master himself), the author's historical and esthetic equipment is woefully inadequate. Indications of a misguided approach to art are evident in the way she speaks of music as 'demonstrating' one point or another of her adopted analytic procedure. . . In the section devoted to more recent music, the author cannot seem to decide whether she disapproves of the music or of the theoreticians who try to account for it. No, music is not so bleak a subject as it appears in 'Challenge to Musical Tradition.' " P. H. Lang

Weekly Book Review p24 N 18 '45 900w

KAUFFMANN, STANLEY. This time forever; a romance. 248p $2.50 Doubleday 45-2912

Love story of two generations. Kenneth Gibbs, music professor in a small Pennsylvania college, cherishes a miniature left him by his father. The picture of the lovely woman has become real to him and he tries to forget an unhappy marriage by talking to his Philippa. On a trip to New York the girl actually comes to life, and Kenneth follows her to a happy ending.

Reviewed by J. N. North

Book Week p4 Mr 25 '45 450w

"Whimsy and tenderness for a moderately modern love story in the rental field."

Kirkus 12:550 D 15 '44 150w

"Frustration expresses itself in a novel note of dissonance in this lightly readable romance. . . The denouement is hardly the breath-taking business it might be, but it's pleasantly diverting." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p27 F 25 '45 130w

"Nice going—and goings on!" Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 8 '45 110w

KAY, EDITH W., and SHAW, WALTER F. How to start your own business. 240p il $2 Ziff-Davis

658.87 Retail trade 45-7808

"Good general information necessary for anyone starting a small business. Includes such things as planning budgets, location, interiors, necessary equipment, records, employees, advertising, and good will. Gives estimates of capital and operating costs of various types of small business concerns." Booklist

Booklist 42:33 O 1 '45
Bookmark 6:6 N '45

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS PENROSE FRY). Kitchen fugue. 213p $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Cookery 45-8008

A volume of informally written essays, autobiographical in tone, and centering chiefly in the author's experiences as an amateur cook in war-time England. Many pages of the book are devoted to such matters as how to cook a rabbit, make a soup out of scraps, ice-cream out of condensed milk, etc. Other chapters, however, describe home life in the 1890s, the invention of the cannon, the author's cats, and the hens and ducks of the poultry yard.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p12 S 23 '45 650w
Booklist 42:34 O 1 '45
Bookmark 6:8 N '45

"A book delectable for present reading and then for Christmas giving!" Katherine Brégy
+ Cath World 162:182 N '45 500w

"One may not agree with all of her opinions, nor share all of her tastes, but one cannot fail to be beguiled. This is not a lending-library book, but one to be owned, even by Americans who have no curiosity about the cookery of the groper or the pilchard." E. W. G.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '45 550w

"These are cockle-warming, civilized belles-lettres, completely unpretentious: the jottings in her commonplace book of a delightfully complete human being at a most uncommon (we hope) moment in human history." Anne Fremantle
+ Commonweal 43:99 N 9 '45 500w
+ Kirkus 13:307 Jl 15 '45 150w

"The book is a ragout of recipes for eating and thinking; a splendid casserole, harmoniously integrated, the blending subtle and the flavors separate and delicious. At the moment, it might be expected that His Majesty's subjects would be more than usually biased in favor of the rations on which they survived. 'Kitchen Fugue,' ironic, detached, amused, proves conclusively that a liberal sense of humor can rise serenely over the deepest and most natural prejudice." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p5 S 16 '45 1000w

" 'Kitchen Fugue' is a book of fine feeling and deft analysis; a book to read and to cherish; a book of simplicity and some sternness, totally without sloppy sentiment, which pays tribute to that kitchen battlefield that carried on even when 'there was silence in the heavens for the space of half an hour.' " Margaret Christie
+ Sat R of Lit 28:47 S 29 '45 550w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman
Springf'd Republican p6 O 2 '45 360w

"The book is full of literary and biblical allusions; it is humble and deprecatory. And though Sheila Kaye-Smith writes of war-time British kitchens, where even spam found friends, she has an attitude toward food, and its makers, that is joyous and respectful." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 16 '45 1200w

KEAN, CHARLES DUELL. Christianity and the cultural crisis; introd. by Reinhold Niebuhr. 211p $2 Assn. press; Revell

301 Sociology, Christian. Civilization, Christian 45-6328

"An attempt to present the Christian Gospel as the frame of reference that transcends history and supplies the perspective with which the historical problems of political economy, industrial relations, postwar employment, and international peace may be tackled." (Pref)

Contents: The crisis of civilization; From the standpoint of history; Who owns what?; Our world of wheels and machines; The machine-age culture; The evolution of work; Unemployment; Employment and social security; Work and personality; The world community; The church and the school; Christianity and the future. Index.

Reviewed by H. T. Houf
+ Christian Century 62:681 Je 6 '45 850w

"For numbers of reasons this is an important book; for instance, it is encouraging to have a churchman undertake the task of investigating the economic characteristics of present-day society and the attitude of the church to the problems created by it. . . In addition, the author has given an excellent summary, albeit from popular and secondary sources for the most part, of the sort of world in which any religious group must function. Religion cannot be lived in a vacuum. Another reason why this book may be read with profit is that it points out clearly the danger of fascism coming when capitalism is sick unto death. . . If this book, although somewhat marred by a too frequent use of a variety of cliches, can only awaken church groups to a realization of the imperative need of a frank and objective facing of economic and social problems, it will have performed a first-class public service." H. W. Cross
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 600w

KEENAN, JOSEPH HENRY, and KAYE, JOSEPH. Thermodynamic properties of air; including polytropic functions. 73p $2.25 Wiley

536.7 Air. Thermodynamics 45-6257

"This collection of tables includes not only the usual thermodynamic properties of air, but also values for viscosity, thermal conductivity and Prandtl number. Several tables list functions of the pressure ratio for a range of values of the polytropic exponent. Final sections explain how the tables were developed and provide examples of their use. The volume is intended primarily for engineers concerned with making calculations of gas-turbine processes." N Y New Tech Bks

"The tables do not extend below 300° Rankine and do not include the effects of water vapor upon the properties of air. The tables are hence of limited value in air conditioning and perhaps of no value in air liquefaction. . . The time saved in a few hours' use of this book will pay for its purchase. Those engaged extensively in turbine calculations could scarcely afford to be without it." O. A. Hougen
+ — Chem & Eng N 23:1787 O 10 '45 300w
Chem & Met Eng 52:270 O '45 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

"Tables enable engineer concerned with heat and power to make computations with little or no interpolation. Growing interest in gas turbines has increased the need for such tables."
+ Library J 70:532 Je 1 '45 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:34 Jl '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:69 D '45 100w

KEESING, FELIX MAXWELL. Native peoples of the Pacific world. (Pacific world ser) 144p il maps $3 Macmillan

919 Islands of the Pacific 45-4872

"This handbook is designed primarily to help a visiting soldier or civilian to understand and make friends with the island peoples of the Pacific area. . . The islanders differ amazingly from place to place in their customs, speech, religion, and other characteristics, and it would take volumes to describe them. This book does, however, give some of the basic facts about the peoples whom the visitor may meet, and their problems of present and future. It also suggests how to go about getting to know them: how to win their confidence and cooperation, and to avoid giving offense by breaking their taboos." p 1

KEESING, F. M.—Continued

"To his wide knowledge of the peoples and islands, the author joins the ability to write clearly and interestingly."

+ Am Hist R 51:159 O '45 50w

Booklist 42:15 S '45

Bookmark 6:12 N '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45

Current Hist 9:548 D '45 30w

Kirkus 13:105 Mr 1 '45 80w

"A distinguished anthropologist and authority on colonial administration, Dr. Keesing is uniquely fit to deal with this educational problem. His ancestors include missionaries and pioneers in the Pacific; he himself was born in Malaya and educated in New Zealand, later doing extensive research among the natives in Hawaii, New Zealand, Samoa and the Philippines. Writing with clarity and persuasive sympathy, he has packed this little book with an amazing amount of practical information about Pacific racial types, and the varied economic pursuits, home conditions, levels of culture and social and religious customs one may encounter among these peoples. Thirty-two pages of excellent photographs and maps give added vivacity to his discussion." Rebecca Pitts

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 12 '45 500w

"This little book, by an anthropologist born and bred in the Pacific, and who knows his islands well, accomplishes singularly well what it sets out to do, to tell the average person who may go to the Pacific islands what he or she really needs to know about the people and the way they live." Margaret Mead

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Ag 25 '45 800w

"Professor Keesing's book is crammed with factual information, presented realistically and without exaggerated glamour, but it is at the same time fraught with such vivid interest that it is . . . likely to be read from cover to cover without interruption."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ag '45 140w

"Dr. Keesing is mainly concerned with relations between temporary American visitors and the natives. He provides sufficient statistics and descriptions to give an adequate background of factual information and then expands on the essential friendship that can be secured and maintained by tolerance and understanding. His slim volume, simply and concisely prepared, is an excellent guide book, introduction to unfamiliar races, and essay on suitable conduct." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p20 Ja 6 '46 270w

Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

KEHOE, WILLIAM JOHN. Sweep of dusk. 442p $2.75 Dutton

45-4301

Story of an adolescent boy during high school and college years and his struggles against a too-persistently possessive family life.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

Book Week p4 Je 17 '45 400w

"A certain static, monotone quality gives this a sincerity but deprives it of very wide appeal."

Kirkus 13:205 My 15 '45 170w

"One-sided and overbalanced. Not recommended." J. M. Brittan

— Library J 70:586 Je 15 '45 100w

"Mr. Kehoe, whose 'A Sweep of Dusk' contains most of the typical indiscretions of the first novel, nevertheless promises that he will some day be a competent writer. . . Curt is a very dreary young man, but the people who in life might seem to be dreary are not so at all. It is this insight, however fleeting, into ordinary lives that suggests that Mr. Kehoe will some time write better novels than his first." Ruth Page

N Y Times p7 Je 17 '45 280w

"Mr. William Kehoe, who, at the age of twenty-two, has carried off one of the Avery Hopwood awards . . . is unquestionably that unusual specimen, a born writer, and it will be surprising if he doesn't develop into an important one. . . In spite of the fact that Samuel Butler has told it all before, Mr. Kehoe's story of the destructive force of parental possessiveness makes an extremely interesting novel."

+ New Yorker 21:69 Je 16 '45 250w

Reviewed by Renee Forbes

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 24 '45 600w

"Mr. Kehoe has considerable skill in building up plot and creating suspense, and his book is filled with sharp imprints of experience; but they lead to no clear conclusion. Energetic and diffuse, with everything thrown in for its own sake, it is a blueprint of adolescence: it gives all the measurements, but not enough illumination." Lisle Bell

— + Weekly Book Review p6 Je 24 '45 380w

KELEN, IMRE. Calling Dr Owl; il. by the author. (Hyperion press bk) 48p $2 Duell

45-4372

Picture story book about wise old Doctor Owl who lived in the forest and could fix any ill the animals brought him—from the too-corpulent dachshund to the swordfish with the old fashioned nose.

"Dr. Doolittle and Dr. Seuss together should have conditioned the market to suspicion of such volumes as this with its crude whimsy. But unfortunately it belongs to that horde of books imposed on children by pun-addicted adults. Dr. Owl sits in judgment, solving successive problems of small interest to children."

— Kirkus 13:220 My 15 '45 150w

"Soft but colorful illustrations by the author. Reminds one of both Babar ad Dr. Doolittle with more fooling. Fragile board binding." F. W. Butler

Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 70w

"The feathered physician's advice, if unorthodox, will, like all good nonsense, strike the young as being eminently logical even as their funny-bones are being tickled. And if they shouldn't believe it all there are the author's highly inventive pictures to prove it." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '45 160w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Alias Jane Smith. 248p $2.50 Harper

45-3450

Story of a refugee grand duchess, who arrives in New York with four bewhiskered ex-cabinet members, and sets up in the interior decorating business, with the help of an American marine, a society columnist, and a woman of wealth, if not grace.

"Grownup fairy tale in usual urbane Kelland style. . . Pleasant, if unimportant, confection for rentals chiefly."

— + Kirkus 12:537 D 1 '44 160w

"Here is café society as, unfortunately, it never was."

N Y Times p23 Ja 21 '45 100w

Reviewed by Katharine Simonds

Sat R of Lit 28:35 Mr 10 '45 230w

"When he feels inclined, Mr. Kelland can paint Manhattan in colors as bizarre—and as divorced from reality—as Graustark. . . As an escape from politics, it may be just what Mr. Kelland needed." Lisle Bell

— Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 14 '45 170w

Wis Lib Bul 41:38 Mr '45

KELLEY, FRANCIS BEVERLY. Pink lemonade. See Coplan, M. F.

KELLEY, ROBERT FULTON, ed. Junior sports anthology; il. by Willard Mullin. 368p $2.50 Howell, Soskin

45-7243

Collection of short stories covering all forms of outdoor sports. Partial contents: Lou Gehrig, a quiet hero, by Frank Graham; The phantom drive, by W. T. Tilden; The dog team race, by E. B. Darling; Tom Brown's school days, by Thomas Hughes; The two mile run, by J. R. Tunis; Tom and Jerry, by Will James; The shooting match at Nottingham Town, by Howard Pyle; Ski patrol, by M. M. Atwater. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 42:22 S '45

"For older boys and girls who like short stories. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 70:753 S 1 '45 70w

"All told, there is enough energy stored up here to make a good start on an atomic bomb." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 S 2 '45 180w

Sat R of Lit 28:68 N 10 '45 50w

"A welcome compilation of the best in sports and adventure fiction for boys and girls." J. E.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 130w

"Good for home joys, for a school library, for Junior to own and Father to borrow, this collection is fine for sports interest and valuable as proof that a sports story need not be written in a special language unintelligible to outsiders." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 5 '45 230w

Wis Lib Bul 41:104 O '45

KELWAY, PHYLLIS. Squirrel book; il. by Newton Whittaker; phot. by the author. 78p $1 (4s) Collins

Squirrels—Legends and stories

Two baby red squirrels were found by this English naturalist, and raised and tamed. When spring came she returned them to their native wood, but continued to check on their progress and habits. Her story, with beautiful photographic black and white illustrations, follows their progress from the day when they slid down the tree in which they were born and landed near Miss Kelway, until the arrival of their first babies. For ages nine to twelve.

"Author describes the behavior of these tiny creatures delightfully and illustrates book with photographs taken by herself. English background and the first person form of telling the story may limit appeal of the book, but, nevertheless, it is a good nature story for children from nine to twelve years old." G. E. Joline

+ Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 70w

"A happy narrative report, with sketches and nineteen photographs that warrant the word 'endearing.' "

+ Weekly Book Review p12 F 25 '45 90w

KEMMERER, EDWIN WALTER. Gold and the gold standard; the story of gold money, past, present and future. 238p $2.50 McGraw

332.422 Gold as money 44-51270

"The discussion attempts to explain briefly the origin and history of gold money and of the gold standard, the fundamental principles of the gold standard, its defects and merits, and to outline a plan for a future international gold standard." (Prefatory note) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by W. A. Brown, Jr.

Am Econ R 35:715 S '45 1400w

Booklist 41:192 Mr 1 '45

Foreign Affairs 23:513 Ap '45 30w

Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 30w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 160:189 F 17 '45 490w

New Repub 112:94 Ja 15 '45 150w

"Kemmerer provides a multitude of wholesome and much-needed correctives to the loose talk that is going on in the monetary field these days. Furthermore, his book contains the guideposts in the monetary field which he believes, should be followed in the future, and which, in the judgment of this reviewer, the United States and the world will follow if they are wise." W. E. Spahr

+ Pol Sci Q 60:123 Mr '45 700w

Reviewed by Philip Gamble

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 28 '45 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:19 Mr '45 240w

KENDALL, MAURICE GEORGE. Advanced theory of statistics. v 1 il $16 Lippincott

311.2 Statistics [A44-2612]

"This book by a distinguished member of the Council of the Royal Statistical Society is a comprehensive exposition of the mathematical theory of statistics as it exists to date on the range of topics usually covered in an introductory course. The author indicates in the foreword that a second volume of this work will be prepared to round out his systematic treatment of the field of statistics. Of the chapters in this first volume, six are given over to frequency distributions and their properties, five to theories of probability and sampling, and three to correlation. In his derivations of formulae, the author employs the notations of matrix algebra and calculus in keeping with the practice of the English biometricians." Am Soc R

Reviewed by Ethel Shanas

Am J Soc 50:332 Ja '45 150w

"This important volume is virtually certain to become a standard reference work and belongs in every college library serving advanced students of statistics." R. F. Sletto

+ Am Soc R 10:443 Je '45 500w

KENDRICK, BAYNARD HARDWICK. Death knell. 210p $2 Morrow

45-35023

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p12 Mr 11 '45 80w

Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

Kirkus 12:553 D 15 '44 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 F 18 '45 150w

"Interesting, but the situations and the writing seem forced."

+ — New Yorker 21:80 F 24 '45 80w

"High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 F 24 '45 40w

"Less finicking readers should like this chronicle. . . Suspicion is tossed around nicely and, bar part of the solution, will give one a pleasant enough two hours." B. I.

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 200w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 4 '45 90w

KENDRICK, BAYNARD HARDWICK. Lights out. 240p $2.50 Morrow

45-9508

The creator of the blind detective, Duncan Maclain, has here written a different kind of novel, the story of a young American soldier, blinded in Italy, and his fight to achieve a normal, happy existence.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p3 N 18 '45 650w

Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45

"The author of the mysteries featuring the blind detective and the Seeing Eye dogs, here capably handles the factual and technical aspects of this phase of rehabilitation as practised by our government, and fabricates a plausible novel on the basis of the facts."

Kirkus 13:379 S 1 '45 250w

"The minor characters in this story are only sketchily drawn, yet some of them will live to haunt the mind long after the book has been laid down. For example, the colonel who does not die in bed, but lives on with damaged brain, as well as damaged eyes; and the soldier, who, without eyes, or hands, still

KENDRICK, B. H.—Continued
learns to read Braille with the stump that is left of his arm. 'Lights Out' will do harrowing things to the emotions, but it should be placed on the list of required reading for all those who still have eyes with which to see, and a brain with which to think." Enid Griffis
+ N Y Times p44 D 2 '45 600w

" 'Lights Out' could have been merely a harrowing tear-jerker, but it is not; it could be vivid reporting, but it is that and more. Larry Nevin's physical adventures in a dark world are well told." J. P. Blickensderfer
+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 Ja 19 '46 550w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 400w

" 'Lights Out' is a serious study of a young veteran who awoke in a hospital in France and knew that for the rest of his life he would walk in darkness. Around this tragic theme, Mr. Kendrick has written a story that has implications that reach beyond the world of the sightless. . . 'Lights out' is a novel that all who can see should read." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 18 '45 750w

KENDRICK, BAYNARD HARDWICK. Out of control. 215p $2 Morrow 45-7087

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p15 O 14 '45 180w
Booklist 42:166 Ja 15 '46

"Ingenious."
+ Kirkus 13:261 Je 15 '45 60w

"So skillfully has Baynard Kendrick built up his narrative that the suspense continues until the very last moment in the career of an evil woman." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p20 S 2 '45 170w

"Interesting detection, more smoothly presented than in 'Death Knell,' which preceded 'Out of Control' in this series."
+ New Yorker 21:64 Ag 25 '45 100w

"Seemed to us that the killer in this whodunit came as near to committing the legendary perfect crime as any we've met in a long time—at least we never heard the like and it sounded great." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p24 Ag 26 '45 180w

KENNEDY, ARCHIBALD EDMUND CLARK-. See Clark-Kennedy, A. E.

KENNEDY, JAMES WILLIAM. Haven house for the once born. 179p $2 Presbyterian com.
248 Christian life 44-47297

"The purpose of this book is to exhibit Christianity as offering ample resources to meet the needs of selfish, sinful and troubled men and to bring them peace, power and all that enters into a full concept of salvation. The imaginary 'house,' which is a haven for sick souls seeking cure, is a literary device to give concreteness to the picture." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:1385 N 29 '44 140w

"The book offers no cut-and-dried prescription for spiritual rehabilitation. It is rather a guide-book, suggesting to those in need methods by which to meet and handle their own peculiar problems. Sincere, practical, and personal, 'Haven House' is fundamentally Christian and theologically sound." W. F. Thompson
+ Churchman 159:15 Mr 15 '45 130w

KENNEDY, MRS JEAN (WILSON). Here is India; photographs by Alice Schalek and others; map by Raymond Lufkin. 154p $2.75 Scribner
915.4 India—Juvenile literature 45-35177

A brief, simply worded, well illustrated introduction to India, written for young people by one who knows the land and its people well. Contents: A day in India; People and climate; Religions and the caste system; Typical Indian towns; Pilgrimages; How India makes a living; Five thousand years of India; The present government of India. Index.

Booklist 42:40 O 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45

"Beautiful and informing photographs accompany this instructive introduction to a vast and provocative field of study, in history and geography, closer to us now than it has ever been before." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:462 N '45 100w

"Adults will find this thoroughly good reading, informative, sufficiently awake to the social aspects and problems to provide a basis of facts behind the news."
+ Kirkus 13:423 S 15 '45 150w

"Author writes with warm sympathy and rare understanding of her subject. Many excellent photographs and a good index. Highly recommended." Ruth Bostwick
+ Library J 70:982 O 15 '45 70w
N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '46 70w

"Jean Kennedy was born in India and has done graduate work in Indian literature. Out of her background and knowledge she has given us a factually true account of many aspects of Indian life." B. W. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:70 N 10 '45 250w
Weekly Book Review p24 N 11 '45 240w

KENNEDY, VAN DUSEN. Union policy and incentive wage methods. 260p $3 Columbia univ. press 331.22 Wage payment plans. Trade unions
A45-1666

Study of systems of wage payment in industry and their effects on union-management relations. The author is head of the automotive staff of the regional war labor board in Detroit. He has included observations from such writers as R. F. Hoxie, M. L. Cooke, Geoffrey Brown, Sumner Slichter, and Spencer Miller, and has added nearly forty case illustrations, as well as many excerpts from union agreements. Bibliography. Index.

"Kennedy's book supplies a wealth of up-to-date material, and of incisive analysis, upon the fundamental problems of task determination and also on the accompanying problems of relating the pay-off to the task." Z. C. Dickinson
+ Am Econ R 35:739 S '45 1550w

"Whoever has interest in factory management and its labor problems will welcome this book. . . One of the best parts is the author's own interpretation of union attitudes (pp. 63-83). Thus the book is of value not because Dr. Kennedy knows wage incentives—he doesn't—but because he has energetically collected into one document much information regarding official union attitudes." C. W. Lytle
+ Ann Am Acad 240:173 Jl '45 550w

"A pioneer investigation of this thorny problem has succeeded in making clear the difficulties that face both unions and managements in their efforts to speed production, reduce costs, and raise the earnings of labor." Philip Taft
+ Nation 160:495 Ap 28 '45 360w

Reviewed by P. L. Gamble
Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 650w

KENNELL, RUTH EPPERSON. That boy Nikolka, and other tales of Soviet children. 67p il pa 25c Russian war relief
Children in Russia 45-5123

"Four stories about children of modern U.S.S.R. reprinted from Story Parade and Food for Freedom." Library J

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:274 Jl '45 120w

"The crying need for authentic material on modern Russia for this age level should guarantee a market for this big twenty five cents worth. We hope that the effort will be made to secure the book (or pamphlet one should say), and for public libraries it definitely justifies binding."

+ Kirkus 13:271 Je 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald

Library J 70:534 Je 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p18 Je 17 '45 100w

"If the Russian children seem almost impossibly courageous and resourceful, there are many factual stories being told about them today that are just as challenging. These reveal qualities in the children of Russia that the children of America will readily appreciate and understand." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Jl 14 '45 300w

KENNEY, JOSEPH E. Blueprint reading for the building trades. 96p il $2 McGraw

744.532 Blueprints 44-8611

"A basic book for the mechanic or layman who needs instruction in the reading of architects' blueprints. It tells how working drawings are made, and explains the meaning of architectural symbols, scale representation, and specifications. Numerous practice problems are included, consisting of plates of actual drawings accompanied by test questions. A feature of the book is the inclusion of a complete set of the outline specifications, working drawings and details used in the construction of an early colonial house. The author is a practicing architect, associated with the Boston firm of Perry, Shaw & Hepburn." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Library J 69:815 O 1 '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:57 O '44

KENNY, VIRGINIA ARVILLE. Convent boarding school. 209p $2 Sheed

44-8444

Life in a convent boarding school, as described by a former scholar. The author has taken her own compositions, written when she was in the sixth grade, and expanded them into this story.

+ Kirkus 12:506 N 1 '44 60w

"Apparently, book is intended to demonstrate the value of a convent education and, incidentally, instruct young Catholics in the tenets of their faith, but excessive sentimentality and a too pious atmosphere obscure its usefulness as a school story or as a book of information. Of limited appeal." G. E. Joline

— Library J 70:72 Ja 15 '45 70w

"Writing has a poetic quality at times. However, some chapters seem too elementary for an eleven-year-old. Recommended for girls of ten to fourteen years." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 70:72 Ja 15 '45 70w

"Her book is well written; it is a warm picture of the portion of life it describes." H. J. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 2 '45 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p419 S 1 '45 60w

Wis Lib Bul 41:21 Ja '45

KENT, MRS LOUISE (ANDREWS). Country mouse. 246p $2.50 Houghton

45-8870

A new book about Mrs Appleyard. This time she fosters an art center in Vermont, with confusions and repercussions, and much humor all along the line.

"Utterly, utterly mad and utterly, utterly delightful. Also slightly unbelievable." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 O 21 '45 450w

Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45

"It is possible that Mrs. Kent herself has underestimated Mrs. Appleyard; and does not realize that, so long as she writes about that irrepressible lady, most of the customary fictional contrivances are unnecessary. At any rate, they are superfluous in 'Country Mouse.' The charm of the book lies in its characterization and background." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 16 '45 420w

"Don't be surprised if this seems familiar—it's the Thirkell in it, the assembling of delightfully unimportant trivia, the collection of sharply etched incidents, the assemblage of friendly recognizable characters. But being thoroughly American, it does not belong to the school of polite understatement, of snob appeal, and it has a more vigorous bounce than Thirkell achieves. It's our kind of fun—and fun it is."

+ Kirkus 13:347 Ag 15 '45 210w

"This is a pleasant book, with its background of Vermont countryside, with its mouth-watering meals and gentle humor. It will delight Mrs. Appleyard's old admirers and win her a host of new ones." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p35 O 28 '45 280w

New Yorker 21:113 O 20 '45 100w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 420w

Reviewed by Page Cooper

Weekly Book Review p10 O 21 '45 360w

Wis Lib Bul 41:126 D '45

KENT, MADELEINE. Island of the innocent. 302p $2.50 Harper

45-7348

"Through the eyes of a nice girl from a remote part of Cornwall, who marries into the frayed outer edges of Bloomsbury society, we see some English intellectuals, in the days between Munich and the invasion of Poland, in a particularly unpleasant aspect. The story of the girl's unhappy marriage and of the influence upon her life of a noble and humane German, whom she encounters only once, is told against a background of a soft world which seemed at that moment to have come to a dead end." New Yorker

---

" 'Island of the Innocent' is a thorough, steadfast sort of novel, an excellent study of the mental, emotional, political maturing of a fine young English woman against the background of approaching war. Anyone who wishes to understand how England, during the appeasement period, gradually stirred in her sleep and awakened will enjoy Mrs. Kent's careful and copious account of it." F. H. Bullock

+ Book Week p4 Ag 26 '45 550w

Booklist 42:19 S '45

"The picture of England's years of dolce far niente is credible and convincing; and the characters, for all that they personalize world movements, are individuals. The writing is honest and sincere. It touches the conscience." Horace Reynolds

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 S 20 '45 350w

Kirkus 13:258 Je 15 '45 170w

"Pre-war English idealism, as Miss Kent pictures it, is not hard to discredit. But her case against 'humanitarianism' (which she allies with socialism and pacifism) is not so easy to accept." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p26 Ag 26 '45 650w

"An interesting story, done with feeling and purpose."

+ New Yorker 21:61 Ag 25 '45 80w

"Although 'Island of the Innocent' is far from being an altogether good novel, its basic plot is interesting, gratifying, and even poignant. . . Miss Kent is at her best in dialogue; the repartee of her 'intellectuals' sometimes reminds one of Marquand. In intertwining its different themes and episodes her novel is, however, much less satisfactory." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:10 O 6 '45 450w

"Earnest sincerity above all marks this genuinely interesting novel. Mrs Kent shows plainly her faith in old virtues, old moralities, old truths and she has a firm way of making a reader feel very humble." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 26 '45 900w

KENT, MADELEINE—Continued

"As always, when the novel is used rather to prove a point than to reflect a vision, there is a pedestrian quality about 'Island of the Innocent.' It plods along, stooping beneath the weight of home-truths with which it is packed and the miles which it covers so painstakingly make a somewhat weary trek for the reader. Yet the content of this book is unarguably sound." Virgilia Sapieha

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 26 '45 900w

KEPES, GYORGY. Language of vision; with introductory essays by S. Giedion and S. I. Hayakawa. 228p il $6.95 Theobold

701 Space perception. Perspective. Art—Psychology 45-3628

"An analysis of the size and position of line and form and of how they are perceived shows the possibilities of unusual types of perspective and more dynamic representation in art. Many illustrations from paintings, both classical and modern, from photography, and from modern advertising." Booklist

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Book Week p14 Ap 22 '45 450w

Booklist 41:283 Je 1 '45

KERSH, GERALD. Faces in a dusty picture. (Whittlesey house publication) 162p $2 McGraw [6s Heinemann]

45-2061

A fictional account of the thoughts and reactions of a group of English soldiers just before, during and after a battle with the Italians during the North African campaign.

"Faults in the book are a certain self-conscious grimness, an occasional showing of the moving parts of his mechanisms, a tendency to borrow . . . and a surprisingly soppy kind of sentiment in unexpected places. . . Such shortcomings should not lessen the reader's joy in this fine story. If you've read and admired 'A Walk in the Sun,' this British counterpart is your meat. It's a more ambitious book, a longer one, a less monochromatic one, and I think it comes off equally well. The fact that it's about the British in Africa does not, in the slightest, date it." A. C. Spectorsky

+ — Book Week p3 F 25 '45 800w

Booklist 41:255 My 1 '45

"Author Kersh packs the thoughts, speech and actions of British fighting men into this terse tale of a forced march and storming of an Italian position. From the General down to the worst coward of all, a man can understand these men. This is a novel for men, written in men's idiom. It is a story of heroes with a minimum of heroics."

+ Boston Globe p15 Mr 14 '45 160w

"This is—of its kind—highly effective,—terse, masculine—portraying through the simple, coarse, sometimes humorous talk of the men their feelings before and during the attack which brought with it the torments of desert marching, dust and sand and flies, thirst and exhaustion, death."

+ Kirkus 12:551 D 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 3 '44 90w

"Gerald Kersh gives us the color, activity and personnel of his Libyan army rather than its mechansim or organization, but the result is similar—an increased awareness of a complex whole. The effect, in this case, is a kind of hummingbird's-eye view as brief incidents are culled from among the marching ranks, the officers' mess and the general's tent. Perhaps the best thing in it is the dialogue, which seems as if it might be authentic English army speech and is the counterpart of American 'hard-boiled' dialogue." William Poster

+ New Repub 112:429 Mr 26 '45 280w

"If we are to treat this clever adventure-story of desert warfare as an important work, we shall be overwhelmed by its superficiality. The method has been used before by this author. (a) Rapid assembly of characters, (b) Characters provided with distinguishing marks, (c) Characters bravely killed. How can one's emotions be seriously involved by such frippery!" Philip Toynbee

— + New Statesman & Nation 27:194 Mr 18 '44 300w

"The threads are woven together skillfully enough to form a graphic surface pattern of an admittedly circumscribed segment of this total war. Because books are urgently needed that will give civilians a compelling sense of what warfare is like, it is regrettable that the pattern of this one is without depth or perspective. Gerald Kersh, who fought in the Libyan campaign with the Coldstream Guard, evidently has first-hand observation to draw upon, but in transforming it into art he suffers from a tendency to strain for startling metaphor . . . and to tie large experiences into such a neat little package." Carlton Brown

+ — N Y Times p6 F 25 '45 650w

"A vivid and moving story of the war. . . Mr. Kersh shows that he is a novelist of feeling and insight as well as a first-rate reporter; it is a pity that he should occasionally weaken his effect by indulging in some rather irritating bits of fine writing."

+ — New Yorker 21:78 Mr 3 '45 60w

"This novel belongs to the very best of its genre. No one interested in the art and the power of fiction can afford to miss it." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 Mr 10 '45 950w

"Plenty of good cursing, bad writing, and genuine emotion."

Time 45:104 Mr 12 '45 30w

"There are several good sketches in the tale of common English types in this Midland regiment, some comic little episodes and one or two starkly tragic scenes of battle. And yet the thing is hardly what it should or could have been. Partly because he snatches at the opportunity to be tremendously masculine, partly because he slips too easily into the kind of mechanical comic hyperbole which has always been a principal failing of his, Mr. Kersh's effect is uneven and sometimes a bit false. The truth may be that as a novelist of Army life or of war he needs at this stage above all else to sit down and think."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 26 '44 500w

"Within the framework of the main story Kersh paints the individual portraits of soldiers and officers who carried their personal doubts and fears and hopes into battle. His prose is lean and realistic, his sympathy warm but never sentimental, his pride in men's valor deep but never distorted by false values. A warm sense of humor brings color to pages that otherwise might be over-fraught with grimness and death." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 4 '45 650w

KERSH, GERALD. Sergeant Nelson of the Guards. 317p $2.50 Winston

45-3352

Character study of a tough British soldier, Sergeant Bill Nelson of the Coldstream guards. Old Bill Nelson had his ups and downs in the regular army, but in World war II he lost an eye, and was reduced to training recruits. But what training! Part of the book is devoted to man-to-man recollections told by men who had fought with Old Bill Nelson, set off by the news that he had been killed in the blitz.

Reviewed by Alan Browne

Book Week p4 My 20 '45 400w

Booklist 41:301 Je 15 '45

"It is all soldier talk—317 pages of it—always hard, sometime eloquent, infrequently pathetic, occasionally funny. Much of it, but for the local turns of phrase, would seem familiar in an American barracks or foxhole or wherever American fighting men find themselves. It's the record of a world ruled by non-coms, and by them strictly according to rank and seniority. . . A novel by courtesy . . . the book is faintly reminiscent of Kipling, more mindful of Thomason's Marine stories and Nason's cavalry tales. Women readers probably won't have the faintest notion of its charm." Ray McPartlin

+ Boston Globe p18 Ap 18 '45 280w

"There's a distinctively British flavor in slang and roughly masculine humor—in passages of tenderly eloquent prose showing England at a critical point of history."
Kirkus 13:91 Mr 1 '45 170w

"The childhood that Mr. Kersh pieces together is horrible and haunting; added to the background of other Coldstream Guardsmen, the whole is a grim and uncompromising social indictment. A further measure of the book—which tells only of life in the training camps; the battles are only remembered battles—is its humor. The argot is strange, but it is so natural and pungent that after a few pages an American reader has an intuitive understanding of it. In short, the humor, and the book itself, are much more Yank than Punch. . . It is a truly fine novel, it is good reading and it is sound information." Kenneth Fearing
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 29 '45 400w

"A well-written, funny, and exceedingly valuable story of the British soldier and, incidentally, a history of the Coldstream Guards. . . An immensely readable book, moving, informative, and full of common sense."
+ New Yorker 21:77 My 26 '45 80w

"Sergeant Nelson of the Guards is part fact, part fiction; part Coldstream history, part Coldstream rag-chewing. It is also the most blood-&-thunder swashbuckling, super-patriotic book of World War II; an American equivalent might be a history of the U.S. Marine Corps written by General George S. Patton, Jr., Margaret Mitchell and Fred Allen."
Time 45:99 Ap 16 '45 1000w

"There is little conventional plot in the book, and perhaps there will be some who will object that the author should have made more effort to devise one. Actually, however, the lack of a plot does not matter for there is no lack of tension. The characters themselves are so real, so essentially interesting, that merely what they are going to say or think next becomes of vital importance." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 22 '45 1000w

KERTESZ, ANDRE. Day of Paris; photographs; ed. by George Davis. 152p $6 Augustin
914.436 Paris—Views. Photographic books 45-5604

"Paris, her idolators have always maintained, is the most diverse of the great cities, with a different side for every adorer. For ten years André Kertesz, known as an avant-garde photographer, studied the city's various moods at every hour of the day and night. When he left Paris he brought with him a selection of the thousands of impressions he had recorded. . . These camera studies range from the Flea Market and the outcasts sunning themselves along the Seine to architectural detail of Notre Dame and the Arc de Triomphe." N Y Times

---

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ag 25 '45 30w

"Aside from its value as a record of past and happier days, the volume should prove irresistible to any one interested in excellent 'straight' photography, for these camera studies prove Kertesz to be an extremely able practitioner in his field." Howard Devree
+ N Y Times p18 Je 3 '45 270w

Reviewed by Elliot Paul
Sat R of Lit 28:10 My 19 '45 800w
Weekly Book Review p12 Je 3 '45 110w

KESTEN, HERMANN. Copernicus and his world. 408p il $3.50 Roy pubs.
B or 92 Copernicus, Nicolaus 45-35022

"Exiled German author of successful historical novels such as I, the King and Children of Guernica turned his attention now to little-known life story of Nicolaus Copernicus, whom he calls 'the mightiest revolutionary of our epoch.' Book which apparently was written for the world-wide celebration of the recent Copernicus jubilee, supplies long-needed popular biography of great astronomer in English language. Kesten presents his hero against the full background of Renaissance and Humanism. He also describes the slow, but unfailing triumph of his theory of celestial revolutions." Library J

" 'Copernicus and His World' is an excellent, highly dramatic account of the struggle and life of the famous astronomer whose theory has long since been generally accepted. Comparing his world with our own, Hermann Kesten correctly suggests that 'under many names, in many fields and on many levels, this immense struggle between the world-revolution and world-obscurantism continues.' " H. L. Reich
+ Book Week p9 Mr 18 '45 500w
Booklist 41:208 Mr 15 '45

"I dislike the book very much, partly because of its style, but principally because it has a thesis which I consider false. Its structure is that of a number of impressionistic historical sketches, covering various parts of the Renaissance and the Reformation in Italy, Poland and Germany, presented in rather abrupt, repetitious and satirical style." K. F. Herzfeld
— Commonweal 42:293 Jl 6 '45 320w

"This is an intelligent, revealing biography, but in a specialized field and not for a popular market."
+ Kirkus 13:14 Ja 1 '45 260w

"Vividly written book heartily recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 70:117 F 1 '45 110w

"By his art and power of penetration Kesten succeeds in bringing the Polish canon alive, in showing the reader the man and his surroundings, his modest manners and his promethean ideas, the routine of his daily job and the greatness of his eternal work. Copernicus, in his own words, wrote 'for mathematicians only.' Kesten makes intelligible even that part of Copernicus's works which seems impenetrable for non-mathematicians." Joseph Bornstein
+ Nation 160:340 Mr 24 '45 480w

Reviewed by B. J. Bok
N Y Times p18 Ap 8 '45 500w

"A personality so multifaced deserves a good biography, and Kesten has written it. There is no more exciting life than that of the great Pole, and in these pages ample justice is done to it in a style that is racy and vivid. This reviewer regrets the lack of any index." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Mr 17 '45 650w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ap '45 360w

"Translated from the author's German into frank, pithy sentences, and printed for the first time, the book should prove entertaining to the general public as well as to scholars and scientists."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 Je '45 160w

"Hermann Kesten has done a great service to science. His colorful story could only have been written by an able novelist, not by a historian of science. Great theories do not spring inevitably from the facts; they grow in the minds and souls of men. The vision of Copernicus is all of a piece with the visions of Leonardo, of Raphael and Michael Angelo. At last a very human book portrays creative science as human in origin and superbly human in its vast consequences." Gerald Wendt
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 18 '45 1050w

KEVERNE, RIICHARD, pseud. See Hosken, C. J. W.

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). River road. 747p $3 Messner 45-10546

Family chronicle of life on the great sugar plantations of Louisiana, between the first and second World wars. 'It paints a full picture of the proud aristocrats whose estates edge the River Road; its accent is on their disintegration and decay; its story hinges on the history of sugar and the vicissitudes that mastercrop meets. Corrupt Louisiana politics (with Huey Long) come into the picture, too." (N Y Times)

KEYES, F. P.—Continued

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p7 Ja 6 '46 320w

Booklist 42:165 Ja 15 '46

"Not an important book—but a sure best seller."
Kirkus 13:440 O 1 '45 250w

"This is a well-informed picture of political, financial and social conditions prevailing from World War I through II." J. M. Brittan
+ Library J 70:1088 N 15 '45 60w

"A story rich in history and drama. Her many devoted readers will find this Creole saga one of her most fascinating stories. . . 'The River Road' is an industrious rather than an inspired novel. Tireless research has gone into its making: the story swarms with people, yet even the leading characters run very much to type. The whole is an ambitious presentation of a fascinating region, carefully worked out, but lacking the spark of a single compelling character. The pace is quotidian rather than soaring. But that very quality is doubtless part of the spell that charms Mrs. Keyes' readers." Barbara Bond
+ — N Y Times p25 D 9 '45 450w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 350w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p7 D 23 '45 230w

KEYS, THOMAS EDWARD. History of surgical anesthesia; with an introductory essay by Chauncey D. Leake, and a concluding chapter, The future of anaesthesia, by Noel A. Gillespie. 191p il $6 Schuman's

615.781 Anesthetics SG45-243

"The story opens with a brief account of Biblical and classical references to the use of drugs and charms to produce sleep and insensitivity to pain, and the beginnings of anesthesia in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. From the times of Priestley and Humphry Davy to those of Morton, Long, and Wells, in an orderly procession, the author continues with the amazing developments in local, regional, and spinal anesthesia which have been made possible by such men as Crile, Koller, Corning, Matas, and Lundy. The book contains a carefully prepared list of references, a chronological table of events beginning with Genesis and ending in 1944, and a source table relating to the chronological one." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"This well-written, lavishly illustrated and beautifully printed book corrects many of the errors that have crept into the history of anesthesia and presents with unbiased judgment the main contributions of the many pioneers in this important area of science."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ag '45 70w

"The general reader as well as the medical historian will find material to interest him in the fascinating story of the development of surgical anesthesia."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:46 S '45 160w

KIDD, BJ. See Kidd, E.

KIDD, MRS ELIZABETH. Just like a woman! how to tell the girls. 184p $2 Appleton-Century

659.1 Woman. Advertising 45-10578

A successful woman advertising writer "points out basic differences in the ways men and women use their minds, shows how they often reach surprisingly similar conclusions by different paths." (Publisher's note)

"Mrs. Kidd is a highly successful advertising woman, who supervises copy in a large agency on accounts that run, literally, from soup to nuts. This first book on how to prepare advertisements that will make women buy like crazy makes her a highly successful author." Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p6 D 23 '45 360w

Kirkus 13:454 O 1 '45 110w

Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 6 '46 200w

KIELLAND, AXEL. Shape of danger; tr. from the Swedish text and the original Norwegian manuscript by Carolyn Hannay [Eng title: Live dangerously]. 324p $2.50 Little [8s 6d Collins]

45-1870

Story of the underground movement in Norway, in which a rich Norwegian youth, whose paramount interest had been in having a good time, is converted to the cause and becomes a very useful member.

Reviewed by Betty Wood
Book Week p14 Mr 11 '45 320w

Booklist 41:209 Mr 15 '45

"Mr. Kielland's readers will note how thoroughly the author has been exposed to Hemingway and Hammett, Bulldog Drummond and Bertie Wooster—but they are all pleasant people, so who cares?" Ray McPartlin
Boston Globe p7 F 21 '45 300w

"The translator's weakness for English slang, her tendency to describe things as 'ripping' or 'frightfully jolly,' occasionally becomes irksome and makes one wish that the manuscript had been translated from its original Norwegian into pure Canadian. But it is, nevertheless, a tale that is both gay and exciting and the reader who begins it is likely to finish it." Alan Creighton
+ — Canadian Forum 25:75 Je '45 180w

"An unprettified, uncompromising and holding story."
Kirkus 13:4 Ja 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 25 '44 60w

New Repub 112:310 F 26 '45 120w

"This is jet-propelled literature out of Nazi-occupied Norway, its general effect being of something touched off at a rocket-launching base. Mr. Kielland, who was a Norwegian crime reporter, starts his action in the opening paragraph, and, while his story is conventional and smacks of wood pulp, neither he nor his characters draw a long breath throughout. . . Mr. Kielland obviously set out to blitz his public, and he succeeded." Meyer Berger
N Y Times p14 Mr 4 '45 180w

New Yorker 21:99 Mr 24 '45 130w

"Breath-taking!"
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 F 24 '45 40w

"This thriller . . . is robbed of much of its authentic excitement by a too lavish collection of well-dressed lovelies. Here are drinks galore, indeed all the ingredients one expects in a Peter Cheyney. The adventures and escapes are many, breath-taking and various, but one reader at least would have found them much more genuinely exciting if characters and background had been shown with a less glamorous affinity to the silver screen." John Hampson
+ — Spec 173:230 S 8 '44 90w

"Although designed as an amusing and romantic thriller, [the book] suggests in some pages that its fiction keeps close to fact. . . If the high-spirited mood of the conspirators is typical of Norwegian Jössings life will never be easy for quislings. The translation by Carolyn Hannay is brisk."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 9 '44 90w

"Readers who see nothing funny in the chatter or events described may well concentrate on the liveliness of the action, the large cast of unusual foreigners and the authentic Norwegian background—in our opinion the chief virtue of the yarn." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 F 25 '45 130w

KIMMEL, LEWIS HENRY, and others. Post-war fiscal requirements, federal, state, and local. 166p $2 Brookings

336.73 Finance—U.S. 45-7002

"A statistical analysis covering anticipated requirements in the United States for national defense, veterans' benefit, economic development, social welfare and security, debt service, etc." Foreign Affairs

---

"In general, this work impresses the reviewer as a careful and an extremely useful job." H. M. Groves
+ Ann Am Acad 242:184 N '45 550w
Booklist 42:69 N 1 '45
Eng N 135:127 Jl 12 '45 80w
Foreign Affairs 24:164 O '45 30w

"The book should be helpful in the study of a tax policy conceived in relation to expenditures, and in the consideration of proposed new expenditures in terms of the over-all economy."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:26 S '45 140w

KINDALL, SYLVIAN G. American soldiers in Siberia. 251p $2.75 Smith, Richard R.

940.4385 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives, American. Russia—History—Allied intervention, 1918-1920 45-9022

Personal narrative of the author's experiences as a member of the American expeditionary force to Siberia, after the first World war. The book was written, the author says, shortly after the events it describes took place, but was withheld from publication chiefly because it contained material which would have been unpopular then, hatred for Japan, admiration for Russian soldiers and the land of Siberia.

"It was a peculiar adventure for our men. They were the true 'innocents abroad' who understood little of the issues in Russia's civil strife. But instinctively they sympathized with the Russian people who were the defenseless victims of this unscrupulous, triangular fight for power. 'American Soldiers in Siberia' is worth any one's time." I. D. W. Talmadge
+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 N 10 '45 500w

"This account of the first American soldiers to fight with the Japanese is interesting, well written and of some significance. Some readers will enjoy it for the descriptions of an area, Siberia and Manchuria, which will loom large in the future world; others will be fascinated by the polyglot population, both civilians and soldiers, and by their intrigues and rivalries." R. A. Brown
+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 31 '45 300w

KING, DOROTHY N. (MRS JAMES WERBLOW). Take the children. [24p] il $1.50 Morrow

45-7927

Six little boys and girls from Europe, who had been visiting in the United States for the duration, set out for home and lose their tags en route. The story shows how they were all delivered to the right countries. The figures are movable, so that the young readers may place them in the correct countries.

Kirkus 13:335 Ag 1 '45 80w

"Young readers will have fun taking the children to the right countries. The book will be of special interest to children whose fathers have recently been in Europe." L. M. P.
+ N Y Times p12 N 11 '45 90w

"This gadget book has shot ahead of the others: pretty to look at with its many-colored pictures, it gives a young child something amusing to do, and while doing it he cannot help learning something about the world and its people, without realizing that he does."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 11 '45 200w

KING, RONOLD WYETH PERCIVAL. Electromagnetic engineering; v 1, Fundamentals. 580p $6 McGraw

621.3 Electric engineering. Electromagnetism. Radio (45-6137)

"This is the first of a three-volume series entitled Electromagnetic Engineering. It offers a systematic introduction to basic concepts of electromagnetism which are fundamental in the study of electromagnetic waves, antennas, electromagnetic horns, wave guides, ultra-high frequency and microwave circuits. The physical and mathematical essentials of electrodynamics are logically developed and critically discussed for the purpose of application to engineering problems." Publisher's note

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45
Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 50w

"We may presume that a new presentation of old material is justified by the author's desire to prepare the basis for a unified work. Certainly there exists an urgent need for a competent and unified treatment of antennas, wave guides, and microwave generators such as Professor King is particularly well qualified to give. In the present instance, however, one experiences some disappointment to discover no reference to the remarkable advances achieved since the beginning of the war in our ability to derive practical results from a highly abstract theory." J. A. Stratton
R of Scientific Instruments 16:287 O '45 600w

KING, RUFUS. Deadly Dove. 189p $2 Doubleday

45-3929

Murder-mystery story.

"All in all, this is quite a smooth job—and a suspenseful one as well." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 130w
Boston Globe p17 My 9 '45 60w
Kirkus 13:76 F 15 '45 80w
New Repub 112:598 Ap 30 '45 70w

"The book is definitely not a detective story, but it is a murder story replete with suspense and humor, the latter supplied chiefly by Christine's eccentric entourage." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p27 Ap 22 '45 180w

"Not quite as hilarious as it is intended to be, and certainly not meaty enough for a full-length mystery."
— New Yorker 21:92 Ap 14 '45 60w
Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 150w

"In kidding mood, Mr. King plays along with farcical material while the suspense mounts to a satisfactory point. Light, easy to read item by a popular baffler." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 22 '45 110w

KING, WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE. Canada and the fight for freedom. 326p $3.50 Duell [15s Macmillan]

971.05 World war, 1939—Canada. Canada—Politics and government 45-6871

Collection of the major speeches of the Prime minister of Canada, covering the war years of 1941 thru May, 1944.

"This latest collection of Mackenzie King's speeches are representative of his method and manner, of his even-tenor prosiness, of his caution and political astuteness, of his abrupt energy and decisiveness when the time is ripe to act. Hardly vacation reading, they are earnestly recommended to any serious student of our little-understood neighbor country to the north. They are significant because the parliamentary small talk of this progressively conservative gentleman who leads a mixed political group under a liberal label reflects in a broad,

KING, W. L. M.—Continued
generalized way the thinking and attitudes of some several million Canadian voters." Leonard Bullen

+ Book Week p5 Mr 25 '45 400w

Booklist 41:252 My 1 '45

"Americans seeking understanding of Canada should look beyond books such as the one under review, which glosses over or ignores fundamental issues." Burton Le Doux

— Cath World 161:358 Je '45 550w

"The bulk of the book is made up of speeches Mr. King has made since becoming prime minister of our Northern neighbor. They have the familiar ring of like effusions of our own American politico-statesmen; an amalgam of blarney and sense, of hooey and wisdom." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

Churchman 159:18 Je 15 '45 200w

"Mr. King has the gift of clarity and brevity, and the book gives an excellent picture of Canada's contribution to the war effort."

+ Current Hist 9:48 Jl '45 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:699 Jl '45 30w

Kirkus 13:126 Mr 15 '45 120w

"Prime Minister MacKenzie King can be witty, whimsical and gently mocking, even at himself; but he keeps his humor—and he has plenty of it—for private and semi-private occasions. His friends will think it a pity that one of those informal talks of his, made at a Liberal caucus or a gathering of newspaper men, could not have been included in this collection of speeches. It would have served to round out the picture of the Canadian statesman, which suffers from the fact that only his serious side is known to the general public. It would have shown how the wisdom of humor enters into the philosophy and composition of the man who for most of the last twenty-five years has guided the destinies of an intricate country." P. J. Philip

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 22 '45 900w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr

Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 29 '45 700w

KING-HALL, MAGDALEN. Sturdy rogue; il. by Addison Burbank. 218p $2 Winston 45-3043

The lively adventures of a fourteen-year-old runaway, who lived in Cornwall during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He left his comfortable home when he learned his widowed mother was to remarry, and first joined the Beggars' brotherhood. After several exciting affairs, he went to sea to fight against the Spanish Armada, before an unexpected happening took him home again. Includes a glossary of beggars' terms and cant. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 41:273 My 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

Horn Bk 21:195 My '45 120w

"For boys who like unusual adventure, and tales of the sea, this makes fairly good reading."

+ Kirkus 13:161 Ap 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 60w

"A lad's decision to run away to sea has served as the beginning of many a fascinating adventure story and 'Sturdy Rogue' is no exception to the rule. . . The beggars' cant (for which the author has provided an adequate glossary) will please young readers who enjoy the idea of a secret language." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 15 '45 180w

"Written in the first person, this is a good adventure story. The interest would have been greatly enhanced if less than a third of the book had been given to the beggars and their squalid living, of which the reader tires, and more than the twenty pages to the great battle of the Armada. A glossary of terms and cant used by the beggars is included." Muriel Gilbert

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:39 My 19 '45 270w

"[The author's] gift for bringing back the past alive and dancing puts 'Sturdy Rogue' well above usual historical fiction for the teens; it has a quality indispensable to one told in the first person, that of making a young reader feel that 'I' stands for him." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 13 '45 400w

KINGDON, FRANK. An uncommon man; Henry Wallace and 60 million jobs. 189p $2; pa $1 Reader's press, inc, 220 5th av, N.Y. 1

B or 92 Wallace, Henry Agard 45-35084

"This book is not a biography of Henry Wallace, though it gives a few more or less familiar details about the man. It concentrates on presenting his point of view on everything from agriculture to Jesse Jones. It tells Wallace's opinions on science, religion, racial prejudice, world trade, planning, security—and it links all of them, as the sub-title indicates, to Wallace's goal, first set by Roosevelt, for 60,000,000 jobs in the post-war world." N Y Times

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Book Week p4 My 13 '45 360w

Booklist 41:281 Je 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 14 '45 390w

Kirkus 13:178 Ap 15 '45 130w

New Repub 113:262 Ag 27 '45 90w

"This reviewer happens to be an admirer of Henry Wallace and, far from being afraid of Wallace's idealism, thinks the nation needs more men of his stamp. But when Mr. Kingdon lays on his praise with a trowel, he defeats his own purpose. In my opinion Henry Wallace speaks for himself better than Mr. Kingdon can, but for those readers who shy away from the full texts of speeches or for those who have neglected Wallace's program and would like to catch up, Mr. Kingdon's book offers an able, if overenthusiastic, summary." Daniel Schwarz

N Y Times p4 My 13 '45 900w

"Dr. Kingdon's book is written primarily for people who love Wallace already but don't know much about him. It spells out, in words of almost one syllable, the main lines of Wallace's thinking and background. It will help many persons to get acquainted with him, which is a fine thing. Readers who want to know Wallace better will get much more from his own books." Roger Butterfield

+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 My 26 '45 950w

"Sometimes a minor fruit from the tree of books is interesting despite its blemishes. Such is 'An Uncommon Man'. . . Mr Kingdon's admiration for his subject is well known; no one will expect cold objectivity in this breezy portrait. But for all except the diehard enemies of Wallace and his ideas it may be a warming, even impressive study." Marshall Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p4 Je 9 '45 550w

KINGMAN, LEE. Ilenka; with pictures by Arnold Edwin Bare. [48p] $2 Houghton 45-6104

A little Russian girl solves the problem of not knowing what she wants to be when she grows up by deciding to do the growing up first. Before reaching her sensible decision she thinks of being a canal boat captain, a farmer or a ballet dancer.

Book Week p8 N 11 '45 110w

Booklist 42:22 S '45

"Fine pictures in gay color. . . Children of picture-book age will enjoy finding out how Ilenka finally makes a decision that brings her happiness." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:348 S '45 80w

"The bold, vigorous pictures by Arnold Edwin Bare, in unusual reds, browns and grays, are effective and decorative."

Kirkus 13:335 Ag 1 '45 80w

"Recommended." G. M. Williams

+ Library J 70:893 O 1 '45 70w

"Lee Kingman's good-humored, simple text is an admirable accompaniment to the drawings." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 26 '45 150w

New Yorker 21:124 D 8 '45 40w

Sat R of Lit 28:52 N 10 '45 30w

Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

KINGSLEY, JOHN DONALD. Representative bureaucracy; an interpretation of the British civil service. 324p $3.50 Antioch press

351.1 Civil service—Great Britain. Great Britain—Politics and government 45-359

"In this history and interpretation of the function of the Civil Service in the British governmental scheme of things, the author has departed from the usual politico-constitutional analysis and has emphasized social and class interests." Foreign Affairs

"A very illuminating book on the British civil service. . . Sociologists will regret that Kingsley has devoted only one chapter to a theoretical analysis of bureaucracy, while the bulk of his book is given over to a historical account of British civil service reform. . . These critical remarks are not intended to detract from the value of the book. The author has, indeed, contributed a study which demonstrates the great analytical value of an examination of personnel policies for an understanding of governmental bureaucracy." Reinhard Bendix

+ Am J Soc 51:75 Jl '45 900w

Am Soc R 10:576 Ag '45 180w

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher

Ann Am Acad 239:204 My '45 500w

Foreign Affairs 23:519 Ap '45 30w

Reviewed by Lewis Corey

Nation 161:235 S 8 '45 600w

Reviewed by Heinz Eulau

New Repub 112:60 Ja 8 '45 1200w

Reviewed by J. B. Brebner

Pol Sci Q 60:301 Je '45 750w

"This is a well organized, sharply reasoned, highly documented, and wholly objective study of the British Civil Service. But as such it will not be entirely pleasing to those who are wont to heap fulsome praise upon English public personnel administrators." R. H. Ewing

+ — Social Forces 24:241 D '45 1050w

"The book is interestingly written, brings its analysis up to 1939, later than any similar book, and is useful to any student of the problem."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:36 Mr '45 160w

KINNAIRD, CLARK. This must not happen again! the black book of fascist horror. (Pilot press bk) 157p il $2 Howell, Soskin

940.54056 World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities 45-8354

Brief chapters of text accompany this collection of photographs showing the atrocities committed by Germans and Japanese during the second World war.

Reviewed by Ernest von Hartz

Book Week p9 S 30 '45 310w

"While there is nothing 'new' in 'The Black Book,' and while it is admittedly intended to be shocking and sensational, it is because of its very nature one of the most valuable textbooks ever published for the education of man. Here in authentic pictures is what happened when mankind reached its lowest depth; here in mounds of twisted bodies, in heaps of human ashes, in the torn faces of children, is the lesson that the world must learn. This is not an enjoyable book. It is horrible—but so was the war." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 420w

"This is a deeply shocking book. . . Mr. Kinnaird feels that if Americans had retained in their minds—instead of disbelieving—the atrocities of the last war, they might have been eager to stamp out the new war before it got under way. His concern lest our memories fade again prompted the book. Certainly any one who goes through these horror-filled pages will not soon forget." Marcus Duffield

Weekly Book Review p18 S 30 '45 750w

KINTZIGER, LOUIS J. Bay Mild. 220p $2 Bruce pub.

45-5091

"The story of a simple boy's inferiority complex is mingled with one of local politics and fishing economics against the stormy and beautiful background of Lake Michigan." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Book Week p9 Je 24 '45 180w

Kirkus 13:243 Je 1 '45 90w

"What point, if any, the author is trying to make is never quite clear. There are undertones of something about a need for religion, Catholicism in particular. It is certain the young man needs a force of some kind (besides frustrated love) in his lonely and unsuccessful life, but we wish the writer had provided a better solution to Bay Mild's problems than merely killing off by accident the two villains in the piece." Edrie Van Dore

— + Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 300w

KIRCHER, CLARA J. Character formation through books: a bibliography; an application of bibliotherapy to the behavior problems of childhood; with an introd. by Dom Thomas Verner Moore. 79p pa $1 Catholic univ. of Am.

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography A44-2385

Annotated list of books "which make up the children's library at the Child center of the Catholic University of America." Arrangement is by grades, from grade one, thru high school. Contains author, title, and character indexes, and a directory of publishers.

"The list is made up primarily of current titles, not necessarily by Catholic authors, nor of an emphatically distinct Catholic tone; and it is graded in six sections, so that the young reader may absorb ideals and principles suitable to his age. Recognizing the inevitable limitations of a list of this kind and the impossibility of getting satisfactory results in every case, one may without hesitation recommend the book as a highly practical aid to teachers and parents."

+ Cath World 161:285 Je '45 210w

"The books listed are good, interesting books. They were chosen primarily because they are good and, incidentally, because they teach a lesson. The librarian cannot do harm to a child or an adult by using the list, and may do a great deal of good. Teachers should find the list helpful." A. L. Bouwhuis

+ Library J 70:887 O 1 '45 700w

"It is a useful addition to the bibliography of children's literature. And it is a significant approach to bibliotherapy in that it has drawn off for the psychotherapist's consideration approximately 250 useful titles (which he must still read for himself before prescribing them). The importance of the list will undoubtedly increase in later editions as the terms in the Character Index are sharpened and more discretely enumerated and as the number of titles included is enlarged." H. L. Butler

+ Library Q 15:168 Ap '45 1050w

School & Society 60:80 Jl 29 '44 30w

KIRKBRIDE, RONALD DE LEVINGTON. Winds, blow gently. 313p $2.50 Fell

45-35028

"A family of Pennsylvania Quakers move to South Carolina, where Father Jordan's neighbors grin at his 'book farming,' scowl at the high wages he pays his Negroes." Time

KIRKBRIDE, R. D.—Continued

"The story Ronald Kirkbride tells is engrossing and unusual. To its recital he brings an original talent of real freshness and considerable power. His material, too, is novel and dynamic. This combination ought to produce a better book than 'Winds, Blow Gently' appears to be; yet, despite its shortcomings, it should find a wide readership among those who want more than just another rather-better-than-average American novel." A. C. Spectorsky

+ — Book Week p1 Mr 25 '45 1600w
Booklist 41:225 Ap 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '45
Commonweal 42:222 Je 15 '45 130w
Kirkus 13:90 Mr 1 '45 210w

"Fine contribution to ever-growing interest in better race relations; spoiled by inclusion of stories around stereotype Negroes and in some cases terminology not necessary in creating atmosphere or in adding to an already good novel. Recommended, therefore, with reservations." D. R. Homer

+ — Library J 70:266 Mr 15 '45 90w

"The consciously primitive style in which the book is written, with much nature description and frequent inversions of the phrases, is sometimes annoying and only occasionally impressive. Yet when the author has his story well under way—as people, the characters never do quite emerge in their own right—the question of the prose employed tends to become unimportant and even forgotten. Perhaps that is its justification." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Times p25 Mr 18 '45 310w

Reviewed by Edrie Van Dore

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 360w

"Gay, charming, occasionally sexy tale of farm life with social overtones."

+ Time 45:104 Mr 26 '45 40w

"The telling of the story, slightly mannered at the start, quickens as the book goes on and has a refreshing warmth and lyricism. Both as a record of a boyhood and a picture of the interaction of North and South, the book has distinction and originality." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 25 '45 750w
Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

KIRKLAND, WINIFRED MARGARETTA. Of the imitation of Christ today. 43p $1 Macmillan

248 Jesus Christ—Example

"The title phrase and the general concept are in imitation of Thomas à Kempis . . . but the substance of this simple guide to the religious life is much more relevant to the needs of our time. Even those who accuse American religion of excessive 'activism' could not bring that charge against this; but its aim is to show how the quiet culture of the soul can be carried on without withdrawal from the haunts of men." Christian Century

---

Booklist 41:315 Jl 1 '45
Christian Century 62:522 Ap 25 '45 70w

"Winifred Kirkland has given us a beautiful devotional book. . . Protestant—but not sectarian. Can be recommended for Lenten reading."

+ Kirkus 13:61 F 1 '45 130w

KISER, MARTHA GWINN. Sylvia sings of apples; decorations by Margaret Ayer. 152p $2 Longmans

45-9072

A story of a young New England girl in the early nineteenth century. Sylvia is a potential fighter for women's rights and writes poetry secretly, but she also likes pretty clothes, is thrilled at the sight of a handsome stranger, and enjoys to the full a trip to Boston by coach and railroad.

Book Week p5 N 11 '45 230w
Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45
Churchman 159:8 N 15 '45 30w
Kirkus 13:299 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Excellent background reading for junior high school social studies but somewhat limited appeal as girls' story." M. C. Scoggin

+ — Library J 70:1093 N 15 '45 100w

"For girls in their early teens the main interest of her story will lie in the manners and costumes of the day, detailed with loving care and a nice humor." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 60w
School & Society 62:239 O 13 '45 30w

"Ranks among the best of recent books for older girls." E. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 110w

"Romantic entertainment for girls around fourteen will be found in this cheerful story."

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 11 '45 300w

KITCHIN, ALEXANDER WILLIAM MENZIES-. See Menzies-Kitchin, A. W.

KIVER, MILTON S. U H F radio simplified. 238p il $3.25 Van Nostrand

621.384 Radio—Short wave 45-5719

"The purpose of this volume is to acquaint the amateur and professional radio technician with the basic principles and applications of ultra-high frequency radio. It assumes a knowledge of radio fundamentals and avoids the complex mathematical developments occasionally encountered in such discussions. Among the topics covered are: the magnetron oscillator: the Klystron; wave guides; cavity resonators; U. H. F. antennas; wave propagation. Review questions are given at the end of the volume." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Necessary to the study of radar, this book written in simple English covers the various steps from ordinary radio sets to an understanding of the principles and applications of ultra-high-frequency. . . Well illustrated."

+ Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:28 Ap '45

KJELGAARD, JAMES ARTHUR. Big Red; il. by Bob Kuhn. 231p $2 Holiday

Dogs—Legends and stories 45-37865

Big Red was a champion Irish setter; Danny was a young trapper who knew more about wild animals and mutt dogs than he did about thorobreds. But Big Red and Danny became fast friends, and together they fought Old Majesty, a legendary bear with killer propensities.

"Jim Kjelgaard has done a really fine job in telling this moving and exciting story of a boy's love for a dog. The feeling of the woods and the outdoors comes through in these pages with complete reality and the story is one older boys and their fathers will enjoy thoroughly." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p23 D 9 '45 130w
Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45
Kirkus 13:437 O 1 '45 60w

"Sure-fire combination of boy and dog." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 80w

"A tale which paints the stern life of the Wintapi wilderness in strong, clear strokes." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 N 11 '45 130w

KLEIN, ABRAHAM MOSES. Poems. 82p $2 Jewish pub.

811 45-758

"A. M. Klein, the Canadian poet who recently issued 'The Hitleriad' with New Directions, has another volume called 'Poems' which deals with the longest war in history, the war against the Jews. Opening with a book of XXXVI Psalms based on the life of Abraham, and closing with a ballad in quasi-Spenserian stanzas on the pilgrimage of a medieval troubadour in search of the lost Zion, Klein informs the present with the past and the past with the future." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by J. F. Nims
Poetry 66:104 My '45 420w

"This dynamic tour de force lapses at times into careless workmanship or facile expression but is on the whole robust, affecting, and effective." Alfred Kreymborg
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:35 Mr 24 '45 110w

"The narrative poem with which his book ends shows the influence of Keats, but elsewhere his style is simply and often passionately his own."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Je 9 '45 130w

KLEIN SERALLES, JUAN. English-Spanish and Spanish-English dictionary of aviation terms. 131p $2.50 McGraw

629.1303 Aeronautics—Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Spanish language—Dictionaries 44-40299

"In compiling this brief volume of English and Spanish aviation terms, the author, who is Senior Instructor of the Inter-American Department, Casey Jones School of Aeronautics, Newark, New Jersey, has placed special emphasis on Latin-American terminology. He has included the following: 'words in general use; frequently used words of recent coinage that, owing to their fundamental etymological soundness and aptness, stand a fair chance of surviving; and others in general use, though not so worthy, that undoubtedly will be replaced as time goes on. Terms whose translation lacks uniformity, and a few terms of less common usage are accompanied by a short exposition of their meaning. Words that are commonly though incorrectly used are given in quotation marks.'—Preface. No definition of terms is attempted." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:663 Ag '44 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:58 O '44

"The book is of pocket size, and well printed and bound. There are no illustrations. Its greatest value would seem to be in its up-to-date quality, and its recognition of a distinct Latin-American terminology as opposed to conventional Spanish. The dictionary is too specialized for libraries with limited funds. Its cost seems quite excessive for its size. However, it should be very useful for business and other concerns carrying on correspondence with Latin America on aeronautical affairs. For such concerns, and for large and special libraries with much call for terms in the field of Latin-American aeronautics, it is recommended."
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:39 Jl '45 320w

KLINGBERG, FRANK JOSEPH, and HUSTVEDT, SIGURD BERNHARD, eds. The warning drum; the British home front faces Napoleon; broadsides of 1803. 287p $4 Univ. of Calif.

942.07 Great Britain—History. Napoleonic wars. Broadsides
A44-4600

"Two excellent scholars show us, with a rich series of documents, 'how in 1803 the British Home Front faced Napoleon.' The broadsides or handbills took at that time the place of our radio. It is curious to hear the muffled echo of words which, so many generations ago, helped win a great war. . . The broadsides are extremely varied: songs, dialogues, atrocity stories (particularly the Jaffa episode), denunciations, exhortations. Some are genuinely popular in tone; none is downright crude. Humor is not their strong point. Several are surprisingly literate: there are amusing pastiches both of Shakespeare and of the fashionable pseudo-classical tragedy. A dialogue in verse reveals that in 1803, every one knew that Talleyrand did not approve of Napoleon's policy; yet the archrealist was to keep betting on the wrong horse for several years longer." Weekly Book Review

"These broadsides make up a book that one may glance through with amusement and thereby also gain a profitable impression, but to read it all verbatim is to inflict on oneself some very dreary hours. The volume is attractive in format and capably edited, with an introduction and elaborate and interesting notes." T. W. Riker
+ — Am Hist R 50:602 Ap '45 240w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 24 '44 70w
Christian Century 62:401 Mr 28 '45 310w

"The authors had evidently in mind the present situation. Their book, however, is good as scholarship, but rather dubious as propaganda." Albert Guerard
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 F 4 '45 400w

KLINGENDER, FRANCIS DONALD, ed. Hogarth and English caricature. xvip 120pl $4.50 (15s) Transatlantic

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Hogarth, William
A45-2286

"[A book] showing the growth of popular art in England during the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. It is, in fact, the first book to analyze the social character of popular art in England, and it emphasizes the place of Hogarth and his robust successors in the stream of European realistic art. It contains 120 illustrations, of which eight are in color, and of which all have been carefully selected to illuminate the vast, amorphous field of popular expression. The illustrations, all in the tradition of that wild fantasy which comes through the exaggeration of everyday reality, are accompanied by precise, suggestive historical commentary, showing the relation of popular art to literature as a means of political and social satire." N Y Times

"This book will make a fine addition to the shelves of anyone interested in the subject of caricature and satire. It is a serious, authoritative study, but there is no reason why the knowledge that it exists should be a secret shared only by scholars. . . This concise, clear and authoritative little book is easily arranged for reference purposes. It contains a short bibliography and an index to its 120 illustrations, eight of which are in color. I feel that it would have been improved by some comment on the content of these political and social caricatures, often obtuse for those of us unfamiliar with the details of English history."
+ Book Week p4 Ja 6 '46 270w

"This is a remarkably vivid picture book." Marguerite Young
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 13 '46 600w

KLITGAARD, KAJ. Oil and deep water. 182p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Merchant marine—U.S.
45-8908

"When a seaman of the old school comes face to face with modern conditions on the sea, some amusing things are likely to happen; and when that seaman of the old school happens to be something of a philosopher, with a well developed sense of humor besides, the story loses nothing in the telling. 'Oil and Deep Water' is, for those who care to think about it, a complete summation of what was happening to the American merchant marine under the stress of the war and the present-day labor drive." (Weekly Book Review) The author, a native of Denmark, is now an American citizen.

"Because Klitgaard is not only a very competent writer but a thoughtful, critical and honest one, this book has meaning on almost every page for the problems of today. He doesn't feel, for example, that the French colonial empire deserves to be preserved, and he tells why. He sets up many of the questions raised by the war and the peace in terms so specific and so challenging that one can get his teeth into them, can at least find out what his own convictions are. Many books are called 'stimulating.' This one really is." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 O 21 '45 450w

KLITGAARD, KAJ—Continued

Booklist 42:73 N 1 '45

"Books of reminiscence about the war—personal stories of what some private or officer or correspondent saw and did in some theater or other—are pretty tedious stuff. For one thing, there have been too many of them; for another thing, most of them are ghost-written, always excepting those produced by professionals. The result is a certain tedium at the mere mention of books in this category. Mr. Klitgaard has presented us with a real exception to the rule. His 'Oil and Deep Water' is no masterpiece, but it is a genuine and moving account of what one old hand in the Merchant Marine went through when he returned to his former calling in order to play the only part open to him in the world conflict." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 42:605 O 5 '45 280w

Current Hist 9:459 N '45 70w

"Written with genial wisdom, with broad and simple understanding, and with sadness for the full realization of what it means, it shows in a new light the certain results of the so-called 'democratization' of life on the sea." Lincoln Colcord

+ Weekly Book Review p14 O 14 '45 1200w

KLUCKHOHN, CLYDE, and others. Religion and our racial tensions. See Sperry, W. L., ed. Religion in the post-war world, v3

KNIGHT, FRANK HYNEMAN, and MERRIAM, THORNTON WARD. The economic order and religion. 275p $3 Harper

261 Christian ethics. Economics. Sociology, Christian 44-41896

"With a view to finding out where the leadership and support for the building of a more equitable social order can come from, two economists discuss the part Christian religion can or cannot play in providing this vision and cooperation. The book is written in the form of one negative and one affirmative essay followed by two rebuttal essays." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Ephraim Fischoff

Ann Am Acad 240:174 Jl '45 650w

"The problem the authors have treated is an extremely important one. One's judgment about their success will vary according to the philosophical, religious and historical criteria adopted. The severest critic must concede, however, that the book contains occasional insights of much value." F. E. McMahon

Book Week p6 Ja 21 '45 650w

"Taken together these two essays and their critical discussion represent a valuable contribution to the understanding of the dualism of ethics in modern society and to the integration of the concerns of economics and religion for better living. Economics and religion cannot ignore each other. Human need and social progress demand that their conflicting moralities be harmonized. Studies such as this which Knight and Merriam have undertaken are therefore to be commended. Their collaboration is not the first in this field. May it not be the last." I. E. Lunger

+ Christian Century 62:431 Ap 4 '45 1050w

Reviewed by John Monaghan

Commonweal 42:51 Ap 27 '45 350w

"The book is patently designed more to stimulate discussion than to outline a program of action. Students of social and economic problems as well as churchmen will be indebted to this presentation."

+ Kirkus 12:499 N 1 '44 90w

"Knight's masterly and scholarly discussion of the historical and institutional reasons why the Christian church cannot make such a contribution is well balanced by the more simple and neighborly positive approach of Merriam. Recommended for colleges and large libraries." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 160:280 Mr 10 '45 350w

New Repub 112:366 Mr 12 '45 240w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:9 Je '45 280w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Port of seven strangers. 192p $2 Doubleday 45-9195

Detective story.

Booklist 42:129 D 15 '45

New Repub 113:583 O 29 '45 50w

"Smooth—fast—slightly overplotted and with a few loose ends, but exciting."

+ — Kirkus 13:350 Ag 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 O 21 '45 140w

"Good going!"

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 O 6 '45 40w

"A tale of intrigue, skilfully carpentered for the trade." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 O 7 '45 130w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Stream sinister. 191p $2 Doubleday 45-2937

Detective story.

Booklist 41:270 My 15 '45

Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 60w

Kirkus 13:7 Ja 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Mr 11 '45 100w

"Good for a nightmare or two, in spite of its disappointing ending."

New Yorker 21:100 Mr 24 '45 80w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 Mr 17 '45 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 190w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 25 '45 70w

KNIGHT, RUTH ADAMS (MRS DICKSON JAY HARTWELL). Brave companions. 215p $2 Doubleday

Dogs—Legends and stories 45-35198

A young army lieutenant returns from the Pacific severely wounded and blind from a Jap attack, in which he also lost his beloved K-9 companion, Valor. The story of his discovery of his blindness, his bitterness, and rehabilitation thru the offices of the Seeing-Eye dog, Joey, son of Valor, contains much authentic material on training of dogs and present-day rehabilitation of our soldiers. For older boys and girls.

"For me this is one of the really fine books of the year. It is not only the story of two great dogs—which would be enough in itself—it is also the story of a man's fight to readjust himself to a world gone dark because of blindness."

+ Book Week p3 N 11 '45 360w

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

"Essentially true in its picture of the Seeing-Eye service, this moving story is of great value at the present time." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:460 N '45 80w

"Unsentimental, healthy but respectful, this book has unusual sensitivity in its approach to and handling of a big problem. It should make hopeful, inspiring reading for all from 15 up who read it."

Kirkus 13:401 S 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 70:1093 N 15 '45 80w

"If there is sadness in the tale there is also the lift of a young man's courage and a great dog's loyalty. Boys and girls and their elders as well will find the account of the methods used by the Seeing Eye in training both the dogs and the soldiers who are to use them, of absorbing interest." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p34 N 4 '45 180w

"It is a moving story. It gives a vivid picture of the K9 dogs in action and a clear, convincing description of the training of the seeing-eye dogs and their future masters at Morristown." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:73 N 10 '45 400w

"The psychology of the book is as authentic as its details of training and of the adaptation of man and dog in a team for sight."
+ Weekly Book Review p38 N 11 '45 270w

KNORR, KLAUS EUGEN. Tin under control. 314p $3 Food research inst.

338.2745 Tin A45-1107

In his Preface the author says: "The primary purpose of this study is to offer an appraisal of the International Tin Control Scheme. This scheme was devised to grapple with certain distressing problems confronting tin producers, investors in tin-mining companies, and tin-exporting countries. The desirability of solving these problems is abundantly clear. In judging the means toward this end, I have based my appraisal on the assumption that no solution is satisfactory which seriously interferes with the economic utilization of resources in production."

Reviewed by R. A. Norem
Am Pol Sci R 39:835 Ag '45 250w

"This analysis of manipulation of world tin production and price, through intergovernmentally sponsored agreements, both contributes knowledge in an important field and stimulates further thought on the whole problem." John Donaldson
+ Ann Am Acad 240:138 Jl '45 450w
Foreign Affairs 23:690 Jl '45 40w

"This book is well worth reading for those who are familiar with the tin industry. A word of caution should be voiced for the benefit of those students of industrial rationalization with little knowledge of this industry's real problems and difficulties in the past and present. They should be even more careful to accept the author's remedies which he has to offer for the future." A. L. Ter Braake
+ Pacific Affairs 18:301 S '45 440w

"Sometimes repetitious, the book nevertheless gives a sound economic basis for formulating policy attitudes toward producers' commodity agreements." Charlotte Muller
Pol Sci Q 60:479 S '45 500w

KNOWLES, SUSANNE. Birth of Venus, and other poems. 33p $1.25 (4s) Macmillan

821 45-6859

"Susanne Knowles' poetry is best adapted to the magazine and the light-verse media of expression, with an occasional deeper, more reflective touch when her poetry permits her more than a touch-and-go exotic, erotic flavor. Her quality lies in the cameo curiosity of her minor tone, which embraces her primeval center of nature, making her lyrics minuscular reliefs, hanging in a tiny gallery of the arts." N Y Times

"Miss Susanne Knowles's poems are finely cultivated, but they are also as fresh as the wild day in October which she so vividly evokes in one of them. Her senses are exquisitely responsive to life. But there is no preciosity, no false refinement. And her feeling for words is equally vital and distinctive." H. I'A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 18 '45 70w

Reviewed by Harry Roskolenka
N Y Times p31 O 7 '45 60w
Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Ag 11 '45 240w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 14 '45 100w

KNOX, WILFRED LAWRENCE. Some Hellenistic elements in primitive Christianity. 108p $2.75 (7s 6d) Oxford

226 Christianity and other religions—Greek. Hellenism [44-41838]

"This book contains Canon Knox's Schweich Lectures of the British Academy, enriched by copious notes and excursuses. His object is to show how the Gospel was put into a form in which it 'could gain a hearing in the civilised world and could end by conquering it.' Hellenisation thus appears as a missionary phenomenon. As such it has its antecedents in the Hellenisation of Judaism in the communities of the Dispersion, particularly in Alexandria. The main—not the only—points for discussion are the range and quality of the Jewish and Christian writers' knowledge of Greek philosophy, and their methods of interpreting their own religious documents and practices to the non-Jewish or non-Christian mind. Canon Knox's lectures are occupied with the Gospels and Acts, especially Luke and John." Manchester Guardian

"The lectures, done in a pleasing style and well organized, deserve careful reading. The general reader might well skim over the notes; for the scholar, however, these notes with their extensive references to primary sources and detailed development of controversial points are likely to prove the most rewarding part of the volume." J. H. Cobb
+ Christian Century 62:1256 N 14 '45 650w

"These Schweich Lectures on Biblical Archaeology are for the Greek scholar rather than the ordinary student of theology, though any intelligent reader will learn much from them."
+ Churchman 159:16 S 15 '45 270w

Reviewed by E. R. Goodenough
J Religion 25:297 O '45 950w

"The book is packed with evidences of fine scholarship, acute observation, and deep reflection on an extremely complex and difficult problem. It is not easy reading; but the serious student will find enlightenment and penetrating suggestion on every page. It is a worthy successor to Canon Knox's two previous works on St. Paul and a valuable contribution to New Testament studies." T. W. M.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 6 '44 170w

"Not all the theories propounded by Dr. Knox will by any means find equal acceptance among scholars, but along its own line the book is a notable and painstaking piece of work."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p538 N 4 '44 850w

KOCH-WESER, ERICH FRIEDRICH LUDWIG. Hitler and beyond; a German testament; tr. by Olga Marx. 217p $2.75 Knopf

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany. Hitler, Adolf 45-4284

"Political testament of a high-minded statesman of Weimar Republic. Koch-Weser, leader of German Democratic Party, held portfolios of Vice-Chancellor, Minister of Interior and Justice. Left Hitler-Germany early and settled in Brazil where he died last October. Having dealt with foreign policy of Stresemann in his Germany in the Post-war World (1930), he describes now in bold strokes inner history of the Reich since Bismarck, gives valid analysis of Weimar Republic and examines thoroughly Hitler's policies and methods both at home and abroad. Finally, he tries to envision postwar state of German mind and successful re-education of nation." (Library J) Index.

"There is more good sense and advice, and more humility and repentance, in this book—now a testament from a respected leader of Weimar Germany—than I have found in any recent book of any German." J. K. Pollock
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:799 Ag '45 1000w

Reviewed by F. A. Hermens
Ann Am Acad 241:169 S '45 600w

KOCH-WESER, E. F. L.—Continued

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p2 Je 10 '45 180w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 5 '45 500w

"This is one of the better books on Germany to be written by an exile."
+ Foreign Affairs 24:165 O '45 80w

Kirkus 13:154 Ap 1 '45 170w

"Not 'sensational,' but thought-provoking. Highly recommended." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 120w

Reviewed by Joseph Bornstein
Nation 161:65 Jl 21 '45 240w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 113:195 Ag 13 '45 180w

"Dr. Koch-Weser has written what is in many ways a good book, wise in details and honest in intention. . . Unwittingly, it tells us again and again that the idols of the vast majority of the German people have been Bismarck, William II, Ludendorff, Hindenburg and Hitler. There is not the slightest reason why the world should expect that men like Dr. Koch-Weser will become the idols and leaders of a future Germany—at least, not in any foreseeable future." Hans Kohn
+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 22 '45 900w

"Erich Koch-Weser was not a great political leader, but he was able, sincere, and intelligent. His book appears at a time when Germany, too, has ceased to exist. It will go against the grain of currently whipped-up emotions, and perhaps not a great many people will read it through. Those who do finish it will have the benefit of an essay in historical interpretation which is not as well-knit and lucid as it might be but which cannot be denied a place among the four or five really significant books written by emigrés from the Third Reich." G. N. Shuster
+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 Je 16 '45 850w

"This seems to me one of the few constructive books to have come from a German exile in recent years. It takes its place with Arnold Brecht's 'Prelude to Silence' and Ferdinand Hermens' 'The Tyrants' War and the Peoples' Peace.' As a human document it will outlive most of the hastily prepared treatises which recently have formed our literary diet on Germany. Even readers who may disagree with many of Koch-Weser's judgments and conclusions will be impressed by his deep sincerity." F. E. Hirsch
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 17 '45 1400w

KOEHLER, ROBERT PORTNER. Murder expert. 255p $2 Phoenix 45-10153

Detective story.

"A lively and ingenious job."
+ New Repub 113:724 N 26 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 D 16 '45 150w

"Sound idea for murder yarn—but plotting, characters, and writing are not quite up to snuff."
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. Twilight bar; an escapade in four acts. 104p $2 Macmillan 822 45-7136

A satirical comedy. "What the unhappy Koestler is brooding about, in his rueful fashion, is the modern world's inability to appreciate happiness. To present his parable, he shows us an island republic—part England and part mythical Caribbean colony—that is suffering from political confusion, social injustice and the author's own malaise of mind. Just as the assorted inhabitants we chance to meet are in their most thwarted states, a couple of people from another planet drop in on them. It seems that more advanced sections of the universe need living room as they prepare to fight their cosmic enemies, and they are ready to wipe out the population of our world unless we can prove to them that we know how to be happy." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ag 26 '45 360w

Kirkus 13:216 My 15 '45 130w

"Not recommended."
— Library J 70:636 Jl '45 30w

"As a playwright he has his successes. The mood he captures is a proper combination of comic willfulness and brooding imagination, and in the person of the girl member of the investigating team from the superior planet, he achieves a pleasant minor romantic portrait. Chiefly, however, 'Twilight Bar,' is interesting because it indicates that if Koestler really set his mind to it he might write an excellent play." Richard Watts
+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 26 '45 900w

"Mr. Koestler's play has its moments, but, since fancy depends largely on wit and subtle writing and the author is not especially at home with either, these moments are rather few. The piece may, of course, play better than it reads, but even that seems questionable."
— + New Yorker 21:85 S 29 '45 130w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Sat R of Lit 28:11 S 1 '45 1200w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman
Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 420w

Theatre Arts 29:733 D '45 650w

"Capitalists, Socialists and Communists are satirized with equal vigour in this short work, but the humour is too broad and mechanical, and the social moral is rather too elementary to provoke much interest. There is no study of character or motive (though the author has shown his powers in that line elsewhere), and perhaps it would be too much to ask for subtleties in a play which is described as an escapade. But, even taken as an escapade, it appears more crude than lively. Agreeable enough, within very strict limits, it may have suffered from its time of publication."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p597 D 15 '45 420w

"Shaw could have done something with this idea, but Koestler tries for a Shavian touch and achieves only triviality, while on the emotional side his characters are not interesting and alive enough to rouse our sympathies, or even antipathies." W. P. Eaton
— Weekly Book Review p22 S 16 '45 130w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. The yogi and the commissar, and other essays. 247p $2.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Cape, J]
940.504 World war, 1939-. Communism—Russia. Russia—Politics and government 45-4437

"These essays by Arthur Koestler possess a particular value for Americans, since we have no equivalent for him in this country. A man of 40, of Hungarian birth and a journalist by profession, he has lived through all the phases of the long battle against fascism in a way that our fortunate detachment has spared us from doing. A correspondent in the Soviet Union in the early Nineteen Thirties, he was for some years a member of the Communist party, but broke with it at the time of the Moscow trials. A representative for a London paper in Spain during the civil war, he was imprisoned and narrowly escaped execution at the hands of Franco. At the outbreak of the present war he was in Paris. . . His collection of essays all date within the past four years, and reveal his deepening preoccupations. He surveys the role of 'the intelligentsia' from the era of the French Revolution, and believes in its responsibility to preserve the 'aspiration to independent thinking.'. . In 'The Fraternity of Pessimists' Koestler formulates his own somber confession of faith, that 'in this war we are fighting against a total lie in the name of a half-truth.' " N Y Times

Booklist 41:337 Jl 15 '45

Reviewed by Edmund Stevens
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 30 '45 850w

"As Maine goes, so goes the nation is an old saying, and now we can say as Koestler goes, so goes the intelligentsia of the honest, decent variety. . . I don't think educators should miss this book. Nor do I think that a priest who has any apostolic urge should shrug it off because of its obvious errors and faults. In the first place, it is so well written and so full of consuming interest that never for a line did it bore me, even when the author lost himself in speculation. For even his speculation is stimulating. In the second place, it is the product of a very superior mind, of a man with a pleasantly rich background and of a character of great integrity. No hollowness, no fear." H. A. Reinhold
+ Commonweal 42:362 Jl 27 '45 900w
Kirkus 13:170 Ap 15 '45 170w

"Nobody needs to be told that whatever Mr. Koestler writes will be full of insight and written with an imaginative brilliance that cannot fail to stimulate. This volume of essays, which contains a reprint of the remarkable analysis of the young airman Richard Hillary, is no exception in the record. But it is a very tragic book." H. J. Laski
+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 9 '45 360w

Reviewed by Martin Lebowitz
Nation 160:723 Je 30 '45 700w

Reviewed by George Mayberry
New Repub 112:794 Je 4 '45 1500w

"This is a disturbing book, as is to be expected, for the disillusion of an honest and very intelligent man 'hath an art to make dust of all things.' . . . Mr. Koestler is a brilliant writer and often a profound thinker; he has the rare merit of being able to think important thoughts and to clothe them in words which reveal rather than conceal their importance. But he writes and thinks with a bitterness, sometimes a personal bitterness, which defeats his purpose, if it does not cloud his judgment." Leonard Woolf
New Statesman & Nation 29:324 My 19 '45 650w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen
N Y Times p1 My 27 '45 1900w

"Mr. Koestler cannot be called a gentle essayist, and he demands that you pay careful attention to what he is saying, but there could hardly be a more reasonable demand. This is not because Mr. Koestler is always brilliant or profound (there are many times when he is neither) but because he is one of the few writers now doing business who have a real point of view, because he very definitely knows what the social score is, and because he is able, despite a vocabulary occasionally overburdened with the terminology of psychoanalysis, to write down his ideas more interestingly than most authors are able to write down their fiction. I can't think of a better combination." Hamilton Basso
+ New Yorker 21:76 Je 2 '45 200w

"Whatever the reader's preconceived or instantaneous reaction to 'The Yogi and the Commissar' is likely to be, he will be fascinated by the literary ability of this 'Communist renegade.' There are few writers today who as well as he can reduce the most complex ideas and situations to such stunningly simple (and yet never over-simplified) metaphorical pictures. The self-discipline of his deductive presentations and the power of his directness comes very close to being overwhelming at times" Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 28:7 My 26 '45 1600w

"Again and again in reading this absorbing, disturbing and maddening book, I marked passages as being the clue. And, until the end, I was inclined to reproach Mr. Koestler with having given his book a merely striking title, and having hidden its real character under a smart, attention-taking opening. At the end, I was not so sure; I still think the title likely to put off the readers who might be most usefully shaken by the book, but the title is not at all irrelevant to the thesis. . . Alhough the main theme of this book is the danger of the Commissar, there are several entertaining excursuses on the role of the intelligentsia, the moral and intellectual level of reviewers, the necessary connexion between the neuroses and the activities of the intellectuals, the inflated vogue of the poetry of M. Aragon, etc., etc. And it is, perhaps, only the natural turning of the worm that makes me note with pleasure that Mr. Koestler is impressed by the late Henry Drummond, a phenomenon that startles me as much as the vogue of Le Crève-coeur startled a French intellectual who encountered it in the best circles of London." D. W. Brogan
+ — Spec 174:412 My 4 '45 800w

"About half of the essays in this volume are thoroughly enjoyable. They discuss book reviewing, novelists and novel-writing, modern critical reaction to French writers, and the author's reflections about life in a concentration camp and about the war in general. These chapters are often brilliantly written. They sustain Mr. Koestler's reputation as a writer gifted at once with sensitivity of feeling and power of expression. The rest of the book is less successful. It attempts to set forth the author's personal theories about the world and the mess it is in." Donald Derby
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 480w
Time 45:94 Je 4 '45 1100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p219 My 12 '45 1100w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Weekly Book Review p3 Je 10 '45 1400w

Reviewed by Marc Slonim
Yale R n s 35:179 autumn '45 850w

KOHLER, LUCILLE TREMLET. Neosho, Missouri, under the impact of army camp construction; a dynamic situation. 121p maps $1.25 Univ. of Mo.

309.1778 Social surveys 45-36922

"A sociological study of the effects of a large job of army camp construction (Camp Crowder, in the southwest corner of Missouri) upon the immediate community. Among the factors are housing, labor, health, morals, population shifts, race tensions, and effects on the social institutions of the town." Christian Century

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes
Am J Soc 51:83 Jl '45 240w
Christian Century 62:402 Mr 28 '45 60w

"The report is an entertaining document despite the writer's frequent change in pace and style as she pauses to relate her observations to sociological theory. It has caught a picture of a small town in its time of social crisis, which it presents to the reader with a wealth of clear detail." R. H. Kurtz
+ Survey 81:157 My '45 450w

KOLMER, JOHN ALBERT. Penicillin therapy, including tyrothricin and other antibiotic therapy. 302p il $5 (25s) Appleton-Century

615.3292411 Penicillin. Antibiotic substances SG45-174

"For the most part, this book is a detailed review of the literature on penicillin and its use, without much digestion of material or contribution by the author. Although inclusive up to the date of publication, the volume already suffers the fate common to all such works written early in a rapidly advancing field. It will, however, be useful as a 1945 picture of the practical uses of penicillin, and is today a valuable book for physicians wishing to use penicillin, but not especially familiar with it." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 20w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:47 S '45 80w

KONEFSKY, SAMUEL J. Chief Justice Stone and the Supreme Court; with a prefatory note by Charles A. Beard. 290p $3 Macmillan

347.99 U.S. Supreme court. Stone, Harlan Fiske 45-9618

"Mr Konefsky's scientific undertaking has been to determine Chief Justice Stone's contribution to the methodology of Supreme Court

KONEFSKY, S. J.—Continued
judgments—that is, the mental processes, varying, of course, with individual members, by which judgments are arrived at. . . Many important cases are reviewed, with majority and minority opinions cited and analysed and the general effect on the development of the court's philosophy considered." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by F. L. Perrin
Christian Science Monitor p15 D 8 '45 450w
Current Hist 9:551 D '45 80w
Kirkus 13:309 Jl 15 '45 90w

"Excellent work of great value to lawyers and political scientists, beyond comprehension of general reader." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 110w

"An able essay, evidencing thorough and intelligent study and analysis of Supreme Court history, particularly of recent years."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 600w

KONOVALOV, SERGE, ed. Russo-Polish relations; an historical survey. 110p maps $1.50 Princeton univ. press [4s Cresset]

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations—Poland. Poland—Foreign relations—Russia [45-5547]

'This survey is based on a report of the distinguished scholar, Sir John Maynard, 'undertaken at the invitation of the Anglo-Soviet Public Relations Association.' In its finished form, however, the booklet is largely the work of its Russian editor. . . The principal purpose of the survey is to report Polish-Russian conflicts over the area east of the Curzon line, and to show the nationality composition of the 11,000,000 people living there in 1931." Christian Science Monitor

"Despite its somewhat pro-Russian bias, this small volume throws helpful light on a knotty problem." D. B. McCown
Am Pol Sci R 39:1052 O '45 220w

Reviewed by O. Halecki
Ann Am Acad 242:178 N '45 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 19 '45 70w

"A small, concise, useful reference book that everyone should consult who seeks a basis for the understanding of Polish-Russian difficulties. . . The nature of the work's origin and the nationality of its editor tend to give it a pro-Russian slant. And that indeed it has. Nevertheless, it is a helpful account of relations between the two largest Slav States during the last six centuries. It is moderate, dispassionate and reasonable." R. H. M.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 23 '45 700w
Current Hist 9:324 O '45 60w
Foreign Affairs 24:167 O '45 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p143 Mr 24 '45 180w

KOPF, CARL HEATH. Personal crisis. 164p $2 Macmillan

248 Christian life 45-847

Short chapters on the various important personal crises in life, from birth to death. Each chapter is preceded by a Bible passage and ends with a prayer for help in the particular crisis. The author is in charge of the Mount Vernon church in Boston. List of selected readings.

Bookmark 6:3 My '45

" 'Personal Crisis' is a book for the girl and boy of 15 or 17 and the man and woman of 70 or 80. It is not a book to read through at one sitting, although it has only 164 pages, including a list of additional readings on the 'crises' spoken of by the author. . . It is a book to keep on the bedside table or in the desk drawer at the office." B. A. Peppeard
+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 31 '45 420w

"Remember this as one of the really good books for youth coming to maturity or for those a little older."
+ Christian Century 62:241 F 21 '45 80w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 159:15 Ap 15 '45 80w

"The book is clearly written, liberal in outlook, and uses effectively the acknowledged results of wide reading. Preachers will find it a rewarding source of material." W. E. Saunders
+ Crozer Q 22:190 Ap '45 70w

"This is a book particularly suitable for young people and leaders of young people. . . It could be a splendid guide in a series of discussions with young people and very helpful to parents. Clergymen, too, will find good illustrative material in this volume. The religious emphases in the book, and they are considerable, are Protestant in character."
+ Kirkus 13:61 F 1 '45 100w
Wis Lib Bul 41:35 Mr '45

KORMOS, C. Rumania. (British survey handbooks) 122p $1 Macmillan [3s Cambridge]

949.8 Rumania—History. World war, 1939— Rumania [A45-1026]

"[One of a series of] concise and well-written handbooks, put out by the British Society for International Understanding and distributed in this country by Macmillan. . . Each volume contains a historical survey of the country discussed, a detailed description of the character and customs of the people, and a brief consideration of the probable effects of the war upon both." New Yorker

Booklist 41:239 Ap 15 '45
Foreign Affairs 23:519 Ap '45 20w
New Yorker 20:71 Ja 27 '45 60w

KORSON, GEORGE GERSHON. At his side; the story of the American Red cross overseas in World war II. 322p maps $2.75 Coward-McCann

940.54771 World war, 1939—War work—Red cross 45-3067

Within two minutes after the first bombs fell on Pearl Harbor the American Red cross was in action. This comprehensive account of that organization describes its activities all across the world in the wake of the present war. The work was prepared by a member of the national staff, who has had access to official reports and records. Index.

"Full of warmth, sad, funny and poignant at the same time, 'At His Side' should be eagerly read by everyone who has a son, husband, brother or sweetheart overseas, and that means a lot of us. It should also be read by everyone who is wondering whether to contribute another dollar or another pint of blood to the Red Cross—and that means all of us." Sylvia Crosby
+ Book Week p14 Mr 25 '45 300w
Booklist 41:235 Ap 15 '45
Bookmark 6:11 My '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45
Foreign Affairs 24:162 O '45 20w

"The magnitude of the job the Red Cross is doing is fully recorded here in personal terms."
+ Kirkus 13:155 Ap 1 '45 130w

"This is an inspiring account of the stewardship of the American Red Cross, to which the American people voluntarily contributed more than $420,000,000 in 1942, 1943 and 1944. It should convince every reader that there could be no better investment than a generous gift to the present campaign." Francis Scott
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 25 '45 550w

"Mr. Korson, in the manner popularized by the late Ernie Pyle, gives the names and hometown addresses of the Red Cross personnel we meet in these narratives, and a lot of people will enjoy identifying their friends or relatives or fellow townsmen. His liberal quoting from letters written home, and from stories written by the Red Cross personnel themselves, gives great vividness and immediacy to his book. Also, by a skilful sketching in of the background of military action against which the Red Cross functioned, he gives the reader a condensed history of the progress of the war in all its theatres of action." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 My 26 '45 550w

"'At His Side' is written from the inside looking out. The author is on the headquarters staff of the American Red Cross and his narrative is drawn from reports and letters from people in the field, as well as from interviews with those who have returned home. Naturally it lacks the color of personal experience and is flavored, quite as naturally, with official complacence. It is a little like the written-to-order biography of a successful man which must please a large and sensitive family. . . For what it is, an inside story, 'At His Side' is a pretty good book. But someday, someone will write a real evaluation of the Red Cross service in this war which will appraise its human weaknesses as well as its undeniable strengths." Gertrude Springer

— + Survey 81:181 Jl '45 500w

"A large part of Mr. Korson's story is told in the words of the men and women who have been doing the job, in excerpts from reports and letters skillfully woven together to give a vivid and convincing narrative. It is a record of courage, ingenuity, amazing versatility and hard work—surely comforting reading for the hundreds of thousands at home who have been turning out the supplies and giving the blood." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 1 '45 1250w

KOSSAK-SZCZUCKA, ZOFJA. The leper king [tr. by F. S. Placzek]. 252p $2.50 Roy pubs.

Baldwin IV, king of Jerusalem—Fiction 45-35120

Historical novel based on the life and times of twelfth century Jerusalem. The Leper King was Baldwin IV, king of Jerusalem, who held together the kingdom as long as he could, but died before he was thirty, a victim of leprosy. After his death intrigue and perfidy took the place of wise rule, until Saladin stepped in and retook Jerusalem.

"'The Leper King' makes for thrilling reading and gives a true image of the Crusades, those immensely consequential periods which brought about a host of changes in European life, culture and political development." H. L. Reich

+ Book Week p7 Jl 8 '45 500w

Booklist 41:340 Jl 15 '45

Cath World 161:523 S '45 180w

"Almost any reader who goes in at all for historical novels should take a look at this one."

+ Commonweal 42:315 Jl 13 '45 300w

Kirkus 13:165 Ap 15 '45 190w

"All of the pageantry of Blessed Are the Meek and the same uneven translation. Readers who liked first book will welcome this. Kossak's historical novels give readers a fundamental knowledge of present difficulties inherited from the past centuries." K. T. Willis

Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 90w

"The translation by F. S. Placzek is so good there is no suggestion of a language barrier. Although few of Zofia Kossak's characters are vivid or strongly realized, her pageantry is colorful and varied." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Times p7 Jl 1 '45 320w

"Madame Kossak must have worked like a beaver to dig up the authentic local color she has spread so lavishly over her medieval Holy Land, but for all her industry the reader will find it hard to remember that Baldwin IV isn't the young massa of a dozen novels of the old South, and if the King's ambitious sister isn't actually the O'Hara girl, then she is certainly our friend Miss Amber. The book isn't really so terribly long (only 252 pages); it just seems so."

— New Yorker 21:70 Jl 14 '45 160w

"Only one character stands out clearly—the Leper King himself—which might be sufficient except that the author has obviously attempted to weave into the pattern of his story other threads of personalities. . . There's a hint of subterranean evil lurking behind the scenes and it finally comes out after a bit of poking around when we devote our attention to the chapter which reveals it. . . The chapter and the whole business of the Temple of Venus could have been left out and no one would have missed it." Paul Johnstone

— + Sat R of Lit 28:38 Jl 7 '45 1050w

"The novel is full of colorful scenes and interesting characters. . . 'The Leper King' may be read merely as an exciting adventure story set in a picturesque and romantic era. It has, however, a serious undercurrent." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 440w

"On finishing 'The Leper King,' one asks oneself, why should people and events so remote in time and place seem so real? The answer is to be found partly in the author's simple, unaffected style and her avoidance of conscious archaisms. But I think we need to look a little farther also. It is not necessary to go outside of our own period to find nations, seemingly powerful, eaten away by internal discord; to find in individuals the desire for power supplanting the desire to serve; or to find ideals giving way to 'realistic' thinking. . . 'The Leper King' is a rewarding book to read." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 1 '45 1000w

KOYRE, ALEXANDRE. Discovering Plato; tr. by Leonora Cohen Rosenfield. 119p $1.50 Columbia univ. press [10s Oxford]

184.1 Plato A45-3643

An informal "introduction" to Plato written for the layman who desires to read or re-read him understandingly. The book is in two parts. In the first the author considers the philosophic dialogue in general and then explains and summarizes the Meno, the Protagoras, and the Theaetetus. In the second part, entitled Politics, the author draws illustrative material from the Republic. Index.

"A better introduction to Plato it would be hard to find. This wise and winsome little book gives a sampling, rather than a survey, of the Platonic dialogues. The author disclaims any effort at completeness. Even of the four dialogues selected for special attention, there is no systematic exposition. But both the choice of materials and the method of treatment are such that the reader previously unacquainted with Plato's writings could scarcely fail to agree that the reading of Plato must be, as the first sentence in the book affirms, 'a great joy.' To tell so much about the ideas of an ancient philosopher and at the same time to whet the appetite for more is to show true artistry as well as good pedagogy." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:1163 O 10 '45 1300w

"Professor Koyré has performed a useful service for those who would like to become acquainted with Plato. The author, who is a newcomer to our shores, has been professor both at the Sorbonne and at the University of Cairo and is now an associate professor at the New School for Social Research in New York. His object is not to attempt a summary of Plato's writings, but rather to discuss briefly certain phases of his thought, evidently with the idea of tempting the interested reader to turn to the dialogues themselves. His motive is thus excellent. . . There is little that one would want to find fault with in the book." W. N. Bates

+ Crozer Q 23:102 Ja '46 900w

"The translator has rendered the French into beautiful English. The book is highly readable all the more so because the translation retains a faint memory of the French—just enough to give a pleasing savor to the English rendering." Raphael Demos

+ J Philos 43:47 Ja 17 '46 1500w

KRAITCHIK, MAURICE. Alignment charts, construction and use. 94p $2.50 Van Nostrand

510.84 Nomography (mathematics) 45-948

"This book is an exposition of the methods and techniques involved in the construction of nomographic charts: the type known as

KRAITCHIK, MAURICE—Continued
alignment charts. . . The opening section of the book provides a review of the algebra, analytic geometry, and determinants necessary for an understanding of the methods of chart construction. The representation of various equations is then discussed and illustrated by means of exercises. Applications are made to the fields of chemistry, engineering, manufacturing, and investments." Pref

"Kraitchik's aim was to teach the construction of nomographic charts of the most common and practical type. This he has done and the book will be mostly useful to those new to the technique." F. J. Van Antwerpen
+ Chem & Eng N 23:1121 Je 25 '45 180w

"In general it can be said that this book offers an interesting and varied review of one phase of a broad subject; however, charts involving one or more curved lines have been mentioned only in a general sense and some of the most interesting types involving a multiplicity of straight and curved lines have not been mentioned at all. The reader is hurried through the subject so rapidly that this book can not be recommended as more than just another book on nomograms." R. F. Benenati
Chem & Met Eng 52:216 Je '45 200w
Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:24 Ap '45

"In general, this book is a very valuable addition to technical libraries. Research workers and military personnel will be pleased to learn of its publication." R. L. Loewenstein
+ R of Scientific Instruments 16:90 Ap '45 450w

KRASNA, NORMAN. Dear Ruth; a comedy. 150p il $2 Random house
812 45-3988

Play in which a young sister starts the excitement by writing letters to a soldier in Italy, and signing the name of her older sister. The soldier, a lieutenant in the air corps, arrives unexpectedly, and two hasty weddings follow.

"There is nothing especially new about mixups resulting from love letters being written by one girl under another's name, but the freshness of Krasna's dialogue and the expertness of his situations take care of any triteness the plot may have." Dale Harrison
+ Book Week p2 Je 3 '45 270w
Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45
Kirkus 13:198 My 1 '45 20w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 70:489 My 15 '45 30w

"Mr. Krasna has peopled [his play] with such likable characters—including a long-suffering father who is worth the price of admission alone—and given them such wryly amusing things to say that one is only conscious of their gaiety, seldom of the well-tried foundation on which they caper." C. V. Terry
+ N Y Times p8 My 6 '45 240w

"A pleasant comedy, neat and compact and composed of well tested material."
+ Weekly Book Review p23 My 13 '45 50w

KRAUSS, RUTH (MRS DAVID JOHNSON LEISK). Carrot seed; pictures by Crockett Johnson. [25p] $1 Harper 45-4530

Simple text and pictures show how the faith of a small boy, who planted a carrot seed, was rewarded. Pictures by the artist who invented Barnaby.

"One of the most satisfying picture books of the year. Satisfying, that is, from the youthful viewpoint. Grownups may not understand—but that doesn't matter. . . Crockett Johnson's pictures are perfect and the brief text is just right."
+ Book Week p20 Je 3 '45 180w
Booklist 41:306 Je 15 '45
+ Kirkus 13:180 Ap 15 '45 110w

"An unimpressive picture book done in the manner of the comic strip. . . Perhaps, this matter-of-fact little story will prove very satisfying to the pre-school age." M. F. Cox
Library J 70:639 Jl '45 50w

"The older you are the more you will appreciate this book. But the very young will understand it too, for who knows better than they the substance of things hoped for? . . You don't need trimmings to understand this parable." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '45 110w
Weekly Book Review p8 My 20 '45 130w

KREDEL, FRITZ, il. Riddles around the world. 48p $2 Pantheon bks
793.73 Riddles

"Fascinating drawings in clear, bright colors illustrate and interpret these riddles from many countries. A book for all ages." Sat R of Lit

"This is certainly one of the loveliest books for younger readers—and in this case also for the very old—published in a long time. Kredel's extraordinary abilities are here given a magnificent medium of expression and his book is a joy to look at even if the riddles are a little hard." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 43:123 N 16 '45 70w
+ Sat R of Lit 28:72 N 10 '45 20w

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. Selected poems, 1912-1944. 319p $5 Dutton
811 45-2996

"The life work of a celebrated poet, a library favorite whose place is already established. Selections from: 'Mushrooms,' 'Blood of Things,' 'Less Lonely,' 'Scarlet and Mellow,' 'Lost Sail,' 'Manhattan Men,' plus more recent poems first appearing in book form." (Library J) Bibliography.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p4 Je 3 '45 600w
Booklist 41:319 Jl 1 '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 11 '45 50w
Kirkus 13:156 Ap 1 '45 100w

"A sunny, confiding book full of Kreymborg's kind charm, consistent from 1912-1944." E. L. Lewis
+ Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 60w

"A literal history of the poetic method emerges from this selection of seven books, and though much falls by the way, more remains for future assessment." Harry Roskolenko
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 22 '45 550w

Reviewed by J. G. Fletcher
Poetry 66:215 Jl '45 900w

"A most handsome volume, and from it you will gain much instruction and amusement. . . The book is as diverting a kaleidoscope of life as you can find!" W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 Je 16 '45 700w

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman
Springf'd Republican p6 My 2 '45 420w

"The style is almost as mixed as the subject matter; it is alternately pert and prolix, lightly whimsical and dutifully plodding. Kreymborg is best when he accompanies sentimental strains with a mischievous tinkling; his childlike teasing, with the mocking admonitions, and his casual sonnets are more ingratiating than the later ballads and the coy nature poems. What emanates from these pages and remains after the book is put away is not the poetry itself, not the singing and even searching lines, but the personal warmth, the sensitive and generous spirit of the singer." Louis Untermeyer
+ — Yale R n s 35:336 winter '46 160w

KROEBER, ALFRED LOUIS. Configurations of culture growth. 882p $7.50 Univ. of Calif.
901 Civilization—History. Culture. Sociology
A45-694

"The book traces the growth and decline of movements in thought and art over the entire history of civilized man for which there exist the literary and archaeological data used by the historian. What is traced is, however, not qualitative-quantitative output, as in an ordinary history of art or literature, but the increase and decrease of original, creative novelty, defined closely according, as far as possible, to criteria which have been worked out by critics over a long period of time, and so may be regarded as objective; the merely imitative or repetitive is not taken into account. Philosophy, science, philology, sculpture, painting, drama, literature, and music are so treated, and there is then a penultimate chapter on 'The Growth of Nations' which seeks to effect a similar treatment for societies as wholes, including their political-social-economic achievements as well as their achievements in art and thought." Am Hist R

"Professor Kroeber's book will be used by the historian as a source of information for the growth and decline of societies. It should, in my opinion, be so used, but with much critical care. The book gives an excellent account of the rise and fall of activity and achievement in those eight categories, each considered by and for itself as a special abstraction out of general human achievement. For this purpose it probably comes quite near to finality. But, for the reason that his eight categories are partial, overlapping, and, in some instances, vague in relation to total human achievement, they do not give a guide to that total achievement. . . This may sound like a very destructive criticism of Professor Kroeber's book. It is nothing of the kind. Perhaps the greatest value of the book is that it provokes reflection upon the real categories which are applicable to the rise and fall of civilized societies, to the fundamentals as well as the surface manifestations." Rushton Coulborn

+ — Am Hist R 51:92 O '45 1450w

"Kroeber's versatility and intellectual robustness are all the more refreshing when viewed against the background of the narrowness and overspecialization, the relative isolation from the main currents of contemporary thought, and the inbred parochialism which have, on the whole, characterized twentieth-century American anthropology. Besides the depth and breadth of the author's learning, this book is remarkable for its scientific detachment and restraint and, not least, for singular graces of style. Few anthropologists have written well, but the simple elegance and matchless lucidity of Kroeber's prose incite the reader to try long passages aloud." Clyde Kluckhohn

+ Am J Soc 51:336 Ja '46 4300w

"One approaches this work with the hope for a more adequate schematic treatment than has hitherto existed of the important phenomena of growth, maturing and decline of cultures, in which hypotheses were exactly stated and concepts percisely defined. Since this expectation is not realized because of the magnitude of the units studied and the caution of the author, one is left with the feeling that the chief contribution of this work instead of any original explanation, is the negative conclusion of raising more questions than are asked and of serving as a caution against easy generalization from historical data. The reader feels satisfied, however, that the materials dealt with have been sifted carefully through the mind of a scholar who is well qualified by learning and integrity to perform the task of critical analysis, even if there is not much contributed by way of positive synthesis." F. S. Chapin

+ — Am Soc R 10:814 D '45 2900w

Reviewed by D. T. Bazelon

New Repub 114:62 Ja 14 '46 480w

"Mr. Kroeber, who is an experienced anthropologist, has here attempted a task which seems to be beyond the equipment which he commands."

Times [London] Lit Sup p280 Je 16 '45 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:21 S '45 240w

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. Fury in the earth; a novel of the New Madrid earthquake. 264p $2.50 Bobbs

45-2362

During the winter of 1811-1812 a series of earthquakes occurred in Missouri and Tennessee, finally resulting in the destruction of a once-thriving river town, New Madrid. The author, who knew this country in his youth, has in this novel given an account of how the inhabitants of New Madrid were affected by the earthquakes and the subsequent rising of the river.

"Packed with suspense comparable to that which gripped us when we read 'Rogers' Rangers' and 'Hell on Ice,' Harry Harrison Kroll's new novel is of the little-known New Madrid earthquakes which held the Mississippi valley in terror through the winter of 1811-12. Kroll had a big subject and he gave a lot to it. The result is a topnotch adventure story and a novel of considerable understanding of human nature in its rawer aspects." Edith Roberts

+ Book Week p4 Mr 18 '45 430w

"Mr. Kroll has painted these years of the earthquakes with a loose and knowing brush: the result is a canvas that teems with raw life, a true primitive where the sinners outnumber the saints by a wide margin. His book is really semi-fiction, though it employs the novel form. Viewing the cataclysm through a different pair of eyes in each vivid chapter (river rat and river god, land-shark and schoolmarm, evangelist and village idiot), he gives us a thick, and always satisfying slice of frontier life." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 4 '45 360w

"A highly moral but not overly interesting tale that is half adventure story and half a feeble try at a study of the psychological effects of disaster on an assorted group of individuals."

— + New Yorker 21:95 Mr 17 '45 90w

Time 45:100 Mr 19 '45 40w

"Mr. Kroll's picture of Mississippi frontier days achieves verisimilitude. It abounds in color. The strokes are broad, but none is wasted and the method is well adapted both to the material and the author's aim." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 4 '45 600w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS, ed. Reader's companion. (Viking portable lib) 731p $2 Viking

808.8 Literature—Collections 45-35065

"A personal anthology selected for re-readability from the writers of 2000 years for the reader of today." Subtitle

Booklist 41:271 My 15 '45

Bookmark 6:9 N '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

Commonweal 42:193 Je 8 '45 400w

"This is a brilliant piece of editing, in its contagious enthusiasm of selection, its catholicity of taste. . . Certainly not keyed to a predictably popular taste, this is nevertheless the sort of book that one could easily send overseas to anyone who missed contact with his own library shelves."

+ Kirkus 13:43 F 1 '45 170w

"It is a selection of prose and poetry which Mr. Kronenberger enjoys and expects to read again and again. The book contains a wide variety of good writing, including light verse and aphorisms, which yields its own intrinsic satisfactions; but the volume has another sort of interest too. There is a pleasurable suspense in exploring a man's taste. Moreover, taste is so personal a matter that a true exposition of it is a form of characterization." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 161:207 S 1 '45 270w

"So fine an anthology as this is especially heartening now when reading must be fitted into the crannies of routine. . . The 'Reader's Companion' ranges from one-line aphorisms, which may occupy three and a half seconds or induce five minutes' meditation, to ninety-one pages from 'Life on the Mississippi.' As Dryden says of Chaucer, here is God's plenty." W. B. C. Watkins

+ N Y Times p5 My 20 '45 800w

"Mr. Kronenberger has contributed an introduction which is a nice piece of writing itself."

+ New Yorker 21:87 My 5 '45 160w

KROUT, JOHN ALLEN, and FOX, DIXON RYAN. Completion of independence, 1790-1830. (Hist. of Am. life ser) 487p il $4 Macmillan

973.4 U.S.—History—1783-1865. U.S.—Civilization 44-51219

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The book reflects much credit on its authors. It is very readable, and is interesting and informative from the first to the last page. Moreover, it gives an air of charm to our national past which is often lacking in historical works." W. E. Woodward

+ Am Hist R 50:812 Jl '45 950w

"By skillful organization the authors give significance to every fact that lends emphasis to their theme, but at the same time do not allow their thesis to intrude upon the narrative. The result is an admirable product of effective writing and keen analysis. Based on a wide array of primary sources and carefully annotated, this is one of the better books of a uniformly excellent series." S. I. Pomerantz

+ Ann Am Acad 242:183 N '45 500w

Booklist 41:183 F 15 '45

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill

Canadian Hist R 26:317 S '45 700w

"This book is marked by skilful synthesis, careful scholarship, and a style which varies from competent to brilliant. As with the entire series, this is an important contribution both to the better writing and teaching of American history and to its intelligent enjoyment by the layman." R. A. Brown

+ Nation 160:189 F 17 '45 360w

"Mr. Krout and Mr. Fox show how the United States went about winning economic and cultural independence from Europe, to match the political emancipation gained by the Revolution, and, in doing so, they discuss, with clarity and perception, all the varied interests and activities of the country at the time." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 20:82 F 10 '45 130w

Social Studies 36:139 Mr '45 10w

"This volume, like its predecessors, has greatly added to our knowledge of the social and cultural life of the nation. It is scholarly, interesting, and significant. Like its predecessors it will be very useful for reference purposes in the schools." W. H. Mohr

+ Social Studies 36:276 O '45 390w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:25 Mr '45 650w

"Truly this volume and this impressive series are to be hailed for succeeding so brilliantly in the ambitious effort to cover every phase of American social life through a past which is not merely seen in panorama but competently viewed in close focus." J. G. Randall

+ Yale R n s 34:560 spring '45 500w

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD. Samuel Johnson. 599p il $3.75 Holt

B or 92 Johnson, Samuel 44-9867

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"In this rich, highly readable, and illuminating biography, [the author] has not only enlarged our knowledge of the Doctor, but has left us with a greater affection for the Senior Partner than was ever inspired by the Junior."

+ Atlantic 175:131 F '45 600w

Bookmark 6:17 Ja '45

"In the overwhelming flood of biography with which we have been deluged in recent years, this new Life of 'the great Moralist' stands out in solid eminence and real importance, not only as a full and sympathetic account of a very remarkable man, who is at least always interesting, but also as acute and expert criticism of a whole period of literary history." H. H. Yeames

+ Cath World 160:471 F '45 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '45

"This volume cannot be dismissed as another Boswell, for Krutch has done a fine piece of writing in making his subject a living personality, full of frailties but possessed of genius. Frequent quotations of Johnson's sparkling witticisms and criticisms help in creating this vibrant atmosphere." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 8:154 F '45 40w

"The author has done a masterly work of interweaving narrative, anecdote, and criticism. . . Connoisseurs of biography will value Mr. Krutch's handling of the ethical questions raised by any story of human existence. He is generous and tough-minded at once; explicit, not insinuating; and always the foe of the easy moralizing which might make author and reader feel cheaply superior to the characters depicted. To those who might assume that 'Boswell is enough,' the two hundred pages covering Johnson's life before he met Boswell are sufficient answer."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:12 Mr '45 240w

Wis Lib Bul 41:20 Ja '45

"This is the best of the modern lives of Johnson, and will probably continue to be read for a long time to come." F. A. Pottle

+ Yale R n s 34:546 spring '45 1450w

KRZESINSKI, ANDRZEJ J. National cultures, Nazism and the church. 128p $1.75 Humphries

943.086 Nationalism and religion. Church and state in Germany 45-3558

"In this book the author considers, on the one hand, the beneficial influence exerted by Christianity throughout the ages upon the development of national cultures; on the other, the deplorable consequences for national cultures of the acceptance of radical nationalist theories like the racist doctrine of Nazism." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Paul Honigsheim

Am J Soc 51:171 S '45 300w

Cath World 161:445 Ag '45 150w

Reviewed by J. B. Hodgson

Ethics 55:319 Jl '45 170w

Foreign Affairs 24:159 O '45 30w

"Dr. Krzesinski has not much that is new to say, and his treatment is somewhat limited, but his main thesis, that it is ideas that matter, is impressively worked out."

Times [London] Lit Sup p298 Je 23 '45 550w

KUCZYNSKI, JURGEN. Germany: economic and labour conditions under fascism. 234p $2.50 Int. pubs.

330.943 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Economic policy. Labor and laboring classes—Germany 45-5334

"This book deals with the German Fascist system in general and with the development of labour conditions more specifically. No history of the Opposition, of the political movement against Fascism during the years under review [1933-1943] is given." Introd.

"The author's introduction is dated November 7, 1943, the preface to the American edition, December, 1944. So at first glance it might seem that this book is out of date as much as an able historian's book on The House that Hitler Built or the book of an illustrious prophetess on The Wave of the Future. But from the first page it becomes clear that it still deserves careful study." Eric Dale

Am Pol Sci R 39:1039 O '45 800w

"Even granting Kuczynski's implied thesis that fascism and military aggressiveness are synonymous, he should have made it much clearer which of the many developments in fascist Germany were unmistakably the by-product of war preparation and which were characteristic of fascism. This Kuczynski has not accomplished, and the reader doubtless will be confused by the study, which treats many economic policies that have become known in the war economy of almost all belligerent countries, as typical fascist phenomena." Otto Nathan

— Ann Am Acad 241:169 S '45 230w

Reviewed by Friedrich Roetter
Book Week p8 Ap 29 '45 350w

"The author, who is one of Britain's leading economists and one of the world's foremost statisticians, does a neat, thorough and useful job of myth shattering." E. S. P.
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 13 '45 550w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 113:195 Ag 13 '45 120w

"In parts, Kuczynski's book is too 'high-pitched'. How can indignation hope ever to match the wrong perpetrated by Hitlerism? And, on the other hand, how can doctrinaire language take the place of an explanation of the historic failure of Hitler's opponents? Otherwise, his study is closely reasoned and documented, and contains a great deal of factual and first-hand information." J. H. E. Fried
+ — Pol Sci Q 60:593 D '45 750w

KUHN, RENE. 34 Charlton. 278p $2.75 Appleton-Century
45-35082

Character study of a modern girl, describing her successful revolt against a household filled with tenacious female relatives, and one independent—her grandfather. The time is the present; the background a house in New York's Greenwich Village.

Reviewed by Dorsha Hayes
Book Week p10 Je 10 '45 310w

Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

Kirkus 13:163 Ap 15 '45 200w

"Dismal family scenes are easy to overdo, but Miss Kuhn has made these quite plausible." Jane Cobb
N Y Times p17 My 20 '45 200w

"The author has wisely not attempted more than she could achieve. Her story is entertainingly told, its people have substance, and its significant theme is worked out with careful attention to detail and design. The book thoroughly deserves the Avery Hopwood prize awarded it; the young author, only twenty-one when she gained this distinction, has produced a notable first novel." Grace Frank
+ Sat R of Lit 28:45 Je 23 '45 400w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 130w

"The scene is Greenwich Village and the time is the present, but the novel is curiously uncontemporary, and one is never quite certain whether the effect is accidental or intended. By comparison with most recent fictional studies of youthful rebellion, the heroine's revolt takes place under a slow flame. Perhaps your sympathy for her plight would be greater if her character had been more sharply projected." George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p6 My 27 '45 300w

KUNCEWICZOWA, MARIA (SZCZEPANSKA). The stranger. 224p $2.50 Fischer, L.B. [8s 6d Hutchinson]
45-7648

"With considerable subtlety, the author conveys the tangle of emotions in the heart of an egocentric woman who builds her entire life around dreams of an unfulfilled love affair. In an imaginative introduction, Storm Jameson suggests that the Polish heroine, whose life has been twisted by a childhood exile to Russia, is a sort of symbol of Poland and that the lack of security, the memories of defeat, the unsatisfied hungers of the undisciplined girl are a reflection of the history of that unhappy country." New Yorker

Reviewed by Taylor Caldwell
Book Week p10 S 16 '45 360w

"Ably executed—but not pleasant reading, though the market for Strange Woman and its ilk may find this Polish character challenging."
+ — Kirkus 13:275 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Interesting character study." N. G. Rausch
Library J 70:685 Ag '45 70w

"'The Stranger' is a genuinely witty book, even a gay one, comic in essence. These are qualities which come from a deeply ironic imagination. Besides being beautiful and incalculable, Rose is witty; but [the author] is wittier than she, and while Rose reveals herself, the author's style and tone test her revelation. This is perhaps the surest sign of a real novelist." Ruth Page
+ N Y Times p26 Ag 5 '45 500w

"An interesting study, even without the allegorical significance Miss Jameson attaches to it."
+ New Yorker 21:66 Ag 4 '45 120w

"This book is certainly not an average novel. But it is by no means easy to say on which side of the non-average its distinction lies. If classification must be, its theme—the happily unhappy, 'frustrated' woman—belongs to French novel writing of the 1890's; its retrospective technique stems from Proust, although Mme. Kuncewiczowa's is a thinned-out and faintly sentimental Prousteism. . . 'The Stranger' is a skilfully written piece of fiction done with tact and not without psychological courage at times. Yet all its nuances and facets do not make for a whole—which (this goes for novels, too) is supposed to be more than the sum-total of the parts." Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 28:29 Ag 4 '45 490w

Reviewed by H. J. Sloan
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 300w

"This whole story spans only one extraordinary day. But the author, shuttling easily between the overlapping past and present of her characters, brings in enough ramifying details to complete the picture of a period, a class, and a nation. Some of the translation is stiff, and here and there the choice of a word is false. But even the handicap of language cannot keep this Polish story of a stormy petrel from taking wing." Virgilia Sapieha
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 5 '45 850w

"Technically brilliant as a work of fiction, psychologically impressive as a ruthless examination of a diseased mind, The Stranger commands admiring respect without arousing any emotional concern whatever. With understanding but without pity, with irony but without humor, it strips bare the mental turmoil of a woman who has lived alone in a world of fantasy and self-adulation." Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 35:189 autumn '45 290w

KUPPER, HERBERT I. Back to life; the emotional adjustment of our veterans; with a foreword by Robert H. Felix. 220p $2.50 Fischer, L.B.
355.115 Veterans. Mental hygiene 45-35247

A discussion of the problems of emotional adjustment which the returning soldier will have to meet. The author, who is staff psychiatrist at the U. S. marine hospital, Ellis Island, N. Y. illustrates his points with case histories of service men he has worked with during the past three years.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p48 D 2 '45 410w

Booklist 42:123 D 15 '45

"Not for wholly uninitiated laymen."
Kirkus 13:358 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Timely, informative reading for thoughtful adults, for relatives, employers and counselors of homecoming veterans, and for the intelligent veteran himself." A. I. Bryan
+ Library J 70:178 O 15 '45 140w

"In spite of the fact that the text would have profited from some good editing, its freedom from professional terminology and its consistent simplicity make it easy to read. The opinions are sound and entirely in line with the reports of psychiatrists in other branches of the armed services. Certainly it is to be wished that such books as this should be widely read, so that the real problems of the veteran may be quite generally understood." B. D. Lewin
+ Sat R of Lit 28:51 N 17 '45 550w

KUPPER, WINIFRED. Golden hoof; the story of the sheep of the Southwest. 203p $2.75 Knopf

636.3 Frontier and pioneer life—Southwest. Sheep Agr45-318

This book combines a history of sheep raising in the Southwest from Coronado's day to the present, with a description of the sheep, and stories of sheepherders.

Booklist 42:7 S '45

Kirkus 13:151 Ap 1 '45 130w

"The book is well designed, but the yellow wartime paper is not too kind to the eyes. Discounting this, it belongs on the shelf with that small group of books which tell a true and engrossing story of life in the Western half of these United States." Ernest Haycox

+ N Y Times p7 My 27 '45 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:40 S '45 240w

"Mrs. Kupper's work on sheep ought to be valuable to any one who has even toyed with the idea of raising sheep, particularly in semi-arid regions. But what she has to say makes good reading whether any one wants to raise sheep or not." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 20 '45 700w

KURTZ, CHARLES MEARS. Track and turnout engineering. 3d ed 461p $5 Simmons-Boardman

625.11 Railroads—Curves and turnouts 45-6845

"Subtitled: 'A Handbook on Design Details of Railroad Turnouts and Crossings, with Mathematical Treatments of Track Layouts and Connections.' Third edition of a practical handbook for railroad track engineers, transitmen and design draftsmen for the laying out of turnouts and crossings with detailed mathematical problems of track layouts and connections. Knowledge of geometry and trigonometry is assumed." Library J

"For railroad men not familiar with the book it should be added that while not called a pocketbook this is a book that can be slipped in a side pocket. It is packed full of information that railroad engineers need in the field."

+ Eng N 135:128 S 6 '45 80w

Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:39 Jl '45

KURTZ, MARGO (ROGERS) (MRS FRANK ALLEN KURTZ). My rival, the sky. 218p $2.50 Putnam

B or 92 Kurtz, Frank Allen 45-4711

The personal story of the wife of one of America's leading combat pilots, one of the heroes of W. L. White's Queens Die Proudly. The story begins with a college courtship back in 1934, goes on thru the years of waiting and training, and finally to the experiences of a "wife at home" while the husband fights in the skies of Asia and Europe.

Booklist 41:300 Je 15 '45

"When Col. Frank Kurtz, hero of the Pacific theatre and 'Queens Die Proudly,' suggested that Margo write a book, her first natural dismay soon dissolved into a fine, private joke; she would write the book—and it would be all about Frank. The result is a tender, innocently proud tribute, as heart-warming and without affectation as a robin's call." Thelma Purtell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 24 '45 240w

"[Readers] will have to forgive some annoying stylistic mannerisms, some deliberate girlish 'cuteness,' and the almost embarrassing reiteration of personal terms of endearment. But they should have no trouble in recognizing, too, a real and sincere person—with husband to match." Richard Match

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Je 3 '45 400w

L

LA CLAVE, FRANK. Basic problems of sales management. 115p $1.25 McGraw

658.8 Sales management 45-2104

"This material appeared in Printers' Ink. A sales executive's refresher course on fundamentals of sales management planning, creating sales, hiring and firing salesmen, etc. For the period of transition from war to peace." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:334 Jl 15 '45

Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 30w

LA FARGE, CHRISTOPHER. Mesa Verde. 111p $2.50 New directions

812 45-35147

A two-act drama in verse, which attempts to explain the mystery of the cliff dwelling Indians of Mesa Verde, who, two centuries before Columbus came to America, suddenly abandoned their homes and their civilization and staged a mass migration.

"La Farge is Oliver's brother, and like him, is a sensitive writer. 'Mesa Verde' will never, perhaps, be considered a classic of the American Indian. . . 'Mesa Verde' is a poignant story of people dependent on the bounty of nature, living to the full the small pleasures of the day, willing to meet the future with courage, moved to action by the most persuasive orator. The characters are Indians—but the life is the life we can all understand since it partakes of the qualities of the lives we lead." J. A. Brandt

+ Book Week p8 Jl 29 '45 650w

"The chief dramatic appeal of this work lies perhaps in the fact that the dangers facing the tribe are perennially those of the human race. But what makes it distinctive in particular is the fact that it is entirely Indian in character. The lyrical dialogue, the soft-spoken invocations to tribal gods, the repetition of localized imagery all contribute to a consistency of color and atmosphere. This, and a sense of the whole as a completed moment in time make Mesa Verde remarkable as a work of interpretation." Alan Creighton

+ Canadian Forum 25:145 S '45 490w

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 29 '45 90w

"Recommended for drama and poetry collections."

+ Library J 70:821 S 15 '45 20w

"Combining fact with fancy, the poet-novelist has re-created a distant time and place with the unerring instinct of the artist who feels the truth before he reasons it. . . Mr. La Farge's unrhymed verse never becomes heavy with interpolations; it remains consistently articulate, full of concrete images, reflecting a primitive awe of nature. Obviously not meant for Broadway consumption, the play would nevertheless stage well, if only for its colorful architectural setting of houses inside a cave where the everyday life of these people is believably set forth." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p28 Ag 5 '45 290w

"There was nobility in this primitive life, at war with the elements and the invader. There was strength to these people, strength and the sweetness of antique ceremony. The verse moves with their natural grace and dignity. The invocation and the dance fall naturally into place. Great opportunity is here for an effective presentation, which some day I hope to see. As drama to read—which I shall not spoil for you by telling the story—this is a book of firm structure and moving humanity. In primitive beginnings we seem to watch the tribulations of much such a world as confronts us now, in the supposedly enlightened twentieth century!" W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 Ag 18 '45 650w

"Mr. La Farge skillfully makes these distant men and women come to life. And although there is in the play great possibility for analogy between the tragic confusions of this thirteenth century people and the confusions of today, the play is no stiff allegory but a moving representation of human beings facing crisis."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:6 D '45 320w

"Mr. La Farge has told his legend in simply, strongly and beautifully stressed free verse rhythms that follow those of the Navajo songs and myths which skilled translators, such as Ruth Bunzel and John Louw Nelson, have already given us. His characters are alive and convincing; and his reconstruction of an event in early continental history is a valuable addition to Americana. The book is attractively decorated with drawings by the author from traditional Navajo designs." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 7 '45 450w

LA FARGE, OLIVER. Raw material. 213p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-6248

Autobiographical reminiscences of an American ethnologist and writer, author of a famous novel dealing with American Indian life, The Laughing Boy.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 176:133 S '45 300w

"'Raw Material' is pleasant, sensitive, sincere. It is a credit to our sheltered classes. It is highly commendable. Only it is not very exciting." Maxwell Geismar

+ Book Week p2 Ag 5 '45 470w

Booklist 42:17 S '45

"There is an engaging candor about the disclosures of Oliver La Farge, boy and man, by himself. Once or twice, one might have preferred less graphic descriptions of unsavory scenes. But, for the most part, it is a privilege and an education to be admitted into the presence of this author's thinking. He writes with clarity and intelligence. He escorts his readers slowly and persuasively along the path of his development." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 24 '45 400w

"Oliver La Farge has written a disquieting book, which either he or his publishers have chosen to subtitle 'the autobiographical examination of an artist's journey into maturity.' If the publishers are responsible, then they have been infected by the tone of Mr. La Farge's conceit; if the author himself is responsible, then his subtitle as much as his book is an extraordinary giveaway. It is a giveaway in the sense that it explains why people have not liked him, but at the same time it is a giveaway in a good sense, in that it shows how those who have not liked him were more wrong than right in their judgment. For there are long stretches in 'Raw Material' which are writing of really extraordinary quality." H. L. Binsse

+ — Commonweal 42:412 Ag 10 '45 700w

Kirkus 13:172 Ap 15 '45 210w

"There is some slight posturing before a mental mirror in 'Raw Material' and I detect here and there the professional writing touch. But by and large this is a refreshing job. It shows that a man can be candid about experiences without assuming that sexual experiences are the only things one can be candid about. I like the book, and I think others will like it. It is both a document in literary development and an honest record in self-growth." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 22 '45 1200w

New Yorker 21:60 Jl 21 '45 90w

"The book is too varied to take up in detail. But there is hardly a page which is not alive and kicking, whether it deals with the Negro problem, with the psychological gulf between New England and Louisiana (Mr. La Farge taught for a space at Tulane), with a savage episode in the Petty France of New Orleans, with the past we have not yet understood, or with the future whose enigma we cannot read. Sharp perception everywhere finds appropriately vivid expression. And through Mr. La Farge's lens, cañons in Arizona, Mardi Gras masquerades, or unexpected aspects of the unmasked mind appear brilliantly and exactly defined." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 Jl 21 '45 1150w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 480w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 34:347 Ag '45 1350w

Time 46:104 Jl 30 '45 550w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 22 '45 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 41:100 O '45

LAFOREST-DIVONNE, PHILOMENE DE, comtesse (CLAUDE SILVE, pseud). Eastward in Eden; tr. by Evelyn Hatch. 271p il $2.50 Creative age

45-11151

"The first part of 'Eastward in Eden' is the account of the kidnapping of a little boy, Peter Green, from the gardens at Versailles on an afternoon in the time of Empress Eugénie. When the boy is returned to his home about a year later he sickens and dies, longing for the life of his 'captivity.' The second and longer section of the book reconstructs that captivity itself, a period of almost perfect enchantment at Sablomine, the ruined African stronghold of a group of thieves. . . Quite as influential upon Peter Green, and quite as really and immediately rendered as any of the human characters, are the remarkable animals and birds with which the place is populated. Sablomine is in its way a miniature or vestigial Eden." N Y Times

Reviewed by George Davis

Book Week p6 D 23 '45 350w

"The novel is divided into two sections. The evaluation of Peter's experience from the outside, guessed at from its effects, is followed by an account of what actually happened to him. Such a method of narration is a useful device for suggesting atmosphere and deepened understanding but unfortunately the story is not strong enough to stand the strain. So too with the strange, diffuse metaphors which, though evocative, constantly impede the flow of the narrative. A peculiarly unsatisfactory work, full of unassimilated ideas and images which even the vagueness of fantasy cannot unify." Peggy Stern

— Commonweal 43:246 D 14 '45 280w

"There's poignancy here, grace, if a lyricism perhaps too lacy for American tastes."

Kirkus 13:498 N 15 '45 110w

"Here is a strange and often beautiful book. Its simple story is marked by the sharp edges and the deep receding shadows, the shifting luminosity and the strong, odd emphases that are the common effects of moonlight, transforming and at the same time queerly revealing unexpected angles and dimensions." Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p4 D 16 '45 490w

"It may be that I liked Miss Silve's book so little because I wanted to like it so much, and I can only hope that other readers will get more out of it than I did. It's still a wonderful idea." Hamilton Basso

— + New Yorker 21:114 N 17 '45 200w

"The closer a novel is to fantasy the more it requires of the novelist in matters of style, of realistic detail, and of intelligence. The sentimental reflections with which 'Eastward in Eden' is studded are never original, never surprising, never make any demands whatever on the mind of the reader who finds himself sinking deeper and deeper in warm honey as the book progresses. And oddly enough, the qualities so sadly lacking in this novel are all qualities which one has been taught to believe are characteristic of the French." William Maxwell

— Weekly Book Review p10 N 25 '45 650w

LAGERKVIST, PAR FABIAN. The dwarf. 228p $2.50 Fischer, L.B.

45-10478

An allegorical tale of renaissance Italy, told in the guise of a diary kept by the court dwarf. He is a malevolent creature, who both hates

LAGERKVIST, P. F.—Continued
and loves his prince, and despises the lascivious princess. Love, desire for power, the effect of sin upon the human soul, war and treachery, all cross the pages of this small evil creature, as well as the influence of the court painter, with his humane philosophy of life.

" 'The Dwarf' is well, though not brilliantly, written; is by no means so vivid in its depiction of life in the Middle Ages as many another less pretentious novel, set in that period; and is so obvious in its significances as to seem scarcely to justify the circumlocution of writing down in fiction form its very simple message." F. H. Bullock

+ — Book Week p18 N 25 '45 400w

Kirkus 13:498 N 15 '45 130w

"It is one of the bitterest books that this reviewer has ever read. Even Swift's baleful passages about the Houyhnhnms hardly surpass it. But it is much more than that. It is a dwarf's-eye view of the Rinascimento. In a sense, it is also a dwarf's-eye-view—seen from the vantage point of Sweden—of the whole story of human sham and greed. . . The moral tone is that of a warped Aretino. But it is not for its plot that one must recommend it. One recommends it rather for its unerring if one-sided psychological report upon a great era—for its penetrating if one-sided comments upon man himself." T. C. Chubb

N Y Times p4 N 25 '45 650w

"I don't especially like books which deliberately set out to give a reader the creeps and nothing else, and although Mr. Lagerkvist has a larger ambition than this, I can't say that his little exercise in hair-raising has won me over to that form of literature." Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 21:114 N 17 '45 280w

"The subtlety with which the author has created his atmosphere is admirable. His style, colorful and lucid, reminds one of the historical works of Strindberg and Lagerlöf. The story itself holds you by the sheer beauty of the telling. But unfortunately we have here rather a long short story than a short novel; we hardly learn enough about the hero to understand this misshapen creature's bitterness, and when we leave him all we know is that he is thrown into a dungeon by his Prince." H. B. Kranz

Sat R of Lit 28:74 D 1 '45 550w

"The incidents and characters, exciting enough in themselves, are given added horror and vividness as they filter through the warped and sterile mind of the dwarf and the successful handling of this impressionistic technic adds enormously to the interest of an absorbing tale of violence." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 240w

LAIDLER, HARRY WELLINGTON. Social-economic movements; an historical and comparative survey of socialism, communism, cooperation, utopianism, and other systems of reform and reconstruction. 828p $5; text ed $3.75 Crowell

335 Socialism. Communism. Utopias 44-9691

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The encyclopedic character of the book may be also illustrated by the fact that recent programs of post-war reconstruction have been incorporated. The approach made by Mr. Laidler is rather uneven. In many parts of the book the biographical method prevails. These parts would better fit a book on the great socialists than a book on social-economic movements. In other chapters attention is concentrated on the historical description of organizations and institutions. We also meet with scattered sociological and economic evaluations, and occasionally, with an ascension into the stratosphere of genuine philosophy. . . As many critics have maintained, the labor value theory capitulated twice before a variant of the cost of production theory: first, in the work of its famous individualistic sponsor Ricardo and, secondly, in the system of his socialistic counterpart Marx. The reviewer would not object if an elaboration of this controversy had been left out in this otherwise so comprehensive survey, but he does believe that this essential qualification of an essential doctrine of socialism should not have been ignored." F. K. Mann

Am Econ R 35:180 Mr '45 2200w

"While the treatment of the material is not uniform, varying from sketchy outlines to most extensive descriptions, the author has covered considerable ground and covered it with unique competence. The material presented is well documented throughout the book. A selective but fairly extensive bibliography is appended to what must be considered the standard textbook on the subject." Ernest Manheim

+ Am J Soc 51:80 Jl '45 300w

"The book will be extremely useful as a reference work, and, with supplementary reading, as a textbook in its field. It is itself supplemented with an excellent and comprehensive list of selected references." E. D. Ellis

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:208 F '45 650w

"To those readers who are already familiar with the history of the socialist movements the first half of the book will be refreshing but not new. To such persons the most valuable parts are the chapters on Russia and those summarizing socialist thought in the period between the world wars. It is also valuable to have the various movements in all countries brought up to date. One might differ with Laidler as to organization, selection of materials, and evaluations, but he achieves his main goal, namely, the creation of an impression of one of the great epochs in human thought." W. B. Bodenhafer

+ Am Soc R 10:571 Ag '45 750w

"As a textbook for courses limited to the economics of various social-economic movements, the present volume may have certain shortcomings. For one thing, the 'economic' sections of the book are relatively brief. . . Dr. Laidler's work is scholarly and objective, the tone of his book is decidedly moderate, and his style is interesting. Social-Economic Movements will be invaluable as a source book, and it may be very useful as a textbook for courses which aim at a comprehensive treatment of the historical, political, sociological, and economic aspects of important economic movements and systems. Dr. Laidler has performed a task which needed doing." R. H. Blodgett

+ — Ann Am Acad 238:197 Mr '45 470w

"One of the things which persons interested in the CCF have long needed is a book giving a good account of the development of socialist thought and explaining the differences among various schools of socialism in the past and in the present. Mr. Laidler's new volume exactly meets this need." F. H. U.

+ Canadian Forum 25:26 Ap '45 280w

"Reading this book with discrimination and balance, one can learn much from it. The amount of material covered is great and, within the limits noted, the author has done an admirable job." J. D. Squires

+ Christian Century 62:553 My 2 '45 900w

Reviewed by J. K. Gordon

Nation 160:492 Ap 28 '45 550w

"One may agree or, in certain points, disagree with Laidler's interpretations. One, however, must admit that this is an excellent textbook which, at the same time, is a one-volume encyclopedia which should be available to the general public in every public library." J. S. Roucek

+ — Social Educ 9:332 N '45 550w

Reviewed by Paul Tobenkin

Weekly Book Review p23 Ag 5 '45 1100w

LAIRD, ROWENA. Stuffy; il. by [the author]. [32p] $1.50 Morrow

45-7198

This story of a greedy little boy who grew to a tremendous size and finally floated off into the blue is told in pictures and rhyme.

"Surprise ending in what she doesn't say instead of what she does; I'm all for that instead of a reform. Pictures on every page, clean cut, simple, gay flat color and line, and a clear type caption running story."

+ Kirkus 13:295 Jl 1 '45 100w

"Resembles somewhat the Munro Leaf idea in books on behavior, but illustrations are in solid color, and the text lettered in blue and red. Another title to add to the 'funny' books on manners for the quite young but has very slight value." A. M. Wetherell
— + Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w

"Grown-ups may frown a little at the pictures of Stuffy's tremendous growth, but children will chuckle and be genuinely amused." B. W. Shaffer
Sat R of Lit 28:44 O 20 '45 120w

"Here's a pleasanter 'morality' than Struwwelpeter, with the same popular blend of admonition and fantasy." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 26 '45 130w

LAMBERT, JANET. Just Jenifer. 187p $2 Dutton
45-6998

Jenifer was only sixteen when her father was called for duty overseas. General Jordon left in her charge eight younger sisters and brothers, and Jenifer struggled along bravely, even when the housekeeper left. Then a young English boy, recovering from shock, is added to her burdens, but "just Jenifer" was equal to her task. The scene is Florida.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p17 O 21 '45 180w

"Nice kids, and wholesome treatment of juvenile questions."
+ Kirkus 13:341 Ag 1 '45 120w

"Not an important book but one which older girls will enjoy for its touch of romance and its very real children." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 70:753 S 1 '45 50w

"Young girls, uncomfortably aware of their own shortcomings, may wish that Jenifer owned at least one fault, but she and her family are so gay, so genuinely youthful, that only the most determinedly unsentimental will cavil about that." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 S 2 '45 150w
Sat R of Lit 28:68 N 10 '45 50w

LAMOND, HENRY GEORGE. Dingo; the story of an outlaw; il. by Enos B. Comstock. 206p $2.50 Morrow
45-277

Basing his story on memories of over thirty years in the back country of northeastern Australia, the author has written of wild life in the state of Queensland. The story centers on a renegade dingo, one of the wild dogs of the country, who is both respected and feared by men and animals alike.

"The killings necessary to the carnivorous animals and White Ear's savage attacks are described in gory detail, so that the book may be too strong for some readers. It will appeal, however, to readers of animal stories, and will offer new material to those unacquainted with Australian wildlife."
Booklist 41:170 F 1 '45

"Sons of men who responded to Jack London's 'Call of the Wild' will find 'Dingo' as vivid and gripping a story. It is the same kind of book. . . Henry Lamond has managed to endow his dog hero with a personality that involves a reader's interest from the first page to the last."
+ Boston Globe p13 Ja 17 '45 200w

"Perceptive natural history story that is informative as well."
+ Kirkus 12:487 N 1 '44 150w

" 'Dingo' is not another 'Call of the Wild' by several hundred well-chosen adjectives. The principal appeal of the book for an American reader probably will be the translation into understandable words of such Australian terms as 'tucker,' 'joey,' 'coolibah,' and many others already partly identified for those who have read the words of the Australian soldiers' favorite song, 'Waltzing Matilda.' White Ears, however, is given a not unfriendly character and most readers probably will applaud Mr. Lamond's ingenious happy ending. 'Dingo' is not, as its title might lead one to believe, a children's book—unless the average book-reading small fry is more bloodthirsty than this reviewer believes." Foster Hailey
N Y Times p7 F 4 '45 280w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 28:25 Mr 17 '45 360w

" 'Dingo' is a good yarn and a vivid glimpse of Australia." Theodore Rogowski
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 22 '45 110w

"Up to the last half-dozen pages at least, 'Dingo' is a book with no concessions to sentimentalism, a wildlife story with honesty implicit in every line. Despite the turn at the end, it's a swell yarn and shortens the distance to Queensland considerably." R. B. Peck
+ Weekly Book Review p10 F 18 '45 520w

LAMONTE, FRANCESCA RAIMONDE. North American game fishes; il. by Janet Roemhild; with a foreword by Philip Wylie. 202p $3 Doubleday

597 Fishes—North America Agr46-2

"An original, nontechnical guide to fresh and salt-water game fishes in North American waters, it is a compact little volume that can readily be tucked into the angler's pocket. Each species described is illustrated, many of the pictures being in color. Notes on size, distinguishing characters and common names are included in the treatment of each fish species. Miss LaMonte is an authority on her subject, holding the post of associate curator of fishes in the American Museum of Natural History as well as serving as an official of the International Game Fish association. . . The names of many of the common marine fishes noted are of interest. One meets, for example, the 'Bastard Margaret Grunt,' 'Stumpknocker' and 'Horse-eye Jack.' The book contains detailed tables of both fresh and salt-water catches, identification keys to fish groups and a very complete index." Springf'd Republican

"Altogether a must for angler as well as ichthyologist."
+ Kirkus 13:331 Ag 1 '45 90w

"The color plates have been done with rare fidelity and the typography and format in general are excellent. The book must now be regarded as the outstanding one in the 'field book of fishes' class, since no attempt has been made to correct the all too many inaccuracies found in Schrenkeisen's 'Field Book of Fishes,' which appeared several years ago." C. B. Moore
+ Springf'd Republican p4 D 29 '45 360w

LAMSA, GEORGE MAMISHISHO. New Testament commentary from the Aramaic and the ancient eastern customs. 630p $3.75 Holman

225.7 Bible. New Testament 45-14401

"The author is a native Assyrian, whose language is a descendant of the Aramaic spoken in Palestine in the time of Jesus. He is able to throw much light upon many obscure, misunderstood and to us meaningless passages of the New Testament through his knowledge of Aramaic idioms and Oriental customs. His Gospel Light was a study of the Gospels, and this book covers the rest of the New Testament." Churchman

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 159:14 My 15 '45 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p238 My 19 '45 420w

LANDAU, MARK ALEKSANDROVICH (M. A. ALDANOV, pseud). For thee the best; tr. by Nicholas Wreden. 215p $2.50 Scribner

Byron, George Gordon Noel Byron, 6th baron—Fiction 45-9645

A historical novel of European politics in the 1820s. The events of Byron's last five years form the main thread of the story which ends with his death in Missolonghi; other matters and other celebrities are presented as they are seen by a British secret agent.

LANDAU, M. A.—Continued

"Although it is impossible to see any pattern in the incidents strung together by Mr. Aldanov, all of them are written with great skill and several are brilliant fusions of history, imagination, and ironic wit. . . Mr. Aldanov writes of these people as if he had met them once and judged them shrewdly, but not as if he understood them deeply or cared for them at all. He can make the tangle of misunderstanding and absurdity among the minor officers at Missolonghi ring true, or the relatively uncomplicated Wellington, but Lord Byron eludes him." P. L. Adams
+ — Atlantic 177:159 Ja '46 550w

Reviewed by Bergen Evans
Book Week p4 N 18 '45 360w

Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45

"How could it have happened that dissipated, cruel, unbalanced Lord Byron was completely carried away by the idea of Greek liberation? This is at least the most consistent subject in the flimsy composition of this historical novel. With an overdose of psychology and in a macabre mood the author offers some disillusioning glimpses of the political world during the last decade of the poet's life. Byron himself does not become a convincing figure." Max Fischer
— Commonweal 43:388 Ja 25 '46 320w

Kirkus 13:378 S 1 '45 230w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
New Repub 114:26 Ja 7 '46 120w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker
+ N Y Times p1 N 4 '45 700w

"I had been told by several people who read it in the original that it was one of the best things Mr. Aldanov had done. In a way it is, in that it is free from the sluggishness that made his other books somewhat tedious at times, but I still can't altogether agree with this judgment. Although the book is full of excellent passages and contains a few very fine scenes, it seemed to me only partly successful, much better in its parts than in its whole." Hamilton Basso
+ — New Yorker 21:113 N 17 '45 950w

"There are many leads in this little book that are promising, but not one is followed to fulfillment; there are deep insights and entertaining passages, but they do not come together to form a whole. Whatever Mr. Aldanov's intention was (and he is obviously concerned with historical semi- and pseudo-parallels) his intention has been frustrated by the manner of his execution. It is a pity, for we could do now, when there is a world to be made again, with an informed, thoughtful, illuminating novel based upon the Europe that baffled the statesmen who stepped into the vacuum created by Napoleon's fall." B. R. Redman
— + Sat R of Lit 28:50 N 17 '45 550w

"Mr. Aldanov has written a compact and powerful book which handles values with a sure hand. It has the grace of a musical composition, and under the guise of an evocation of the past it speaks to all living men who are capable of heeding." George Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 4 '45 800w

LANDE, ALFRED. Physics of flight. 122p il $2.50 Reinhold
629.1323 Aerodynamics. Airplanes 45-1234

"A textbook on aerodynamics of the airplane designed for students who have had at least one year of college physics and algebra, but are not ready for advanced treatises requiring a full knowledge of calculus. The book deals mainly with the principles and calculations of wing lift, and includes a discussion of Reynold's law of similarity and the vortex theory of induced drag." N Y New Tech Bks

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45
Library J 70:119 F 1 '45 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:3 Ja '45

LANDI, ELISSA. Pear tree. 221p $2.50 Ziff-Davis
45-3116

Study of a celebrated American poet, as sketched by an intimate friend and protege. Ginevra Sorel had been so full of life and laughter that her friends could not believe it when she died suddenly at the age of thirty-six. Then Mona, the narrator, discovered some strange facts as she delved into Ginevra's past. In checking up on her friend's secret life, Mona found her own happiness.

"The publishers of this archaic-flavored novel by one who ambidextrously graces both the theater and belles lettres, call attention to its 'truly literary style.' Sure enough! The floridly eloquent wraith of Lydia Sigourney is omnipresent, and there are suggestions of Mary J. Holmes, Laura Jean Libby and Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth as well as other undeservedly obscure artists resurrected in Herbert Ross Brown's engaging treatise, 'The Sentimental Novel in America, 1789-1860.'" Jack Conroy
— Book Week p12 Mr 25 '45 400w

Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45

"Tremendously exciting to read, it's imagistically sound and penetrating."
+ Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 180w

"Uncontrolled emotion, some very bad writing for a book which has only a certain hysterical fascination."
— Kirkus 12:553 D 15 '44 130w

"Well written and interest sustained throughout. While love interest is unconventional, it is not sordid but restrained in treatment. Conservative librarians may wish to read before buying." S. E. Sherman
Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 70w

"Miss Landi, actress and author of five other novels, has a sharp ear for dialogue, and a seeing eye for the artist and actor at home or at work. Offering suspense without shudders and a sure, easy style that avoids the obvious, 'The Pear Tree' should satisfy the average reader." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 8 '45 180w

"It is an ingenious, adultly written narrative, and its reflections on the creative temperament, in its selfish as well as its self-sacrificing manifestations, are the garnering of a tree of knowledge whose fruit is more acid than the pear." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 29 '45 350w

LANDIS, WALTER SAVAGE. Your servant the molecule. 238p $2.75 Macmillan 660 Chemistry, Technical. Chemical industries. Chemistry 44-8602
For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Bookmark 6:8 Ja '45

"I think Dr. Landis was at his best in the chapters on food, shelter, and clothing, particularly so when you keep in mind the fact that he was expressing the chemist's 'jargon' in layman's language. For the more technical minds, his chapters on organic chemistry, petroleum, rubber, and drugs are excellent reference reading. Engineers and technologists whose work has not been directly connected with chemistry, and who are not looking for the precision of a handbook, will find Dr. Landis' concise paragraphs a splendid guide." J. V. N. Dorr
+ Chem & Eng N 23:195 Ja 25 '45 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:57 O '44

"It is no easy task to translate the technical jargon of applied chemistry into the language of the layman, and Dr. Landis has not quite succeeded in jumping that obstacle. Yet, if one skips over the complex chemical equations and organic formulae which are scattered throughout this volume, he will find an extremely instructive and timely book." James Mandel
+ — N Y Times p29 F 25 '45 280w

"Dr. Landis has written an excellent account of chemistry and the chemical industry, but it is not, as the title suggests, a 'popular' book.

The intelligent layman, the economist, and the scientist whose work is on the border-line of chemistry, can read such a book as this with profit, but it is scarcely to be expected that it will have any general appeal to the reading public. . . For one who wants to know the basic chemistry of a large number of important industrial processes, this small book offers a wealth of material." R. M. Sutton
+ — R of Scientific Instruments 16:84 Ap '45 230w

LANE, FREDERIC CHAPIN. Andrea Barbarigo, merchant of Venice, 1418-1449. 224p pa $2.25 Johns Hopkins press

382 Barbarigo, Andrea. Venice—Commerce
A45-1041

"This contemporary of Shakespeare's Antonio was a real merchant, the only one of his time on whom so complete a record of his ventures could be found. The story of the far flung enterprises that fetched him ducats from the Levant and the Low Countries is a period study that tells much about 15th century business and fully as much about the government of Venice when that city was the most flourishing commercial center of Europe." Boston Globe

"Publication of the first 'business biography' for Renaissance Venice, illuminating the triumphs and disappointments of an individual trader, is a matter of considerable interest. Its value is enhanced because Professor Lane has seized the opportunity to take stock of the unfortunately scarce material of fifteenth and early sixteenth century account books and business letters accessible in the Venetian archives." Hans Baron
+ Am Hist R 50:787 Jl '45 900w
Boston Globe p13 F 7 '45 360w

"The modest title of this work disguises its real importance. It is the most instructive account of the actual processes of Venetian commerce of the fifteenth century now available in English, perhaps in any language. . . The material for this study was obtained largely from original sources, much of it from packages of family business records unopened since they were first put away more than four hundred years ago. The interpretation of these records is enriched by the years of study which the author has made of Venetian economic history of the Renaissance period." A. C. Krey
+ Social Educ 9:236 My '45 500w
Social Studies 36:139 Mr '45 10w

"The technical, heavy style of this study limits the classroom use of the volume to the most capable and interested academic students of the senior high school. The social studies teacher of world history would find this a very valuable addition to his reference shelf. The detailed nature of this aspect of the late Middle Ages would be highly usable in bringing this period of history from generalities to something very personal." J. C. Appel
+ — Social Studies 36:278 O '45 950w

"The thorough scholarship of this little book gives it a rightful place in a series of university studies primarily designed for scholars. But this position should not be allowed to hide it from the thoughtful reader, for whom it has many additional attractions." K. R. Greenfield
+ Yale R n s 35:186 autumn '45 500w

LANGDALE, MRS HAZEL LOUISE (RAYBOLD). Lance of Mystery hollow; il. by Woodi Ishmael. 184p $2 Dutton
45-7909

Mystery story for older boys and girls.

Booklist 42:61 O 15 '45

"Laid in and around a Vermont village in the early 19th century; good authentic detail and regional background. An excellent boy's book for 6th, 7th and 8th grades."
+ Kirkus 13:399 S 1 '45 110w

"Moderate in pace, in appeal. For the library that always needs another mystery or horse story." Ruth McEvoy
+ Library J 70:824 S 15 '45 50w

"A well-written tale for older boys." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p37 S 16 '45 130w
Sat R of Lit 28:64 N 10 '45 220w

"Early Vermont is the setting for 'Lance of Mystery Hollow.' Mystery fans will thrill to the clew of the missing towel, the threatening note and strange coin and be as angry as Lance when his log cabin home becomes nothing but smoking ruins." L. R. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 90w

"The historical background, dear to any Vermonter, merges so well with the plot that though scarcely noticed as history at the time, it will be remembered afterward." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 14 '45 400w

LANGE, VICTOR. Modern German literature, 1870-1940. 223p $2.50 Cornell univ. press

830.9 German literature—History and criticism
45-9338

A guide to German literature covering the period from 1870 to the early 1940's. Both German and Austrian writers are included. Bibliography. Indexes.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 5 '46 120w

"The bibliography constitutes a third of the whole book and is to my judgment its most valuable part. It lists more fully than any other publication the translated works of the poets mentioned in the text, from the eighteen seventies until now. General studies as well as critical and biographical articles from magazines of all kinds are cited—a great help for all students working in this field. Not less valuable for practical use is the careful index, including not only all German names and titles mentioned in the text but also the titles of all available English translations with the original titles in parenthesis. These features make Professor Lange's book a very useful work of reference." Max Fischer
+ Commonweal 43:338 Ja 11 '46 390w

"If anyone wishes to know how not to write a history of literature he has only to be given this book. Every author, no matter how obscure, is mentioned at least once, and no distinctions whatever are made. Third-grade writers like Raabe are set side by side with first-rate poets like Stifter. The twentieth century, for which judgments are not yet established, fares even worse. . . The only proof that this book was written by a real person and is not a filing system which through some magic has got into print lies in occasional omissions. . . There would not be much sense in reviewing such a book if it were not for the, let us hope, imaginary danger that it should become a textbook." Hannah Arendt
— Nation 162:22 Ja 5 '46 140w

LANGLEY, MRS ADRIA (LOCKE). A lion is in the streets. (Whittlesey house publication) 482p $3 McGraw 45-4226

The story of an American politician, a one-time peddler, who using the slogans and tricks of a demagogue, rose to the position of governor of Magnolia State, before he finally fell. The story is told largely from the point of view of his wife, a girl from the North, who is fascinated like others by her husband's gifts, but not forever blind to his faults.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p1 My 13 '45 1200w
Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45

"This is the most devastating novel about American politics that has been written for a long time. Perhaps it is the big novel of the year, although it is too early to predict that. But no one can afford to miss the experience of reading it." E. A. Laycock

LANGLEY, ADRIA—Continued
+ Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 400w

"Mrs. Langley has imagination, a deep feeling for the soil, and ability with incident but her story falls off somewhat through confusion as to where the sympathy is to lie."
Cath World 161:443 Ag '45 250w

"Mrs. Langley, a Nebraskan, knows the bayou country and she is a serious student of social history. Her novel, however, in spite of the drive of its social and political message, carries the reader along for its own sake. The plot is convincing; except at the end where, in her treatment of the assassination, the allegorical quality of the tale is too exclusively stressed. The characterization is strong, even to several of the background folk—sharecroppers and bayou fishermen. Much of the talk is in regional dialects, and yet it is vigorously handled, rich and readable." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 16 '45 700w

Reviewed by P. T. Hartung
Commonweal 42:506 S 7 '45 700w

+ Kirkus 13:90 Mr 1 '45 420w

"Absorbing, colorful story. . . Will probably be enjoyed by men as well as women. Recommended for all types of libraries." E. F. Kelly
+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by J. S. Redding
New Repub 112:852 Je 18 '45 330w

"In introducing Mrs. Langley, the publisher tells you that she has a passion for America, an intimate knowledge of regions and their people and that she has traveled extensively. In reading her book, it is obvious she has done painstaking research into Louisiana lore for local color. She writes with a lively style, reveals a good imagination and a fine sense of the dramatic. 'A Lion Is in the Streets' is what Lyle Saxon would call 'a good readin' book.' . . More serious thought on the sterner realities contributing to her story might have diverted the reader's attention from many of her trivial slip-ups in dealing with local customs and conversation." Roark Bradford
+ — N Y Times p3 My 13 '45 1200w

"If it weren't for the publishers' hard-breathing blurb on the dust jacket, it would be easy to believe that this pretentious story of the rise and fall of a demagogue is no more than a clumsy satire. Even admitting that its absurdities are unintentional, it is hard to take Mrs. Langley's novel seriously. . . In spite of all these disqualifications, 'A Lion Is in the Streets' will almost certainly do well at the lending libraries."
New Yorker 21:81 My 26 '45 180w

"I think there is more to be said on the social and economic ferment that prepares the way for a man such as Hank Martin, but if we are to begin with the man himself we have here, in Martin, a comprehensive study of the American-type dictator, perhaps the best thus far." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:8 My 12 '45 950w

"This is a well-told story, done by flashbacks, but it is not a great one. It is pleasant Saturday night reading. It can hardly be called a cry of faith in the people; it points rather to aristocratic virtues when demagoguery gets out of hand." A. H. Fuller
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 480w

"Strongly reminiscent of the career of the late Huey Long, this is the story of Hank Martin, that 'kindlin' man,' product of the bayou country of the Magnolia State. . . It is both an intensely readable tale and a social document, for it reveals how mass ignorance and legalized injustice become grist for the mill of the clever demagogue. . . The book has certain faults. It is overlong and portions of the denouement seem a little contrived and unconvincing. Yet these things shrink in importance when one considers the immense gusto with which it is written." Jennings Rice
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 My 13 '45 1050w

LANGLEY, DOROTHY. Dark medallion. 225p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
45-4370

Portrays the life of a once-proud southern Missouri family, and the poverty and tragedy which came to it in the days before the first World war. The narrator is an appealing little girl, a member of the family.

Reviewed by Mona Van Duyn
Book Week p12 Je 10 '45 550w

Booklist 41:301 Je 15 '45

Kirkus 13:74 F 15 '45 190w

"Technique ineffective, story runs thin. Misses fire as both psychological study and light entertainment." E. P. Nichols
— Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 70w

"The author has lavished a great deal of obvious talent on her impossible plot. As readers of 'Wait for Mrs. Willard' know, Miss Langley can catch a reader from the word go, and lure him into the story she has to tell. 'Dark Medallion' begins brilliantly: for a third of the distance the blend of memories, magnolias and madness offers a promise of first-rate melodrama, despite the familiarity of the ingredients. But this time the ingredients simply overshadow the characters, infecting them too deeply for any real development." William Du Bois
+ — N Y Times p19 My 27 '45 420w

"Mrs. Langley, telling the story as the child sees it, catches the uncertain lights of childhood with delicacy and skill and, when family misfortunes are intuitively felt by the girl rather than understood, the story has charm and warmth. The author, though, can't let it go at that, and far too often, apparently under the impression that readers of novels are not very bright, she points things up for them by brushing aside the haze in which she has enveloped the child and confronting her with some fairly tawdry melodrama."
+ — New Yorker 21:78 My 26 '45 120w

Reviewed by S. H. Hay
Sat R of Lit 28:35 Je 23 '45 400w

Reviewed by Rose Feld
Weekly Book Review p6 Je 3 '45 600w

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE. Calling South America; adventures on the air [pictures by Barbara Latham; maps by Erwin Raisz]. 167p $1.32 Ginn

980 South America—Juvenile literature. Radio broadcasting 45-2974

"Latin American cultural and racial differences, the Indian background and religious setting—dramatically presented—become familiar and accepted facts to classes. The text is carefully correlated with current geography and social-studies curricula, with vocabulary graded to the 5th- and 6th-grade levels." (School & Society) Index.

"The stories of South America are told in a vital and lifelike manner, many of them in the way that these people speak in ordinary conversation. Those stories that are not written as conversation are told in simple, informal language. The boys of North America ask many questions concerning the various aspects of South American life. Asking questions is the easiest and most natural method of getting information, and this natural approach adds much to the readability of the book. . . Teachers will find this publication a useful addition to the library, either as a source book for social studies or as free-reading material." Martin Little
+ El School J 45:477 Ap '45 550w

School & Society 61:144 Mr 3 '45 60w

LANUX, PIERRE COMBRET DE. European manifesto. 162p $2 Creative age

940.531444 Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe. Europe—Politics. International cooperation 45-6510

A French diplomat and professor gives his plan for a federated Europe which would ensure the control of Germany as a minority.

He envisions ten European nations banded together with support from England and Russia, to form one political unit, to help the United States, Great Britain, Russia, and China, maintain the peace of the world. The ten are the liberated people of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Luxemburg, Greece, Yugoslavia, and France. No index.

Reviewed by Everett Holles
Book Week p8 Jl 15 '45 400w

"The book is written with a touching sincerity and directness and in some of its pages there is a ring of Count Mirabeau's oratory or of Tom Paine's or Thomas Jefferson's. Probably these three men and many other torchbearers of a successful revolution were considered 'crystal-gazers' and 'perfectionists' by most of their contemporaries. The same thing might happen to Pierre de Lanux, one-time director of the Paris office of the League of Nations, and more recently a member of the French Delegation at the San Francisco Conference." E. S. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 27 '45 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45
Foreign Affairs 24:158 O '45 20w

"The closing chapters concern the American angle, with justified criticism of her past isolationism but an insulting disregard of her present war contribution. America it seems has no public opinion, no leadership, and is only 'promises'."
Kirkus 13:293 Jl 1 '45 100w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 161:503 N 10 '45 180w

"Mr. de Lanux, in presenting his rough working sketch for a new and federated Europe, does not go into many details on how such a federation might run. His book is a rather sketchy one, and what he has done, actually, is voice an expression of hope. It is easy to share his hope, and to persuade oneself that he has good reason for hoping as he does. However, it might be wished that he had hoped, while he was about it, for a world federation instead of a purely European one; or, if not that, for a federated Europe that would be part of a federated world. The world is a big place, with room in it for everybody, but it's still one world." Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 21:57 Jl 21 '45 550w

"There are some people who live in a world of dreams in which their wishes are instantly fulfilled and from which everything unpleasant or contrary to their hopes is rigidly excluded. And there are others who write books in anticipation of expected events and rush them into print in an effort to beat their competitors to the market, only to have their expectations belied when the anticipated events fail to transpire. To which of these groups Pierre de Lanux belongs each reader of his latest book will have to decide for himself. But that he belongs to one or the other seems undeniable." Varian Fry
Sat R of Lit 28:13 S 8 '45 1150w

"The weakness of the dictionary from the standpoint of library and other reference usage is in the omission of indexes to the foreign terms. Such an additional section would, of course, greatly increase the size of the volume, but in its present form it cannot be used unless the English equivalent of the term is known. The book is well printed and bound. However, the inner margins are so narrow that rebinding will be impossible. . . For small libraries and for persons needing one polylingual aviation dictionary, this book will not be satisfactory because of the lack of cross-indexing. For larger and special libraries which can use its handy tabulation of English terms and their foreign equivalents in a wide variety of languages, and which have other sources to which they can turn for translation from the foreign language to English, it is recommended."
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:40 Jl '45 440w

LAO T'AI-T'AI. See Ning Lao T'ai-t'ai

LAO TZU. Way of life according to Laotzu; an American version by Witter Bynner. 76p $1.25 Day
299.5 Philosophy, Chinese 44-47243
For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"This book is one of our most important guides to that spiritual China which we once expected to teach but from which, it now appears, we have much to learn." A. D. Ficke
+ Poetry 66:40 Ap '45 700w

"An expertly, delicately rendered, independent yet intrinsically faithful version, written in a fresh contemporary style closely akin to Whitman's of the 5000-word treatise of Laotzu." W. K. Carlson
+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 140w

"Mr. Bynner's translations, in both free and rhymed metrics, are simple, informal, with an easy, quiet charm. The eighty-one brief sections read almost as a collection of separate lyrics: most of them build up an epigrammatic conclusion; many contain truths arrived at through characteristic, inevitable paradox. Besides the precepts on individual conduct, there is a good deal here on the nature of government and leadership." Ruth Lechlitner
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 11 '45 380w

LA PENTA, HELEN (MRS FRANK DIAMOND). Piccola. 234p $2 Harper
45-5904

Delicate story of a little girl's growing years. Piccola's first dawning thoughts about the world around her are set down as they came to her in a convent in Rome. Later she goes to her grandparents in a small Italian hill village, and later still to her father in America.

"Twenty-year-old Helen La Penta, who was born in New York but spent her early years in Italy, has written a sometimes charming, sometimes monotonous, first book out of her undigested childhood experiences." Mona Van Duyn
+ — Book Week p8 Je 24 '45 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
— Commonweal 42:268 Je 29 '45 390w

"A segment of childhood, which is gentle and artlessly appealing."
+ Kirkus 13:163 Ap 15 '45 150w

"Helen La Penta's is another name to add to the galaxy of astonishing young talents which has burst upon literary horizons this spring. . . Upon [a] simple framework Miss La Penta has entwined, with insight as delicate as it is rare, the solemn, joyous, grotesque, mischievous moods and perceptions of a young child. . . The process of Americanization involves a great many routine episodes: the viewpoint suddenly and confusingly vacillates between Jodie and her author; gaiety becomes whimsy, and the whimsy forced. It is the greater tribute that, in spite of these later lapses, Little Girl remains one of the more enchanting small fry of fiction." Thelma Purtell
+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 8 '45 270w

"It is the unfamiliar early background that gives charm to the narrative, which becomes tedious once the child begins to grow up in America."
+ — New Yorker 21:70 Je 16 '45 70w

"Miss La Penta is a young writer with a talent which is both vivid and delicate, and her first novel has a fresh charm." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 Je 30 '45 410w

"As delicate and evanescent as spun sugar, here is an enchanting story which frequently succeeds in capturing that most elusive essence—the memory of growing up. Quite simply, growing up is understanding and growing old is failing to do so." B. A. Thacher
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 17 '45 400w
Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

LARIAR, LAWRENCE. Bed and bored; il. by [the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 160p $1.98 McGraw

793.73 Amusements. Puzzles. Convalescence 45-4187

Collection of cartoons, picture puzzles, pencil games, and quizzes for convalescents of any type.

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45
Springf'd Republican p6 My 24 '45 200w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE, ed. Best cartoons of the year 1945. 128p $2 Crown

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons

"A selection, by the artists themselves, of the best cartoons they drew for Liberty, Collier's, The Saturday Evening Post, This Week, Parade, Argosy, The American Magazine, See, P M, and many others." Subtitle

"An annual, and good value—good merchandise—for those who want one new cartoon book and would rather take this excellent selection of 300 than specialize in some one cartoonist."

+ Kirkus 13:455 O 1 '45 50w

"A few drawings by Virgil Partch, Bill O'Malley, and Michael Berry show occasional spontaneity, but mostly this collection is limp and third-rate. If it has any value it's to introduce a few of the better young cartoonists from the Armed Forces who may soon be doing first rate work. Leo Salkin, Irwin Chaplan, and Ponce de Leon are the best of these." Roy Duncan

— + Sat R of Lit 28:26 O 20 '45 250w

"It is always difficult to evaluate a cartoon omnibus and the present work is a case in point. What may seem definitely funny to one reader may not click with another. While the individual cartoonists had their own say in the selected 'best' cartoons, it would not be amiss to point out that some of these selections seem, to this reviewer, at least, to range from poor to excellent." C. B. M.

Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 140w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p5 D 2 '45 90w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE. Girl with the frightened eyes. 196p $2 Dodd

45-8440

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p10 S 30 '45 130w

"The solution, having to do with the copying of famous paintings, is logical enough, but on the whole, this book isn't up to its predecessor, 'The Man with the Lumpy Nose.' "

New Yorker 21:88 S 29 '45 100w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 S 29 '45 40w

"This is slick, funny and puzzling, a pleasant successor to 'The Man With the Lumpy Nose.' " Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p26 S 30 '45 180w

LARRIMORE, LIDA, pseud. See Turner, L. L.

LARSON, HAROLD. Björnstjerne Björnson; a study in Norwegian nationalism. (King's crown press bk) 172p pa $2 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Bjørnson, Bjørnstjerne A45-1918

"Next to Ibsen, Björnson was the greatest Norwegian writer of the nineteenth century to secure for Norwegian letters a place in world literature. He was above all a patriot who took active part in all the struggles which occupied the public mind of his native land. . . The present study is in no way a full-fledged biography; it is only concerned with Björnson's attitude toward nationalism and the public questions of his day, and as such it is now of special interest not only to the historian but to all who would understand the state of mind we call nationalism." N Y Times

"In his book on Björnson Dr. Harold Larson has taken us several steps forward on the road toward a yet somewhat distant goal. As a brief study of one phase of Björnson's life, it leaves little to be desired. Mr. Larson writes fluently. He has used the rich sources of the Oslo University library as well as the National Archives of Norway. He has handled the material with excellent critical judgment and painstaking accuracy. More than that, he has proved himself capable of understanding the positive force in true nationalism. He has been able to see the great distinction between national egotism and national creativeness, the latter being just as significant as personal creativeness." Theodore Jorgenson

+ Am Hist R 50:797 Jl '45 550w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p29 Ap 29 '45 500w
Social Studies 36:186 Ap '45 20w

LARSON, MELVIN G. Field Marshal Bernard L. Montgomery, man of prayer. 100p $1.25 Zondervan

B or 92 Montgomery, Sir Bernard Law 45-35146

"Known to his soldiers as 'Monty,' and possessing a curious blend of ruthlessness and tenderness in his personality, Montgomery has become famous throughout the world as one of the greatest generals of modern times. And yet it is not an uncommon sight to see him standing bareheaded in the field conducting divine service. . . His victories have been achieved with a Bible in one hand and a dog-eared copy of 'Pilgrim's Progress' in the other." Springf'd Republican

Christian Century 62:861 Jl 25 '45 20w

"An interesting and pleasantly written biography of a fascinating military genius." Cyril Clemens

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 9 '45 650w

LASERSON, MAX M. Russia and the western world; the place of the Soviet Union in the comity of nations. 275p $2.50 Macmillan

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations. Russia—History 45-10252

"This book provides a background and point of view for an understanding of Russia's place and role in world affairs today. It [seeks to] clarify the attitude of the Soviet Union toward other, especially western countries during the past twenty-five years." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 42:158 Ja 15 '46

Reviewed by W. H. Melish
Churchman 160:17 Ja 1 '46 180w
Kirkus 13:451 O 1 '45 170w

"Recommended as a good basis for understanding of Russia's present stand in foreign relations and probable future course." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Louis Fischer
Sat R of Lit 28:12 D 29 '45 600w

"In presenting his case Prof. Laserson has reviewed the important points of Russia's political and social history of the past century with clarity and objectivity and makes skillful use of his material as the basis for his conclusions." R. S. Ullery

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 480w

"There is nothing startlingly new in this latest addition to the swelling stream of books upon Russia, and the author's somewhat involved and at times pedantic style detracts from the interest his material should command. The student of government and foreign policy should nevertheless find 'Russia and the Western World' rewarding." F. R. Dulles

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 D 30 '45 600w

LASKER, BRUNO. Asia on the move; population pressure, migration, and resettlement in eastern Asia under the influence of want and war; issued under the auspices of the Am. council, Inst. of Pacific relations. 207p $3 Holt

325.1 Migration, Internal—Asia. World war, 1939—Asia 45-1673

"The present study has for its subject the movements of population in one part of the world, eastern Asia. It attempts to give just enough historical background to help the reader recognize recent drifts as parts of a continuing process. . . Its main concern, however, is with recent events and present conditions as ingredients in an acutely problematic social situation." Foreword

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman
Am Soc R 10:572 Ag '45 480w

Booklist 41:205 Mr 15 '45

Current Hist 8:441 My '45 70w

Foreign Affairs 23:700 Jl '45 50w

Kirkus 13:47 F 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by M. C. Manley
Library J 70:163 F 15 '45 110w

"To this reviewer, Mr. Lasker's conclusion lacks conviction. . . . Nevertheless, Mr. Lasker's is a valuable book. Its laborious writing and its overabundance of footnotes (212) may scare off the ordinary reader. But to the thousands of Allied officials who some day will have to help in the rehabilitation of Asia the book offers both rich data and much useful analysis." Mark Gayn
+ — N Y Times p3 F 25 '45 950w

"Lasker's book is a well-balanced, well-documented and penetrating analysis of a crucial world problem and as such deserves to be widely known and studied—though packed with information it is at the same time eminently readable." L. D. Stamp
+ Pacific Affairs 18:294 S '45 750w

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson
Sat R of Lit 28:14 Mr 3 '45 800w

"Mr. Lasker's qualifications for his task are well known. As a research associate of the Institute of Pacific Relations, he has worked and studied in the countries of which he writes. In the gathering of his material he has made use of the many research facilities of the Institute and the collaboration of many American and Oriental scholars. The result is a valuable compendium of useful information, not quite as 'readable' as his earlier 'Peoples of Southeast Asia,' but more significant as a basis for the formulation of plans and attitudes pertaining to the peace of the world." A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 Mr '45 1050w

"A certain lack of focus and clarity occasionally arises, especially with reference to general principles. For instance, in one of the most crucial matters—the question of how the rapid and unpropitious growth of Asiatic populations can be halted without increased mortality—the author's position is not easy to determine. This criticism, however, applies to most migration literature, and should not obscure the fact that the present work contains a wealth of relevant material and intelligent interpretation. It is a workmanlike contribution to contemporary debate on an important topic." Kingsley Davis
+ — Survey G 34:135 Ap '45 550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:37 Je '45 200w

"It must be admitted that the mass of data and sometimes confusing generalizations drawn from them make 'Asia on the Move' somewhat difficult reading. The picture of what has been happening in the Orient emerges even more blurred than circumstances warrant as a result of the author's occasional lack of clarity. But in drawing attention to the problems created by Asiatic migration and the need for concerted planning in attempting to solve them in the post-war world, Mr. Lasker has performed a useful service." F. R. Dulles
+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 4 '45 650w
Wis Lib Bul 41:45 Ap '45

LASSER, DAVID. Private monopoly: the enemy at home. 306p $3 Harper

338.85 Trusts, Industrial. Monopolies. Economic policy 45-8572

"While not attempting to simplify a highly complex world problem, the material in this book has tried to show: (1) the striking similarity in the activities of monopoly in the various industrial nations of the world; (2) the effect in peace and war of the extension of monopoly influences on the international scene in the form of cartels; (3) the sharp and growing conflict between the democratic impulses of the people and the monopoly trends; (4) the responsibility of these monopolistic influences in the causation of World War II and how deeply they will affect the possibilities in the peace." Pref

"Monopoly is not a satisfactory word for the subject of David Lasser's 'Private Monopoly,' and the author is the first to say so. It will be too bad if readers shy away from it as a too familiar subject, for Lasser has done an excellent job of presenting and documenting the faults of the politico-economic system dominated by big business." C. E. Noyes
+ Nation 161:526 N 17 '45 300w

"This is quite the most readable study I have seen of private monopoly and its impact on society. It leans heavily on secondary sources and little of its information is new to readers of PM and the progressive journals. However, it is an excellent synthesis of everything worthwhile that has been said on this crucial subject. Lasser has scholarship and keen insight; his book is a real contribution in its field." H. J. Bresler
+ New Repub 113:722 N 26 '45 750w

"This is not the first warning that something is wrong with capitalism, of course, and it is far from likely to be the last, but there is a moderation and a hope in Mr Lasser's book that are quite frequently missing from critiques of world industry." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 11 '45 420w

LASSER, JACOB KAY. Business executive's guide; a check list on problems of organization, finance, taxes, & management. 252p $3 McGraw

658 Business management 45-7149

"This book seeks to provide a practical guide and check list to which businessmen can turn when confronted by a business problem. . . It is the result of notes made during twenty odd years of advising people on their duties and rights growing out of business problems that confront them. . . Admittedly, it is not all-inclusive. The experience of the author has weighted the contents heavily toward accounting and taxes. Many business steps in sales, marketing production, personnel relations, etc. are not covered." Author's note

Booklist 42:71 N 1 '45

Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 60w

LATHROP, DOROTHY PULIS. Skittle-skattle monkey [pictures by the author]. [48p] $1.75 Macmillan

"In her latest book Miss Lathrop has added to her authentic animal portraits many fine drawings of a monkey who displays all the traditional mischief and curiosity of the tribe. The most engaging picture is that of Jasmine, the monkey, holding the Pekinese puppy in her arms in truly maternal fashion. But that was only one of many activities which occupied her during the long afternoon when (freed from her cage by her own persistent efforts) she investigated everything in the room from Topaz, the goldfish, in his globe, to a bowl of tropical fruit." N Y Times

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46

"Perhaps seven and eight year old boys will discover too much zest in this tale of continuous destruction, but it is humorously told, and the pictures are delicate, skillful, gay."
Kirkus 13:471 O 15 '45 70w
+ N Y Times p14 N 11 '45 150w

LATHROP, D. P.—Continued

"For illustrations, Miss Lathrop has done another set of distinguished animal drawings which are beautiful in their meticulous detail."

+ New Yorker 21:127 D 8 '45 50w

"There is no need to say that the illustrations, printed in a silvery gray, are both beautiful and truthful. Their designs in this book are particularly lovely. Miss Lathrop has created a new character in Jasmine. Bad as she is, the children will love her. And Turvey, makes a perfect chorus." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:50 N 10 '45 450w

"These are some of the most appealing animal pictures Dorothy Lathrop has made. The witless wisdom of Jasmine's glance; the brooding peace with which, surrounded by wreckage, she uses one foot to chime the bell; the stolidity of the puppy, are not complicated with humanity. The pictures are made by one who understands her animals." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 11 '45 350w

LATOUCHE, JOHN TREVILLE. Congo; photographed by André Cauvin. 192p $3.75 Willow, White & co, c.o. Duell

916.75 Kongo, Belgian 45-7487

A survey of conditions in the Belgian Congo today with some review of past history and a defense of King Leopold II's policies and methods.

Booklist 42:108 D 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 1 '45 60w

"'Congo' is a wonderful piece of production for a wartime book. It is the story in words and pictures of a trip through the Congo sponsored by the Belgian Government. It is therefore propaganda, and the whole tone of the book is set by the frontispiece—a very fine photograph of that very bad King—Leopold II, founder of the Congo." Stuart Cloete

N Y Times p5 Ag 12 '45 310w

"The pictures are wonderful. . . Cauvin, in the compass of a short, though copiously illustrated book, has explored the great Central African world of the vast Belgian colony from every conceivable aspect. As viewed through the Cauvin lens, the men and women of the Congo cease to be types. . . It is more or less inevitable in such impressive, eye-catching company that one automatically thinks of John Latouche's accompanying prose as 'text' or even as letterpress. . . To be truthful, neither Mr. Latouche's selection of his material nor his writing of it ever quite lifts the printed pages above that level." J. W. Vandercook

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:24 S 8 '45 850w

"One of the most satisfactory of recent travel books."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 29 '45 600w

"Readers who enjoy the 'National Geographic Magazine' will applaud this candid entertainment." Geoffrey Bruun

Weekly Book Review p6 S 2 '45 500w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. History of the expansion of Christianity; 7v; v. 7, Advance through storm, A.D. 1914 and after, with concluding generalizations. 542p maps $4 Harper

270 Church history. Missions (37-20993)

This final volume of the author's monumental work on the history of Christian missions, covers the years from 1914 to 1945. Three chapters at the end of the book, containing "concluding generalizations" are entitled: A brief summary of the course thus far traversed; A comparison with the records of other religions; The conclusion of the whole matter. Bibliography. Index.

"No parallel work has ever appeared in any language. Certain ponderous accounts of the great beliefs exist and sectarian 'histories' abound. These have, however, uniformly been the creations of unscholarly zealots and have been marred by bland assertion, uncritical interpretation, special pleading, and bigotry. Professor Latourette, in contrast, is a competent historical scholar who views his subject objectively despite his early career as a Protestant missionary. He has read voluminously, weighs his evidence with care, is cautious in his every statement, and documents his text with thousands of footnote references. The result is a panoramic narrative of compelling excellence meeting the highest standards of craftsmanship and marking a milestone in New World historiography." Lowell Ragatz

+ Am Hist R 51:95 O '45 950w

"If the word 'monumental' were not so often applied to oversized works of much less bulk, scholarship and importance than this, it might well be used to describe this seven-volume series. I feel less disposed to review this final volume than to join with the author in celebrating its publication. His feelings on the completion of the gigantic task must have been comparable with those of Gibbon when he wrote the last paragraph of the Decline and Fall. This is a greater work, as well as a bigger one—less rhetorical and more soundly historical; and it deals with a living theme, not a dead one, with the rise and continuing expansion of something, not the decline and fall of something." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:582 My 9 '45 850w

"One regrets that the task is ended. Dr. Latourette has written a history encylopedic in scope and scholarly in every detail, and yet it is thoroughly and completely readable." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 159:18 Je 1 '45 300w

"This last volume seems less interesting than the others for those who have lived through these thirty years since 1914. Because the mission life of the period has been so rich (in some respects the greatest in history) it goes without saying that the treatment must be thin. As a balanced summary it is very successful." J. J. Considine

+ — Commonweal 42:100 My 11 '45 400w

Current Hist 9:49 Jl '45 120w

Foreign Affairs 23:691 Jl '45 40w

"No minister, nor student of history, should be without this exhaustive and scholarly work, for it will be a standard reference book for years to come."

+ Kirkus 13:131 Mr 15 '45 260w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:10 Je '45 500w

Reviewed by S. J. Case

Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 19 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:80 Jl '45

"To put it on no other ground than that of style these books are interesting. The idea is always on the march. The sentences are short. If you look at them twice you are struck by the dearth of adjectives and the prominence of the noun and the verb. The self-denying ordinance, which constantly prompts the author to do without the luxury of qualifying adjectives that would otherwise delimit the idea and delay the progress of the narrative, gives his pages a kind of 'deliberate speed, majestic instancy.'" W. L. Sperry

+ Yale R n s 35:158 autumn '45 1700w
(Review of vols 3-7)

LATTIMORE, OWEN. Solution in Asia. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 214p $2 Little

950 Eastern question (Far East). China—History. World war, 1939—East (Far East) 45-1566

"Enlightening discussion of increasingly important role of Asia in any plans for a peaceful world. Success or failure on the part of the United Nations in Asia will directly effect results in Europe and elsewhere. China and other Asiatic countries do not intend once again to become the victims of an imperialistic system. The great powers must understand this drive toward self expression and co-operate in helping these countries to become abiding allies in a world of united nations. Mr. Lattimore, in his concluding chapter, outlines specific political and economic policies which he believes the United States should follow in Asia." Library J

Reviewed by Claire Danziger

Book Week p3 Mr 11 '45 600w

Booklist 41:195 Mr 1 '45

"A little book with a large importance. The final chapter, sketching out the fundamental problems involved in a future peace for the Pacific Asian area, is by far the most provocative and valuable discussion of the problem this reviewer has encountered in a decade." J. H. Powers

+ Boston Globe p15 Mr 14 '45 250w

"Here is evidence that at least one American, viewing the problem of peace in the Pacific as a whole and in its long-range as well as its short-range aspects, has been able to think his way all the way through it and to come out on the other side with a proposal that would actually make for lasting peace. Mr. Lattimore, say his publishers, has been called 'the best-informed American on Asiatic affairs living today.' They don't say who called him that, perhaps because so many have, or should have. This book shows that he is not merely informed. He is calm, and he is wise. There is distilled wisdom in every chapter—so much wisdom that I find it disturbing to learn that Mr. Lattimore is no longer adviser to Chiang Kai-shek or connected with our government, but has gone back to teaching at Johns Hopkins." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 62:431 Ap 4 '45 850w

Reviewed by Randall Gould

Christian Science Monitor p12 F 27 '45 650w

Reviewed by G. W. Briggs

Churchman 159:15 Ap 15 '45 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 8:439 My '45 600w

"Mr. Lattimore has made a remarkable analysis of the issues in Asia. He proposes to deal with the problems at their roots. His prose is lucid, terse, and forceful. No one desiring to understand the political forces in the Far East can afford to ignore his book." W. O. Eddy

+ Ethics 56:75 O '45 700w

"This little book is full of wisdom and sage counsel. Few occidentals know China as well as does Mr. Lattimore, or are as willing to view its problems with as much objectivity. . . This is definitely one of the best books of the season."

+ Foreign Affairs 23:700 Jl '45 90w

"Highly recommended." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 70:163 F 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart

Nation 160:311 Mr 17 '45 420w

"Among the almost overwhelming number of Americans who are currently writing about Far Eastern affairs, there is none whose words are more worth listening to than Owen Lattimore. Traveler, scholar, editor, historian and expert adviser to vice-presidents and generalissimos, he is equally adept in high governmental affairs and the theoretical contemplations thereon, and his publishers have justification for saying that his new book 'will have a direct effect on the war and the peace, since it will be read in Foreign Offices throughout the world.' Since Solution in Asia happens to be one of his major works, it is obviously of genuine contemporary importance." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ New Repub 112:302 F 26 '45 1550w

"This book brilliantly illuminates the main questions of our time in Asia, and how they could be answered by an intelligent, vertebrate policy. In the opinion of this reviewer, however, in order to win acceptance for such measures we need a new philosophy in Congress, which in turn (and alone) could impose it on the State Department." Edgar Snow

+ N Y Times p3 F 25 '45 1750w

"The author has considerable knowledge of Asia and is able to put down what he knows in energetic prose, but his final chapter, in which he sets out to blueprint an Asiatic policy for the United States, adds up to little more than the opinion that the United Nations have to stick together and that Asia is also part of one world."

+ — New Yorker 21:78 F 24 '45 80w

"The brevity of the book is itself a merit as it is free of cluttering detail and the underlying world problems originating in Asia stand out clearly, Of their significance to continuing world peace there can be no doubt. The problems are complex but the author encourages one to have confidence that they are soluble, subject to the condition that the United States clarifies its objectives, develops and makes known the more important features of its policy, and is willing to take the initiative in a cooperative spirit, with special emphasis upon cooperation in helping China to become strong." E. J. Tarr

+ Pacific Affairs 18:375 D '45 850w

"The breath of the future blows through this brief but stimulating review of Far Eastern issues. It looks toward coming events that will shape the broad aspects of international policy in that area of complicated facts and complex rivalries." T. A. Bisson

+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 Mr 10 '45 750w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 34:131 Ap '45 650w

"Mr. Lattimore's knowledge of China is up to date as well as encyclopaedic; and his analysis of the fundamentals of the Japanese problem, in which his mentors are Sir George Sansom and Mr. E. H. Norman, is brilliantly lucid. But on the problems of South-East Asia certain of his conclusions seem based on an inadequate knowledge which leads him to adopt somewhat uncritically the typical American attitude of distrust and suspicion of the European Powers without distinction. . . The earnest conviction with which the author presses his views encourages just that kind of critical examination of the British standpoint which is a primary condition of its suitable response to the needs of the moment. Moreover, Britain as well as America needs to realize the magnitude of Russia's position as an Asiatic power. . . Finally, in his treatment of the policy required by the existing situation in China and Japan, Mr. Lattimore shows himself more illuminating and more comprehensible than any previous author of so compact a book. This is perhaps the best material yet available to the ordinary reader who desires to form an opinion upon the Asiatic problems now confronting the Western Powers."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 5 '46 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:39 D '45 280w

"This is a book that belongs in the briefcase of every diplomat and general concerned with the reshaping of Asia and the destiny of its billion underprivileged inhabitants. Owen Lattimore has not only stated the main issues of the Asiatic dilemma lucidly and concisely, but he has drawn up a rough blueprint for the future that combines reality with justice." A. T. Steele

+ Weekly Book Review p1 F 25 '45 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:46 Ap '45

LATTIMORE, OWEN, and LATTIMORE, MRS ELEANOR (HOLGATE). Making of modern China; a short history. 212p maps $2.50 Norton [8s 6d Allen, G]

951 China—History 44-2155

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 21 '45 130w

"The skill in depicting Chinese history is not reflected in Part Three of this book. Perhaps the authors were too near to this period, too closely involved in its development. . . The second point where the authors, obviously skating on very thin ice, show themselves careful politicians is in dealing with the question of Communist-Kuomintang relations. . . Nevertheless, this book should be read by student and adult alike. In the one case it will provide a fascinating background for an understanding of Chinese history, and in the other it may help to undo the harm which biased historians, dull geographers and proselytising missionaries have combined to do, in presenting a picture of China." Dorothy Woodman

+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:176 Mr 17 '45 600w

"Readers will be unanimous in their praise of this book as a masterly summary. An adequate yet brief background study to the China of

LATTIMORE, OWEN—Continued
today and tomorrow was badly needed and Mr. and Mrs. Lattimore are to be congratulated on providing it." E. M. Gull
+ Spec 174:272 Mr 23 '45 260w

"On the whole, this book makes it clear that many of Mr. Lattimore's opinions have moved with the times since he wrote 'Manchuria, Cradle of Conflict.' To cite one instance: in that work, he describes Sun Yat-sen as a man who had been distrusted by his countrymen all his life and 'whose work had never affected, by any power of reason, the political thought of China.' The present book declares that he was a political genius and credits him with having created a politically disciplined revolutionary party and a coherent theory of the aims of the Revolution."
Times [London] Lit Sup p112 Mr 10 '45 600w

LAUTERBACH, RICHARD EDWARD. These are the Russians. 368p $3 Harper

914.7 Russia—Description and travel. World war, 1939—Russia 45-4332

The Moscow correspondent for Time and Life here records his observations on the people of Russia, their leaders, and the things which they have accomplished while their country was at war. Index.

"Richard Lauterbach's 'These Are the Russians' . . . is written with balance, and it includes some facts which might not pass untouched by the zealous colored pencils of the Soviet censors. It is a book which ought to be widely read, for it gives Americans a sensible understanding of the Russians—of how they feel, what they have been through, what they want; and such an understanding is desperately needed if Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco and our hopes for the future are to mean anything. This book, all in all, gives the best, the most complete, and incidentally, the most entertaining view of what the Russians are like of any recent book about Russia I have read." John Hersey
+ Book Week p3 My 27 '45 550w
Booklist 41:299 Je 15 '45

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 161:441 Ag '45 150w

Reviewed by Edmund Stevens
Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 7 '45 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45
Commonweal 42:168 Je 1 '45 700w
Current Hist 9:129 Ag '45 100w

"This is, without reservation, one of the better recent books on the Soviets."
+ Foreign Affairs 24:166 O '45 100w

"Perhaps too long a book to be read by all young people at a sitting, it is a good one for browsing through. The author's firm conviction that we should and can work with Russians gives his book urgency." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 21:367 S '45 90w

"Those who felt on reading White's Report On The Russians that if 'books are bullets' he was supplying bullets against our allies, will find in this book the other side of the same picture. For Lauterbach was one of the four correspondents who accompanied Eric Johnson and his party, who saw the same factories that White criticized so adversely, and met many of the same people, and heard many of the same conversations. But where White apparently went in with chip on shoulder, daring anyone to knock it off . . . Lauterbach bears witness to the extraordinary facts of achievement."
+ Kirkus 13:169 Ap 15 '45 420w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle
Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 110w

"A book by a foreign correspondent which can be warmly recommended. . . What distinguishes the book is the author's energy. He gets around, he is persistent, even brash, with his questions, and usually they are the right questions. (He speaks Russian.) He has vitality and warmth, his interviews are convincing; he sees not merely the small but the large human realities. As a result there is a surprising amount of new information in the book, particularly about the reconstruction work now being done." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 161:44 Jl 14 '45 180w

"Most of his book is an attempt to translate into terms of human beings the realities of contemporary Soviet life, deed and thought. He has an eye for pertinent detail, an ear for conversation, a puckish sense of humor and a distinct way with people. . . He had more zest for his assignment than any other correspondent in Moscow. As a result, he has written an honest and heart-warming book that does not pretend to know all the answers, but adds considerably to our understanding of Russia. . . These Are the Russians suffers from two major errors of omission, however. . . Mr. Lauterbach has failed to show the Communist Party in action in Russia on any of its many fronts. A portrait of a man like the late Alexander Shcherbakov, the Moscow party 'boss,' would have been more useful than the customary 'profile' of Stalin, good as that is here. The second shortcoming of the book is its failure to convey adequately the impact of Central and Western Europe upon the entering Red Army." Alexander Kendrick
+ — New Repub 112:851 Je 18 '45 1000w

"A thoughtful and sensitive reporter's journal of an eventful year in Soviet history. . . Without rancor and without passion, and with more than just a drop of understanding, Lauterbach takes a long look over his shoulder at Russia's war record. What he reports supplies, much better than do the day-by-day headlines of fleeting disharmony, a measure of Russia's political faith and sacrifice in flesh and brick. . . 'These Are the Russians' is not without shortcomings. It is unevenly written and awkwardly organized. But it is also a book of great merit—full of color and detail, of keen insight into strange minds and mores, and of genuine compassion." Mark Gayn
+ — N Y Times p5 My 27 '45 1050w
New Yorker 21:78 Je 2 '45 120w

"It is certainly the most readable of the many books on the Soviet Union." W. C. White
+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 Je 16 '45 800w

" 'These Are the Russians' is chiefly valuable for the fresh, exciting information it conveys on Soviet attitudes of mind and ways of thinking. It offers not only intelligent interpretation but a wealth of unbiased facts, which we can—if we will—put to good and immediate use in arriving at understanding of the Soviets. And this is the foundation stone of any plan for future cooperation." R. N. Fuller
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 1000w
Time 45:99 My 28 '45 1100w

Reviewed by Leland Stowe
Weekly Book Review p1 Je 3 '45 1500w
Wis Lib Bul 41:83 Jl '45

"A skeptically minded reader would find Lauterbach's warm and sympathetic attitude towards the U.S.S.R. slightly naïve and some of his interpretations too superficial. But the factual information given by the author is always concrete, and his knowledge of the Russian language certainly helped him to approach rightly many aspects of Soviet reality which have hitherto remained puzzling to most foreign observers." Marc Slonim
+ — Yale R n s 35:181 autumn '45 350w

LAUTERPACHT, HERSH. International bill of the rights of man. 230p $3 Columbia univ. press

323.4 Liberty. Civil rights. International law and relations 45-5865

This book first presents the historical and philosophical bases for "a bill of the rights of man," and then offers in detail the twenty sections of a proposed International bill, which, the author believes, should be incorporated in the constitutions of all sovereign states. The author is a professor of international law in the University of Cambridge.

"Solid work throughout, this book starts with a fine, if short, history of the ideas of natural law (65 pp.) and then proceeds to present the formulated draft of a full-grown Bill of Rights, followed by a thorough commentary on its every clause. Until the ever-lacking comprehensive history of natural law shall be written, we have to put up with ad hoc surveys like that in the first part of Lauterpacht's book, which serves its purpose well." Arnold Brecht

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1192 D '45 1100w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 62:909 Ag 8 '45 1300w

Reviewed by George Jaffin
Columbia Law R 45:977 N '45 1050w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 70:586 Je 15 '45 110w

"It is not astonishing that Professor Lauterpacht's plea in some regards already sounds anachronistic. . . Others of Mr. Lauterpacht's engaging ideas, however, still sound unfeasible. . . Still other recommendations on Mr. Lauterpacht's list sound less theoretical. . . A significant part of Professor Lauterpacht's book is his erudite account of how the idea of the rights of man developed from classical theories of a law of nature and modern concepts of a law of nations." Louis Gottschalk
+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 5 '45 500w

Reviewed by Karl Loewenstein
Springf'd Republican p4d S 2 '45 750w

"This book is written primarily for students of international affairs, and its style is too involved and too technical to appeal to the general public. Mr. Lauterpacht's proposals, however, have been drafted with great care, and he succeeds in avoiding most of the more obvious pitfalls. In view of the immense importance of the problem, it is unfortunate that it has not been more widely discussed. Somebody should now restate the case for an international bill of rights in language which will interest a wider audience." H. B. Parkes
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 1 '45 700w

LAVERTY, MAURA. Gold of Glanaree; il. by Betty Morgan Bowen. 192p $2.50 Longmans 45-9069

Three delightful children and assorted parents and villagers people this story of Irish life for children. There is a search for long-forgotten treasure to enliven the plot.

Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45
Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

"The love of living things and the outdoor world, of poetry and song, permeate this friendly story with its charming drawings by Betty Morgan Bowen." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:349 S '45 90w

"A winsome book, rich with local color, customs, charming games, and native crafts."
+ Kirkus 13:315 Jl 15 '45 80w

"Entertaining and exciting story of Ireland." V. M. Schott
+ Library J 70:1138 D 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p26 O 21 '45 200w
New Yorker 21:134 D 8 '45 50w
Sat R of Lit 28:60 N 10 '45 450w
Social Studies 36:376 D '45 20w

"Boys and girls who like stories of real people with a bit of mystery for good measure, will enjoy 'Gold of Glanaree.'" L. R. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 180w

"There are vivacious pictures, and the vigor of the story is maintained less by incident than by the unexpected way in which everybody converses. It does seem as if one has to be a Celt to get the most out of the English language." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 4 '45 400w

LAVIN, MARY. House in Clewe street. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 530p $3 Little 45-4017

First novel by the author of Tales From Bective Bridge (Book Review Digest, 1942). It is the story of three generations of a middle-class Irish family, but the main character is Gabriel, grandson of the penny-pinching land owner, Theodore Coniffe.

"'The House in Clewe Street,' Miss Lavin's first sustained piece of work, is a solid, leisurely novel of three generations . . . [It] has an almost firsthand quality, which makes Miss Lavin's story very freshly her own. There are no clichés either of phrasing or of feeling here. Laughter is behind these lines always: sometimes elaborately elephantine, sometimes as delicate as the tread of a small animal that you have scarcely noticed until it has passed you by. This laughter lifts and blends into lightness the dull, narrow doings in Clewe Street, as fresh brewer's yeast raises and blends a fine milled flour. The humor of her foster land is an integral and happy element in Miss Lavin's fine novel." F. H. Bullock
+ Book Week p1 My 27 '45 1250w

Booklist 41:301 Je 15 '45

"'The House in Clewe Street' is a three-tiered story about the wealthiest family in a small town in Ireland and is the first novel of a young woman who was born in Walpole and grew up in Galway. It's so good that you are certain to hear more from her later." Ray McPartlin
+ Boston Globe My 31 '45 400w

Cath World 161:282 Je '45 230w

"If the new Irish novel by Mary Lavin did not possess a distinction of style, a certain satisfying sweep and stature, one might quite likely not persist through its more than 500 pages. There are portions of The House in Clewe Street which are oppressively Victorian, with each least detail of the mental and physical background heavily blacked in. With one expertly written episode by way of exception, there is not one flicker of humor. And yet, grimly, one reads on. It is understandable that the Irish Lord Dunsany believes in the literary future of young Mrs. Lavin, who calls herself an American because she was born in a small town near Boston and only went to Ireland when she was ten." Margaret Williamson
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 1 '45 550w

"I wish a hundred pages of this book had been weeded out. . . On the other hand, I must pay tribute to Mrs. Lavin's quite exceptional talent; here is some of the finest writing that has come out of Ireland in many a year, and though there is great and laudable honesty, there is no vulgarity in this book. Other reviewers, I am aware, have thought the characters wooden, but that, I think, is a very wrong idea. I have not in years come across a portrait so appealingly true as that of Aunt Theresa. It is the case, however, that the lyrical note is strong in Mrs. Lavin's prose; and her characters, though sharply and firmly conceived, are infused with a kind of poetic intensity that carries them, I suppose, to the point of verging on abstractions; so that you can, perhaps, forget at one moment how real these people were the moment before. But you won't have any trouble of this sort, be sure of it, if you happen to have any Irish relations of your own." David Marshall
+ Commonweal 42:340 Jl 20 '45 850w

"Too much book for a tenuous plot."
Kirkus 13:114 Mr 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by M. H. Zipprich
Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 60w

"In a time when so much fiction is hurried and half-baked, here is a tale that flowers out of life itself." H. I'A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 9 '45 240w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:704 Je 23 '45 140w

"The book shows vast endeavour, patience, and at times a considerable artistry, and Miss Lavin's gift of creating certain types of character is still remarkable; but it is as if she has been compelled to create 'minor' characters of great realism and has been unable to make them participate in any satisfying action. . . The major characters, and their actions, are perforce given prodigious space. But they are never more interesting than the supposedly smaller figures, and the long prelude to the book, before the real protagonists appear, is by far its best part." Henry Reed

LAVIN, MARY—Continued
+ — New Statesman & Nation 30:412 D 15 '45 500w

"Because Miss Lavin's characters and art lack tragic proportions the conclusion of her novel is thin and strained. But the weakness of the ending is remarkable chiefly because of the vigor of the first two-thirds of the story. 'The House in Clewe Street' will give much pleasure. What it does well it does very well indeed, and its readers will be more impressed by its amplitude and warmth than by its lack of depth. As her art matures, Miss Lavin will doubtless learn either to control large designs as well as small ones, or to concentrate on the small designs which she handles so well in her first novel." D. S. Norton
+ — N Y Times p3 My 27 '45 1500w

"Mrs. Lavin is a serious and talented writer and her novel, in spite of its wordiness, is a wholly integrated work."
+ — New Yorker 21:77 My 26 '45 120w

"At first Mary Lavin's leisurely, innocent-sounding novel about small-town Ireland may irritate you with its slowness and its seeming ingenuousness. But after a while you will discover that the quietness is the author's art, and the innocence is the mask of a sharp and subtle wit. You will find yourself absorbed until the world around you seems far less real than the tall granite Victorian house in Clewe Street where Gabriel Galloway spent the slow infinity of his childhood. . . The Victorians knew how to write them that way. You don't very often find them nowadays. When slowness is combined with fine, delicate, and witty writing, the result is a satisfaction in the reader's mind that he seldom experiences at the end of a modern novel." K. S. Rosin
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 My 26 '45 450w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 175:522 N 30 '45 450w

Reviewed by H. O. Austin
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 N 17 '45 300w

Reviewed by Kathleen Coyle
Weekly Book Review p4 My 27 '45 550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

"Mrs. Lavin is more engrossed in making her characters real, honest, and vitally alive than in making them interesting. There is great vigor and shrewd understanding here, but there is also a plodding pace, a monotonous rhythm, and a dry, depressing atmosphere that rob The House on Clewe Street of any claim to charm or sympathy or emotional power." Orville Prescott
+ — Yale R n s 35:191 autumn '45 250w

LAWRENCE, GERTRUDE. A star danced. 238p $2.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

Autobiography of the English actress, Gertrude Lawrence, celebrated on both sides of the Atlantic.

"Gertrude Lawrence gives another fine performance in this story of her life. The charm, zest and spontaneity never flag in the lively, warmhearted, occasionally audacious account of a little cockney who rose to stardom and whose culminating performances were presented to invasion troops with Von Runstedt 'approximately 3,000 yards from the theater.'" Dorsha Hayes
+ Book Week p6 Jl 22 '45 270w

Booklist 42:17 S '45

Reviewed by L. A. Sloper
Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 28 '45 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

Commonweal 42:507 S 7 '45 130w

"Pleasant reading—and delightful for any theatre addict."
+ Kirkus 13:233 Je 1 '45 250w

"Any autobiography published in a man's lifetime suffers from what has been put in as well as from what has been left out. This is true in the case of Gertrude Lawrence. She has, however, achieved a light and entertaining style which suits her book. She is extraordinarily honest about her poor and Cockney background and has soft-pedalled many of her celebrated friends, except, perhaps, Edward VIII, which is understandable. Highly readable and quite amusing. Recommended for theater collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 70:634 Jl '45 110w

Reviewed by Stark Young
New Repub 113:323 S 10 '45 1600w

"Gertrude Lawrence's prose style, to judge solely from 'A Star Danced,' is the same sort of capable, journalistic, not-too-electric writing employed by the majority of non-literary celebrities in their memoirs. And, like all but a dozen or so autobiographies, it tells little or nothing of its subject. But, like all theatrical biographies, it is fascinating." Russell Maloney
+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 29 '45 480w

New Yorker 21:61 Ag 4 '45 2950w

"On the stage Miss Lawrence is one of the great performers of her time, an actress of enormous charm, gayety, versatility, and resource. Her vitality is unbounded, and the excitement with which she invests everything she does is of priceless value to the theater. Some of her wonderful exuberance does occasionally get into her book, but for most of the time she succeeds in making herself seem as unreal and, to tell you the truth, as uninteresting as the routine Hollywood heroine." Richard Watts
Sat R of Lit 28:17 Ag 18 '45 650w

"Although Miss Lawrence's ENSA experiences are told in a lively manner and give one an excellent idea as to what the entertaining troupes have to put up with, the reviewer found herself giving less attention to these parts, but glancing ahead to see how little Gertie was managing to keep afloat and later to watch the celebrated actress step from success to success. Gertrude has turned out an absorbing autobiography."
+ Springf'd Republican p4 Ag 4 '45 600w

"Gertrude Lawrence's autobiography found its way quickly among best-sellers and it is no surprise to find it there. In contrast to most books of the kind, it seems to be written by Miss Lawrence herself. And in spite of the fact that actors are not supposed to be artists in words, Miss Lawrence's writing is at least as good as that of most theatre biography and far more forthright. Beyond that it makes no pretensions."
+ Theatre Arts 29:670 N '45 320w

"From childhood until now [Gertrude Lawrence's] life has been the theater and this is the story of her life, told with a touching directness and modesty. To those who have seen her on the stage the tale will bring back scores of vivid and exciting memories. Even those who have not been so fortunate will hardly fail to catch something of the peculiar enchantment this lady distills." Iris Barry
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 22 '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:100 O '45

LAWRENCE, HILDA. Time to die. 266p $2 Simon & Schuster 45-1815

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p8 F 25 '45 180w

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45

"Hilda Lawrence has put together an engaging collection of good characters, ingenious incidents, and a mystery that holds together right to the end."
+ Boston Globe p15 F 28 '45 90w

Kirkus 13:7 Ja 1 '45 80w

"Readers of Miss Lawrence's first book, Blood upon the Snow, will meet some old friends in a pleasant if not too plausible tale." E. H.

+ — New Repub 112:342 Mr 5 '45 90w

"The story is almost intolerably diffuse and involved, faults which are atoned for in part by the tension that the author has succeeded in maintaining." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 11 '45 180w

"In spite of the fact that the reader isn't provided with enough clues to work things out for himself, this is an excellent job, well written and with very fine small-town atmosphere."

+ New Yorker 21:79 F 24 '45 100w

"A-1 on all counts—if you don't mind an extra-involved plot. Characters interesting, background fine, sleuthing logical, and shrewdly handled. Rewarding."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 F 17 '45 40w

"A necessity for those who crave some homey characters with their shocks and a good bet for fans who like to string along with the detection." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p18 F 18 '45 130w

LAWRENCE, JEROME, ed. Off mike; radio writing by the nation's top radio writers. 195p $2.50 Essential bks.

029.6 Radio authorship 45-766

Chapters on the trade secrets of the men and women who write radio script. Included are the script writers for Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Fibber McGee, and Duffy's Tavern, among others.

"Practical, colloquial tipping off for the tyro."

+ Kirkus 12:423 S 15 '44 90w

"For the aspiring radio writer who is blessed with the one part inspiration and is anxious for pointers on the ninety-nine parts hard work, there is much readable and pertinent advice to be found in Off Mike. . . The authors give generously of the tricks of their trade, but a more ruthless and a wiser editor might have displayed their wares to more advantage by choosing about half as many essays and by editing those sharply to eliminate the overlapping that inevitably emerges in such compendiums."

+ — Theatre Arts 29:128 F '45 140w

LAWRENCE, JOSEPHINE. Let us consider one another. 314p $2.75 Appleton-Century

45-35083

The love story of a young American girl, of mixed Protestant and Catholic descent, who married a charming Jewish army officer. Cecilia's reactions to the unexpected racial discrimination which followed on their marriage and her struggles with her own family, point up this study of American racial intolerance.

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Book Week p3 My 20 '45 500w

Booklist 41:287 Je 1 '45

Kirkus 13:71 F 15 '45 170w

"Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 70:355 Ap 15 '45 100w

"Essentially Miss Lawrence is the journalist with a unique realism; an amazing talent for describing the quiet little events that make up our daily lives. In a world faced with the problem of making concrete decisions, her contribution, though tinged with frank disillusionment and limited by naïvete, may have some value." H. F. Zinnes

N Y Times p21 My 13 '45 290w

New Yorker 21:89 My 12 '45 100w

"On the surface, 'Let Us Consider One Another' is as slick as a Hollywood conception of a picture with a message. It packs a neat wallop, however, and may well jolt the casual reader into uncomfortable awareness." E. M. B.

Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 420w

"Miss Lawrence's uncanny ability to get under one's skin makes this story of a New England family as effective as it is uncomfortable. . . 'Let Us Consider One Another' is outstanding among the row of vivid books in which Miss Lawrence has courageously attacked one after another of the closeted skeletons in American family and social life. It is also a first-rate story." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 13 '45 950w

LAWRENCE, RALPH. The millstream, and other poems. 79p $1.75 (5s) Macmillan

821 [A45-3102]

"Mr. Lawrence is a self-possessed, apt and accomplished poet. . . He is, at his best, a soundly satisfying poet, at once intelligent and humane, whether he is writing of John Donne or of Mrs. Dobbs, the charlady, of swans or sunflowers, Elizabethan lutanists or a service in a village church, of wood magic or a millstream or of young men who have died in the wars." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Contains many poems whose admirable precision and conciseness are refreshing indeed to a reader bewildered by the vagueness and vacuity of so much current versifying." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 14 '45 30w

Reviewed by Harry Roskolenko

N Y Times p31 O 7 '45 150w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Ap 14 '45 120w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner

Weekly Book Review p16 O 14 '45 200w

LAWSON, ROBERT. Mr. Wilmer; il. by the author. 218p $2 Little

45-4302

Mr Wilmer's 29th birthday started out very badly but it was that day that he became aware of his great talent, a talent which once discovered was to change the whole course of his life—he could talk and understand Animal! How Mr Wilmer escaped from a dreary job and became Zoo Consultant, the friend and confidant of lions, elephants, a performing seal, and many others, is set forth in this amusing, fantastic tale.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Book Week p8 Je 3 '45 310w

"A completely crazy book, but one which

Booklist 41:287 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:15 My '45

Reviewed by Mary Lasswell

Boston Globe p13 My 23 '45 420w

"The book rocks with fun and good-natured satire. Animals and humans are delightfully intermingled, vigorous in their characteristics and opinions. Events that happen in startling sequence are none of them ordinary, and yet all take place in absurdly familiar settings. . . It is all delightful fantasy, especially for the sort of person who can enjoy a joke on himself." M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 29 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:92 Mr 1 '45 250w

undoubtedly the public will love. For the children who like Atwater's Mr. Popper's Penguins and the adults who like Robert Nathan. . . Recommended for all libraries in need of laughter." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 70:534 Je 1 '45 60w

"Robert Lawson has a gift for insinuating the unlikely into everyday routines, and in his 'Mr. Wilmer' he leads us smoothly into accepting the impossible, via a charming, old-fashioned success story. . . When you consider what Robert Lawson's drawings did for Ferdinand the Bull, you may be disappointed over his more perfunctory treatment of Mr. Wilmer's animal clients. . . However, this is a mild setback compared to all the wish fulfillments crowded into one tall story." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p7 My 20 '45 400w

LAWSON, ROBERT—Continued

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
Sat R of Lit 28:40 Je 23 '45 450w

"Whimsy is as whimsy does, and some there be who won't accept it in any form. But 'Mr Wilmer' is a personage only a flintheart could resist. . . Retold baldly, the whimsy is as obvious and unattractive as a scarlet fever rash; but as Lawson tells it, Mr Wilmer and his talent are not only credible but utterly charming." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 300w

"If you are an easy laugher—and you'd better be if you want to live through the next few years—this book is good for at least one such outburst every few pages. Its animals are not sardonic like Tobermory or exotic like the Pushmipullyu, they are just like anybody else only funnier. They even speak English, only they are on another wave length. Mr. Wilmer, by a few manipulations of the glottis, gets on it too. This book may suggest an entirely new line to Edgar Bergen." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 3 '45 500w

LAY, BEIRNE. I've had it; the survival of a bomb group commander. 141p $2 Harper

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—France 45-35237

The commander of an American bomber group on an important mission a month before D-day had his plane destroyed, and he and his co-pilot parachuted to enemy-held France. This is his personal narrative of their escape, with the help of French peasants and farmers and maquis.

"Col. Lay's earlier books and magazine pieces disclosed him as a master of the difficult craft of presenting melodramatic personal experiences with objectivity, clarity and directness. 'I've Had It' should enhance his standing among the more able writers of our day." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p16 N 18 '45 360w
Booklist 42:107 D 1 '45

"There is much humor here, and a delightful picture of French rural life. Colonel Lay writes easily and carries the reader with him willy nilly." M. W. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 15 '45 300w
Kirkus 13:413 S 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by H. F. Pringle
N Y Times p7 N 25 '45 700w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ja 12 '46 200w

"This is one of the classic escape stories of the war." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 6 '46 850w

LAYTON, MARK. Forest ranger. 245p $2 Mill 45-8204

"John Duncan, just out of college, forsakes the prosperous ranch of his father and grandfather, and takes up the career of forest ranger in the early days of the United States Forestry Service. Miners, cattlemen and lumbermen resented the curbing of their activities, so John found his job a dangerous as well as exciting one. A good story with plenty of thrilling adventure to please the average boy of twelve to fifteen." Library J

"Romance, gold, forests, wild life, and the teeming wealth of the west when it was wild make this a vivid, if somewhat stereotyped story."
+ — Kirkus 13:372 Ag 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
+ Library J 70:824 S 15 '45 70w

"This is a 'sure-fire Western,' following the approved pattern. The characters, too, are true to the Western tradition." R. A. H.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:64 N 10 '45 310w

"Not outstanding, but good exciting reading for older boys and girls." P. P. R.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 160w

"Frontier life, the forest's immensity, the dawning sense of the community that teeming natural wealth can't last indefinitely unless some one takes care to preserve it, make the book useful, and its English is far above the 'Western' average." M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 S 16 '45 180w

LAZARSFELD, PAUL FELIX; BERELSON, BERNARD, and GAUDET, HAZEL. The people's choice; how the voter makes up his mind in a presidential campaign. 178p $3 Duell

324.73 Presidents (United States)—Election. Political parties—U.S. 45-1116

"This book is not just another study of sampling of public opinion. It is more the report of careful and meticulous research, carried out by an apparently competent staff, into the behavior of a given group of people in the campaign of 1940. Out of this study certain facts and indications were evolved as to how and why people decide to vote as they do; at what time during the campaign they make up or change their minds; whether there was in 1940, or is in American political behavior generally, the factor we call the 'bandwagon' influence; and what, in a general sense, are the probable effects of political propaganda during a Presidential campaign." N Y Times

Reviewed by Belle Zeller
Am Pol Sci R 39:603 Je '45 550w
Kirkus 13:32 Ja 15 '45 60w

"To the casual reader the book may be like eating a hickory nut. One has to crack through a great deal of shell to get to the meat. The shell is an over-detailed description of methods used in obtaining and weighing the evidence, indicating that the authors may be quite as interested in their technique as in the result of the study. Maybe they meant it that way, for it is evident that they intend it both as a report of conclusions and as the story of a new technique for gauging actions of that hard-worked guinea pig—the American voter." Turner Catledge
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 21 '45 1100w

"We recommend this volume to any reader who is curious in respect to his own or his neighbor's vote." Raymond Franzen
+ Weekly Book Review p14 F 18 '45 550w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Last leaves. 213p $2.50 Dodd

817 45-35145

"The latest, and perhaps final, collection of the essays of Stephen Leacock, scholar and master humorist." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p8 O 7 '45 400w
Booklist 42:161 Ja 15 '46

"The late Stephen Leacock's posthumous collection of essays is as delightful, one guesses, as a conversation in his Canadian home would have been. His humor, consisting basically of an old man's common sense contrasted to our world's apparently insoluble problems, required the catholicity of his interests. Who but an old and wise man could tell one within half an hour that Izaak Walton needed a ghost-writer for 'The Compleat Angler's' chapter on the 'making and using of flies,' that until 1914 England was an annex of the Channel Islands, that a common word like 'saunter' could have such a long and romantic derivation? Such matters make wonderful talk." Paul Griffith
+ N Y Times p4 S 30 '45 360w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 28:28 O 20 '45 550w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 25 '45 240w

" 'Last Leaves' has, to be sure, the advantage of an editor sympathetic and uncommonly well informed, his niece Barbara Nimmo, who can from personal experience provide a preface that without pretending to be a biography can furnish any future biographer with things 'that stand out in my memory during the years I knew him, especially when I lived in his house and was his secretary. It was a bit like living beside a volcano; there was nothing dull or routine in life.' There is nothing routine or dull in this book." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 7 '45 700w

LEAF, MUNRO. Let's do better [il by the author]. 80p $1.50 Lippincott
300 Sociology—Juvenile literature 45-8372

Considers the simple factors of living common to people from the days of the caveman to present times and suggests that if fear of each other could be abolished people might live together without resort to war.

Book Week p3 N 11 '45 240w
Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45

"It's a book all children should own."
+ Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 20w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"Only Munro Leaf could get away with this kind of moralizing on the course of the history of War and Peace, and he manages to get his ideas across to the children, without sugarcoating the pill. Amusing, lively cartoons."
+ Kirkus 13:435 O 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott
Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 50w

"Children will enjoy the pictures and, although it takes a mature mind to understand theories of government and war and peace, the very young reader will, thanks to Munro Leaf's simple and humorous interpretation, get at least a first glimpse of these difficult subjects." B. W. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:44 O 20 '45 270w
School & Society 62:224 O 6 '45 40w

"Munro Leaf's purpose is admirable, but regrettably weakened by his so-called humorous, cartoon style." M. E. S.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 110w

"In this latest book both pictures and text reveal an intense earnestness back of the fun. . . I never saw an 'Outline' that put so much history into so few facts. There isn't a proper name, or a date, or a portrait save these absurd caricatures of Everyman in his various phases, or even a program tied up like a packet of tea. All it gives is a hint, direct as an elbow in the ribs." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 23 '45 450w

LECHLITNER, RUTH N. (MRS PAUL COREY.) Only the years [poems]. 64p $2 Press of James A. Decker 811

"Ruth Lechlitner's selected poems, 1938-1944, might be called the diary of a woman and her family in a country house supposedly isolated. But even in 1938, the date of the first entries, Nature reminds us of 'the hot spoor on the crushed leaf marking the course that terror has taken.' Or as Oscar Wilde claimed Nature imitates art. In fairly steady iambics, with many subtle variations, the poet consistently draws parallels between the plant-animal world and the human world, and rarely forces the symbolism. Especially poignant are the references to the child in the house, facing the coming night: 'Starlight, starbright. . .' " Sat R of Lit

"Ruth Lechlitner is a fine anti-Fascist poet who writes restrainedly of prevailing world phenomena, superimposing them against a well and minutely observed background of nature. It is a very nice trick when it can be done and Miss Lechlitner contrives to do it." Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p13 Mr 11 '45 180w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymborg
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Mr 24 '45 250w

"The emotion out of which these poems are generated is not by its very nature, possessed of qualities which make for coherence and fusion. This emotion, apprehensiveness, is almost pandemic in the poetry of our time; at its deepest, it becomes panic; at its shallowest, fashion. About it, always, there is an air of vagueness. Miss Lechlitner's references are specific enough. . . How much of the poetry of 1938-44 the events of August 1945 have made obsolete is a question no reviewer but time can answer; the wars in the heart go on, whatever enemies in the outer world capitulate. We shall continue to need the talents and courage of the partisans. And I do not believe Ruth Lechlitner's forces will be inclined to rest on their laurels." Rolfe Humphries
Weekly Book Review p12 S 23 '45 700w

LE COUNT, SAMUEL NELSON, and DUSENBERY, H. SYRIL. Practical marine electricity. 253p il $3.50 Macmillan
623.85 Electricity on ships 45-6816

"This volume, based on a home study course prepared by the Moore Dry Dock Company of Oakland, Calif., offers practical instruction for the operation and installation of electrical equipment aboard merchant ships. Intended primarily for shore electricians, it deals with the handling and layout of cables, engine room and deck power equipment, lighting systems, gyrocompass and gyropilot, self-synchronous motors, fire detection systems, degaussing system, testing and maintenance. One chapter outlines the elementary principles of electricity. Throughout the book the use of technical terminology and mathematical calculations is avoided. A brief glossary is included." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:36 Jl '45

LEDERER, EUGENE H. Port terminal operation. 448p il $5 Cornell maritime 656 Ships—Cargo. Piers. Stowage 45-1085

"Meets training and self teaching needs for problems in pier and warehouse management, stevedoring, stowing and lighterage and harbor small boats, includes efficiency methods for rapid water transport and efficient pier warehousing. Useful for the Merchant marine and all concerned with any aspect of cargo transfer. Lieutenant Colonel Lederer has had both civilian experience and army experience in both world wars in army transport." Library J

Booklist 41:182 F 15 '45
Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:13 Ja '45
Special Libraries 36:65 F '45

LEE, BABS, pseud. See Lee, M. V.

LEE, CHARLES, and others, eds. North, east, south, west; a regional anthology of American writing. 558p $3.75 Howell, Soskin
810.8 American literature—Collections 45-10350

A collection of verse and prose taken from the writings of American authors of the past and present, and arranged sectionally under the heads: New England, The Middle Atlantic states, The South, The Middle West, and The Far West. Some of the selections are given in full, some in condensation or excerpts. The editors of the various sections are: Sarah Cleghorn, Edwin Seaver, A. C. Spectorsky, Joseph Henry Jackson, Struthers Burt. The book contains a who's who of authors and an index of authors.

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan
Book Week p18 N 25 '45 500w

"We have Robert Benchley and George Santayana representing New England, along with Harriet Beecher Stowe, Whittier, and other old familiars. . . Gertrude Stein is set down as a Middle Atlantic writer . . , William

LEE, CHARLES—Continued
Saroyan is a Far West writer, and so forth. The purpose of these odd and somewhat arbitrary classifications, according to the editors, is to bring the reader close to the true basis of our culture, whatever that means. Otherwise, the book is a so-so collection."
New Yorker 21:120 N 17 '45 200w
Springf'd Republican p6 N 16 '45 360w
Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
Weekly Book Review p28 D 2 '45 550w

LEE, MRS MARION (VAN DER VEER) (BABS LEE, pseud). Passport to oblivion. 233p $2 Scribner 45-9488

Combination murder and spy story.

Kirkus 13:210 My 15 '45 70w

"Fair."
Sat R of Lit 28:26 D 22 '45 50w

"It gets off to a fairly slow start, but perks up in time to turn into an entertaining and reasonably mystifying yarn." R. F. H.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 70w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p20 N 18 '45 130w

LEECH, THIRMA, and LEECH, CARLYLE. Ha-ha farm. [21p] il $1 Capitol pub.
44-51323

"[This book] has big pictures of laughing animals, some of which move eyes and mouth when a tab is wiggled. Verses tell the usefulness of each animal." N Y Times

Reviewed by L. M. Palmer
N Y Times p18 N 12 '44 30w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 28 '45 50w

LE FANU, JOSEPH SHERIDAN. Green tea, and other ghost stories. 357p $3 Arkham house 46-51

Fourteen stories of the supernatural, by a well-known writer of ghost stories and other uncanny tales. Le Fanu was born in 1814 and died in 1873. Contents: Schalken the painter; Squire Toby's will; Green tea; Wicked Captain Walshawe, of Wauling; Carmilla; The sexton's adventure; Madam Crowl's ghost; Sir Dominick's bargain; The vision of Tom Chuff; Ultor De Lacy; Dickon the devil; The house in Aungier street; Mr. Justice Harbottle; The familiar.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p6 D 23 '45 350w

"Le Fanu, in these stories, may write with the skill of an adult, but the thought is without subtlety. I find myself no more shaken by these stories than I am by the sight of my child dressed up as a Halloween ghost. They have a historical value, no doubt, but there are worse horrors in the world to write about these days. Le Fanu's ghosts seem as Victorian as the costumes." D. C. Russell
N Y Times p30 Ja 20 '46 450w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p19 Ja 6 '46 200w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, GILES JACKSON, pseuds). Darling, this is death. 219p $2 Dial press 45-4533

A combination of murder, espionage and romance, the scene of which is New England and then Miami.

Kirkus 13:44 F 1 '45 70w

"There are times when the love element in the story threatens to shove the mystery-adventure part out from between the covers of the book. It eventually does just that, but not until the last chapter, after the villains are all dead or otherwise disposed of."
N Y Times p22 My 20 '45 140w

Sat R of Lit 28:30 F 24 '45 40w

"Behind this curiously distressing title lurks one of the liveliest thrillers of the season. . . Seems a shame that Mr. Dane's sweethearts stare and stare in the pulpiest way, leaving some of the brighter sequences dead on their feet when the mere elision of this cheap cliché would have made the story Grade A." Will Cuppy
+ — Weekly Book Review p19 Je 17 '45 130w

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, Le G.

LEHMANN, ROSAMOND (MRS WOGAN PHILLIPPS). The ballad and the source. 312p $2.75 Reynal [9s 6d Collins]
45-3047

"The story of an impulsive Victorian beauty who broke all the rules of her generation and who, by the early 1900's, when the novel opens, has come down to us as a white-haired but still dominant grandmother, a woman both fascinating and sinister to her grandchildren and their friends. We see Sybil Jardine (to give her the name of her last husband) through adolescent eyes: the secret details of her scandal and ostracism are pieced together by a schoolgirl, Rebecca, partly from the talk of an old servant, partly from the disapproval of the elders, partly from the rebelliousness of the grandchildren now in Mrs. Jardine's care. For this is the fall and rise of Mrs. Jardine or, as the title suggests, the song and the reality behind it." Atlantic

"I feel that Miss Lehmann has scored her greatest success in the character of Sybil, who certainly through the first half of the novel is both mystifying and attractive. Her career as it is exposed to us by inference and tattle-tale is a melodramatic one, and it is just as well for the verisimilitude that the more lurid scenes all take place off stage. But this method of tale-bearing, which is so skillfully conveyed by Tilly the little maid, becomes noticeably artificial as it is prolonged into the third generation. For none of the youngsters has enough individuality to prop up our interest when Mrs. Jardine begins to fade. By this time we have picked her reputation clean, and it really doesn't seem to matter very much." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 175:129 Ap '45 500w
Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky
Book Week p3 Ap 1 '45 1200w
Booklist 41:237 Ap 15 '45

"Endlessly, tediously as it seems to the reader, Mrs. Jardine looks on and listens while the others act out their parts. . . Then there is the baffling fashion in which the tale is told. It is intricately conceived—all this indirectness and long-winded explanation. . . The pity of it all is that Miss Lehmann should have written it so extraordinarily well; certainly if she had not one would never have troubled to read through this novel. As things are, one reads it and admires its workmanship. Afterwards, one would rather like to dive fiercely off the rocks and swim for a long time in a cool blue sea." Margaret Williamson
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 2 '45 600w
Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 42:72 My 4 '45 1250w

"An oddly haunting book, expertly handled. Surely popular."
+ Kirkus 13:69 F 15 '45 300w
Reviewed by E. F. Kelly
Library J 70:306 Ap 1 '45 80w
Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 6 '44 120w

"When one has taken into account the moral and technical imagination of Miss Lehmann's novel, and also its high literacy, one wonders why the book as a whole swings so much less than its intended weight—and I suppose it is because moral imagination is not enough; it must always be supported with moral passion, I think that what finally exposes 'The Ballad and the Source' to the accusation of factitiousness is the impression Miss Lehmann conveys of caring more about the outcome of a story than about the outcome of life itself." Diana Trilling

Nation 160:422 Ap 14 '45 800w

"This is a distinctly feminine novel and the men who appear in it are comparatively dim as contrasted with the vivid yet mysterious women who play its central roles. It seemed to me, too, that there is a certain neurotic quality about it and the slightly unhealthy air of a civilization and a class suffering from spiritual ill health. These characteristics add to the disturbing quality of the book, and they are a very definite part of its great fascination. For The Ballad and the Source is, make no mistake about it, a beautiful, impressive and strangely moving romantic novel by one of the important writing talents of our time." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 112:481 Ap 9 '45 1350w

"In this novel the gifts of Alain-Fournier and Miss Braddon are strangely intermingled. It is as if the war had driven the novelist back into the fervid world of a child's imagination; and how thankful one is to escape with her from the dingy interiors and cabbage-water smells now fashionable into châteaux and lime avenues where beautiful creatures in bright velvets parade their exorbitant personalities. I cannot doubt that this is Miss Lehmann's best and most permanent book." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 28:224 S 30 '44 1150w

"This is the most mature, well-rounded portrait Miss Lehmann has ever given us. Sybil, the source of the dark-flowing currents which envelop three generations, is not a creature apprehended through flashes of intuition or swiftly recorded moods. Diagnosed to the last quivering sensibility, she still retains her original feminine flavor. The impact of her personality never ceases to haunt and disturb long after mere acquaintance has deepened into comprehension. Her character is a masterpiece of actuality." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 1 '45 1300w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 21:80 Ap 7 '45 1000w

"I don't understand why so gifted a writer should have been moved to write this romantic tour de force, accomplished though it is. What clues there are seem to point to that colossus of the modern age, Sigmund Freud... 'The Ballad and the Source' is the only romantic novel I can remember in which the narrator is more interesting than the other characters. So much loving care has gone into the writing of this book that Rebecca, a mechanical creature by tradition, is as alive as the old woman she never takes her eyes from... It is unfair, of course, to criticize a writer for not writing the book that she didn't intend to write. Nevertheless, the use of any given material in fiction presupposes choice, and choice forces judgment. Because of this implicit but, alas, unwritten story, all Miss Lehmann's skill and her often extraordinary running paragraphs of poetry and psychological perception did not prevent me from laying aside 'The Ballad and the Source' sadly and with a sense of disappointment." William Maxwell

Sat R of Lit 28:10 Mr 31 '45 850w

"To call her new novel a masterpiece would be extravagant; but she has written one both remarkable and engrossing. In it she tells the fascinating story of a complete egotist. The influence of Henry James and George Meredith, so marked in Dusty Answer, is still apparent, but of less consequence since now she tackles the problems of behaviour and technique from an angle which she has made her own." John Hampson

+ Spec 173:368 O 20 '44 450w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 500w

Time 45:102 Ap 9 '45 600w

"The thing is ingeniously unfolded and exhibits many graces of style. Indeed, Miss Lehmann's distinction of manner is so lightly borne as to make for more than ordinarily smooth and attractive reading. Yet if, in spite of such appreciation of her virtuosity, one is inclined to complain, it is because of the rather artificial imaginative texture of the novel. Rebecca, incidentally, is far too wise and profound a child to carry conviction; nor would Mrs. Jardine, for all her inveterate love of effect, have spoken to the child in the prodigiously confiding way she does."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p473 S 30 '44 1250w

"This book is an exciting adventure in fiction. Unconventional in structure, in characterization and development of story, it defies measurement by conventional standards. Rebecca, the child, may seem over-perceptive in tracing the ballad to its source, Mrs. Jardine too uninhibited in her self-portrayal; but the result is unforgettable." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 1 '45 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:85 Jl '45

LEIGH, RANDOLPH. 48 million tons to Eisenhower; the rôle of the SOS in the defeat of Germany. 179p il maps $2 Infantry journal

940.541273 World war, 1939-1945—Transportation. World war, 1939-1945—Supplies. U.S. Army service forces 45-9550

"This book is a recording of the highlights which illuminate the stupendous American supply effort in the European Theater of Operations [during] the second world war." (Sat R of Lit) "The material as a whole . . . was gathered through the Historical section of ETO and by the historians of the staff sections." (Foreword)

Booklist 42:146 Ja 1 '46

Kirkus 13:488 N 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 90w

"The Army has been fortunate in the array of writing talent which continues to furnish well-written reports on phases of army activity. In this modest survey of the energy and material which accompanied the fighters Colonel Leigh writes with skill and with that touch of humor which make large facts readable. To which must be added the author's sound realization of the role of the manpower that maneuvered our machines down those last German roads to victory." Saul Levitt

+ N Y Times p5 N 11 '45 650w

"In brief compass and with admirable clarity, Colonel Randolph has told us a great deal of the miracle of American supply at war." D. L. Cohn

+ Sat R of Lit 28:82 D 1 '45 360w

"How the gigantic task of supplying our E. T. O. forces was accomplished is ably and graphically told by Colonel Leigh, of the Army Historical Section." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p24 N 25 '45 600w

LEIGHTON, ALEXANDER HAMILTON. The governing of men; general principles and recommendations based on experience at a Japanese relocation camp. 404p il $3.75 Princeton univ. press; Inst. of Pacific relations

323.4 Colorado River relocation center, Poston, Arizona. Japanese in the U.S. Social psychology. World war, 1939—Evacuation of civilians A45-3337

Sociological report on an incident which occurred in one of the Japanese Relocation centers in Arizona, a strike of the evacuees against the Administration caused by the arrest of two men charged with assault. In the second part of the work the author draws conclusions concerning "the governing of men" from this incident.

Reviewed by R. A. Norem

Am Pol Sci R 39:1048 O '45 220w

Reviewed by Leonard Bloom

Am Soc R 10:816 D '45 750w

"Lt. Comdr. Leighton, psychiatrist and social anthropologist, was the first of the social analysts appointed to observe the working of a relocation center. He has set a very high standard in this presentation of his results.

LEIGHTON, A. H.—Continued
The book is clearly and vividly written and commendably free of unnecessarily obscure terminology. It is a significant contribution to the study of society in crisis situations, a type of society which will be increasingly important in the near future; and it is urgently recommended to those who will be administering displaced peoples in the years to come." G. G. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 242:201 N '45 500w

"Absorbing, illuminating and permanently valuable is the record and analysis of human experience and conduct presented in 'The Governing of Men.'" J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Jl 1 '45 500w

Booklist 42:13 S '45

Reviewed by J. H. Fichter

Cath World 162:92 O '45 400w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 9:126 Ag '45 800w

"All is given objectively, not sparing in criticism, unimpassioned, and, to be frank, colorless and lacking the human touches. The last third reassesses values, mistakes, etc. and draws conclusions."

Kirkus 13:489 N 1 '45 130w

"Highly recommended for its bearing on problems still to be faced in Europe and Asia." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Carey McWilliams

Nation 161:64 Jl 21 '45 300w

Reviewed by D. S. Myer

New Repub 113:165 Ag 6 '45 1000w

"Essentially this is less the story of a relocation center for Japanese-Americans than an inquiry into the processes of administration under stress. Commander Leighton uses the specific instance as a springboard for plunging into the larger area of governance. Throughout he deals not with abstract blueprints of political organizations but with the more concrete realities of administrators who are all too human, of people who are as quick to withhold cooperation under adverse conditions as they are eager to offer it under others, of policies which can find their way from the pages of a memorandum to actual practice only if the beliefs, customs and sentiments of the people are taken into account. He brings us a research into the economy of incentives for cooperation." R. K. Merton

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 22 '45 1450w

Reviewed by H. F. Angus

Pacific Affairs 18:379 D '45 1200w

"An unusual and important book." Robert Okin

+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 Jl 21 '45 750w

"From the welter of prejudice and misinformation surrounding the Japanese relocation centers comes this thoughtful and comprehensive book. Here will be found not only the history of the camps at Poston, Arizona, with the story of the evacuation from the West Coast, but also a set of principles and recommendations that may be applied to other individuals and to social organizations under stress."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Jl '45 240w

Social Studies 36:331 N '45 120w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:38 S '45 200w

"A timely book, and a real achievement." John Collier

+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 9 '45 1250w

LEIGHTON, MRS MARGARET (CARVER). Singing cave; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 169p $2 Houghton

45-3441

For older boys and girls. It is the story of a sixteen-year-old boy living in California, near the Mexican border. Bill was afraid the New York girl who was coming to spend the summer at the ranch would be a nuisance, and keep him from his spare time interest in archeology. But Penny was a help in more ways than one. There is a slight mystery and plenty of excitement.

Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45

"The plot moves swiftly and the scene of the story is interesting with its mountain and desert background, well described." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:114 Mr '45 120w

"A fast-moving and well-written story."

+ Kirkus 13:65 F 1 '45 150w

"Very good story for young adults. . . Chief virtue is the complete naturalness of the story. Penny and Bill are nice youngsters any girl in her teens would like to meet." Gweneira Williams

+ Library J 70:639 Jl '45 70w

"A thread of mystery winds up into an exciting climax and echoes of earlier days in California add richness to this well-written story for boys and girls of 8 to 12." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 My 6 '45 150w

Reviewed by B. W. Shaffer

Sat R of Lit 28:37 Je 16 '45 200w

"A stock of 'Westerns,' whether for man, boy or twelve-year-old girl, constantly needs replenishing, demand being what it is; this is a good one for girls, combining attractions of a mystery with those of a ranch story." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 29 '45 200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:56 My '45

LE MASSENA, CLARENCE EDWARD. Galli-Curci's life of song. 336p il $3.75 Paebar

B or 92 Galli-Curci, Amelita 45-9430

Biography of the famous Italian soprano, whose career was brought to an end in 1936 by a severe throat operation. Altho her life from birth to the late 1930's is studied here, the stress is upon the years 1906 to 1936, the years of her great success. Contains a list of her recordings, and one of her operatic roles.

"Biography on the mystic side, though written in the manner of an advertiser and promoter. It is entertaining and it gives information. Its philosophy may be nothing but applied platitude and yet it holds to an ecstatic level all the way through and is plentifully logical and convincing."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 5 '46 340w

"The author has been conscientious but his style, unfortunately, is heavily pedestrian. If handled differently, it could have been a much more exciting story. The 45 photographs almost tell it better." Victor Prahl

Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 550w

LEMKIN, RAPHAEL. Axis rule in occupied Europe; laws of occupation, analysis of government, proposals for redress. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Publications) 674p $7.50 Columbia univ. press

940.5337 World war, 1939—Occupied territories 44-47388

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"While some of the documents do not seem to bear immediately on the thesis developed in the text of the book, they constitute a comprehensive collection which will be of great value to historians of the future looking back upon this present unhappy generation." L. A. Mander

+ Am Hist R 51:117 O '45 1350w

"The importance of this work lies in its being the first attempt to present a systematic picture of Axis government in occupied Europe, including such phenomena outside occupatio bellica proper as Nazi rule over Austria and Czechoslovakia. The major portion of the book comprises texts of the respective laws and decrees." J. H. Herz

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:366 Ap '45 750w

"It is the opinion of the reviewer that the period covered should appear on the title page of the book. In addition, a somewhat unequal treatment was found to be given to the various subjugated nations. . . Notwithstanding these observations, the author should be given high credit for the brilliant, synthetical approach to the problem, and also for the substantial, although incomplete, collection of authentic documents of the German barbarian world policy and misrule." Vlastimil Kybal

+ — Ann Am Acad 239:190 My '45 800w
Booklist 41:195 Mr 1 '45
Cath World 161:445 Ag '45 90w

"This is one of the great books of 1944. It should be read not only by the Allied statesmen but also by all religious leaders interested in the moral and spiritual rehabilitation of Europe. The author is a noted Polish scholar and attorney. . . The publication of this book by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace attests to the high merits of the volume." P. N. Garber
+ Crozer Q 22:176 Ap '45 450w

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlman
Crozer Q 23:91 Ja '46 600w

"Dr. Lemkin has performed a signal service in compiling and analyzing the laws, ordinances and decrees by which the Nazis and their satellites have governed the subject peoples of Europe. About half of this thick volume consists of documents which the author has selected as illustrative of Nazi Fascist theory and practice. The rest contains Dr. Lemkin's own scholarly analysis of what all this evidence means."
+ Foreign Affairs 23:514 Ap '45 120w

"The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace has performed an important public service in publishing this volume at this time. Here made available for the peace-makers and preserved for posterity are the more important laws and decrees issued by the Axis powers and their puppet regimes as they imposed their will on most of Europe. Dr. Raphaël Lemkin, a distinguished Polish legal scholar, has accomplished a monumental task in gathering together and distilling the essence of this witches' brew. In addition to the texts of the decrees themselves, he has contributed a very useful introduction in which he analyzes the Axis techniques of occupation and summarizes the chronological development of the pattern of conquest country by country." Merle Fainsod
+ Harvard Law R 58:744 My '45 1650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p446 S 22 '45 420w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:37 Mr '45 240w

L'ENGLE, MADELEINE. Small rain. 371p $2.50 Vanguard
45-2788

The story of Katherine Forrester from the age of ten to twenty. The daughter of musicians, Katherine is to become a pianist but before she can begin her career she must pass thru the heartaches and joys and disappointments of adolescence, school days and early love affairs.

"Her novel is written with good taste and clear understanding, and while she has much to learn in the pointing up of conversation and in the natural cutback of introspection, the undeniable vitality of her writing is good to discover." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 175:125 Je '45 120w

"A first novel of real stature." Edith Roberts
+ Book Week p6 Ap 1 '45 450w
Booklist 41:237 Ap 15 '45

"There is considerable charm in this not important but refreshing story. . . Well done."
+ Kirkus 13:18 Ja 15 '45 90w

"Heartily recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 70w

"Katherine, despite her quite special environment, seems typical rather than unique. Her heartaches and raptures, her yearning for 'someone you can really talk to,' her high resolves and black despairs, are nothing but the old achingly familiar process of growing up. And yet, the young (and those who have not forgotten how it feels to be young) should find this a moving story." N. B. Baker
+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 11 '45 280w

"The book is a little dull, a little labored, and a little thin, in spite of which it is not entirely without promise."
— + New Yorker 21:97 Mr 24 '45 90w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 300w

" 'The Small Rain' is in no way the too common story of unhappy and misunderstood childhood which many novelists seem impelled to write. Miss L'Engle gives you Katherine and her family and friends with an objectivity that makes you respect and like them as individuals. The setting and the events of the story are in themselves interesting." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 11 '45 550w
Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

LENNON, FLORENCE BECKER. Victoria through the looking-glass; the life of Lewis Carroll. 387p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Carroll, Lewis, pseud (Charles Lutwidge Dodgson) 45-2439

Study of the life and times of the author of Alice in Wonderland. It begins with his early years in a Victorian England rectory, the oldest of eleven children, describes his student days at Oxford, and his later years as teacher of mathematics there. The author, an American poet and student of anthropology, delves into the reasons for Lewis Carroll's split personality, but final judgment must be withheld until his personal diary can be released for students' use. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Lerman
Atlantic 175:129 Je '45 280w

Reviewed by W. D. Clark
Book Week p3 Ap 22 '45 600w
Booklist 41:236 Ap 15 '45

"Mrs. Lennon not only gives us an excellent and at least on the surface, complete picture of Carroll, but she explores pretty thoroughly the whole Victorian era. She covers other wits and dreamers and writers for children who compare with Carroll. She tells of the difficulties his illustrators had with the crotchety don. She introduces Ellen Terry and Tennyson and the Rossettis. Her writing is sane and profound. Her descriptions of Oxford have none of that ecstatic quality we have come to know so well from those who have dwelt there or only visited its storied quadrangles. No lover of Alice will be disappointed in Carroll's biographer."
+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 500w

"It is a book for psychiatrists and historians, but not for simple-minded lovers of Alice. Such readers will be inclined to think that the whole thing outjabberwocks 'Jabberwocky.' The Rev. Charles Lutwidge Dodgson would have understood it, probably, but Lewis Carroll would certainly have squirmed under the microscope." B. J. Thompson
Cath World 161:185 My '45 450w
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 28 '45 110w

"A interesting, intelligent, investigatory biography. . . A thematically sound, if controversial, character study in four dimensions. A very special item for discriminating readers."
+ Kirkus 13:100 Mr 1 '45 210w

"While too detailed and disorganized for most readers, book nevertheless presents vivid picture of Lewis Carroll and furnishes important addition to literature of Carrolliana. Recommended for purchase by large libraries." S. E. Sherman
+ — Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 140w

"Lewis Carroll is a fascinating man. His miraculous escape from the prison of Victorian England, and of his own maladjustments, into the looking-glass land of childhood remains one of literature's greatest accomplishments. Amid the plethora of not always justified literary 'renaissances,' it is refreshing to find a book that avoids the sensational, content with intelligent critical biography. Lewis Carroll will never have a 'renaissance' if only for the simple reason that he does not need one." John Senior
+ Nation 160:458 Ap 21 '45 270w

LENNON, F. B.—Continued

"So far as sentences and paragraphs go, it it is often well written. Unfortunately, however, the book is so sadly deficient in organization that it remains a collection of materials rather than either a biography or a critical study. As the story of Dodgson's life, it is rambling and confused. As an interpretation of his work, it is sometimes maddeningly repetitious without ever getting very far beyond the statement that the dream-world of Alice is an escape from a convention-ridden life which Dodgson was too timid to rebel against." J. W. Krutch

— + N Y Times p6 Ap 1 '45 1150w

New Yorker 21:84 Mr 31 '45 160w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 800w

Time 45:95 Ap 2 '45 1850w

" 'Victoria Through the Looking Glass' will interest all collectors of Carrolliana, all students of 19th-century literature, and can be relished for the fruity quotations from the many sources Miss Lennon has examined. It remains however, a labor of pious and defensive love, and seems to me to shed little light on the strange power of his two classic works to shine on every situation and be appropriate to every predicament." Ernestine Evans

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 1 '45 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 41:52 My '45

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Spring is here. [48p] 75c Oxford

45-3285

Brief rhymes and charming colored pictures make up this book for the very youngest.

"The book is tiny and the pictures bright with soft, gay spring colors. The very youngest will take it to their hearts." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 Ap 15 '45 100w

Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

Kirkus 13:158 Ap 1 '45 80w

"Recommended." Olive Brain

+ Library J 70:492 My 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 70:950 O 15 '45 60w

"Small in size and as delicately gay in color as the first gold-green leaves, this is a book that three to five year olds will enjoy possessing—and one that will add a pleasant spring-like touch to the picture-book collections in schools and libraries." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 15 '45 110w

"This is a tiny picture-book that brings out, better than any other I have seen, the fact that spring is the time when things and creatures move—especially little children who burst out of winter into hop-scotch, skip rope, roll hoops and send swings and kites into the sky." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 22 '45 130w

Wis Lib Bul 41:56 My '45

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Strawberry girl; il. by [the author]. 193p $2.50 Lippincott

45-7609

Second in a series of regional stories in which the first was Bayou Suzette (Book Review Digest, 1943). This is the story of the life of the Florida Crackers in the early 1900's, told for grades four to six.

Booklist 42:22 S '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

"The peculiar speech of the Florida backwoods, handed down from Anglo-Saxon origins, gives flavor to a vivid regional story, but does not obscure the humor and kindliness of an understanding writer." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:457 N '45 120w

"Mildly dramatic—and perhaps a shade too moralistic, but all in all good regional material. Authentic and charming quality to the black and whites by the author."

+ — Kirkus 13:252 Je 1 '45 90w

"Although the picturesque speech of this American group may hinder reading by children of Birdie's age, story introduces a locale and people about which little has been written for children, and its obvious authenticity, attractive format and interesting plot will make it a welcome addition to juvenile book collections." E. D. Briggs

+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 80w

"The people in the story are real and lovable; it has warmth and color." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 70:953 O 15 '45 70w

"Regional stories are an important part of every child's reading experience and Miss Lenski has performed a real service to boys and girls in providing them with this fresh and authentic sample." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 S 9 '45 150w

New Yorker 21:133 D 8 '45 50w

"The speech in this one is particularly interesting. It is based on old English and has a distinctive flavor and rhythm. The illustrations, too, strengthen the feeling of locality. Miss Lenski does not give glamour to Birdie and her friends. They are drawn as they are. They look rather thin and badly nourished, but there is spirit and humor in them. They are exactly right as illustrations for a story that is obviously based on research and a true friendliness for its subject." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:44 O 20 '45 400w

School & Society 62:144 S 1 '45 20w

"The story is not only accurate in its picturesque details, it is realistic to a degree that may complicate matters in assigning its age level. The well sustained plot is unmistakably that of a tale for ten-year-olds; the local language is reproduced with such fidelity that those who fear to give young children examples of unorthodox spelling or grammar may be put off by it. But the same realism gives a young reader a lively sense of being present at cane grinding, going to a one-room school, racing gopher turtles, packing strawberries and adapting what was a little lost pocket of yesterday to the ideas of this age." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 2 '45 360w

LENSSEN, HEIDI. Art and anatomy; text ed. by Lancaster M. Greene. 80p il pl $5 Augustin

743.4 Anatomy, Artistic 45-1164

"Modern anatomical studies of bones and muscles and a selection of figure drawings and proportion studies used by master artists of the fifteenth, sixteenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries. Description of the bones and muscles, but no text with the proportion studies. The drawings themselves are intended to show the different standards of the individual artist." Booklist

Booklist 41:221 Ap 1 '45

"One great merit of this book is the clearness and simplicity of the plates, normally in black and white with a uniform red for the muscles. Another merit is that the illustrations, when they are not diagrammatic or from drawings by contemporary American artists, are taken from masters of both the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, and from Dutch and German as well as from Italian artists. This serves to remind the student that the ideal proportions of the human figure have varied from age to age and from school to school."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p323 Jl 7 '45 180w

LENT, CONSTANTIN PAUL. Rocket research; history and handbook. 102p il $5 Pen-ink pub. co, 130 W. 42d st, N.Y.

629.13338 Rockets (areonautics). Industrial research 44-9656

"Small book on the history, early research and experiments of the American Rocket Society of which author is vice president. Operation of rockets, advantages of the jet propulsion engine and some rocket patents. Future of rocketry." Library J

"The reader will search in vain for a single good feature. The author's firm, the Pen-Ink Publishing Co., obviously knows nothing about publishing; the printing is poor, the layout inept, the illustrations muddy and badly placed in the text. Some figures, lifted bodily from foreign textbooks, still contain call-outs in German! Lent's whole approach to the subject is amateurish and romantic, better suited to the pseudo-scientific pulp trade than to serious writing." J. J. Brown

— Canadian Forum 25:72 Je '45 550w

Chem & Met Eng 52:241 Ja '45 230w

Library J 70:119 F 1 '45 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:13 Ja '45

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 14 '45 60w

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Ahoy, shipmate! Steve Ellis joins the merchant marine; il. with official U. S. Maritime service photographs. 192p $2 Macmillan

387.5 Merchant marine—Juvenile literature 45-6815

Vocational story which describes the experiences of three American boys thru boot training at the Maritime service training station at Sheepshead Bay, and on to their first assignments at sea. For older boys.

Booklist 42:23 S '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:354 S '45 100w

"Story is simple, informational and very readable. The photographs illustrate the story well, though perhaps not as generously as those of some of his other books. Recommended." Ruth McEvoy

+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 70w

"In preparation for this book, which has the official approval of the War Shipping Administration, Mr. Lent spent many days at the training station. He writes with accuracy and with a fresh interest and enthusiasm that will make the book acceptable as well as enlightening to older boys." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p28 Ag 12 '45 110w

Sat R of Lit 28:74 N 10 '45 40w

Reviewed by G. W. Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 10 '45 300w

LEONARD, CHARLES L. See Heberden, M. V.

LEONARD, LEONARD LARRY. International regulation of fisheries; issued in cooperation with the Int. secretariat, Inst. of Pacific relations. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Monograph ser.) 201p maps $2 Columbia univ. press

639.2 Fishery law and legislation 45-3578

A scholarly monograph on the historical-legal aspects of the regulations of fisheries. The author has two objectives: "To discourage those who, in these war days when international law is in a state of flux, seek to give it such a realistic trend as would perpetuate, instead of deplete, one of the world's most bountiful food resources—the fisheries of the seas, and, To sponsor the gigantean task of securing the unanimous voluntary agreement of 'all maritime nations' to a fantastic, future scheme of a world-embracing international fishery government (even though subject matter at stake may in the meantime largely vanish)." (Harvard Law R) Bibliography. Index.

"Well-written and scholarly volume." A. T. Volwiler

+ Am Hist R 51:97 O '45 500w

Foreign Affairs 23:690 Jl '45 20w

"The book has the virtue of containing a convenient accumulation of fishery information and a usable bibliography. However, it presents little that is new except its imposing but impractical plan which ignores the imminency of the problem. What the interested countries need right now is some method which can immediately secure the preservation of the enormous food resources of the sea in an annually recurrent abundance for a hungry world." E. W. Allen

Harvard Law R 58:1106 S '45 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:39 D '45 320w

LEONARD, WILLIAM ELLERY. Man against time; an heroic dream. 80p $2 Appleton-Century

811 45-9665

A sequence of love sonnets by the author of Two Lives and The Locomotive God. " 'A Man Against Time' has as its theme the sexual love of an aging husband for his young wife. Such material is difficult to deal with and it is rendered even more so when, as in this instance, the material is autobiographical." (N Y Times)

"Without reaching the pitch of greatness of some of the best sonnet sequences, such as Rosetti's House of Life, these poems have a simple, sincere, romantic dignity. One glimpses an American type, rare indeed, compounded of Emerson, Whitman, with a touch of Elbert Hubbard—the giants and their simplicity. Thus dated, it is difficult to predict a wide audience, but the book, though very personal, avoids the mawkish and is worth attention."

+ Kirkus 13:387 S 1 '45 190w

" 'A Man Against Time' is inferior to 'Two Lives,' but it is not itself an inferior poem. 'Two Lives' was closely organized, fused, homogeneous; 'A Man Against Time' is somewhat less these things; it does, however, possess thematic unity. The passing of the years has only slightly affected Leonard's plastic handling of the sonnet form. There is a colloquial informality about many of the present sonnets, but seldom do they lack seriousness or dignity. If occasionally there is a flatness about them, there is more often a blending of simplicity and tranquil beauty." Charles Duffy

+ — N Y Times p4 D 23 '45 360w

"This is a book one cannot read without emotion—even as it could not have been written without emotion. There is no pretense, either of style or mood. Another volume of real poetry has been bequeathed to the public for poetry from William Ellery Leonard's hitherto private papers." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 D 29 '45 650w

"Like Leonard's other autobiographical volumes, 'A Man Against Time' is interesting not for its form but for its genuine emotion frankly and revealingly expressed. While the volume will not add greatly to Mr. Leonard's laurels, it stands—as William Rose Benet has said—as a service to his memory: his work as scholar, poet, and outstanding personality in American letters." Ruth Lechlitner

Weekly Book Review p11 D 16 '45 270w

LEONARDO DA VINCI. Drawings; with an introduction and notes by A. E. Popham. 172p 320pl $10 Reynal

741.91 Drawings 45-10204

Three hundred and fifty plates representing Leonardo da Vinci's more artistic drawings. There is an introduction and notes by the deputy keeper of prints and drawings at the British museum. Bibliography. Concordance.

"Popham's book at once becomes indispensable to any art library. The plates, printed in England, are good and the book's size makes it an easily handled reference work." Dorothy Odenheimer

+ Book Week p4 Ja 6 '46 270w

Booklist 42:144 Ja 1 '46

"Presents very well indeed a comprehensive collection of his drawings." Stark Young

+ New Repub 113:875 D 24 '45 120w

"It is a welcome and well-done piece of work. . . But unfortunately—at any rate for the book's completeness—Mr. Popham has let

LEONARDO DA VINCI—Continued
the artistic predominate. . . This does not make the book any less admirable as a handsome collection of some of the finest draftsmanship done in the Renaissance—some of the finest ever done, for that matter—but it does limit its value as a companion to the 'Notebooks.'" F. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p5 D 30 '45 500w

"In his text, Mr. Popham, with enormous but easy-going scholarship, discusses the provenance of the drawings and the circumstances under which they were produced, and concludes with a completely annotated catalogue of the reproductions. He has edited the most important art book to appear in a long time." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 13 '46 1000w

LERNER, MAX. Public journal; marginal notes on wartime America. 414p $3 Viking

973.917 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. World war, 1939- 45-3148

A collection of 100 pieces selected by the author from the four hundred or so published in the New York paper PM during 1943 and 1944. The pieces are arranged "not chronologically but under the rough categories into which they seem to fall—the quality of American culture; freedom during a war for freedom; war and diplomatic policy; the economic and political struggles on the home front; postwar vistas." (Foreword)

"Historians will find in these well-written, thought-provoking, and fine-spirited articles some of the material they will need for an understanding of America during the second World War." C. O. Johnson

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1044 O '45 450w

Am Soc R 10:577 Ag '45 80w

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p3 Ap 22 '45 500w

Booklist 41:267 My 15 '45

"Nothing is so dead as yesterday's newspaper. But this resurrection of one man's editorials proves the permanence of hard thinking, brilliantly written, even though the occasion of it be the transient events of the news. Lerner is a knowledgeable man and a trenchant writer. He has fire and passion and an affirmative faith in the democratic purpose. So he has something to say and power to say it so it sticks." L. M. Lyons

+ Boston Globe p19 Ap 18 '45 400w

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill

Canadian Forum 25:96 Jl '45 700w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 25 '45 240w

Foreign Affairs 23:694 Jl '45 20w

"Max Lerner's editorials and columns made discarding copies of PM a painful process. I knew I'd want to go back to something he had said—a stimulating angle, a challenge to routine reactions, an immediacy that still had long range value, a clarity that helped clear the air. Now here is a well-chosen selection from those writings—and historians of tomorrow will find here a vital cutting through of non-essentials to the salient fact in events large and small."

+ Kirkus 13:83 F 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols

Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 130w

"Lerner, in short, is a good liberal in the PM-Nation-New Republic sense of the term, and on some levels better than most. Personally I want almost all of the things he wants, but I am not very well satisfied with the liberalism he represents. This does not mean that I am looking down on him from some superradical height or that I am glaring at him from the reactionary side of the barricades. I certainly do not regard him as a political enemy, and I hope that I can continue to call him a personal friend. But I still say that his position is inadequate." Granville Hicks

New Repub 112:514 Ap 16 '45 1500w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p10 Je 3 '45 500w

"The pieces are short essays on just about every fretful issue of the past two years; how much fun and/or edification one can get out of reading them is a matter for each man to decide for himself. It should be pointed out, however, that despite the publisher's long-faced avowal that the book was printed to 'prove to journalists and would-be journalists that newspaper writing need not be ephemeral,' the hard fact remains that nearly all of it is."

New Yorker 21:91 Ap 14 '45 160w

"Those who have followed Mr. Lerner's books and articles in the past will know that he has a keen and inquiring mind, and a provocative and incisive pen. His contributions to PM are among the most stimulating features of that paper. The collection under notice reflects his predilections and his dislikes. Every volume of newspaper editorials or articles necessarily suffers by virtue of the fact that many of the issues treated therein are, in the nature of the case, somewhat fleeting and transitory. . . 'Public Journal' contains pieces whose urgency of impact has largely evaporated with the passage of time, but Mr. Lerner has been successful in holding such material to a minimum." Virginius Dabney

+ Sat R of Lit 28:27 Ap 14 '45 900w

"Lerner has both gained and lost by going off-campus. This reviewer likes the new Lerner as well as the old. He's a tonic to daily journalism." Marshall Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 21 '45 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:8 S '45 280w

"The author is excellently equipped by training, talent and sympathy to act as a spokesman for that force in American life which seeks to combine an increasing control of the national economy by the government with the older tradition of liberty—as he puts it, liberty 'nourished by security and by some approximation of equality.' His book does more than reveal the play of an alert mind over the surface of American life; it is a generally fair and always intelligent illustration of a phliosophy which is an important element in American politics and American society today." H. W. Baehr

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 3 '45 800w

LESLIE, MRS JOSEPHINE A. C. (MRS R. A. DICK, pseud). The ghost and Mrs Muir. 174p $2 Ziff-Davis

After the death of her domineering husband, little Mrs Muir went to live in a cottage on the rocky English coast. She had heard that the house was haunted, but that did not stop her. In fact Mrs Muir found the ghost very cooperative, and the situation worked out to a very satisfactory arrangement.

Booklist 42:56 O 15 '45

"A very pleasant exercise in humorous haunting."

+ Kirkus 13:278 Jl 1 '45 170w

"In her first novel, Mrs. R. E. Dick (the nom de plume of a woman who has traveled in many parts of the world with her husband, who is in the British Colonial Service) writes readable, frolicsome fantasy. She succeeds in maintaining the illusion of a 'human' ghost, and life in a haunted house follows a lively course." Lucy Greenbaum

+ N Y Times p32 O 7 '45 240w

"'The Ghost and Mrs Muir' is no conventional chiller. In this case the ghost is unequivocally a ghost. . . Mrs Dick's first novel—despite the title—is a light-hearted, wholesome story of English country life, and no devotee of the spine-tingling school of literature should be misled into giving it a second glance." J. S. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 160w

"Here is the gayest haunted-house story we have read in a spook's age—an enchanting make-believe for adults who still have a normal craving for a good fairy tale." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p22 D 9 '45 230w

LESTER, RICHARD ALLEN. Providing for unemployed workers in the transition. (Committee for economic development. Research study) 152p $1.50 McGraw

331.137973 Labor supply—U.S. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 45-990

"Fourth in the 'Committee for Economic Development Research Studies.' Practical program for meeting the transition unemployment problem in the change from war to peace production. Author advocates better unemployment compensation, discusses advantages and disadvantages of Federal public works as against local programs, analyzes present circumstances and advances his own recommendations." (Library J) Index.

Am Soc R 10:577 Ag '45 80w
Booklist 41:232 Ap 15 '45
Foreign Affairs 23:695 Jl '45 30w
Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 70w

"I am sure that in regard to unemployment compensation, Dr. Lester has constructed a program which, in his judgment, can be adopted rather than one which he feels would be most desirable. Such an approach is certainly justified, but the danger is that he may have underestimated the potential explosiveness of the transition period and the boldness of the action that may be necessary if we encounter any deflationary downward spiral." William Haber

+ — Management R 34:205 My '45 1200w

"This book was written well before the end of the war, and it is significant that even then the author was moved to say that 'Time is already short.' His urging that federal enabling legislation and joint federal-state programs be set up immediately is given point by the current post-war scene."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:23 D '45 300w

LE SUEUR, MERIDEL. North star country. (American folkways ser) 327p $3 Duell

917.76 Minnesota. Wisconsin 45-37888

Study of the "region embracing Minnesota, Wisconsin, and the western shores of the Great Lakes." The author discusses everything from folkways to the people themselves; from Paul Bunyan to bishops; from background history to present day democracy. Index.

"Read as the history of a state 'North Star Country' is woefully inadequate; read as the impressionistic account of a democratic civilization in the making it is valuable and interesting. The same lack of continuity that has kept Miss Le Sueur from becoming a successful novelist is visible here, but in chapters and sections the book reveals the strong emotionalism of her short stories." J. T. Flanagan

+ — Book Week p4 D 23 '45 650w
Booklist 42:162 Ja 15 '46
Kirkus 13:447 O 1 '45 130w

"Important and recommended." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 70:978 O 15 '45 110w

"'North Star Country' is a readable volume in anybody's terms. Only—when is a book on American 'folkways' something more than mildly eccentric history? Why is the 'folkways' writer exempt from the usual canons of historical scholarship? And, by the way, what is a 'folkway,' anyhow?" H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:11 Ja 5 '46 700w

"I notice a few slips. John Jacob Astor's fur empire did not merely 'extend as far as the Rockies'; it ranged to the Pacific shore at Astoria, where the Columbia meets the sea. It was not David but Louis Riel who led Canada's greatest revolt. 'Scandinavian Dynamite' is not 'chewing plug'; it is a finely ground powder. . . None of these slips is important. Miss Le Sueur writes with fine feeling for the right word. Her characterizations are excellent. She can put drama into a scene, any old scene. But I believe the effect of the entire book is highly misleading. From it a total stranger would get the impression that pretty much all of North Star country is under mortgage to fat and grinning bankers; and that most of the farms had blown away on dust storms anyway. Both of these impressions mar a spirited and poetic book, and they are erroneous to a degree bordering fantasy." Stewart Holbrook

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 D 16 '45 1000w

LEVENSON, WILLIAM B. Teaching through radio; with a foreword by I. Keith Tyler. 474p il $3 Farrar

371.333 Radio in education 45-7119

Study of radio in education, based on experiences in the Cleveland public school system, written by the director of radio activities in the Cleveland schools. "The purpose of the volume is twofold: the improvement of school broadcasting and the encouragement of more effective use of educational radio programs." (Preface) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:178 F 1 '46

"This book is a uniquely practical combination of manual, handbook, and dissertation on why and how auditory aids, particularly radio, can be used to assist and amplify the regular classroom teaching process. . . The chief feeling of a reader of this book is one of balance." J. H. Angell

+ El School J 46:174 N '45 850w

"While it does not profess to say the last word this book contains a wealth of information which every forward-looking educator ought to have at his command. . . The volume is both expository statement and a manual and should help immensely to stimulate the use of a teaching instrument which so many of our educational institutions have lamentably neglected." H. J. Carmer

+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 S 15 '45 310w
School & Society 62:63 Jl 28 '45 30w
Social Studies 36:332 N '45 30w

LEVENSTEIN, AARON. Labor today and tomorrow. 253p $2.75 Knopf

331.1 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Industrial relations 45-9697

"Readable account of labor history during the war, the Montgomery Ward case being considered symbolic of the new era for labor. In the postwar period more disputes are predicted, especially the jurisdictional, with certain problems coming to the fore: the seniority rights of veterans, unemployment with its possible effect on union rolls, the growing movement for restriction of union activities, the guaranteed wage and the need in unions for greater labor statesmanship. Whatever measures are required—even government planning for industry—government is committed to guaranty of food, clothing and shelter for workers." (Library J) Index.

"The principal point made in this intelligently and well-written volume about the toughest problem facing the American people on the home front today, namely, the problem of stable economy, is that organized labor is bumbling along, with apparently no idea of where it is going. That may sound as though Levenstein is just another carper at the labor movement. The opposite is true, for this book is one of the friendliest criticisms of the American labor movement to appear in many years." Justin McCarthy

+ Book Week p5 N 25 '45 500w
Booklist 42:104 D 1 '45

"With every aware citizen realizing that Labor presents a problem that will be increasingly volatile, here is a dispassionate, objective and fair book which should be read and reread for the light it throws on the relations among management, labor and government in the past decade."

+ Kirkus 13:416 S 15 '45 150w

"Journalistic but considered treatment. Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 70:1087 N 15 '45 110w

"The author knows a great deal about labor, and his judgment is usually sound. Yet his volume is not well integrated, and he is inclined, especially in the first chapters, to

LEVENSTEIN, AARON—Continued
'write down' to his readers. Nevertheless, this volume is a reasonably worthwhile addition to the literature on the current labor movement." Philip Taft
+ — Nation 161:667 D 15 '45 400w
New Repub 113:812 D 10 '45 240w

"The seeker after an easy formula for labor peace will not find it within the covers of Mr. Levenstein's thoughtful book. It is a gloomy picture that he foresees of the post-war relationship between management and labor, but there is little reason to question the soundness of the premises on which he bases his fears for the future." A. H. Raskin
+ N Y Times p3 N 25 '45 900w

"Like all books that deal with current history in the making in a highly emotion-ridden struggle, Levenstein has written before historical grey beards can have a generation of graduate students mull the evidence over. Some of his facts as well as his conclusions are thus subject to revision. But such well-written and objective documents, efforts at first synthesis of historical materials, at writing an immediate prologue to the near future, have great value in aiding to formulate sound social policies." A. M. Lee
+ Sat R of Lit 28:23 D 1 '45 900w

"A readable and penetrating analysis of today's problems. . . I found this book absorbing as well as valuable reading." E. M. Herrick
+ Weekly Book Review p2 D 9 '45 1550w

LEVER, HARRY, and YOUNG, JOSEPH. Wartime racketeers. 226p $2.75 Putnam
364.38 Swindlers and swindling 45-3268

Survey of the wartime rackets and frauds perpetrated by criminals of various degrees upon unsuspecting civilians or service men, and the methods of the government agencies in bringing the offenders to justice.

Reviewed by E. H. Sutherland
Am Soc R 10:817 D '45 450w
Booklist 41:232 Ap 15 '45
Reviewed by Jack Gould
N Y Times p12 Ap 8 '45 500w
Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 390w

"The authors, of course, draw distinctions among the various types of fraud and violence with which they deal. But they do not cut very far below the surface. . . But it cannot be denied that the authors' method does make for easier reading and a kind of grisly entertainment value. Their style is clear, concise and unpretentious; their facts have been largely obtained from such authoritative sources as Federal agencies and the Better Business Bureau, and the book as a whole fills in one of the gaps in the picture of the United States at war." H. W. Baehr
+ — Weekly Book Review p16 My 13 '45 550w

LEVY, HERMANN. National health insurance; a critical study. (Nat. inst. of economic and social research. Economic and social studies) 366p $4.50 Macmillan [18s Cambridge]
331.25442 Insurance, Health [A45-1015]

"This book is a detailed critical analysis of national health insurance in Great Britain from its inauguration in 1911 up to 1942. After stating facts very briefly about the original enactment, Mr. Levy discusses national health insurance from the standpoint of benefits, economic conditions of the worker, medical benefits and treatment, and administration. While he points out many imperfections in national health insurance, his most serious criticisms center on the method of administration." Pol Sci Q

"Significant and timely volume." P. A. Dodd
+ Am Econ R 35:477 Je '45 1050w
Reviewed by L. M. Easson
J Home Econ 37:656 D '45 250w
Manchester Guardian p3 N 17 '44 300w

"It seems to this reviewer that Levy pays far more attention to financial and insurance features than to service. . . Lastly, there is the matter of preventive medicine to which Levy and the advocates of compulsory and voluntary insurance in this country pay little attention." Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p22 Jl 22 '45 800w

"It is unfortunate that Levy had completed his manuscript when the Beveridge Report appeared. He apparently did not feel justified in revamping his discussion in order to give Beveridge's work the prominence he gave to the reports of the Royal Commissions on Health Insurance and Workmen's Compensation and the reports of PEP (Political and Economic Planning) and the ILO. . . The reviewer was left with the feeling that Levy, having completed his study, decided it should be published essentially as written without reference to the fact that perhaps the most important study of all time that bore on his investigation had just made its appearance and certainly would have a bearing on the reception of his (Levy's) conclusions." R. B. Robbins
Pol Sci Q 60:304 Je '45 750w
Reviewed by Alfred Manes
Social Forces 24:247 D '45 350w

"As a study of the past of British sickness insurance this book has no equal. As a contribution to the shaping of Britain's future social institutions it is completely spoiled by the author's inability to conceive that Britain in the 1950's may be able to do better than Germany in the 1920's."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p50 F 3 '45 1100w

LEVY, HERMANN. Retail trade associations; a new form of monopolist organisation in Britain; a report to the Fabian society. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 265p $4 Oxford [15s Routledge]
658.87 Retail trade. Trade and professional associations. Monopolies [A43-1104]

"The trade association with which Professor Levy concerns himself is not the sort of organization the term will bring to the minds of American readers. . . What Professor Levy means by the term is, 'an association of distributors—wholesale or retail—designed to restrict or regulate free competition.' In a series of historical and analytical chapters the author traces the rise and development of this sort of association from the organization of the British book trade in 1812 down to the present." Ann Am Acad

"Though the book is exclusively descriptive, it is a rich mine of information and is written in a fluent, appealing style." B. F. Hoselitz
+ Am J Soc 51:164 S '45 360w

"Professor Levy gives no quantitative data to show how extensive the control of trade associations over retailing has in fact become in Great Britain. Neither does he explore deeply the extent to which they have and have not been able to make good on their pretensions. These are important weaknesses, since what the organizations can do is more significant than what some of their more ambitious members and officers would like to see them do. The study is, nevertheless, informative and stimulating. It deserves wide reading here as well as in Great Britain." Reavis Cox
+ — Ann Am Acad 240:172 Jl '45 700w
Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 F 11 '45 50w

LEVY, HYMAN, and PREIDEL, EDWARD ERNEST. Elementary statistics. 184p $2.25 Ronald [5s Nelson]
311.2 Mathematical statistics 45-4878

"A brief text based on courses in statistics given to students of engineering, mathematics, physics and biology at the Imperial College of Science, London. In addition to material on frequency, accuracy of the mean, correlation, probability, and Gauss's law of error, there is a chapter on the elements of quality control. Exercises are given at the end of each chapter." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 30:30 Ap '45
School & Society 61:368 Je 2 '45 60w

LEWIS, ALUN. Ha! ha! among the trumpets; poems in transit; foreword by Robert Graves. 75p $1.75 Macmillan [5s Allen, G]

821 World war, 1939-1945—Poetry [A45-4636]

"The last poems, posthumously published, by a young Welshman killed in India in March of 1944. This book escapes almost entirely the sentimentality of his first collection, 'Raider's Dawn,' which appeared in 1942 [Book Review Digest, 1943]." New Yorker

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p19 O 28 '45 250w

"Though they suffer a little from modish ambiguity of phrasing and slackness of form, the book as a whole has a marked personality, and, doubtless, had its author been enabled to give its contents a leisurely and undistracted reconsideration many of its obvious weaknesses might have been eliminated." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 10 '45 80w

"Lewis called 'Ha! Ha! Among the Trumpets' a sardonic title, but the reader may think it a triumphant one. Any man who believes that love gives order to life is apt at times to be derisive of his own solitary and painful struggle to find meaning in a life involved in war. But Lewis sometimes made good poetry out of the struggle and the music of a good poem can always outlast the noise of the trumpets." D. S. Norton
N Y Times p32 Ja 20 '46 650w

"These 'poems in transit,' many of them written when the author was on active service in India, project background and emotion with a rough vigor and a tragic tone, proving that Lewis was already in full command of his powers at the age of twenty-eight."
+ New Yorker 21:115 O 20 '45 80w

"Mr. Lewis has in high degree that quality, much more common among the British than the Americans, of making the reader feel that he is the product of a long and logical process of assimilation. He seems to have, without slavish imitation, the British poetic tradition. He appears to be fighting with his emotions and sensibilities not against them. . . Reading [the book] is not like reading war poetry, though the poems are almost all concerned with war or its shadow, so much as like meeting and talking to a poet, a poet who, when the meeting is over, will be remembered as a man." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 Ja 19 '46 290w
Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Ag 11 '45 900w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Weekly Book Review p20 Ja 13 '46 450w

"Although the poems are posthumously printed with an introduction by Robert Graves, this is something beside a memorial volume. It is an accomplishment as well as a promise. Only a true poet could have written 'Corfe Castle,' 'Compassion,' the mordant 'Jason and Medea,' and most the bittersweet songs. Alun Lewis's letters, added to his pointed verse, indicate what the poet would have done and what he was already beginning to achieve." Louis Untermeyer
+ Yale R n s 35:336 winter '46 140w

LEWIS, CHARLES LEE. Admiral de Grasse and American independence. 404p il $3 U.S. naval inst.

B or 92 Grasse-Tilly, François Joseph Paul, marquis de. U.S.—History—Revolution—French participation. U.S.—History—Revolution—Naval operations 45-8528

"This biography gives Dr Grasse the full credit for the victory over the British fleet off the Virginia Capes, the victory which made Yorktown possible. This was merely an episode, though a history-shaping one, in a long and distinguished naval career. Admiral De Grasse served his kings, Louis XV and Louis XVI, for over 50 years, fighting in three major wars. La Bruyere, D'Estaing, Rodney, Hood and Graves were his colleagues and opponents; in his career he represents the long struggle between France and England for naval supremacy." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Studies 36:373 D '45 180w

"Readers will probably compare this book with Stephen Bonsal's 'When the French Were Here,' the brilliant account of Rochambeau and his army which was published last winter. This present book will, for the general reader, suffer in comparison. The style is slow and plodding; it lacks the fire and color of Mr Bonsal's book. Yet it is a careful presentation of an important figure in our history, a figure of whom too little is known. It helps to fill a gap in our historical understanding and as such is a valuable contribution." R. A. Brown
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Je 29 '45 360w

"Without flourishes or purple passages Professor Lewis gives a splendid account of the achievements of a great man. The author is well versed in naval history and ably describes, with the aid of skillfully prepared maps, battles and maneuvers." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 26 '45 600w

LEWIS, CLAUDE ALLEN, and COBB, MABEL. Circus day. [52p] $1.50 Ackerman 45-6265

Tells in pictures and text about one day at the circus, as viewed by a country boy who got free tickets because his father let them paste bills on his barn.

"A very young child may like the colored pictures and expect no more from the book than enjoyment of the pictures as such. However, anyone who thinks this is going to be a true picture-story book will be disappointed by the heavy text, and a young reader who thinks he will open to a real story of circus life with thrills and excitement will feel let down by the informative text. Still another who actually wants information on the circus might pass the book by, being misled by the outer appearance One more feature which must be considered—the book is expensive and poorly bound." E. B. B.
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 5 '45 120w

"Claude Allen Lewis is an oldtime circus man and his book has everything an old timer recalls of the one ring traveling show of Toby Tyler's day—except the smell, but that rich effluvium can't be forgotten or reproduced." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 8 '45 230w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES (CLIVE HAMILTON, pseud). Beyond personality; the Christian idea of God. 64p $1 Macmillan [2s 6d Bles]

231 Christianity. God 45-3859

"A series of broadcast talks given in the spring of [1944] together with some additional chapters. The subject is Christian theology, and in sixty-four pages we are given an introduction to the doctrines of the Trinity, the Incarnation, and the Atonement." Manchester Guardian

Bookmark 6:3 My '45

"The gay and gifted Mr. Lewis in his latest work chose a theme which does not lend itself to playfulness and wit and the sharp etching of human foibles as well as The Screwtape Letters did. What comes to the fore now, is not the author's gift of character analysis, but his almost unique ability to make abstractions intelligible and interesting and to put fundamental teachings into plain English."
+ Cath World 161:444 Ag '45 180w
Christian Century 62:734 Je 20 '45 170w

"Once again this brilliant author gives us a series of ten-minute radio talks in which he endeavors to explain the orthodox Christian faith in the simplest terms, and picture it in most un-orthodox symbols. In this series he is rather more successful in his concluding practical applications than in his interpretations of the Trinity, the difference between divine creation and begetting, and the timelessness of God's existence." W. L. Caswell
Churchman 159:18 Je 1 '45 210w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES—Continued

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 42:528 S 14 '45 1400w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 22:287 Jl '45 200w

"Again, Lewis demonstrates his extraordinary gift of expressing abstract ideas in language which the non-theologian, even those who lay no claim to intellectuality can understand. Here is one who dares in a series of radio talks to deal with such questions as the personality of God, the Trinity and the theory of prayer and does so in language that the average man can understand. The secret of Lewis' popular appeal seems to lie in his unusually apt use of analogies and illustrations. To those who need to think about religion or to have their thinking clarified, this little book can be enthusiastically recommended."
+ Kirkus 13:61 F 1 '45 210w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 110w

"So long as we remember that it is an introduction to and not a compendium of theology we shall not ask more of it than it can give. As it is, it does introduce the reader to the subject, it does persuade him that here is something worth knowing, and it does start the acquaintance. . . The book is, as might be expected, eminently readable." T. W. M.
Manchester Guardian p3 N 12 '44 200w

"With the BBC for his pulpit and refreshing independence of clerical training for a Pauline ordination, Mr. Lewis, the layman of Oxford, continues to be the major apostle of Christian faith for the man in the street wherever he may be strolling along the sidewalk. In this latest installment of what is becoming a comprehensive survey of truths, as orthodoxy defines them, translated into terms of life whether it be orthodox or rankest heresy, there is no exhaustion of an illimitable theme. The pages are crowded as ever with apt illustration, humorous ways of putting things and searching rejoinders to negative plausibilities." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 22 '45 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p513 O 21 '44 600w

"Mr. Lewis reveals anew in this latest series of broadcast talks, his ability as an expositor of Christian doctrine. No wonder that he is popular on the English radio. His clarity of thought and simplicity of expression have a magic about them which makes plain the most abstruse problems of theological speculation." J. H. Holmes
+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 23 '45 230w

LEWIS, GEORGE GRIFFIN. Practical book of oriental rugs. 6th rev ed 317p pl $10 Lippincott

745.52643 Rugs, Oriental 45-37887

"This book is a substantially revised edition (sixth) of the original work, published 34 years ago, and is the first revision in 25 years—a period during which conditions in Asia Minor, the Caucasus, Persia, Turkestan and India have revolutionized rug-making. Accordingly, the revisions have been extensive. The story of rug-making is told in chapters dealing with the art of weaving, dyeing, and design. . . Mr. Lewis's book contains an extensive classification of Orientals; chapters with numerous line drawings showing Orientals' designs; advice on the use, care, and cleaning of Orientals; and it is illustrated with 32 color plates and 80 half tones." (Christian Science Monitor) Maps on end papers.

Booklist 42:168 Ja 15 '46

"Mr. Lewis has succeeded in producing a book that is of encyclopedic value to the specialist and interesting also to the layman. It is recommended to those collectors of antiques who long have avoided the Oriental rug field because of the difficulty in knowing how to identify and appraise the genuine article."
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 22 '45 360w

LEWIS, LANGE. Birthday murder. 206p $2 Bobbs 45-2942

Detective story.

"Skillful."
+ Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Mr 25 '45 130w

"O.K."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 Mr 17 '45 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 180w

"The whole thing is just right for picture fans." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 15 '45 90w

LEWIS, NORMAN. How to read better and faster. 319p $2.50 Crowell

028.1 Reading 45-764

Designed as an aid to those desirous of increased speed and comprehension in reading. The book is divided into five parts, each devoted to one aspect of improving reading ability. Contents: How to read this book; First week: How to analyze your present reading habits; Second week: How to master the mechanics of reading; Third week: How to build a large reading vocabulary; Fourth week: How to sharpen your intellectual curiosity; Fifth week: How to develop habits of active thinking and sound reasoning. The appendix contains an alphabetical check-list of recommended books, and review tests in vocabulary.

Booklist 41:163 F 1 '45
Bookmark 6:9 My '45

"They are printing so many books these days that this one is necessary to the normal reader who wants to keep up with the parade. It will teach you how not to waste time reading. To those who believe they are good skimmers we recommend the section labeled, 'How to Skim.' They'll probably be amazed. Not least of all, the book can be used as a guide to what is worth reading."
+ Boston Globe p13 F 7 '45 70w

"A self-help handbook for which there has been definite need and demand."
+ Kirkus 12:525 N 15 '44 90w

"This is no panacea book. Expert reading isn't achieved in an evening. But Mr Lewis offers one of the most intelligent and interesting guides we have yet seen."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 28 '45 600w

"Co-author of the widely popular 'Thirty Days to a More Powerful Vocabulary,' Mr. Lewis adds to his reputation as sound adviser on dynamic possibilities of words by this compact guide to efficient reading methods. . . There is a definite five-week course of study, progressing from analysis of present reading habits, through mastering mechanics, building a reading vocabulary and sharpening mental curiosity, to the development of habits of sound reasoning."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 4 '45 180w
Wis Lib Bul 41:44 Ap '45

LEWIS, OSCAR. Uncertain journey. 253p $2.50 Knopf 45-7529

Novel of San Francisco, mainly during the depression years. It is the story of a very young man's infatuation with a girl who does not really love him. Three times Elaine callously succeeded in shattering Bruce's emotional life as well as his financial prospects, but even after years of absence and two marriages for Elaine, they drifted together again.

Reviewed by Dorsha Hayes
Book Week p7 Ag 19 '45 270w

"A passable performance, which stays in character but lacks charm."
+ Kirkus 13:275 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Intelligent, competently written, unemphatic tale. . . Mr. Lewis makes you see and believe in his young people, but, having seen and believed in them, you are not likely to find any special interest in this book."

+ — New Yorker 21:61 Ag 25 '45 80w

"A lightness of spirit, a Jovian humor, escapes from the scene and is communicated to us. Mr. Lewis may or may not wish to make larger uses of his objective realism; certainly his next book will be worth watching for to find out. In this one he has employed it to give freshness and vitality to a story that might otherwise have been devoid of either quality." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 S 1 '45 360w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 150w

"A fully realized emotional drama and as mature a piece of fiction as is likely to find its way into any publisher's office in the course of a year. It is the second novel of Oscar Lewis, who won considerable critical acclaim with 'I Remember Christine' a few years ago, and who should find a wider audience for his new book. . . There is a likeness to Maugham in the corrosive candor with which Mr. Lewis tells his story; his craftsmanship is of the same school—he writes simply and to the point, dotting his i's and crossing his t's. This is not to say, however, that Mr. Lewis is an imitative writer. His book stands on its own feet; it is a book that Mr. Maugham himself might read with pleasure." Marion Sturges-Jones

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 26 '45 750w

LEWIS, SINCLAIR. Cass Timberlane; a novel of husbands and wives. 390p $2.75 Random house

45-4918

Cass Timberlane at forty-one was sober, thoughtful, and respected by the Minnesota town in which he was a judge. This story of Cass's second marriage to a girl in her early twenties is punctuated by stories of the married lives of many of his friends.

"Sinclair Lewis has done it again. With that observant buzz-saw mind of his, he has sliced through the main trunk of American life to lay bare a cross-section more worm-eaten than we like to suppose. He characterizes his new book, Cass Timberlane, as 'A Novel of Husbands and Wives.' The story is centered in his home state of Minnesota, which means that it is written with more affection than his other recent works; it blends gusto with irony, and with the vividness of Tintoretto's 'Last Judgment' it shows us in a hundred crude postures the infidelity which, says Mr. Lewis, is so typical of American marriage." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 176:139 O '45 1300w

"'Cass Timberlane' is remarkable for being the most depressing novel I have read this season—in addition to being up front in the running for worst. Looking back on Lewis' own work, it seems most closely related (in meagerness, triteness and immaturity) to 'Mantrap.'" A. C. Spectorsky

— Book Week p1 O 7 '45 1650w

Booklist 42:37 O 1 '45

"The sub-title, A Novel of Husbands and Wives, suggests that this is meant to be a satire on marriage, but only the physical aspects of marriage are treated and these more in the manner of meretricious anecdotes than as examples of its problems. And a shabby lot of husbands and wives they are. The book appears to have been hastily written."

— Cath World 162:187 N '45 180w

"I'm afraid the truth is that Mr. Lewis has never quite become an adult. In his early years he found a formula which worked, and he has depended on it ever since. It is a formula for an inferior sort of journalism which, presented as fiction, becomes an imitation of art. 'Cass Timberlane' is further confused by the interpolation throughout of disconnected chapters dealing with tragic or comic episodes in the lives of people not immediately concerned with the story. These may be intended as backdrop material, but they read more like discarded sketches for other stories." L. A. Sloper

— Christian Science Monitor p14 O 3 '45 480w

Reviewed by Charles Duffy

Commonweal 43:100 N 9 '45 320w

"This is by all odds the best book Sinclair Lewis has given us for many seasons. Personally, I liked it much better than It Can't Happen Here, which is probably his most important book of recent years. It is a warm human story, a story of people everyone knows, of a community anyone could live in."

+ Kirkus 13:344 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Deft, precise characterizations in Lewis' best vein but less caustic, less vitriolic tone. Sentimental ending conforms to Hollywood's specifications. Indeed it will be popular and only a few will regret that a mellower, or perhaps a wiser, Lewis is at work." E. P. Nichols

Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 70w

"On the level of implicit attitudes 'Cass Timberlane' is a curiously unrevealing book. Especially in its subsidiary chapters, in what Mr. Lewis calls 'an assemblage of husbands and wives,' it is chiefly a restatement of familiar American sentimentalities and cynicisms about marriage. Whereas in books like 'Main Street' and 'Babbitt' it was Mr. Lewis's special gift to be able to explore the social value of habitual manners and attitudes of which we had hitherto been scarcely aware, in 'Cass Timberlane' he deals almost entirely in observations that have been part of our cliché-thinking about love and marriage for many a year." Diana Trilling

Nation 161:381 O 13 '45 1100w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber

New Repub 113:542 O 22 '45 180w

"This is a fair novel, but not one of Lewis' best. The pleasure of reading 'Cass Timberlane' is the pleasure of going back again to remembered people and remembered landscapes. In a prefatory note Mr. Lewis insists that the scene and the characters are imaginary, which is all very well; but among Lewis characters they are not very new. Jinny might have been Carol Kennicott's daughter, the daughter she looked at so hopefully in the last pages of 'Main Street,' and it would not be surprising to hear that the upright Judge Timberlane, her husband, was related to Sam Dodsworth." Charles Poore

N Y Times p1 O 7 '45 1650w

"These neighbors, the social organism of Grand Republic, are shown not only in relation to the Timberlanes but also by a series of brief histories, interspersed through the book, of the married lives of certain selected citizens. Some are funny, some are touching, some are implausible or superficial. But the general effect is successful. These sketches build up the community and serve to set the Timberlanes off. Nor can it nowadays be said of Lewis—as Sherwood Anderson used to do—that he does not see inside his characters and appreciate their human merits. He does not slight their commonness and ugliness any more than he did in 'Main Street,' but Grand Republic, Minnesota, is a place in which one can imagine living, not, like Main Street, a circle of Hell." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 21:98 O 13 '45 2250w

"Though 'Cass Timberlane' has all of this novelist's faults—he creates types rather than individuals and his people have his interest only and not his sympathy—it is an ably written book. . . As always he is satirical, and we, as always, are in the quandary of not knowing exactly when he is conscious of his own satire or its objective and when he is merely bamboozling himself or his personages are bamboozling themselves. . . It is hard to believe that it represents any characteristic American life. It has, however, helped to explain two things which have puzzled this reviewer: one, why the position of women in America is really the worst in any Western country, and secondly, why there is practically no love poetry in American literature." M. M. Colum

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:8 O 6 '45 1900w

"The novel is certainly not characterized by finesse and there is no pretense at overtones

LEWIS, SINCLAIR—Continued
in subtlety. It is lustily vigorous. Peculiarly, many of the conversations are artificial and stilted, but the complete picture is formidably real. Although Lewisites may call it heretical, 'Cass Timberlane' is the first really good novel Sinclair Lewis has written since 'Dodsworth' primarily because once again he is writing about the kind of people he enjoys, even as he derides them, and not using animated dummies as media for his invective satire." L. S. Munn
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 950w

"As fiction, Cass Timberlane is several cuts above Anne Vickers, a good many more cuts below Dodsworth. It is of special interest as Novelist Lewis' first try at a love story uncluttered with large social concerns, as an indication that the Scourge of Sauk Centre is moving toward a reconciliation with his origins, for his unusual preoccupation with sex. Cass Timberlane will add little if anything to Lewis' literary stature."
Time 46:100 O 8 '45 3900w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Weekly Book Review p1 O 7 '45 1550w

"The reason little concern is aroused in the reader is not that such a familiar triangle story does not deal with an important human problem but that Cass and his bride are not well rendered individuals. They are types, and stiff ones. And the score of subordinate characters whose dreadful marriages Mr. Lewis explores are only grotesque and spiteful caricatures. There is rage and scorn, good dialogue, and close observation of American mores in this book, but there is no true creative writing." Orville Prescott
— + Yale R n s 35:381 winter '46 350w

LEWISOHN, SAM ADOLPH. Human leadership in industry; the challenge of tomorrow. 112p $2 Harper

331.1 Industrial relations. Employment management 45-9536

"A progressive industrialist outlines the challenge which personnel, and especially labor relations will represent to management in the coming years. A new attitude on the part of management, which is already partly developed, is a major necessity, as well as new types of training to meet the human problems arising out of an advanced industrial system. Priority of human considerations over financial ones he believes will serve both aims in bringing about expanded production—the key to continued democracy." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 42:105 D 1 '45

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins
Commonweal 43:315 Ja 4 '46 550w

"An encouraging and wise statement, with constructive thoughts for labor and management."
+ Kirkus 13:392 S 1 '45 230w

"He recognizes the responsibility of management to provide a human leadership with the wish that every production manager could be a skilled and liberal organizer." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 80w

"Mr Lewisohn's brief book would serve well as a supplementary text in training-courses built on the concept that education in sympathetic understanding of human relationships in industry is a key prerequisite for progressive leadership in the industrial field." R. S. Ullery
+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 26 '45 420w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Careers in the steel industry. 191p il $2.50 Dutton

672 Steel industry and trade. Occupations 45-1836

"This account describes in simple terms the processes in making different types and grades of steel such as structural steel, sheet steel, stainless steel and steel tubing. It discusses the work of the laboratory technician and metallurgist, and points out the job requirements and remuneration in the different divisions of the industry. A chapter on postwar housing stresses the opportunity for a selling career in the future business of steel prefabricated homes." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Kirkus 13:203 My 1 '45 120w

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:13 Ja '45

"Readers will find a clear and non-technical presentation from which they can gain a picture of the technical marvels of one of our great industries, and the opportunities it offers for work and reward." Philip Taft
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Je 10 '45 200w

LIBERMAN, SIMON ISAEVICH. Building Lenin's Russia. 228p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

947.084 Russia—Economic policy. Lenin, Nikolai A45-4345

"Simon Liberman, now resident in New York, was, in 1917, a promising young industrialist in the Ukraine, knowledgeable about the timber business. He had been educated in Vienna and was a Marxist and a Menshevik. Yet after the Bolshevik revolution he accepted the leadership of Lenin, and as a Soviet specialist, not as a party member, helped work out the pattern of the first of the soviet trusts, and was engaged with Leonid Krassin in the initiation of trade relations with Great Britain. In these memoirs he gives an intimate picture of Lenin in the difficult days of N. E. P., the new economic policy by which the bourgeoisie were used to develop the economic structure of the Soviet state." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"Granted the limitations which any lawyer familiar with the testimony of partial witnesses will appreciate, the story has historical value and should be added to the other biographic materials from which the history of the revolution is compiled." J. N. Hazard
+ Ann Am Acad 242:176 N '45 400w

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor
Book Week p7 S 2 '45 450w

Booklist 42:182 F 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

Current Hist 9:324 O '45 100w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 140w

"Despite its forbidding title, this is a fascinating, important book. It is at once a personal memoir, an inside story of eight critical years of Soviet life, and an evaluation of Russia today. All three are closely woven into a narrative of restraint and charm, full of new episodes and anecdotes, fair in its judgment of men and events, and often spiced with shrewd humor." Joseph Freeman
+ Nation 161:318 S 29 '45 650w

"The book, because it is a personal story, is as easy to read as a novel, and odd as it may seem, there is a touch of 'Conrad in Search of His Youth' about it. For, on a historic level, this restatement of one Russian's experience combines the faith of youth and the ripeness in conclusion, of a survivor of failure and retreat, fear and many incidents, no doubt censored and yet not alibied." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 23 '45 1550w

LIEB, FREDERICK GEORGE. Connie Mack, grand old man of baseball. 276p il $2.75 Putnam

B or 92 McGillicuddy, Cornelius 45-3796

"Connie Mack is Mr. Baseball, a tradition of the national pastime for almost half a century. His shaggy eyebrows, spindly legs, high starched collar and ever-wagging score card are as closely associated with the dugout as the bats, gloves and baseballs are with the game itself. By his own bootstraps he rose from a boy who earned $3 weekly in a New England cobbler's shop to president, controlling owner and manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, an organization worth $2,000,000 in any teller's cage. He would have known an equivalent success in any endeavor, because he is a smart, shrewd man with vision and initiative. Frederick G. Lieb has set down in chronological order the events in the Mack almanac, from the date of his birth, Dec. 22, 1862 (although he celebrates his birthday on the 23d), until the present moment." N Y Times

"Connie Mack's story, in some respects the story of baseball itself, has been set down for ready reference by Fred G. Lieb and it should be a welcome addition to the libraries of many of those who are interested in the whys and the wherefores of what has come to be known as America's national pastime. . . In Lieb's handling Connie Mack's career is added proof that in baseball, at least, fact is sometimes more interesting than fiction." Warren Brown

+ Book Week p9 My 6 '45 270w

Booklist 41:285 Je 1 '45

Kirkus 13:217 My 15 '45 80w

"For the majority of the sporting world who know much about Connie Mack this biography will serve chiefly to refresh memories of him and of his great players, and of those events in baseball which never become dull no matter how many times they are repeated." Al Horwits

N Y Times p12 My 27 '45 750w

"Mr. Lieb's biography may be somewhat on the side of adulation, but at the same time the very highest praise for Mr. Mack, his achievements and his character, could hardly be considered extravagant."

+ Weekly Book Review p17 Je 17 '45 190w

LIEBER, MRS LILLIAN (ROSANOFF). Einstein theory of relativity; drawings by Hugh Gray Lieber. 324p $3 Farrar

530.1 Relativity (physics) 45-9563

"As in their earlier books, the author [and artist] combine a remarkably lucid text with skilful diagrams and 'funny' drawings that help greatly to illuminate the subject. The text looks like blank verse but is in reality carefully worded prose, broken into word groups designed for swift and easy reading. . . The book is in two parts. The first deals with the special theory by means of which Einstein extended the principle of relativity, long applied to mechanical motion, the electro-magnetic phenomena, and thus laid the foundation for the concept of a four-dimensional space-time continuum. . . The second and larger part of the book deals with Einstein's general theory. In three chapters the meaning of the term 'General Relativity' is set forth, with a statement of what it undertakes to do and what are its basic ideas. Three following chapters introduce the fundamental mathematical ideas that will be needed, and two more 'build up the actual streamlined mathematical machinery—not difficult, but require the kind of care and patience and work that go with learning to to run any new machine.' " Scientific Bk Club R

"Highly imaginative drawings tantalize the reader until he has searched the text for the key to their full enjoyment. Thorough and usually correct explanations of most of the mathematics used are elementary and are accompanied by a wealth of concrete examples and clear diagrams. These and other devices are skillfully fused into a unique art of presentation which does force the reader to learn something (if not everything) about relativity, and which entertains him well during the process. Difficult though their task is, the authors will have succeeded if their readers will tackle seriously some of the suggested reference material." L. R. Wilcox

+ Book Week p4 N 25 '45 420w

"Einstein's theory clearly and accurately presented for the layman." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 40w

"The belief that the Einstein equation had much to do with the research responsible for the construction of atomic bombs is almost as widespread as the knowledge that Uranium 235 is not a telephone number. Never before has there been such a demonstration of the value of abstract theory as the basis for concrete developments far out on the frontiers of science. Many readers will therefore be especially grateful to the Liebers for publishing this extraordinarily comprehensible account of the theory that has had so profound a bearing on all of physics. . . Precisely because it is 'higher education' rather than elementary, some readers will find it too technical for their liking. Certainly not all of it is 'easy reading.' The treatment, though popular, necessarily involves the use of considerable mathematics. But anyone who is willing to invest the necessary thought in its reading will be well rewarded for his effort. For the first time, the Einstein theory of relativity is set forth in such a way that it has real meaning to the person of average intelligence."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 D '45 750w

"Certainly to be commended highly, not only for the ambitious intent, but for the extremely able execution. . . To make my sole criticism of their book, I wish the Liebers had more clearly pointed up [the] relation between mathematics and science." D. D. Miller

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 13 '46 450w

LIED, JONAS. Prospector in Siberia; autobiography [Eng title: Return to happiness]. 317p il maps $3.75 Oxford [18s Macmillan]

B or 92 45-8723

The autobiography of a native of Norway, who at one time became an honored Russian citizen, but who is now once more in his own land. He has been variously an international business man, a sportsman, a pioneer of the commercial enterprise of the Kara Sea route, prospector in Siberia, and Norwegian consul for Siberia. His most successful venture was the building up of river fleets and transport service of the Siberian company, and the development of the Arctic Sea shipping route. Index.

Booklist 42:75 N 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 43:19 O 19 '45 1400w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 1 '43 240w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

N Y Times p3 Ja 6 '46 1000w

New Yorker 21:108 O 13 '45 90w

"Undoubtedly, the best sections in this autobiography deal with the initial journeys through the uncharted Arctic. It's exploration in the grand manner." I. D. W. Talmadge

Sat R of Lit 28:40 N 10 '45 360w

Reviewed by T. K. Derry

Spec 171:270 S 17 '43 450w

"With travel books in the minority at present, excepting, of course, those connected with the war, Jonas Lied's 'Prospector in Siberia' is indeed welcome. Although ostensibly an autobiography, the book is in a large part about Russia and Siberia, with an international flavor given by Mr. Lied's frequent trips to England, Germany, France and the United States." C. K. Bausman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p452 S 18 '43 750w

"He was indifferent to bloodshed and massacre during the early days of revolutionary excess but indignant at any act which affected his business and reduced his profits. His book is interesting only as the story of a man who seemingly would select as business bedfellow any one who had a dollar bill—if that is interesting." P. J. Searles

Weekly Book Review p22 D 2 '45 500w

LILLIE, AMY MORRIS. Nathan, boy of Capernaum; il. by Nedda Walker. 192p $2.50 Dutton

45-2840

Story of the little boy who heard Jesus preach the Sermon on the mount and gave to Him the basket of food which was miraculously increased to food for thousands. Thru the eyes of a child the life of Christ is pictured for other children.

LILLIE, A. M.—Continued

"With beauty and real feeling Amy Morris Lillie has told this story of young Nathan of Capernaum, and in telling it has shown her readers how Jesus might have seemed to a boy of his day." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 Ap 29 '45 230w

Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45

"Parents and teachers can make good use of such a book and many children will like little Nathan."

+ Horn Bk 21:199 My '45 70w

"Reverently done, with plausible incidents closely linked with episodes with which we are familiar, the story takes place against a detailed background of the life of simple people of Capernaum. The children seem real—and their emotional experiences are not over-drawn."

+ Kirkus 13:134 Mr 15 '45 90w

"Well-written and realistic story of Jesus as seen by this little boy. . . Excellent for Sunday School teachers and pupils." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 70:355 Ap 15 '45 70w

"This book is worth fifty Sunday school lessons with a few 'sermon-stories' to boot. I do not recall any story for children in which the figure of Jesus emerges with such radiant simplicity as in this story of a 10-year-old boy who knew Him as healer, teacher and friend. . . This is a wise and sensitive interpretation, beautifully scaled to a child's understanding, and one which illuminates the life of those times." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 25 '45 140w

"All through the action in Capernaum run the voices of the Hebrew children repeating the great poetry of the Old Testament. There is beauty and freshness in the scenes with Nathan's mother and with the shepherds and their flocks. Nedda Walker's drawings have deep feeling. They interpret the text, as her drawings always do. It is a pity that the editors decided to print some in color. It cheapens them and gives them a conventionality that denies their honest realism." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Ap 21 '45 400w

"Sensitive, thoughtful, Nathan is still every bit a boy; religious in theme, the story is yet a realistic picture of the world in which Christ taught." W. E. J.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 200w

Weekly Book Review p6 My 20 '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

LIMBERT, PAUL MOYER. Christian emphasis in Y.M.C.A. program. 147p il pa $1.50 Assn. press

267.31 Young men's Christian associations

45-1270

"A guide to policy and practice for Young Men's Christian Associations with reference to the distinctively Christian emphasis which was the original and primary concern of the 'Y.'" Christian Century

---

Christian Century 61:1386 N 29 '44 40w

"Throughout the book, one is conscious that the author has a broad, diversified knowledge of social and religious literature and methods. His deep understanding of Christianity and its importance to living so permeate the chapters of this book that a great deal of the author's effectiveness is 'caught' through his inspired writing." J. H. Miller

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 850w

LIN, MOU-SHENG. Chungking dialogues. 149p $2 Day

951.04 China—Politics and government

45-2288

"The book takes the form of ten dialogues, between five Chinese representing five different points of view. There is the philosopher with his knowledge of history and the Chinese classics, who is an ardent follower of Confucius and the 'great way'; the professor, who views every subject academically and impersonally; the judge, a conservative, who yearns for yet fears change; the radical student, who argues for political and social upheaval; and a young woman of high school education who, by interposing questions to clarify the discussions, represents the curious and interested 'man in the street.' During the ten meetings of this citizens' forum, they discuss most of China's problems—systems of government, political parties, educational and social reforms, industrialization, the philosophy of Confucius and the political theories of Sun Yat-Sen." Canadian Forum

---

Reviewed by Catherine Baker-Carr

Canadian Forum 25:49 My '45 400w

"A valuable book for a troubled period. Coming to those who regard the confusion in China with apprehension [it] will do much to reassure them and to provide them, as well, with an understanding of contemporary Chinese political thought." Lawrence Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 30 '45 650w

Foreign Affairs 24:170 O '45 20w

Kirkus 13:50 F 1 '45 130w

"American readers will enjoy these discussions, and will feel at home with the little group, which is no different from hundreds of gatherings held in homes in American cities, in town halls in the rural areas, or in dormitories and fraternity houses from Harvard to Pomona. All men are brothers, under the skin, the banyan tree, or the spell of a great ideal." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 8 '45 700w

LIN, YUEH-HWA. Golden wing; a family chronicle. 178p $2 Inst. of Pacific relations

915.1 China—Social life and customs

A45-3658

"[This] is the story of the rise of one family and the decline of another, a true account of village and town life presented in somewhat fictionalized form. The materials deal with prewar China—a China in which central authority figures but little and family ties, responsibilities, and protection much, one in which the plotting of personal enemies, bribery in the law courts, and the raids of bandits and corrupt soldiery can bring disaster as well as the more unavoidable dangers of illness, commercial troubles, and death." Am J Soc

---

"Perhaps what one misses most in the book, since it is intended as a scientific rather than literary work, is a statement of the problem involved. The Introduction by Bruno Lasker only partly remedies this defect. We remain throughout uncertain as to just what Dr. Lin is attempting to convey through the medium of this chronicle—the part played by the family in determining the life of the individual; the rise of a determined man against all the setbacks of evil 'wind and water'; or merely a picture of life as it was and continues to be in a prosperous Chinese village household." M. P. Redfield

+ — Am J Soc 51:168 S '45 550w

Am Soc R 10:454 Je '45 50w

LIN, YU-T'ANG. Vigil of a nation. 262p il map $2.75 Day

951.0425 China—History. World war, 1939— China. China—Description and travel

44-53444

"Having no faith in propaganda, but troubled by reports about the condition of my country, I went for an extended journey, covering seven provinces. I am now writing this record of my experiences and impressions as a Chinese who saw the country from the inside after seven years of war." (Pref) Partial contents: Flight into China; Chungking; The nation's leaders; Ships and machines; To the northwest; Ancient Sian; The "Civil war"; Young China and the war; Paochi and the Japanese prisoners; Old Chengtu; Reflections on democracy and the future. Index.

Reviewed by Krishnalal Shridharani

Book Week p1 Ja 28 '45 1650w

Booklist 41:183 F 15 '45

"'The Vigil of a Nation' is the record of Lin Yutang's second trip into wartime China; it is a book no one else in the world is properly equipped to write. No outsider could understand the Chinese so well; no other Chinese would be permitted to set down so full and frank an analysis of China's major problem—disunity." Ray McPartlin
+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 31 '45 450w

Reviewed by Catherine Baker-Carr
Canadian Forum 25:74 Je '45 550w

"As an interpreter of his people rather than as a political observer, Lin Yutang is at his best. Nostalgically he recalls the past and tries to reconcile the impact of new forces. He prefers the Confucian ethic to the tenets of Marx. His intuitive grasp of human values makes him aware of the problems of young enthusiasts; and at the same time he appreciates the stolid endurance, the unfailing good humor of the four hundred million who have suffered." Dorothy Graham
+ Cath World 160:565 Mr '45 450w

"On such broad issues as Dr. Lin's discussions of democracy in China, one may hope that his heart is in the right place, while confronting impartial and qualified witnesses against his headwork. Many will wish to go along with the author on his spirit of optimism regarding China's future. This reviewer feels that there are facts to justify one's doing so, but that Dr. Lin has done a poor job of marshaling them." R. G.
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 26 '45 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

Current Hist 8:250 Mr '45 120w

Foreign Affairs 24:170 O '45 50w

"A revealing and heartening picture written by the Chinese whose pen has been used both to excoriate—to ridicule—and to elucidate his country and his people. Good reading." + Kirkus 12:488a N 1 '44 240w

"Recommended." A. R. Eaton
+ Library J 70:69 Ja 15 '45 110w

"In 'The Vigil of a Nation' [the author] appears to be trying for a good deal of the time to regain his status as a whimsical character. His account of his journey through seven provinces, with his meditations thereon, has much of the grace, attractive writing and rather arch charm so characteristic of his earlier work. With all its undoubted literary merits, however, this portion of 'The Vigil of a Nation' remains of mild and distinctly secondary concern; a series of amiable little interludes while the author is warming up for another violent foray into politics. It is these political sections that give the work its interest and in them our old friend, the Urbane Philosopher, has disappeared forever." Richard Watts, Jr.
— + New Repub 112:180 F 5 '45 1550w

"Dr. Lin is a pleasant, discursive writer with a sharp eye for human detail on the road and a buoyant enjoyment of travel and talk. . . Dr. Lin's political attitudes do not go very deep. On the one hand, he vigorously defends the current regime and denounces criticism of it as Communist propaganda. On the other hand, he repeats and accepts a good many of the same criticisms. . . Dr. Lin's treatment of the Communist problem does nothing to dispel the general assumption in America that China has no choice of government except between the present Kuomintang regime and the Communists. But it is my impression that most liberals in China do not want a Communist Government, although they are dissatisfied with the present regime." Brooks Atkinson
N Y Times p1 Ja 28 '45 2000w

"This is all worth reading for its first-hand reporting, but it is a little insubstantial and blurred. One feels that the author, who was educated at Harvard, is perhaps half an alien in China. 'I promised myself I would know it really well this time,' he writes of his arrival in Chungking. 'I wanted to lose myself in it, to become a part of it, to talk with its leaders and rub shoulders with its common citizenry, to eat at its restaurants and stroll along its streets, read its newspapers and share in its gossip. Here, if anywhere, I could find the soul of China. . . .' That 'soul of' something or other! He surely learned to deal in such phrases not from Confucius and Lao-tse but from the American magazines." Edmund Wilson
— + New Yorker 20:78 F 3 '45 1500w

Reviewed by H. G. W. Woodhead
Pacific Affairs 18:198 Je '45 420w

"When [the author] sticks to what he saw and felt he does a magnificent job of it. It is when Philosopher Lin leaves off writing of colors and sounds and smells and takes on the job of defending a hurt and misunderstood China . . . that 'The Vigil of a Nation' becomes, to me, regrettably disappointing. For here Dr. Lin steps into a field I believe to be beyond his experience and first-hand knowledge—particularly with respect to the 'civil war' between the Kuomintang and the Chinese Communists." Harrison Forman
— + Sat R of Lit 28:10 F 3 '45 2550w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Survey G 34:133 Ap '45 250w

Time 45:102 Ja 29 '45 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:28 Je '45 240w

"There is a kind of wry satisfaction in this book for Americans who have tried, and failed, to find a single, simple frame of reference with which to understand the Chinese people in the eighth year of their war against our common enemy. For Dr. Lin, after three years away from China and twelve from his native town, has gone home on a visit, and this report of his trip compounds pretty much the same faiths and the same doubts as persist in the minds of most Americans who follow, as best they can from a distance, what goes on in China." Joseph Barnes
Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 28 '45 1200w

"When Dr. Lin is not writing of the Kuomintang, the communists, or the American correspondents, the book makes pleasant, though superficial, reading." Laurence Salisbury
+ — Yale R n s 34:754 summer '45 850w

LINCOLN, EDWIN STODDARD. Industrial electric lamps and lighting. 342p il $3 Essential bks.
621.32 Electric lighting. Electric lamps 45-9156

"Practical book covering direct and alternating motors of all kinds with instructions for installation and operation of all types of motors and generators. Includes fractional horse power motors, electro-plating generators and mechanical drives." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 70w

LINKLATER, ERIC. Crisis in heaven; an Elysian comedy. 103p $1.50 (6s) Macmillan 822 44-7696

A symbolic play dealing with the great of all ages who live together in Elysium and are confronted with the universal problem of how to bring about the rule of Peace.

"Highly recommended."
+ Library J 70:267 Mr 15 '45 30w

"Its main defect is the imperfect blending of wit and idea. One is never certain whether the author intends to be serious or funny. This lack of focus creates distortion in the highlights; but, oddly enough, it is often in the shadows, when the author is not aware that he is performing, that he is most effective." Charles Neider
+ — N Y Times p24 F 18 '45 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p321 Jl 1 '44 300w

"There is no little Shavian wit in the play, and of course, much symbolism, but unfortunately an audience would need a classical education fully to appreciate it." W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p10 F 11 '45 130w

LINKLATER, ERIC. Great ship, and Rabelais replies; two conversations. 64p $1.25 (4s 6d) Macmillan

828 Imaginary conversations A44-1895

Two "conversations" broadcast by the BBC. The first is about British soldiers fighting in the African desert; the second takes place in Elysium, and is a discussion of the value of education in a new world

"Recommended."
+ Library J 70:267 Mr 15 '45 30w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 16 '44 240w

" 'The Great Ship' is . . . painfully pretentious in matter as well as style, and strikes me as the sort of thing which is not congenial to American ears." Charles Neider
N Y Times p24 F 18 '45 160w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p10 F 11 '45 100w

LINTON, RALPH. Cultural background of personality. 157p $1.50 Appleton-Century

301.15 Personality. Culture 45-2477

"These five essays by a professor of Anthropology at Columbia University deal, as the title promises, with the cultural basis of personality. The central concept, that personality is mainly an individual embodiment of culture, is approached from the somewhat different vantage in each of the essays. The first touches on the socialization of the individual by his society into its culture; the second treats of culture itself; the third, 'Society and Culture Participation,' discusses the phenomenon of social differentiation; the fourth is an attempt to describe the nature of personality and to deal with the fact that personality is manifest in social interactions; and in the final essay the role of culture in the formation of personality is assessed." Am Soc R

"These essays are written in simple, clear, and charming prose, and the esthetic satisfaction that the reviewer derived from reading them somewhat offset his disappointment with the contents. The sociologist will find nothing new and a good deal that is far too old in them." R. T. LaPiere
— + Am Soc R 10:445 Je '45 400w

"This small volume is filled with illuminating ideas. It will be of great interest to those who are struggling with the perplexing questions related to culture, society, and personality." G. E. Simpson
+ Ann Am Acad 240:185 Jl '45 500w

Reviewed by Rebecca Pitts
N Y Times p14 Ap 29 '45 450w

LINTON, RALPH, ed. Science of man in the world crisis. 532p $4 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

572 Anthropology. Man. Race problems. Social psychology A44-5537

"Here in this trenchant symposium, edited by Columbia University's distinguished professor of anthropology, are contributions from leading thinkers, whose specialties impinge directly upon the life of man. Directed to scientists, planners, and to the general public 'without whose cooperation no plan can succeed,' it emphasizes those phases of anthropology, sociology, and economic geography that constitute 'a report from the frontiers of research, the outposts of science rather than its settled hinterland.' " Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by R. E. L. Faris
Am J Soc 51:155 S '45 1650w

"All of these discussions are of interest to students of government in that they deal not only with political problems at times, but with the fundamentals of the political process. Of special importance is the general view of the science of man presented by Professor Linton." C. E. Merriam
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:814 Ag '45 800w

"Sociologists will find the chapters dealing with culture of great value. They are all excellent. The theory of learning systematically developed by Dollard is implicit also in the chapters by his Yale colleagues, Kennedy and Murdock. By and large this work seems likely to become something of a landmark. It gives anthropology a new personality from the standpoints of both the academic and the lay publics. If this is the first bid for recognition as the synthesizing science of man, let's have the second as soon as advances permit." F. H. Hankins
+ Am Soc R 10:573 Ag '45 1050w

Reviewed by W. D. Wallis
Ann Am Acad 239:220 My '45 500w

Reviewed by E. B. Zeisler
Book Week p5 Ap 8 '45 450w

Booklist 41:193 Mr 1 '45

"This is good, solid, and essentially unemotional reading on the state of the world about us, written by 21 experts in applying the techniques of science to the solving of human problems." Watson Davis
+ Chem & Eng N 23:2029 N 10 '45 300w

"The intelligent reader who wants one substantial volume to absorb and brood over during a studious vacation may well take this with him—and bring it home for further study and reflection." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 62:813 Jl 11 '45 1450w

"For those interested in that aspect of 'man' which is attainable through the physicochemical laboratories this volume contains an abundance of information in the form of twenty-one 'papers' contributed by as many writers, all of whom are recognized as qualified in the subjects treated by them." T. F. W.
Commonweal 41:450 F 16 '45 500w

Foreign Affairs 23:514 Ap '45 20w

Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 110w

"As a whole the collection falls short of meeting the expectations aroused not only by the ambitious title but by the much more modest editorial preface. If this is the best fruit frontier thinkers can harvest from their recent labors, they should be thanked for their honesty, restraint, and freedom from sensationalism. But one wonders a little why they didn't wait until they could bring back something of special significance." Sidney Hook
Nation 160:280 Mr 10 '45 380w

Reviewed by Alfred Stern
New Repub 112:684 My 14 '45 700w

"Richly documented and yet keenly alert to the ultimate meaning of the task, this brilliant series of papers embodies something genuinely new in scientific thought. These specialists are as concerned with gathering fresh data and arriving at valid insights and precise methods as creative scientists ever are, and each brings to bear upon his theme only the data and techniques with which he is most familiar. It is the goal, the purpose, of their thinking that is new and not its foundations. For in demonstrating the relevance of their special fields to the tragic concrete problems of our era, each has contributed something toward a science which is new—not a 'social' science in the older sense (as if society were a mystic entity beyond man), but a 'science of man,' a science devoted to the meaning of human behavior and its relation to social and cultural change." R. E. Pitts
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 14 '45 900w

Reviewed by W. S. Lynch
Sat R of Lit 28:17 Je 9 '45 800w

Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 Ja '45 1500w

Reviewed by J. G. Leyburn
Social Forces 24:116 O '45 1100w

"This reviewer knows of no other book that brings together the most recent findings and theories in the field of anthropology in such an interesting, clearly-written, informative manner. It should be on the bookshelf of all social studies teachers, social workers, ministers, and others who are dealing with national, racial, religious, and socio-economic problems. The contents of many of the papers should be among the working knowledge of all who are dealing with human problems. It is, on the whole, too difficult for the average high school student to use, but through the teacher it can find a very useful place in the classroom."
+ Social Studies 23:234 My '45 600w

"Addressed to the general reader and, as the title suggests, covering a wide area of the social sciences, these essays in most cases form original and illuminating contributions to the subjects with which they deal."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:16 Je '45 280w

LIPTZIN, SOLOMON. Germany's stepchildren. 298p il $3 Jewish pub.
830.9 German literature. Jewish literature (German) 44-9391

"Mr. Liptzin, who has on numerous occasions written of modern German literature with insight and authority, now surveys the work of Jewish writers who during the century which followed emancipation strove to blend the cultural heritage of ancient Israel with the intellectual and artistic life of Germany. He also considers the broader question of whether assimilation has been proved a dead-end street, or whether the right way will not lead the Jew back to himself and the group, national or religious, to which he is fated to belong." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by D. B. McCown
Am Pol Sci R 39:594 Je '45 230w
Reviewed by Carl Grabo
Book Week p4 F 18 '45 400w

"The book is an able contribution to cultural history and literary criticism and to the understanding of some political and humanitarian issues upon which decisions are yet to be made."
+ Christian Century 61:1449 D 13 '44 210w
Foreign Affairs 23:518 Ap '45 20w

"No thoughtful student of the German problem should miss reading and pondering over this soul-searching book." H. B. Kranz
+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 F 24 '45 800w
Reviewed by W. F. Sollmann
Social Studies 36:182 Ap '45 600w

"This book is addressed to the general reader and to the scholar interested in cultural and religious group tensions."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:42 Mr '45 240w

"There are vacant spaces in Dr. Liptzin's panorama (he does not, for instance, deal with Karl Kraus, as brilliant a pamphleteer as Vienna ever knew), and his discussion of the Jews who adopt Christianity seems a bit myoptic. But Mr. Liptzin has approached his subject with knowledge and intelligent sympathy." G. N. Shuster
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 F 4 '45 950w

LISTER, STEPHEN, pseud. By the waters of Babylon. 252p $2.50 Dodd [8s 6d Davies] 45-5125

An English Riviera hotel keeper recognizes among his guests a former school friend, a wealthy Jew. At a dinner given in his honor David Saloman tells the story of his life: about his birth in the High Atlas mountains, the son of Yusef ben Saloman, known to the French simply as The Jew; of his school days in England; his services in World war I; his disastrous marriage; the loss of the peaceful valley where he had taken refuge; and his later bitter, disillusioned years wandering about Europe.

"What Stephen Lister has to say about the Jew and his experiences in this world is neither new or startling; probably there is nothing new or startling to say any longer. But there is a certain clarity about his novel that makes it of considerable interest. He writes dispassionately about a matter that has always enlisted the passions of its students, one way or another. . . The effect is one of freshness and accuracy, as in an anthropological document. . . Lister tells his story with brisk intelligence, and with an unblinking willingness to describe whatever happens in the simplest terms, which is the best kind of realism." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Je 30 '45 840w

"This is a readable, interesting, thought-provoking presentation of a difficult and important problem." K. J. Cooley
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 330w

"Absorbing and dramatic story." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 19 '45 160w

LITSEY, SARAH SELECMAN (MRS JIM NYE). There was a lady. 253p $2.50 Bobbs 45-7025

In 1913 two people came to live in a small Kentucky town: one was a beautiful mysterious woman, the other a much older man. The town accepted them and gradually Miss Cammy became a town mainstay with her music and her helping hand. Later a tragedy came to Miss Cammy, but that, too, she weathered.

"For most of its length 'There Was a Lady' is finely conceived and well written. At times, with its quiet and persistent foreshadowing of tragedy, it is reminiscent of Thornton Wilder's 'The Woman of Andros.' Indeed, the town's dependence on Miss Cammy resembles the dependency of her 'flock' on Chrysis. But the tragedy when it comes destroys the illusion by its violence, and is in turn negated by a too meticulous recording of what happens afterward." Dorothy Sparks
+ — Book Week p10 Ag 19 '45 500w
Booklist 42:149 Ja 1 '46
Kirkus 13:257 Je 15 '45 180w

"The story is told in a simple and winning style with a Margaret Deland flavor." Barbara Bond
N Y Times p24 Ag 19 '45 230w

"It will not be easy to avoid gagging over the sentimentality of this familiar tale."
— New Yorker 21:67 Ag 18 '45 120w

"The novelist is most successful when her touch is light—in the gay reporting of the absurdities of costume and taboo of a generation ago, in her slightly comic portraits of the Very First Families, in droll accounts of village recitals, chautauquas, and the Bach Circle. Skilfully suggested, too, is the feel of the South—its attitudes and decorums as well as its temperature and languor. In her serious passages, however, Miss Litsey engages somewhat heavily in fine writing, and does not completely shun the melodramatic." R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:32 Ag 25 '45 310w

"In the early chapters the petty arrogance of the town is realistically and often humorously described, but the author—no doubt with the best intentions—slips into caricature." Lisle Bell
+ — Weekly Book Review p22 Ag 26 '45 180w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. Black eye. 224p $2 Doubleday 45-9766

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:382 S 1 '45 80w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 N 4 '45 180w

"Take it or leave it."
Sat R of Lit 28:39 O 20 '45 40w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p23 O 28 '45 100w

LIVINGSTONE, SIR RICHARD WINN. Plato and modern education. 35p 75c Macmillan [1s Cambridge]
370.1 Plato. Education—Aims and objectives 44-7933

"Two aspects of Plato's educational theory are emphasized: his notion that education must be of the whole man, and his insistence that it is more important to imbue the young with correct values than to stuff their heads with facts. Livingstone believes that modern education, to its great hurt, has failed to be Platonic

LIVINGSTONE, R. W.—Continued
in these respects, and he recommends that it look back to the Athenian philosopher for the guidance that it must have, if it is to realize its best potentialities." N Y Times

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 23 '44 750w

"Sir Richard Livingstone's discussion of Plato and Modern Education is in the best British lecturing tradition. The diction is graceful and clear, the tone gracious and authoritative. . . [However] Livingstone makes the familiar mistake of ignoring Plato's politics and viewing only the good things in his educational theory. This is not only unjust to Plato; it is also dangerously misleading to our time." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.
+ — N Y Times p20 F 25 '45 400w

LLOYD, TREVOR. Sky highways, geography from the air; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 61p maps $2.50 Houghton

910 Geography—Juvenile literature. Airways. Aeronautics—Juvenile literature 45-3901

"Problems and advantages of air travel, something of modern cartography, and highlights of geography are described in this hypothetical journey across the world by air—from Washington, D. C. to Natal, across Africa and India to China, and home by way of the arctic. Not an outstanding book, but timely and useful. Copiously illustrated with maps, charts, diagrams, and colorful pictures. Grades 5-8." Booklist

"In 'Sky Highways' Trevor Lloyd answers a good many questions which young people ask about air travel, and does it very readably."
+ Book Week p19 Je 3 '45 180w
Booklist 41:273 My 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45
Horn Bk 21:194 My '45 80w

"Well-written, with careful avoidance of the pitfalls of adult terminology."
+ Kirkus 13:181 Ap 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson
Library J 70:492 My 15 '45 70w
Sat R of Lit 28:38 Je 16 '45 330w

"Under different treatment this would have been a textbook such as children read because they must, whereas it is now the kind of book children read because they want to and vividly remember because it has told them something they wanted to know."
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 20 '45 230w
Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

LOBAUGH, ELMA K. She never reached the top. 192p $2 Doubleday 45-7800

Mystery story.

"For straight story telling, with a mystery slant, this is a honey. For the audience that likes skilled deduction, it will leave much to be desired."
+ — Kirkus 13:261 Je 15 '45 100w

"There is no detective in this story, but there is mystery in full measure and almost unbearable suspense." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p28 Ag 19 '45 130w

"Time killer."
Sat R Lit 28:30 S 8 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p17 Ag 19 '45 80w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Payoff for the banker. 214p $2 Lippincott 45-3115

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p6 Ap 15 '45 90w
Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 My '45

"Tops."
+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 25 '45 50w

"Good one in this series."
+ Kirkus 13:44 F 1 '45 40w

"The Norths come through in fine style, as does their pal, Lieutenant Bill Weigand, detective of parts and regular guy. A literate and engaging job."
+ New Repub 112:598 Ap 30 '45 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Ap 8 '45 180w

"One of the funniest and most satisfactory mysteries in this excellent series."
+ New Yorker 21:92 Ap 7 '45 80w

"Northian wit and humor so scatterbrained and infectious that certain insufficiencies of plot are easily overlooked. Agreeable."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 Ap 21 '45 40w

"Once again Pam and Gerald North lend their familiar charm to an entertaining murder tale, but this time all the credit for a tricky answer goes to the third musketeer, Detective Bill Weigand." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p19 Ap 8 '45 130w

LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD, and ESTABROOKS, GEORGE HOBEN. Death in the mind. 251p $2.50 Dutton 45-6321

Spy story describing the machinations of the Nazis in this country in 1942. A wave of treachery in high places brings two young British secret service agents to this country, where they uncover a particularly fiendish device.

Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45
Kirkus 13:277 Jl 1 '45 150w

"A thrilling, if incredible, tale. However, Mr. Lockridge's collaborator, Professor Estabrooks of Colgate University, offers documentary evidence that hypnotism could be used in this way, and who are we to argue this point with a Professor of Psychology?" Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p8 S 9 '45 290w

"Exciting and well written, and if you feel like quibbling about the basic trick, just remember that Mr. Estabrooks is an authority in his field."
+ New Yorker 21:64 Ag 25 '45 100w

"As ingenious a puzzle as has been put together in many a day." R. N. F.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 2 '45 180w

"An unusual espionage tale, with so many foreign agents popping up in disguise that you haven't a chance of keeping them straight. A necessity for spy fanciers and a nice bet for all mysteryites interested in oddities." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p24 Ag 26 '45 180w

LOCKWOOD, MRS MYNA. Lo and behold! pictures by the author. 213p $2 Oxford 45-1873

Mystery story for young readers.

"Without ever letting down her engrossing story pace, Myna Lockwood avoids the pitfalls of most mysteries written for the young and weaves in a good bit of workable philosophy against her charming Cape Cod background." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Ap 15 '45 270w
Booklist 41:241 Ap 15 '45

"Romantic and somewhat sentimental story."
Kirkus 13:110 Mr 1 '45 90w

"Of general interest to girls eleven to fifteen and recommended for church school libraries for its spirit of reverence." Maude Adams
+ Library J 70:416 My 1 '45 70w

"A disappointing story, because the mystery is slight, the action very slow-moving and the plot, at times, unconvincing. Real appeal of the story will be for the romantically inclined, rather than for mystery fans." R. M. Davis
— Library J 70:416 My 1 '45 70w

"The mystery is a pretty flimsy one, but the Cape Cod setting is authentic and the whole makes pleasant reading for the lighter moments of young girls." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 22 '45 120w

"It is a good story, salty and amusing. It provides enough excitement and yet it is very real." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 My 19 '45 300w

"Mysteries for young girls being so in demand, one as lively and well-written as this should be noted." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 5 '45 360w

LOEWENSTEIN, PRINCE HUBERTUS. The Child and the emperor; a legend. 70p $1.50 Macmillan

232.993 Jesus Christ—Fiction 45-1962

This legend tells the story of how Jesus—the Child—then a boy of thirteen, traveled to Rome with his mother's cousin Joseph of Arimathea, and how he met and talked with the Emperor Augustus.

Christian Century 62:521 Ap 25 '45 110w

"When one deals in 'legends' one is free to disregard all ordinary limitations imposed by probabilities and plausibilities, and Horace's prohibition of the deus ex machina has no application. But in this little book of seventy small pages Prince Hubertus offers us a 'legend' which staggers the reader for its boldness in attacking the impossible." T. F. W.
Commonweal 41:572 Mr 23 '45 500w

"A devout but extremely naive bit of fiction."
Kirkus 13:62 F 1 '45 90w

"Prince zu Loewenstein indicates, delicately but powerfully, the contrast between spiritual and temporal power in a colorful and swift-moving story. Recommended." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 70:357 Ap 15 '45 70w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 120w
Wis Lib Bul 41:85 Jl '45

LOEWENSTEIN, PRINCE HUBERTUS. Germans in history. 584p $5 Columbia univ. press

943 Germany—History A46-280

"Author, scion of leading Catholic noble family of Germany, left home in 1933 because of strong anti-Nazi convictions; has been teaching history and international relations as visiting Carnegie professor at many American colleges. . . Prince Loewenstein critically examines the whole German past from Tacitus to Hitler; includes not only political development, but also history of ideas." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

" 'The Germans in History' is excellent and fascinating reading. It could have been good history." David Karno
+ — Book Week p3 Ja 6 '46 400w

"The author has assembled an enormous amount of material to support his case. Some of his material appears irrefutable, though he begs the fundamental question whether good or bad features, significant of a certain nation 600 years ago, are identical with or related to similar features of the same nation today. . . But much of the material the author amassed as evidence in favor of the German nation is, to say the least, open to interpretation sharply differing from his own. And his tendency to plunge into philosophical discursions and speculation on what might have happened if events had taken another turn, does not go well together with the objectivity expected from a serious historical study. . . In the end, one cannot help feeling that Prince Loewenstein's Germans have not much more reality than Richard Wagner's heroes. And how they would behave, if they were to step out of the cover of the books, is a question to be viewed with some apprehension." E. S. P.
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 19 '45 600w

"Present work surpasses earlier books, Tragedy of a Nation, After Hitler's Fall, etc., by far in depth of insight, width of historical perspective and brilliance of analysis. . . Richly documented and excellently written book far superior to most recent treatises on German history. Highly recommended for college and larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 140w

"An erudite, thoughtful, sometimes controversial consideration of Germany's historical position in Europe."
+ New Yorker 21:82 D 22 '45 120w

LOFTS, MRS NORAH (ROBINSON). Jassy. 276p $2.50 Knopf [9s 6d Joseph, M]

45-5092

Novel of early nineteenth century England, in which the strange girl, Jassy, is the central character. The story is told by four narrators, the first being the youth whom Jassy loved all her life. The second is an unhappy middle-aged woman who ran a school for young ladies, where Jassy was advanced from kitchen maid to pupil. The next is by a schoolmate, whose dissolute father owned the erstwhile family estate of the first narrator. The final witness is the dumb serving maid who idolized Jassy, and who committed the crime for which they were both hung.

"In 'Jassy,' we have that most dismal of literary productions—the damp squib, the tour de force that doesn't come off." Russell Maloney
— Book Week p4 Je 24 '45 180w
Booklist 41:322 Jl 1 '45

"Most of the characters are abnormal, and the method of telling the story from three points of view, the boy's, a nymphomaniac's, and an idiot's, is awkward, and the long analyses of emotion unreal and distasteful."
— Cath World 162:188 N '45 120w
Kirkus 13:144 Ap 1 '45 170w

"Colorful and vigorous romance that should appeal to readers of Miss Lofts' stories." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Ruth Schorer
N Y Times p20 Je 17 '45 220w

"Agreeably written, extremely readable novel of bygone days in England. . . The action takes place in Essex in the eighteenth century, but Miss Lofts, who is commendably opposed to the God-wot school of historical fiction, has gone too far in the opposite direction this time, and her middle-aged Lesbians, catty school girls, and, indeed, life in general sound rather startlingly contemporary."
+ New Yorker 21:70 Je 16 '45 180w

"This is one of the most fascinating books I have read in a long time. It is done with consummate artistry, and though its setting is rural England of a hundred years ago it has that spellbinding quality of immediacy which takes the reader into that world and makes him feel that these were people whom he knew, whose lives he saw in all their tragic consequences for each other, interweaving, setting the pattern of inevitable disaster. It is not modern realism, in which the reader identifies himself and his own emotions with the characters, but the realism of romantic novels when the reader is transported and loses himself in the story." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 Ag 11 '45 600w

"Even with its flaws, the novel is unquestionably better than the usual 'historical romance.' " M. M. Blair
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 300w

"Mrs. Lofts's new novel is in the handsome and vigorous strain of romantic narrative that is directed in the first place to keeping the reader's curiosity alive. It is a rather more deliberately contrived piece of story-telling,

LOFTS, NORAH—Continued
perhaps, than is usual with her, less impulsive in invention and with scarcely a trace, incidentally, of the relish for the macabre which she has often shrewdly indulged."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p587 D 2 '44 360w

"It is not easy to convey the essence of this novel, in which so many characters, so many passions and so many elements of drama are interwoven. Miss Lofts has a narrative gift that erases time. In 'Jassy' you lose yourself in a world as real as the one you re-enter when you finish the book." George Conrad
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 10 '45 600w

LOGAN, RAYFORD WHITTINGHAM. The Senate and the Versailles mandate system. 112p $2 Minorities pubs, 1519 Jackson st, N.E, Washington 17, D.C.

321.027 U.S. Congress. Senate. Mandates 45-8821

"Study of the senatorial attitude toward mandates during the battles against Wilson's League and Covenant. . . [The book] summarizes the debates of Senators without annoying quotations, and no search for the materials of special pleading." (Commonweal) The author is head of the history department at Howard university. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 23 '45 90w

"Professor Logan of Howard University, a Harvard-trained historian with substantial volumes to his credit, is superbly qualified to review his subject. This he handles without emotion and few asides which would annoy Jim Crow himself.'" R. J. Purcell
+ Commonweal 43:216 D 7 '45 850w

LOGAN, RAYFORD WHITTINGHAM, ed. What the Negro wants. 352p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

325.26 Negroes 44-47086

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The book has been several years in the making. It was no simple editorial task to find and secure the co-operation of fourteen persons competent to speak for a widely dispersed and culturally diverse population of thirteen million persons. Some of the outstanding Negro social students refused to touch the project. The editorial problem was further complicated by the need to supplement cautiously conservative statements by the inclusion of some more 'radical' statements than could appear in a volume bearing the imprint of a southern university press. . . In the rational world the statement of the Negroes' wants must be faced and it must be answered —and it can be answered only in terms of counter-facts and logical argument. It is for this reason that one regrets that this is not a better book; the Negroes' position still lacks a definitive and masterly statement." E. B. Reuter
Am J Soc 50:317 Ja '45 1800w

"The publication of this volume by one of our leading Southern university presses is especially welcome. The wisdom of including a publisher's preface which disputes the major premises of the rest of the volume is doubtful. However able the argument, its incorporation in a volume of this character suggests a reason for the preface which sustains the position of those the publisher so trenchantly attacks." J. B. Shannon
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:197 F '45 300w

"These essays all cover the same ground, which causes needless repetition. Had the editor assigned separate topics to each writer the cumulative effect might have been more attractive without being one bit less forceful. In any case those interested in one of our most acute post-war problems will find the book instructive, persuasive and fundamentally just. It needs an index to make its abundant facts more available." M. J. McLaughlin
+ — Cath World 161:89 Ap '45 360w

"The essays, apart from the introduction, are all constructive and remarkably irenic." W. H. Melish
+ Churchman 159:18 Je 15 '45 240w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 8 '45 300w

Reviewed by B. J. Stern
Pol Sci Q 60:306 Je '45 600w

"The fourteen essays are of uneven quality but taken together they are a valuable contribution to an understanding of race relations in the United States today." H. C. Brearley
+ — Social Forces 23:469 My '45 550w

"In spite of the inauspicious publisher's send-off, the book is a timely and valuable guide for the general reader in the present critical turn of American race relations. The North Carolina Press, the editor, and the authors are to be congratulated upon a realistic, enlightening public service." Alain Locke
+ Survey 81:95 Mr '45 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p412 S 1 '45 600w

"Despite the different intellectual backgrounds and interests of the contributors, they are in practical agreement that Negroes want equality in American life. The volume documents the intellectual orientation of the majority of educated Negroes toward their status as well as the currents of thought affecting the Negro masses. This book will be especially useful to the intelligent layman."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:43 Mr '45 180w

LOMBROSO, SYLVIA. No time for silence. 166p $2.50 Roy pubs.

940.548245 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Italian 45-10897

"Living in Genoa in 1938, Mrs. Lombroso became a victim of the Italian 'racial campaign.' The pages of her diary describe with sensitiveness and nobility of spirit the tragic years spent as a fugitive. In Florence during the summer of 1944, she gives a memorable account of its liberation. In Rome, later, she sees the accumulated problems of her country brought on by fascism, war and occupation. This record of human experience makes a moving appeal towards a better understanding of Italy and its publication there has already been greeted with enthusiasm. Dorothy Canfield Fisher has written the introduction to the American edition." Library J

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p23 N 18 '45 230w

"A diary of war years in Italy as lived by an Italian Jewess and her husband—for which Dorothy Canfield Fisher claims an 'agonizingly personal reality', but which some readers will find distasteful in its womanly emotionalism."
Kirkus 13:453 O 1 ' 45 150w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 70:1087 N 15 '45 130w

"No particular verbal eloquence or grace of style distinguishes Sylvia Lombroso's writing; but she has an uncanny capacity for absorbing grief and devastation, even where they did not touch her personally. Here is an illuminating record of the immediate thoughts and feelings of a sensitive woman in wartime—who believed that it was not from complicity but from lack of understanding, that no voice was raised in protest in the beginning—when men were still free to act according to the dictates of their conscience." Hilda Lake
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 13 '46 470w

"She is evidently a woman of courage, and her faith in the future is infectious. The translation is not always all it might be."
New Yorker 21:112 N 24 '45 80w

"Dorothy Canfield Fisher, in her introduction to the book, says of the author: 'We will be more deeply human for having shared with her the experience of those years.' Yes, and for having heard in her simple story the authentic voice of modern Italy." A. F. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 D 1 '45 750w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 420w

"More than a personal document, Mrs. Lombroso's book is a testament of faith and courage of people living in dark shadows while the searchlight of a perverted justice played upon innocent victims. She writes of murder and pillage and suicide but she writes, also, of the challenge and fearlessness that kept the hope of freedom alive in many hearts." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p14 D 9 '45 600w

LONDON, KURT. Backgrounds of conflict; ideas and forms in world politics. 487p $5; college ed $3.75 Macmillan

940.5 World politics. World war, 1939—Causes. Fascism. Communism. Democracy 45-4415

Examination of the conflicting political philosophies and principles of the countries which fought in World war II. Analyzed in detail are National socialism in Germany, Fascism in Italy, Japanese Shintoism, Russia communistic totalitarianism and the democratic systems of Great Britain and the United States.

"The writer evidently intended the book to serve as a college text, but its usefulness for this purpose is questionable. That Dr. London knows a great deal and at first hand about his subject is evident on every page, and wise interpretations and observations abound. Most of the material, however, has already been presented more precisely in books under the various disciplines that the author here attempts to bring together into too little space and in too unsystematic form." E. D. Ellis
— + Am Pol Sci R 39:1016 O '45 650w

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder
Ann Am Acad 242:168 N '45 300w

"As Mr. London says in the preface to his book, he does not attempt to present novel theories or startling speculations. He does not draw plans as to how to make the world perfect. All he wants to do is 'to give the reader a grasp of basic ideas dominant in world politics so that he may be better able to judge which convictions should prevail.' This he has done in a remarkably clear and comprehensive manner." E. S. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 21 '45 550w

"With so much writing on totalitarianism and democracy and everything in between there must be many who would welcome a volume in which the essential features of all the conflicting creeds and policies are clearly and concisely set forth. This book is their meat. . . Our only serious question mark comes when Dr. London deals with the Soviet Union." R. M. MacIver
+ — N Y Times p12 O 21 '45 750w

Reviewed by C. G. Haines
Pol Sci Q 60:588 D '45 750w

School & Society 61:351 My 26 '45 80w

Reviewed by J. J. Flynn
Social Studies 37:42 Ja '46 550w

Reviewed by R. S. Ullery
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 700w

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. Death looks down. 191p $2 Ziff-Davis 45-3235

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:45 F 1 '45 110w

"Familiarity with the works of Edgar Allan Poe is not necessary to the appreciation of this story, but it helps." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 1 '45 130w

Sat R of Lit 28:34 Ag 4 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 My 6 '45 90w

LONG, LAURA. Square sails and spice islands; decorations by C. B. Falls. 249p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Perry, Oliver Hazard—Juvenile literature. Perry, Matthew Calbraith—Juvenile literature 45-9041

"Well-written story biographies of the seagoing Perry family, particularly of Oliver Hazard Perry and Matthew Calbraith Perry. A long period of American history is covered by the achievements of these two famous brothers, whose service to their country embraced the Tripolitan War, the War of 1812, the Mexican War and the beginning of relations with Japan, in 1853. Details of Commodore Perry's work in the Orient are now of timely interest." Horn Bk

Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45

"There are a number of books about Oliver Hazard, but the younger brother, Matthew, has less often been the subject of biography for young people, so this revealing life will fill a need." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:354 S '45 100w

"Why is it so difficult to tell a lively story of Oliver Hazard Perry, naval hero? Once again a biographer has tackled the subject with disappointing results. It should have been swell reading; it doesn't come alive, it is inadequately personalized and rather stuffy. . . Factually, it will be useful as American naval history. Public libraries and school libraries mainly."
— + Kirkus 13:299 Jl 1 '45 100w

Reviewed by G. M. Williams
Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 70w

"An excellent biography of Oliver Hazard Perry."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:79 N 10 '45 40w

School & Society 62:239 O 13 '45 20w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Studies 37:44 Ja '46 420w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 550w

Weekly Book Review p14 N 11 '45 400w

LONG, MANNING. Short shrift. 214p $2.50 Duell 45-6212

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 90w

Kirkus 13:261 Je 15 '45 20w

"Save for the rather too lengthy explanation at the end, this is a better-than-average crime puzzle." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p19 Je 17 '45 140w

"Ably plotted, and interspersed with some deft kidding of old Southern customs."
+ New Yorker 21:72 Je 16 '45 90w

"Struck us as her liveliest case." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 1 '45 150w

LONGAKER, JOHN MARK. Ernest Dowson. 282p il $4 Univ. of Pa. press [18s Oxford]

B or 92 Dowson, Ernest Christopher 44-8085

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"This is a work of painstaking scholarship, embracing a number of unpublished letters (among them twelve from Oscar Wilde), intimate revelations from people who knew the poet personally, and a recently discovered portrait. Emerging from these materials, old and new, is an interpretation of the tragic story of Ernest Dowson that will remain definitive in any discernible future. Without sentimentality, Mark Longaker follows a gifted poet through cabmen's shelters and East End dives to the dimly-lighted cafes around les Halles in Paris." J. F. Thorning
+ Cath World 160:569 Mr '45 410w

Reviewed by Richard Jennings
New Statesman & Nation 29:210 Mr 31 '45 1900w

"The author of this long and particular account of Dowson's life and character has taken very great pains. Students will make use of his labours without stint; some of them, also, with small gratitude for a book that is not the sort of book about Dowson that was wanted, not even a good book of the wrong sort. Mr. Longaker is a wordy writer. He will never say what he means in ten words if he can take twenty. He seems to have no sense of style."

LONGAKER, JOHN MARK—Continued
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 31 '45 750w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, DAVID ORMSBEE, pseuds). Stallion road. 303p $2.75 Messner 45-4613

"Life on a California ranch whose owner, an expert veterinarian, gambles on a grand scale, shows prize horses, does some fancy scientific research, and gets involved in a violent love affair." New Yorker

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p3 Je 3 '45 500w

"Lusty, masculine, fast pace."
Kirkus 13:71 F 15 '45 110w

"Students of this author's tropical prose need not be alarmed: though he has added a neigh to his nonny-nonny, his men still talk like Byrons with a dash of Angostura; his women have the same desperate urgency to give their all during the blessed blackouts of drinking and love, love, love. . . . Unfortunately, since Longstreet love produces more fireworks than drama, it tends to grow very tiresome indeed." James MacBride
— N Y Times p21 My 13 '45 150w

"When Mr. Longstreet writes about horses, he seems about as good as anyone else who writes about horses; when he is examining his tough, hard-drinking characters, he is merely smooth and showy."
New Yorker 21:89 My 12 '45 70w

"Stephen Longstreet has written novels much more intricate than this, with layer upon layer of plot richly topped off with the confection of romance, but here is a story which seems to tell itself, every incident set down as it happened while it happens—no stage effects or special lighting. Perhaps this naturalness is due to the fact that it is a novel in which horses are just as much a part of the drama as people, and Mr. Longstreet interprets them with admiration and understanding which is masculine and undistorted by sentimental asides." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 10 '45 360w

LONN, ELLA. Colonial agents of the southern colonies. 438p $5 Univ. of N.C. press 975 Great Britain—Colonies—Administration. Great Britain—Colonies—North America 45-4117

"This study of the men who represented Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, and the Carolinas in London during our colonial period discusses the beginnings of the practice of sending agents, the manner of their selection, their duties, their contacts with the colonial legislatures, their cooperation with British merchants, and their successes and failures." Nation

"This is a definitive work on the colonial agent of the Southern colonies. It is a scholarly production in which sound conclusions are based on facts stated and interpreted without bias. The style is good and the volume is exceptionally free from mistakes. . . The author has in part relieved the tedium of much detail by the use of brief summaries and generalizations. There should have been more of these. Professor Lonn deserves the thanks of all serious students of the period for having added an important chapter to their knowledge of colonial history." O. P. Chitwood
+ Am Hist R 51:133 O '45 600w

Reviewed by Merrill Jensen
Am Pol Sci R 39:827 Ag '45 300w

Reviewed by M. L. Hoch
Ann Am Acad 242:175 N '45 500w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Je 10 '45 40w

"The writing and teaching of colonial history will be enriched by Dr. Lonn's careful research. This book has an excellent index, a very fine bibliography, and extensive footnotes. The author displays to a high degree the qualities of a fine historian—objectivity, logical organization, a clear interesting style, a sure grasp of the material, and excellent synthesis." R. A. Brown
+ Nation 160:702 Je 23 '45 240w

"Its solid virtues are those of painstaking research—in the Public Record Office, in state archives, and in printed collections—and of systematic organization. . . Unfortunately the book is poorly written, and badly printed." V. W. Crane
+ — Pol Sci Q 60:476 S '45 450w

"Because of the minute detail which makes continuous reading difficult, the book is likely to be valued chiefly as a solid block of scholarship. Specialists in the field will probably use the work chiefly for reference."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:41 D '45 320w

LOOK (periodical). Movie lot to beachhead; the motion picture goes to war and prepares for the future; with a preface by Robert St. John. 291p il $3.50 Doubleday 940.5497 World war, 1939—Pictorial works. Moving pictures
45-2070

This book, containing a large collection of movie "stills" with a small amount of text, tells the story of what Hollywood people—actors and camera men as members of the armed forces or as entertainers—have done for the war effort.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock
Book Week p2 My 20 '45 260w

Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 9 '45 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 20w

"In the manner of publicity this volume is uncritical. It looks and reads much like the articles (with picture layouts) in fan magazines. The editors suggest by their comments that they were rapt in admiration and awe." Bosley Crowther
N Y Times p12 Ap 15 '45 500w

Reviewed by Abel Green
Sat R of Lit 28:24 My 19 '45 1400w

Theatre Arts 29:382 Je '45 280w

"Possibly the editors of 'Movie Lot to Beachhead' did not expect their claims to be taken too seriously. Evidently they were not thinking very clearly. . . Let us thank them, nevertheless, for the admirable tribute they pay to the combat photographers, to the men and officers of the armed services who have so ably pressed motion pictures into the service of public information and education and for the splendid illustrations which accompany it." Iris Barry
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 15 '45 800w

LOOK (periodical). My favorite war story; comp. by the editors of Look. (Whittlesey house publication) 155p il $2.50 McGraw 940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscenses, etc.
45-8559

This volume contains "34 dramatic tales of gallantry, of intrigue, of violence and espionage from the pages of Look Magazine, each told by a famous war correspondent or writer-soldier, and chosen by him as the most engrossing of all the war stories he has encountered."

"The editors have seen to it that every theater of combat is represented. There is material here to fit the reader's every mood." W. F. M.
Book Week p2 O 21 '45 70w

"Each of thirty-four war correspondents, including many of those best known to newspaper readers and radio listeners, has contributed to this book his best anecdote of the war. It sounds like a good idea, but it doesn't work out very well. The writers were limited to a thousand words, more or less, and in that space you cannot say much unless you have a knack for that peculiar creation known as the short-short."
Weekly Book Review p24 N 18 '45 130w

LOOS, MARY, and DURANTY, WALTER. Return to the vineyard. 243p $2.50 Doubleday 45-35014

Post-war Europe in a grape growing region is the scene of this novel. It describes the return of a group of peasants to their ruined village, where they take up their residence in the caves once used for storing wine. Little by little they restore the land to its former fertile state and embark on the perilous adventure of returning to normal life.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 F 25 '45 360w

Booklist 41:197 Mr 1 '45

"Some of the force inherent in the material is lost because of over-simplification. . . It is difficult to be unmoved by this forecast of readjustment and it is difficult, too, not to be critical about the writing of the story. As an intellectual adventure into the future it is arresting and compelling, a must for the thoughtful student of what will happen the day after tomorrow." E. W. W.
+ — Boston Globe p15 F 28 '45 300w

Kirkus 12:548 D 15 '44 180w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:284 Mr 10 '45 280w

"It is astonishing that a man famous for the shrewdness and candor of his observations as a foreign correspondent should have written a story at once so crude and sentimental in style and so completely lacking in probability. The resettlement of Europe will not be the simple, joyous homecoming to old certainties that this novel predicts." E. B. B.
— N Y Times p6 F 11 '45 500w

New Yorker 20:83 F 10 '45 120w

Time 45:100 F 19 '45 100w

"Because it is basically the story of a community, 'Return to the Vineyard' moves from character to character from a fixed point which makes it difficult for the reader to lose himself in the emotions of any particular figure. On a minor scale, the narrative is a sort of panorama of loves and hates and shared sorrows, with the fate of the long-neglected vines at the root of everything." George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p8 F 18 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:47 Ap '45

LORD, CLIFFORD LEE, and LORD, MRS ELIZABETH SNIFFEN (HUBBARD). Historical atlas of the United States. 253p il maps $3 Holt
911 U.S.—Maps. U.S.—Historical geography
44-999

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"A study of the 317 maps in this volume tends to substantiate the authors' claim that its scope is unusually broad and that the book is therefore particularly well adapted to serve the purposes of the progressive teacher of American history. In addition to the usual maps illustrating the settlement of the United States, its wars and territorial expansion, the atlas contains a great many which furnish a progressive account of political, social, and economic trends. . . This second printing of the Historical Atlas of the United States corrects many of the errors in the first printing which appeared early in 1944. Words formerly misspelled are spelled correctly; more accurate and truly descriptive titles are selected for some maps. . . The value of the atlas is enhanced by a good table of contents and a thorough index. . . To summarize, the most valuable characteristic of this atlas is its breadth of scope, while its chief defects are a certain lack of clarity in many of its maps and inaccuracy in detail. However, since it contains much material hitherto not available in any school atlas and is moderately priced, the second printing of the Historical Atlas of the United States is recommended for school and college libraries and for personal use."
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:27 Ap '45 600w

LORING, MRS EMILIE (BAKER). Beyond the sound of guns. 279p $2 Little 45-9738

This love story of a Boston girl who goes West to help her brother manage a ranch, is complicated by a rival or two, by war in the background and cattle rustlers in the foreground, by escaped Nazi war prisoners and wounded soldiers home from the front.

Booklist 42:150 Ja 1 '46

"Despite multiplicity of plot threads, the story is often dull, repetitious—stilted dialogue—superficial characterization—nothing to redeem it."
— Kirkus 13:380 S 1 '45 90w

"If it were better written 'Beyond the Sound of Guns' would not be too bad as escape reading. But Mrs. Loring has several trying habits which bring you out of the story with a jolt. The worst of these is the way her characters have of describing settings in what is supposed to be casual conversation; it makes most of them sound like interior decorators. When she forgets about being informative and gets a couple of catty women going at each other, she has fun, and so do her readers." M. W. Gibbons
— + N Y Times p16 N 18 '45 280w

"Agreeable blend of romance, suspense and pleasant people." D. B. B.
Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 100w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p18 N 18 '45 230w

LORWIN, LEWIS LEVITZKI. Time for planning; a social-economic theory and program for the twentieth century. 273p $3 Harper
338.91 U.S.—Economic policy. Economic policy
45-2674

Gives the history and philosophy of planning and discusses the need for it in postwar America. The author, who is the "founder of the National Economic and Social Planning Association which has more recently become the National Planning Association . . . was for ten years a member of the staff of the Brookings Institution; he was for four and a half years economic advisor in the International Labour Office in Geneva, and more recently economic consultant to the National Resources Planning Board." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by J. M. Gaus
Am Pol Sci R 39:1022 O '45 650w

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian
Ann Am Acad 241:191 S '45 450w

Reviewed by C. E. Merriam
Book Week p4 Ap 1 '45 380w

Booklist 41:282 Je 1 '45

"Probably no subject is of deeper importance at the present time than the philosophy and practice of planning, for unless democracy can organize a philosophy and the instruments of systematic planning, the future is dark. Drifting means disaster. If we can do nothing but drift, the rapids are below us. Hence a competent and sensible treatise such as Dr. Lorwin's is of inestimable value to those concerned with the formation of future democratic philosophy, plans and policy." C. E. Merriam
+ Christian Century 62:789 Jl 4 '45 850w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 29 '45 500w

Foreign Affairs 24:160 O '45 50w

Kirkus 12:559 D 15 '44 170w

Management R 34:157 Ap '45 60w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart
Nation 160:548 My 12 '45 450w

LORWIN, L. L.—Continued
"With the exception of three chapters, these studies have already been published during recent years. However, the writer draws his material more closely together and undertakes to lay down a social and economic program for the twentieth century. When reactionary writers of the type of Hayek and von Mises are carrying on reckless and indiscriminate propaganda against democratic planning in the Western world, this volume provides a balanced and useful presentation of a widely different philosophy, much saner, far sounder and much more effective both in method and result." C. E. Merriam
+ New Repub 112:562 Ap 23 '45 900w

"The general reader as well as the professional planner will find the book a contribution to a critically important subject."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:24 D '45 320w
Wis Lib Bul 41:81 Jl '45

LOTHAR, ERNST. The door opens; il. by Garth Williams. 188p $2 Doubleday
838 Vienna—Social life and customs
45-10129

In a series of delicately related episodes the author describes the scenes of his own little daughters' childhood, while they were growing up in pre-Anschluss Vienna.

"Ernst Lothar calls his book 'A little memorandum of first steps on the road.' They are happy and familiar steps, recorded with love, and there is no reader who will not find here a treasure piece of childhood and of the children of his heart." Dorothy Hillyer
+ Atlantic 177:161 Ja '46 300w

"Lothar, one of the earliest of the anti-Nazis, has never been more appealing than in this classic of childhood. Any parent who believes in God and charm will love it." Marion Strobel
+ Book Week p9 N 4 '45 400w
Booklist 42:161 Ja 15 '46

"Fragile, but not precious, these are quietly gentle sketches in which the adult delight in childish responses is disarming."
+ Kirkus 13:390 S 1 '45 150w

"Combining humor and pathos with an indescribable tenderness that isn't mere nostalgia (since it doesn't look on the past with finality), Mr. Lothar has more than captured the mood of childhood. Poignantly, he has made it a symbol of a world that, untouched by sophistication, could not see the tragedy that lay ahead." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p8 N 25 '45 360w

"A series of perceptively told incidents. . . There is something almost unbearably sad in this record of happy childhood in Vienna in the days when it took little effort to be happy."
+ New Yorker 21:101 N 3 '45 70w

" 'The Door Opens' is a delicate book, told with humor and humanness, but it cannot make claims as literature. It is an intimate book which will be enjoyed by parents though it comes from a world which has ceased to exist, and it is too sketchy and light to be compared with the author's more serious works." H. B. Kranz
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:14 N 17 '45 400w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p2 N 4 '45 500w

LOTHAR, ERNST. The prisoner; tr. from the German by James A. Galston. 308p $2.75 Doubleday
45-35080

A German exile, a teacher of literature in an American college, is asked to talk with a young German prisoner-of-war in a nearby camp. The prologue of this story tells of the professor's acquiescence to the request, but the main part of the novel tells the long story of the young German's youth in Vienna, of how he was "re-educated" into Hitler-jugend beliefs and how he eventually lost his faith in those false gods.

"Lothar writes with the cool, hard determination of a literary commando. His hatred is a clear bright flame. He has fashioned a weapon to help us destroy the enemy in our midst." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 My 13 '45 270w
Booklist 41:287 Je 1 '45

"There is admirable restraint shown by Mr. Lothar in writing about a subject which must be acutely important to him. The terror of Nazism in American prisoner of war camps is the more horrible because it comes against a pastoral background of Summer sun and mown grass and American college undergraduates. Thoughtful reading for everyone."
+ Boston Globe p15 My 2 '45 130w
Cath World 161:282 Je '45 130w

"As a novel, 'The Prisoner' is a piece of solid craftsmanship. It is told with the right amount of suspense; its hero is plausible; the psychological, as well as the physical landscape is drawn true to facts, and the story's two main themes—a Hitler Youth's moral awakening and the eternal conflict between justice and expediency—are skillfully interwoven." E. S. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 17 '45 550w

"There are adventure and romance for the less serious readers and an interesting study of young Germans for all our young people." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 21:367 S '45 90w

"There's an authentic feel to the story—a story doubtless repeated many times in these days—a story that leaves no shred of sympathy for Naziism while at the same time showing that its victims include many within its own ranks. . . A holding story, obliquely told."
+ Kirkus 13:112 Mr 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p6 Ap 29 '45 310w

"As a novel, this account of the spiritual unmaking of a Nazi is nothing remarkable, but as a record of the easy life of German prisoners of war in this country and their extraordinarily well-organized political activities inside the camps, it will be absorbing reading for Americans. Herr Lothar is a solid novelist, rather uncompromisingly serious, and it is to be presumed that he knows what he is talking about."
+ New Yorker 21:81 Ap 28 '45 80w

"In all his work, comprising a large number of novels, essays, feuilletons, etc., Mr. Lothar displays those famous qualities which are characteristic of the Viennese school of writing—that 'French variety of German language literature' as one of its witty members called it. His newest novel is no exception. It sparkles with the charm of a natural storyteller. . . Readers of 'The Prisoner' will particularly enjoy Mr. Lothar's art of sketching, with a few words, the beauty of an Austrian landscape, or of a sunrise in Colorado, and of conveying with a similar economy of artistic means the atmosphere of a Viennese middle-class home or an American college campus. The translation, by Mr. Galston, is a good, competent job." F. C. Weiskopf
+ Sat R of Lit 28:25 My 12 '45 650w

Reviewed by Margaret Cobb
Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 480w
Time 45:100 Ap 30 '45 40w

"The elements of psychology involved are comparatively simple and are drawn directly, almost bluntly, but this does not lessen the significance of the theme of the boy's infliction and its cure. . . There's some rather pertinent criticism of our own treatment of war prisoners, too. . . Above all, however, 'The Prisoner' is an instructive account, executed with heavy German precision, of the illness of Nazism and one of its remedies." Colby Walworth
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 6 '45 500w

LOVECRAFT, HOWARD PHILLIPS. Marginalia; collected by August Derleth and Donald Wandrei. 377p $3 Arkham house 818
45-1637

Early writings and some revisions by a writer of weird stories who died in 1937. The book also contains some essays; photographs of the author and his friends and his house; and tributes from about fifteen of his admirers.

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber
N Y Times p16 F 25 '45 500w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 21:100 N 24 '45 430w

"For horror addicts."
Sat R of Lit 28:27 F 10 '45 40w

" 'Marginalia' should find its best audience among those who have read and liked the previously published work of an author whose output has been called almost everything, from sheer genius to rubbish." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 F 11 '45 140w

LOVECRAFT, HOWARD PHILLIPS, and DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Lurker at the threshold. 196p $2.50 Arkham house 46-439

"Malign beings from the Outside, that is to say from Interstellar Spaces or, more probably, from the Fourth Dimension, inhabit this tale of sorcery and incantation and horror. These beings are able to enter our world only when the door is opened by persons who summon them by performing certain secret rites and uttering certain mystic words. The words are uttered and the beings invade our world. This book was begun by the late H. P. Lovecraft and completed from the author's notes by August Derleth." N Y Times

"The manner of the tale is dry and Lapham's ultimate lecture, while careful, learned argument, is overwhelming. It is generally true that tales of the supernatural are more effective in a little than a large space. 'The Lurker at the Threshold,' mixing a good deal of reasoning with its horrors, tends to minimize its own effectiveness as a tale of terror. It will be read with admiration by students of the genre but the general reader will be happier (first, at least) with Lovecraft's shorter stories." James Sandoe
Book Week p2 N 18 '45 270w

"It may scare you out of a year's growth, but you will not readily put it down." I. A.
N Y Times p17 D 16 '45 110w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 21:100 N 24 '45 430w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p24 D 9 '45 250w

LOVELACE, MAUD (HART) (MRS D. W. LOVELACE). Heaven to Betsy; a Betsy-Tacy high school story; il. by Vera Neville. 268p $2 Crowell 45-9806

Continues the chronicle of Betsy and Tacy, those inseparable friends. The time is 1906 and they are now freshmen at the Deep Valley high school.

Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45
Kirkus 13:338 Ag 1 '45 60w

"Plenty of fun, jolly parties, school, church and home activities, with touch of young romance, make a wholesome, gay story for girls; the fifth book in Betsy-Tacy Tib series. Rather uneven in writing." E. M. Gordon
Library J 70:894 O 1 '45 70w

"Here are all the gay, deliciously silly days of freshman year, brightly recaptured and some more earnest moods, too." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p12 N 25 '45 130w

LOVERIDGE, ARTHUR. Reptiles of the Pacific world. (Pacific world ser) 259p il $3 Macmillan 598.1 Reptiles 45-9103

"Descriptions of the families and species of reptiles and amphibians of the Pacific area done in as informal a manner as the scientific nature of the subject will permit, for the author obviously has a warm affection for his field of study. Eight chapters are devoted to as many general types of reptiles followed by a more general discussion of their usefulness and the need for preservation, how to treat snake bite, and the mechanical details of collecting live specimens and shipping them." Booklist

Booklist 42:71 N 1 '45
Current Hist 9:548 D '45 10w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ag '45 140w

LOVERIDGE, GEORGE. No one's kindness. 273p $2.50 Appleton-Century
45-5352

In 1918 Anna Thatcher, a spinster of forty, married her dead sister's husband, a marriage of convenience for there were two little girls to bring up, but also a marriage of affectionate regard. Things promised well but in a few years Anna was left a widow, with three children (one her own) to raise and from then on things went badly for her.

"I found this, I confess, a story of unrelieved drabness and mediocrity."
— Kirkus 13:143 Ap 1 '45 210w

Reviewed by J. L. Ross
Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 40w

"As inept and unreal as a bad movie, this picture of a stepmother's struggle against overwhelming odds never comes to life. The story of middleaged Anna Barnes, who married her dead sister's husband, fails to move you because the author lacks the skill and technique to make the material real or compelling." Andrea Parke
— N Y Times p13 Jl 8 '45 90w

"We are told the family history for twenty-five years with earnest exactitude, but what it signifies to the author is never quite conveyed to the reader." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p14 Je 3 '45 130w

LOWRY, HOMAR HIRAM, ed. See National research council. Chemistry of coal utilization

LOWY, SAMUEL. New directions in psychology: toward individual happiness and social progress; introd. by Herbert Read. 194p $3 Emerson 301.15 Social psychology. Psychoanalysis
45-9684

The author, a psychiatrist with experience both on the continent and in England, discusses ways in which the increasing knowledge of man's emotional and mental characteristics can be employed to improve his social relationships. Among others there are chapters on: Children and parents; Marriage; The government and the citizen; The stranger and his environment; Religion and churches. Index.

"The book is more a collection of essays on not too related topics than the presentation of a systematic point of view. It claims to be 'eclectic and dynamic.' It undoubtedly is, but it achieves this at the expense of clarity and conciseness." W. E. Henry
Book Week p8 O 21 '45 450w

"The sources of Dr. Lowy's thinking are admittedly eclectic; he uses with equal approval Freud, Stekel, Adler, Fromm, Horney, and Mannheim. He is closest, however, to the sociological, anti-instinctivist school represented by the last three, though he has neither the historical grasp of Fromm and Mannheim nor the lucidity of Horney. His style is laborious and repetitious. Sentences that open promisingly too often close on truisms and commonplaces." Nathan Glick
Nation 161:527 N 17 '45 480w

Reviewed by B. D. Lewin
Sat R of Lit 28:29 D 15 '45 130w

LUCAS, EDWARD D. Logic and reason in Christianity; a brief by a lawyer. 95p $1 Revell
239 Christianity—Evidences 45-5113

"The author, a Virginia lawyer who practices before the highest courts in his state and before the United States Supreme Court, puts the arguments for immortality, the essential credibility of the Bible, and the doc-

LUCAS, EDWARD D.—Continued
trines of atonement and redemption into fresh phraseology by approaching them from the point of view of a lawyer concerned with weighing evidence and reaching a reasonable probability." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:838 Jl 18 '45 70w

"Much of the book is a rather obsolete refutation of Paine's Age of Reason. The 'brief' will hardly convince anyone who is not already quite sure of his faith, and, in the opinion of the reviewer, will be of no great service to them."
Churchman 159:15 S 1 '45 90w

LUCAS, ERIC. Swamp Fox brigade; adventures with General Francis Marion's guerrillas; il. by Julian Brazelton. 128p $1.85 Int. pubs.
45-9571

Story for grades four to eight, describing the adventures of General Francis Marion and his men fighting in the Carolinas during the last years of the Revolution.

Booklist 42:113 D 1 '45

"Vibrant short episodes provide healthy suspense and conflict. Excellent school and library material—good gift values."
+ Kirkus 13:400 S 1 '45 110w

"Stirring, fast-moving, historically correct picture of a brave band of patriots. Tone is definitely patriotic, but not overpoweringly so. Its theme of 'liberty or death' is, of course, timely. . . Characterization and atmosphere are good. Recommended for fourth to eighth graders." R. M. Hadlow
+ Library J 70:1027 N 1 '45 80w

LUCAS, JANNETTE MAY. Indian harvest; wild food plants of America; il. by Helene Carter. 118p $2 Lippincott

581.632 Botany, Economic—Juvenile literature 45-8162

Facts and fables about the early foods in America, where they were found and how prepared by the Indians and the early settlers. Seasonal arrangement. Suggestions for further reading but no index. Grade six and higher grades.

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:463 N '45 100w

Kirkus 13:398 S 1 '45 130w

"Recommended as worthwhile but not essential for purchase." G. E. Joline
+ Library J 70:1093 N 15 '45 80w

"Fascinating volume. . . Full of odd lore, generously illustrated with Helene Carter's fine drawings, this is a provocative book for the nature-lover, and, in a world not too sure of its food supply, a comforting one." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p35 S 30 '45 130w

Sat R of Lit 28:72 N 10 '45 40w

LUCKHART, MRS MILDRED MADELEINE (CORDELL). Light on our path. il. by Robert A. Cameron. 289p $2.50 Assn. press; Revell

221.95 Bible stories 46-237

A forty weeks curriculum based on Old Testament stories. Intended for any grade above the fourth.

Christian Century 62:1259 N 14 '45 10w

"The book has been thoroughly tested in church schools and its narrative style makes it good for home reading."
+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 23 '45 70w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Moral conquest of Germany. 183p $2 Doubleday

940.5314443 Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 45-4498

"Dr. Ludwig offers a menu of two dishes. The first is a psychological analysis of the German people, for the guidance of victorious Americans in particular. The second is an outline of the treatment which ought, in the author's opinion, be meted out to the survivors of the Third Reich. Both are subjects of tremendous importance, and the fact that neither can now be discussed calmly and dispassionately is just another of the misfortunes resulting from war." Sat R of Lit

"The volume is far from presenting a balanced, scholarly judgment, but rather is a clever piece of political propaganda. Even as such, it may be already out of date, because the crisis of our political and social systems is more and more recognized as a world-wide disease and not a local infection." W. F. Sollmann
Am Pol Sci R 39:1225 D '45 950w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p2 Je 10 '45 310w

Booklist 41:299 Je 15 '45

"Emil Ludwig breaks very little new ground in The Moral Conquest of Germany, but his little book, in its explanation of the background of German militarism, its insistence on taking the German mind out of uniform, and in most of its suggested methods makes a very useful contribution to the solution of a problem which becomes hourly more pressing. Mr. Ludwig rates himself as taking a middle road between those who want to exterminate everything German and the soft peace people." D. M. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 8 '45 550w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 9:46 Jl '45 800w

Foreign Affairs 24:165 O '45 50w

Kirkus 13:103 Mr 1 '45 250w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 160:701 Je 23 '45 450w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 113:196 Ag 13 '45 330w

"Americans will seek instinctively for a figurative interpretation of the title of Emil Ludwig's new book. Whoever does will seek in vain, because Mr. Ludwig is not proposing that we 'save' Germany by any of the traditional techniques of Christian proselyting, but quite literally by a moral conquest through the use of force. The shock of this discovery may be too great for those of us who have been brought up in the pacifist creed of the Genevan faith. . . Mr. Ludwig wrote this book for American readers—military and civilian—and so it is upon them, in terms of their own survival, that he places the practical obligation for preventing a third recurrence 'again in some twenty years'. . . The suggestions are specific, harsh, in no sense brutal—and wholly un-American. . . Clearly Mr. Ludwig does not understand Americans. There is no evidence yet that we, as a nation, would not rather run the risk of another war than behave in the way he outlines—even if we could be convinced that he was right." Elizabeth Simon
N Y Times p3 Je 3 '45 1450w

New Yorker 21:91 My 12 '45 200w

"From one point of view, Mr. Ludwig seems far more detached and scholarly than are most of the writers in his camp. But he suffers from the characteristic inability of the German generally to differ with those who hold other views without resorting to personal abuse. This defect greatly reduces the value of his book, even as similar faults mar the great majority of essays on Nazism by emigré writers." G. N. Shuster
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:12 My 19 '45 650w

"When you finish reading 'The Moral Conquest of Germany,' by Emil Ludwig, you have the impression that at last you are given some understanding of the German mentality. During the war, most emphasis was placed upon the German military, and too little on the German civilian. Mr Ludwig shows that they are essentially the same class; one might almost say that the only distinction is the uniform." Jacques Ducharme
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 550w

"Mr. Ludwig has nothing particularly new to contribute to our knowledge of the German problem, and many of his observations are de cidedly superficial (he declares, for example, that the Germans are a dull and apathetic people because they drink beer instead of wine). But his book is entertainingly written and easy to read." H. B. Parkes

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 Jl 29 '45 450w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Of life and love. 208p $3 Philosophical lib.

177.6 Love 45-4492

A volume of essays written in reminiscent, philosophical moods, by the well-known author of biographies of Lincoln, Beethoven, Cleopatra, etc. The essays are On life; On happiness; and On greatness. A final essay describes a typical day in the author's home in Switzerland.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 My 13 '45 270w

Kirkus 13:198 My 1 '45 130w

"After all his offerings of distinguished biography, Emil Ludwig's 'Of Life and Love' comes to us as a breath of warm air. Not that his adult observations on remembered passion are nearly so vivid or personal as the jacket of his book would indicate. He has simply gathered together a number of impressions and sensations (some of them delightful) and, with incurable tidiness, arranged them around the central figure of Venus. Although much of this material consists of delicate analysis of sex impulses, the flavor of true Erotica is not here. Ecstasy cannot be catalogued, and even in amorous vein, Mr. Ludwig's work suggests impartial, detached research." Isabelle Mallet

N Y Times p16 Je 17 '45 280w

"Mr. Ludwig's prose has a certain man-of-the-world strut, as if he were under the impression that it belongs in a devilish and highly sophisticated book, but this sort of deviltry, and this sort of sophistication, began to wear thin with Arthur Schnitzler and other members of the Austrian whipped-cream-with-coffee school."

New Yorker 21:91 My 19 '45 210w

"In his new book Emil Ludwig cannot be said to have added to his literary stature. . . Three things the reviewer found irritating in these essays: The author's repeated use of rather tedious stories to illustrate a point; his occasional smug generalization . . . and his habit of falling now and then into a precious way of writing." C. K. Bausman

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 12 '45 450w

LURTON, DOUGLAS ELLSWORTH. Make the most of your life. (Whittlesey house publication) 240p $2 McGraw

174 Psychology, Applied. Personality. Success 45-6082

Advice on how to develop a personality that will lead to success, particularly in business or professional life. Illustrated with many anecdotes of successful men. Contains a few "tests" to help self-diagnosis.

"Psychological piffle, not much more advanced than Dale Carnegie, but there is probably still a market for this type of kindergarten counsel."

Kirkus 13:216 My 15 '45 110w

"How to make a success of one's life is an old theme on which many books have been written, but it retains its perennial freshness of appeal, providing it is presented in an up-to-the-minute manner, as it is in 'Make the Most of Your Life.' . . Mr Lurton has had wide experience as a writer, publisher, personnel expert and executive, and his analysis of the principles upon which achievement is based can hardly fail to be helpful to anyone who seriously studies the book and undertakes to follow its advice." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 23 '45 330w

Weekly Book Review p9 Jl 15 '45 150w

LUTZ, ALMA, ed. With love, Jane; letters from American women on the war fronts. 199p $2 Day

940.5315396 World war, 1939-1945—Women's work. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-9687

Collection of letters from American women in various branches of the armed services in World war II. A brief epilog recounts the record of women in America's wars, from the Revolution on.

Reviewed by Sylvia Crosby

Book Week p4 Ja 6 '46 230w

Booklist 42:107 D 1 '45

Kirkus 13:411 S 15 '45 120w

"This book is for everyone who hopes to remember the lessons of war." Lucy Greenbaum

+ N Y Times p18 N 18 '45 600w

"The book will appeal to thousands who lately have waited anxiously for just such messages." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 21 '45 480w

Weekly Book Review p16 D 9 '45 130w

LUTZ, FRIEDRICH AUGUST. Corporate cash balances, 1914-43; manufacturing and trade. 132p $3 Nat. bur. of economic research

658.15 Corporations—Finance 45-3865

"Dr. Lutz traces the behavior of cash balances of business enterprises over the three decades, 1914-43; analyzes the reasons for their behavior; and discusses some of the implications of the present cash balance position of corporations. The analysis attempts to answer such questions as: Does the behavior of corporate cash balances over the period 1919-39 show a definite pattern? If so, what factors determined this pattern? How did corporate cash balances behave during the period of World War I? What influence has World war II had on the movement of cash balances?" Management R

Management R 34:157 Ap '45 90w

"The book is of primary interest to specialists in corporation finance and monetary theory, but of interest also to the general reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:24 D '45 320w

LUTZ, HARLEY LEIST. Guideposts to a free economy. 206p $2 McGraw

336.73 Finance—U.S. U.S.—Economic policy 45-7425

"A series of essays on enterprise and government finance." (Subtitle) The author is professor of public finance, at Princeton university. Partial contents: The national income; The private enterprise system; Who bears the burden of business taxes?; Untaxing business; Government competition; Progressive taxation; The man with a million-dollar income; The small income and the sales tax; The Treasury's case against the sales tax; Debt, taxation, and functional finance; Social security; Government and unemployment; Postwar budgets and taxes; A short cut to serfdom.

"If this book were publicized as Hayek's was, it would receive equal acclaim—and criticism."

Christian Century 62:1321 N 28 '45 80w

"Professor Lutz has written such a book as will give true liberals no end of satisfaction and cause the national planners acute anguish. For there is no doubt whatever that Dr. Lutz wields a stout cudgel, and those who decry the institution of private property or who would, for instance, support the proposals of Sir William Beveridge or Senator James Murray's full employment bill, had better look to their armor." G. R. E.

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 3 '45 360w

"It's difficult to comment on this sort of oratory without, in turn, becoming just as sophomoric in your own remarks. Suffice it to say that I, for one, am weary of reading

LUTZ, HARLEY LEIST—Continued
political propaganda under the camouflage of learned academic essays by professors from our better universities. I like my propaganda straight." G. G. Higgins
— Commonweal 43:24 O 19 '45 400w

"As a whole, the essays constitute a vigorous attack on many present government policies."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:25 D '45 220w

LYLE, GUY REDVERS, and others. Administration of the college library. 601p $4.50 Wilson, H.W.

027.7 Libraries, University and college. Library administration 45-35004

"This work has been fashioned with the primary aim of giving the student a simple, logical, and self-contained introduction to all aspects of library administration as they apply to college libraries, and to do this in a manner that would help the student to get a clear picture of college-library work in its entirety and as an integral part of the educational program. It will also be of use to young librarians who are new to their positions." (School & Society) Chapter references. Index.

Booklist 41:163 F 1 '45

"The publication of this volume and its adoption as a text will mark a step forward in the effort of library schools to prepare students for this field of work. . . The book's limitations are not its own but are those of any textbook and any course in administration. The great majority of the students in such a course have had little or no experience with the problems in policy and routines presented and are hardly equipped to discuss them. Only a small minority of those students will, for some years at least, have much responsibility for dealing with the problems of more than one department in the college library. . . But this book will find readers outside the library schools. College librarians will appreciate the twenty-nine tables, many of them presenting for the first time comparable data on comparable institutions, may borrow some of the author's ideas for printed forms for the library program, and are sure to find Lyle's volume a useful reference to current judgment on many a matter of policy." R. W. McEwen
+ — Library Q 15:246 Jl '45 650w

School & Society 61:32 Ja 13 '45 90w

Special Libraries 36:64 F '45

"It will be welcomed by practicing librarians, as well as by students, for the synthesis of useful information heretofore widely scattered in periodicals, and for the observations and interpretation the author is able to contribute from his varied experience in teaching and practicing library administration."
+ U S Qparterly Bkl 1:53 Je '45 240w

LYND, HELEN (MERRELL) (MRS ROBERT STAUGHTON LYND). England in the eighteen-eighties, toward a social basis for freedom. 508p $4.50 Oxford

309.142 Great Britain—Social conditions 45-1520

"Part I describes the economic situation of England in the eighties, traces the currents of ideas and deals with such 'intruding events' as the prolonged depression, the land question and the Irish question. Part II analyzes political parties, labor organizations, religious institutions, educational institutions and revolutionary groups. Mrs. Lynd relies heavily on quotations from contemporary sources, and the whole scholarly apparatus is rather overwhelming. Her pace is deliberate, but she does cover the ground." New Repub

"England in the Eighteen-Eighties is a significant work which must be given the careful attention of every student of late Victorian England." F. H. Herrick
Am Hist R 50:792 Jl '45 900w

Reviewed by S. L. Thrupp
Am J Soc 51:159 S '45 550w

Reviewed by E. P. Chase
Am Pol Sci R 39:591 Je '45 650w

Reviewed by J. P. Pritchett
Am Soc R 10:803 D '45 400w

Reviewed by C. F. Brand
Ann Am Acad 240:157 Jl '45 450w

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p10 F 25 '45 550w

Booklist 41:220 Ap 1 '45

"This is a really excellent book." Gwenyth Grube
+ Canadian Forum 25:121 Ag '45 350w

"An objective and scholarly work." J. H. Fichter
+ Cath World 161:521 S '45 500w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 31 '45 750w

"Solidly interesting material—instructive for those applying its interpretations to the omnipresent apprehension for the future here."
+ Kirkus 12:466 O 1 '44 130w

"In writing this book Mrs. Lynd has obviously mined assiduously a mountainous mass of memoirs, Blue Books, and reports of Royal Commissions, and her labor has been rewarded by many quotable nuggets of pure gold. Better still, she has written so well and organized her material with such skill that her book is as readable as it is scholarly." Keith Hutchison
+ Nation 160:310 Mr 17 '45 480w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks
New Repub 112:301 F 26 '45 1050w

"The author has carried out [her] design with real success: her book is first-class social history. She has complete mastery over her materials; she writes with understanding and felicity; she has capably isolated the dynamic characteristics of the period she is describing." L. M. Hacker
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 18 '45 900w

Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 28:42 N 17 '45 2000w

Reviewed by G. L. Joughin
Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 4 '45 950w

"England in the Eighteen-Eighties is rich with the footnote and citation of research, and to this equipment it joins the spirit of scholarship. However, since important segments of the work lean heavily upon the concept that Protestantism is the parent and capitalism, or 'economic liberalism,' is its child, the author might well have examined critically this current dogma, and asked if both could not be the product of other forces. Yet such questions are minutiae compared with the book's contribution to a clearer understanding of the present industrial-social problem, and particularly its support of the premise that a free democratic society exists first for the building of individuals."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:28 Je '45 280w

"This is an important work on at least three counts. It is a masterly mosaic of English society during a critical decade. It is relevant to present problems as an analysis of the nearest historical parallel or rehearsal of American social conditions today. It will enrich our understanding of the British character and genius at a time when a realistic Anglo-American entente is the key to world settlement." Geoffrey Bruun
+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 25 '45 800w

"Mrs. Lynd's book is too packed with thought to receive the wide reading it deserves. It is a credit to American scholarship in English history." Wallace Notestein
+ Yale R n s 35:347 winter '46 900w

LYND, SYLVIA (DRYHURST) (MRS ROBERT LYND). Collected poems. 99p $1.75 (6s) Macmillan

821 [A45-3096]

"Sylvia Lynd, whose husband is Robert Lynd, literary editor of 'The News Chronicle,' is the author of several books of both prose and verse. 'Charming' is the word which her admirers have probably used most in reference to her poems. Conventional in mood and manner, most of them fall in the descriptive-pastoral or personal lyric categories." Weekly Book Review

"There is no floundering here in the contemporary flux, no wrestling for meaning in the immediate conflict. But it is the verse of a poet finely sensitive to the gentle and humane experience of life, whether she writes of people or of places, of birds or children, and always with an art that gives form to spontaneity and pleasure to the reader." H. I'A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 4 '45 180w

Reviewed by L. T. Nicholl
Sat R of Lit 28:40 N 17 '45 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p164 Ap 7 '45 420w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Weekly Book Review p16 O 14 '45 110w

LYON, MARGUERITE (MRS ROBERT LYON). Fresh from the hills; il. by Lois Fisher. 283p $3 Bobbs

917.78 Ozark mountains. Missouri—Social life and customs. Farm life 45-10174

The author of Take to the Hills (Book Review Digest, 1941) describes life on the Ozark farm, where she and her husband went to live after Marge gave up her job as copy writer for a Chicago advertising agency.

"If Marge gets a little sticky at times perhaps it's excusable. After all, she was an advertising copywriter." Olive Carruthers
Book Week p12 N 18 '45 180w

Booklist 42:147 Ja 1 '46

"Though not a serious study, there emerges a pretty good picture of a little known section of the country. A nice way to get the information, too."
+ Kirkus 13:332 Ag 1 '45 130w

"Written on a level of high cheerfulness, the book views the manifold activities of agrarian living with the bright-eyed wonder of the ex-city-dweller to whom it is all terribly new and quaint. . . The author does not suggest that life on the farm is all peace and tranquility, but she does say it is a lot of fun." N. K. B.
N Y Times p8 D 2 '45 150w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 180w

" 'Fresh From the Hills' is a woman's book. It has no allover pattern nor any dramatic movement beyond one woman's interest in her own and other women's affairs. Yet though you could cut it off anywhere without laceration to any observable pattern . . . you would simply be by that much the poorer. For what gives Miss Lyon's writing the momentum of a rushing mountain brook is the author's own joy of life." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 6 '46 750w

M

MABON, MRS MARY FROST. A meal in itself; a book of soups. (Eagle bks) 168p $2 Duell

641.73 Soups 44-41865

"This volume offers a wide selection—soups to warm the cockles of your heart in winter or to sooth and satisfy a jaded summer appetite. Some are complicated and call for a wide variety of ingredients. Others can be whipped together in nothing flat. . . To make the volume still more valuable the author adds suggestions to complete the meal. Salads, desserts, wines and other courses are included. Most of them are simple, but designed to give glamour to the meal." Book Week

Book Week p2 F 4 '45 180w

Bookmark 6:7 My '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '45

"Readers may find some of the recipes—like the soup that combines alligator pears, caviar and a few other things—more than a trifle daring. But what kitchen doesn't need a little courage in making menus these days?" L. M. Palmer
+ N Y Times p14 F 25 '45 90w

MACARTNEY, MAXWELL HENRY HAYES. Rebuilding of Italy. (Current problems ser) 132p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

945 Reconstruction (1939-)—Italy [46-28]

Brief outline of the necessary steps to be taken by the Italian people in order to restore their democracy. The author stresses the fact that outside aid is needed by Italy before a secure standard of living can be established. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 16 '45 230w

"The author's approach is sympathetic. . . On such burning issues as the monarchy and relations with the Vatican, Mr. Macartney sums up very, very judicially, leaving his jury or readers to form their own conclusions."
Nation 161:602 D 1 '45 90w

"It is a book based upon much knowledge and reading; perhaps for this reason the writing is occasionally so cautious as to become almost colourless." Elizabeth Wiskemann
+ — Spec 175:269 S 21 '45 700w

"Mr. Macartney knows Italy well and appreciates the qualities of her people, and the first four chapters of his little book are rich in evidence of his ability to contribute to the discussion of current problems. But geography and history alike forbid Italian issues to be dealt with in isolation and as both the position of the Vatican and the organization of the Europe of tomorrow are involved, no opinions expressed on them are likely to command general approval. Mr. Macartney will certainly find critics among his readers, but even those most critical of his judgments will recognize his determination to present both sides of a controversial case."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p603 D 22 '45 550w

MCBRIDE, MARY MARGARET. Tune in for Elizabeth; career story of a radio interviewer. 191p $2 Dodd

45-10360

Vocational story for girls, describing the adventures of a young girl from a small town in Illinois, who comes to New York city during wartime to make a career for herself in radio.

"One of the best of these career books."
+ Kirkus 13:526 D 1 '45 90w

"As on her own broadcasts, the author takes her audience into her confidence in spontaneous friendliness, even into the 'secret' of her success. And naturally there is a lot of talk about luscious meals."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 6 '46 90w

"This story is interesting, honest, and convincing. It offers no short cut to fame and fortune. It is a story of people against a background of a great city and a Midwestern farm. It is modern and deeply American." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 29:47 Ja 19 '46 550w

"Frankly, this is the best career story I have read." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 25 '45 270w

MCCALLUM, RONALD BUCHANAN. Public opinion and the last peace. 214p $3.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

341.2 Peace treaties, 1919. Public opinion—Great Britain A45-2066

"Discusses both the merits of the Treaty itself and the attitude of various elements of British public opinion to that settlement from 1919 to its final collapse with the Italian conquest of Abyssinia in 1936. In a concluding section a possible basis is outlined for the more effective union of the peoples of Western Europe after the present war." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"This is a book not to be missed by the historian who analyzes the past, the statesman who plans for the future, or any intelligent reader who merely wants three hours of keen and witty comment on the aftermath of Versailles." Preston Slosson
+ Am Hist R 51:144 O '45 480w

MCCALLUM, RONALD B.—Continued

"Once in a very great while we come upon a mind trained in both history and the political sciences which obviously and earnestly expresses itself for the undiluted purpose of helping a befuddled world find out just what the score happens to be. McCallum, whose book by virtue of its author's willingness to indulge in the brainwracking task of making fine distinctions while rejecting easy generalizations is not an easy one to read, appears to be just about the best bet as a score-keeper to appear in many a weary day." R. J. Bender

+ Book Week p14 Mr 25 '45 750w

"This is a book that will repay careful reading and pondering. The author traces, with rare insight and intelligence, the evolution of opinion (primarily in Britain) toward the Treaty of Versailles, the League Covenant and the erstwhile Allies, especially France."

+ Foreign Affairs 23:687 Jl '45 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Sat R of Lit 28:48 N 17 '45 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 25 '44 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1 Ja 6 '45 900w

MCCARTHY, JAMES REMINGTON. Rings through the ages; an informal history. 202p pl $2.50 Harper

391.7 Rings 45-10142

Collection of lore, history, superstitions, and uses of rings, with descriptions of famous rings. Includes a chapter on the craftsmanship of the ring. Index.

Booklist 42:158 Ja 15 '46

"An interesting collection of facts—and fancy—that brings source material together and adds color to an odd corner of social history."

+ Kirkus 13:392 S 1 '45 110w

"A chatty, informative and pleasant book." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 23 '45 220w

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 20 '46 350w

MCCLINTOCK, MARSHALL. Story of war weapons; il. by Robin King. 173p $2.50 Lippincott

623.4 Firearms—Juvenile literature. Ordnance—Juvenile literature 45-5867

Story of the development of defense weapons from the days of the cave man to the bazookas of the present time. Illustrated with line drawings. Index.

Booklist 42:23 S '45

"Compact handbook, which suggests collating of superficial-encyclopedic details, scissors and paste method. High School level interest presumed, and sound enough in organization and development, for those who have some understanding of the scientific aspects and interest in the technical specifications."

+ Kirkus 13:299 Jl 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p34 O 28 '45 180w

Sat R of Lit 28:74 N 10 '45 30w

School & Society 62:48 Jl 21 '45 30w

Special Libraries 36:451 N '45

"As our children have so far come to terms with the engines of war, a book is worth welcoming that tells them, with the aid of unusually clear drawings, from what ancestors these are descended, the part they take in general strategy, and what they look like in original, not toy-shop, form. . . An older young person can get, through all this, not only a clearer idea of what is now going on in the Far East but of the part 'surprise weapons' have taken in turning the course of history and the role they have played at its various crises. Even elephants could not keep the enemy surprised for very long, as Hannibal found out a long time ago." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 15 '45 270w

MCCLOY, HELEN. The one that got away. 212p $2 Morrow 45-9162

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p15 Ja 13 '46 180w

Booklist 42:129 D 15 '45

Kirkus 13:382 S 1 '45 70w

"One of the best yarns of the year."

+ New Repub 113:654 N 12 '45 130w

"Helen McCloy has previously written some excellent mystery stories, but this one tops all the others. The one flaw, and that a minor one, is the incorrect translation of the German word 'Zeitgeist.'" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 N 25 '45 180w

"A tidy job."

+ New Yorker 21:108 N 10 '45 60w

"Not quite the real McCloy."

Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 24 '45 40w

Time 46:108 N 19 '45 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p43 N 11 '45 130w

MCCORD, DAVID THOMPSON WATSON, ed. What cheer. 515p $3.50 Coward-McCann

821.08 American poetry—Collections. English poetry—Collections

"An anthology of American and British humorous and witty verse." (Subtitle) Index of first lines.

Booklist 42:125 D 15 '45

"An anthology of American and British verse which concentrates solely on the light touch, in which there is endless entertainment, wit and amusement."

+ Kirkus 13:462 O 15 '45 110w

"A scholarly, ambitious, and on the whole successful anthology of 'American and British Humorous and Witty Verse,' as opposed to merely light verse, which Mr. McCord says is not necessarily funny or witty. Few will question Mr. McCord's fitness for the task of differentiation, but fewer still will agree completely with his insertions and omissions."

+ — New Yorker 21:136 D 1 '45 160w

"Aside from furnishing many hours of unparalleled entertainment, the anthology has the further virtues of invading fresh fields of humorous verse and of introducing to America a number of British writers either not known here at all or not half well enough. At the top of the latter category must come Sir J. C. Squires, who is well represented in Editor McCord's treasury, chiefly by a gem on Gray's elegy as it might have been written in Spoon River cemetery." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 480w

Reviewed by F. P. Adams

Weekly Book Review p3 D 9 '45 700w

MCCORMICK, THOMAS CARSON, ed. Problems of the postwar world; a symposium on postwar problems by members of the faculty of the Division of the social studies at the Univ. of Wis. and others. 526p $3.75 McGraw

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-) 45-3572

Contents: Income and employment, by W. A. Morton; American unionism in the postwar period, by Selig Perlman and W. H. Knowles; What road is forward in social security, by Elizabeth Brandeis; Agriculture, by Asher Hobson; Taxation after the war, by H. M. Groves; The bases of an economic foreign policy, by P. T. Ellsworth; The planning process in government, by J. M. Gaus; Postwar American federalism, by David Fellman; Local government and modern democracy, by L. H. Adolfson; Postwar education, by M. H. Willing; The Negro, by T. C. T. McCormick; The new nationalism, by H. W. Stoke; The league, a league, or what? by P. B. Potter; American-British relations, by H. D. Jordan; Some reflections on Russia and the future of Russian-American relations, by Selig Perlman; The peoples of Germany, by Howard Becker; Germany on the eve of occupation, by H. H. Gerth; The United States and the Far East after the war, by F. A. Ogg; The pattern of postwar Pan-America, by R. H. Fitzgibbon; Canada: good neighbor to the North, by H. G. Skilling. Index.

"The book is to be read in the manner it was written, as a series of separate essays. While they differ in style and viewpoint, they have the quality of academic objectivity without being too technical or impersonal. The volume was not designed as a textbook for college students or as a reference for experts. It should appeal to the mature and thoughtful citizen who wants to know the facts and essential elements of some of the most important problems about which he should have intelligent opinions." J. E. Briggs
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:804 Ag '45 700w

"The authors of the volume seem soberly to agree with one another on most of the great banal truths. But many of their points turn around the phrases which blunt the sharp edge of what men are up against. One is, to be sure, informed. But one's political imagination is not shaped to alert focus. . . The three essays which seem to me to stand out as most aware of what is going on outside the libraries are by Selig Perlman, H. H. Gerth and W. A. Morton. These essays will be of special interest to political sociologists. Doctor McCormick is to be congratulated on his organization of the volume and also for factual portrait of the position of the U. S. Negro." C. W. Mills
+ — Am Soc R 10:818 D '45 550w

Reviewed by Harvey Pinney
Ann Am Acad 242:181 N '45 500w
Foreign Affairs 23:687 Jl '45 30w

"Written for the layman rather than the social scientist, the collected papers will interest both groups."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:41 D '45 240w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p21 My 20 '45 600w

MCCRACKEN, HAROLD. Sentinel of the snow peaks: a story of the Alaskan wild; il. by Enos B. Comstock. 151p $2 Lippincott

Sheep—Legends and stories 45-8210

Story of a young ram belonging to a flock of Alaska white mountain sheep. The whole course of Lucky's life is followed from birth to maturity, with additional material about his enemies and friends in the wilderness. For ages ten and older.

Booklist 42:113 D 1 '45
Kirkus 13:370 Ag 15 '45 110w

"Background is well done. Recommended for public libraries and for elementary and junior high school libraries. Boys especially will like it." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 70:1094 N 15 '45 60w

"This story of Lucky . . . would have been better without the awkwardly interwoven story of Sandy, the gold prospector. . . Unfortunately, all the animals have been endowed with an absurd capacity for human thought and reaction. The story's natural history is accurate, but as a story it is weak and often verges on what a bright 10-year-old would call silly." H. B.
— + N Y Times p12 N 25 '45 130w
Sat R of Lit 28:73 N 10 '45 40w

MCCRACKEN, RUSSELL. Gentle giraffe; pictures by Susanne Suba. 32p $1 Rand McNally

"The 'gentle giraffe' is Ginny, a circus giraffe who goes to visit her uncle, Gentleman Gerald Giraffe, at the zoo. During a tour of the city, Ginny employs her particular qualifications to rescue a kitten from a fire and is given the keys to the city by the Mayor. There are easily assembled push-out figures of the giraffes." N Y Times

"Slightly more story content than the average toy book."
+ Kirkus 13:516 N 15 '45 80w
N Y Times p12 N 11 '45 70w
Weekly Book Review p10 N 11 '45 230w

MCCULLY, WALBRIDGE. Blood on Nassau's moon. 207p $2 Doubleday 45-2494

Detective story.

"Exciting and effective."
+ Boston Globe p15 Mr 14 '45 80w
Kirkus 12:554 D 15 '44 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p24 F 25 '45 130w

"A reasonably perplexing problem. The Bahamas make a nice background, particularly at this time of year."
New Yorker 21:83 Mr 3 '45 80w
Sat R of Lit 28:30 F 24 '45 40w

"Plot is fairly transparent and silly in spots; but there's a puzzle for beginners and the rest can take it as a trip to the Bahamas with not quite the right crowd." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 F 25 '45 90w

MACCURDY, JOHN THOMPSON. Germany, Russia and the future; a psychological essay. (Current problems ser) 140p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

947.084 Communism—Russia. Germany—Nazi movement 45-4747

"A psychologist's essay upon the ideologies of Germany and Russia, foreshadowing some of the possible effects of these political notions (and particularly the Russian) upon the countries concerned and upon the future of Europe and the world." (Publisher's note)

Current Hist 8:442 My '45 50w

"Unhappily, the author's intentions in this volume are somewhat frustrated by his inadequate knowledge of Russian history and his anti-Soviet prejudices."
Foreign Affairs 23:697 Jl '45 30w

"The little book, which ends in reminding us that Russians, like ourselves, are neither angels nor devils, but human, perhaps often all too human, fulfills its purpose: to provoke thought concerning problems intertwined with decisions that will determine the course of civilization in the coming decades." Hans Kohn
+ — N Y Times p20 My 13 '45 600w

"After an opening chapter . . . Mr. MacCurdy concentrates on his dislike and distrust of Soviet Russia, or of the Soviet 'ideology' in theory and practice, and tends to lose psychological and other kinds of proportion in so doing. Many of his critical points about the Soviet scheme of things are fair, and his suspicion and fears for the future are not difficult to account for; but in abandoning psychology for what must regretfully be described as an amateurish and inadequately informed political essay Mr. MacCurdy would seem to have done himself an injustice."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p143 Mr 24 '45 240w

MCCURDY, PHILIP G., ed. See American society of photogrammetry. Manual of photogrammetry

MACDONALD, MRS BETTY (BARD). The egg and I. 277p $2.75 Lippincott

630.1 Farm life Agr45-336

Reminiscences of life in several western mining regions and on a chicken ranch in the Olympic mountains of the state of Washington. Betty MacDonald had been brought up to believe that a woman was supposed to follow her husband in his life work, and she made a valiant but humorously protesting job of it. Married at eighteen she was unprepared for the life of a remote, run down chicken farm, her nearest neighbors a Dickensian collection of plain speaking, uninhibited individuals. Then there were the Indians, the chickens, Stove which refused to burn, a baby, and her pet hate—the pressure cooker. Part of the book ran serially in the Atlantic monthly.

MACDONALD, BETTY—Continued

Reviewed by Rosemary Taylor

Book Week p10 O 14 '45 360w

Booklist 42:54 O 15 '45

"Betty is rather wide-eyed but not too irritatingly 'humorous' about it all. A good antidote for back-to-the-land romancing."

Commonweal 42:628 O 12 '45 80w

"This might be a companion piece to Roughly Speaking. It has the same exuberance, tinctured with distaste rather than zest; it is also about as exhausting as entertaining."

+ Kirkus 13:328 Ag 1 '45 130w

"Small public libraries will use this title for years." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 80w

"For all the allegedly gloomy moments, 'The Egg and I' is an astoundingly light-hearted book. The MacDonalds, one gathers, had both youth and gumption on their side, to say nothing of an abounding humor that bounced them over the direst crises." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p20 O 7 '45 450w

"Anyone who has ever struggled with a farm or even with a small garden will especially enjoy this breezy autobiography. But everyone will find its hilarious reminiscences of an unconventional childhood and of unique experiences in the Northwest Pacific sprightly, diverting, and excellent entertainment. The whole book crackles with the innocent deviltry of acorns hitting the roof-tops." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 O 6 '45 650w

"'The Egg and I' is both entertaining and instructive." Rhea Morgan

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 550w

"Her story is extremely funny, and the picture she paints in crisp and good humor of loneliness, endless work and the overrated rigors of the simple life, is appealing. . . 'The Egg and I' is a delightful, cheerfully written story, built out of what was obviously not an altogether happy experience. To city people sitting snug and dry, with the glories of a telephone, water that runs from faucets and lights that turn on when you press a button, Mrs. MacDonald's life in the woods comes as unadulterated fun." Barbara Klaw

+ Weekly Book Review p2 O 7 '45 650w

MACDONALD, GOLDEN. Little lost lamb; with il. by Leonard Weisgard. [40p] $2 Doubleday 45-10477

Picture-story book for the very young. It describes the much-loved little black lamb who got lost in a mountain storm and was rescued by the little shepherd boy.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p7 D 30 '45 180w

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46

N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 60w

"Brilliant in color and style yet gentle in spirit, these big, full-color pictures of sheep and their young shepherd in an Alpine setting make a beautiful picture book. The story they illustrate is slight but probably enough for the babies."

+ New Yorker 21:124 D 8 '45 40w

"Yes, you have heard the story. It is one of the oldest in the Christian world. But a little child who gets it here will know it later, though these are mountains of Switzerland or Norway, while the first hills through which the shepherd searched were those of Palestine." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 11 '45 270w

MACDONALD, JOHN. Darkly the river flows 201p $2.50 Coward-McCann
45-5354

Psychological novel, depicting the conflict between two brothers, Steele and Hector Brand. The motivating fact of the conflict is their different responses to the struggle between their cruel father and their mother, for whom Hector had a tremendous affection. Standing between the two warring brothers was their normal, kindly cousin, Alan. The scene is Toronto.

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught

Canadian Forum 25:145 S '45 650w

Kirkus 13:184 My 1 '45 190w

"The blurb for this $1,000 prize novel implies that the author has broken a precedent for Canadian novelists by writing about people and proving that Canadians too are human. The second is a proposition scarcely to be denied, but Lieutenant Commander Macdonald's book does nothing to uphold it, for his people are brightly colored and animated figures, without dimension, embroiled for the most part in an extremity of melodramatic brouhaha. There are several scenes of remarkable description. . . The author is deadly serious about everything but—as it seems to me—in vain." Gertrude Buckman

— N Y Times p19 My 27 '45 400w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 300w

"There is small doubt that Mr. Macdonald has a gift for writing. But one wishes he had turned his talent upon more convincing characters and motivation." Rose Feld

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 My 27 '45 550w

MACDONALD, ZILLAH KATHERINE. Flower of the fortress. 231p $2 Presbyterian bd.
44-7470

"This story of the part played by four young people in the siege and capture of Louisbourg in the year 1745 makes a good novel for boys and girls of high school age. The capture of this supposedly impregnable fortress on Cape Breton island by a small band of New Englanders was a dramatic incident in the war between France and England known in American history as King George's war." Wis Lib Bul

"Exciting, romantic adventure for boys and girls from twelve up even though written in the first person and unillustrated." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 69:940 N 1 '44 70w

"There is a fine strain of romantic adventure in this tale, and a wealth of detail made possible by the author's knowledge of history." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 4 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:23 Ja '45

MCDOUGALD, ROMAN. Whistling legs. 216p $2 Simon & Schuster 45-8640

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p35 N 11 '45 130w

Kirkus 13:326 Ag 1 '45 70w

"Screwy as anything, but not bad fun." E. H.

New Repub 113:583 O 29 '45 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 N 4 '45 100w

"For those who like their crime fast, intricate, and reasonably funny."

+ New Yorker 21:116 O 20 '45 80w

"Agreeable."

Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

Time 46:108 N 19 '45 70w

"In his more earnest moments the author is inclined to excess in every direction, but why repine when he gives you lots of everything, especially assaults in dark rooms?" Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 O 21 '45 110w

MCDOWELL, EDWARD ALLISON. Son of Man and Suffering Servant; a historical and exegetical study of synoptic narratives revealing the consciousness of Jesus concerning His person and mission. 216p $2 Broadman

232.1 Jesus Christ—Person and offices
44-8643

"The scope of this book is indicated in the title. Jesus' consciousness concerning himself and his mission was patterned after the higher Old Testament prophetic concept of the Messiah and after the 'suffering servant' of Isaiah. Jesus' attitude toward himself and his mission, it is maintained, was consistent from the beginning to the end of his ministry. McDowell supports his position by an exegetical study of sections such as the accounts of the temptation, Jesus' declaration at Nazareth, Cæsarea Philippi, the passion, and the resurrection." Crozer Q

Reviewed by R. C. Tuck
Crozer Q 22:278 Jl '45 600w

"The book is devout but conventional and can hardly be said to make a contribution to historical understanding." C. T. Craig
J Religion 25:73 Ja '45 200w

MACE, MERLDA. Blondes don't cry. 255p $2 Messner
45-3041

Mystery story.

"Pleasant diversion."
+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 11 '45 60w
Kirkus 13:21 Ja 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Ap 1 '45 130w

"Agreeable characters—especially heroine and red-faced Shamus—plot with numerous complications, ample action, and relentless slayer. Commendable."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Ag 4 '45 40w

MCFADYEAN, SIR ANDREW, ed. See International rubber regulation committee. History of rubber regulation

MCGAVRAN, GRACE WINIFRED. Mpengo of the Congo; il. by Kurt Wiese. 127p $1; pa 60c Friendship press
45-4922

Written as part of the literature program of the missionary education program. It is the story of a small boy who lived in a Congo mission settlement, and who went to visit a remote unchristianized village where a witch doctor held forth.

Christian Century 62:710 Je 13 '45 10w

"Mpengo's experiences with a log turned into a crocodile and a pillaging elephant furnish plenty of interest for small readers. These adventures are presented against a background of patient friendliness on the part of the native Christians." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p19 Jl 15 '45 130w

MCGINLEY, LAURENCE J. Form-criticism of the synoptic healing narratives; a study in the theories of Martin Dibelius and Rudolf Bultmann. ltd ed 173p $2.75; pa $2.40 Woodstock college press, Woodstock, Md.

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels. Dibelius, Martin. Bultman, Rudolf Karl 44-8318

"There have been many expositions and critiques of form criticism in general and of the work of Bultmann and Dibelius in particular; yet none of them does precisely what this volume attempts, namely, a study of the miracles of healing on the basis of the claims and contentions of this new discipline. Father McGinley is a Catholic and a Jesuit; it is thus not surprising that he is distinctly skeptical of this new school, which, as he sees it, is in direct consequence of the prevailing trend of 'rationalist criticism.'" Crozer Q

"It is encouraging to find a Catholic scholar interested to produce as moderate and restrained a volume on matters which one might reasonably feel he might have thought to be scarcely open to debate or worth writing about." M. S. Enslin
Crozer Q 21:350 O '44 1200w

Reviewed by Allen Wikgren
J Religion 25:73 Ja '45 250w

MCGINLEY, PHYLLIS (MRS C. L. HAYDEN). The plain princess; with pictures by Helen Stone. 62p $1.50 Lippincott
45-9782

Princess Esmeralda had everything a wealthy little princess could wish for, except one thing: she was very plain. After she was snubbed by a visiting prince, the king decided something must be done about it. And when the princess had learned some lessons in selflessness and generosity she was found to be as pretty as could be. For ages six to ten.

"In 'The Plain Princess' the author-artist combination of Phyllis McGinley and Helen Stone has produced a little book which has grace and beauty and wisdom. It is an altogether charming book to hold, to leaf through, delighting the eye anew on every page."
+ Book Week p3 N 11 '45 360w
Booklist 42:133 D 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"Helen Stone's pictures have just the right airiness and grace for this gay book, which will take assured place among the favorites for little girls." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:454 N '45 100w

"Miss McGinley's prose is as crisp and sound as her verse. One never tires of reading it aloud to children. Mrs. Stone's color sense and vitality are backed by excellent draughtsmanship." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 21:447 N '45 120w

"Why—when she can do a book like The Horse That Lived Upstairs—does Phyllis McGinley revert to what seems to us unadulterated corn in the well worn tradition of good fairy tales for good children?"
— Kirkus 13:297 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Helen Stone's fresh and delicate drawings are perfect for this charming fairy tale."
+ Library J 70:950 O 15 '45 140w

"The delightful story, illustrations and format combine to make this one of the most charming books of the year for little girls." J. D. Lindquist
+ Library J 70:1138 D 1 '45 50w

"Miss McGinley has written a charming, simple story about what it takes to make little girls happy—or, to give a deeper meaning to this healthy little tale, what it takes to make anyone happy—and there is no magic about it. Keep busy and happy, Miss McGinley tells us, and your mouth will begin to turn up and your eyes will glow. The drawings by Miss Stone are delicate and delightful." Sally Benson
+ N Y Times p7 N 11 '45 360w
New Yorker 21:120 D 8 '45 100w

"The story is very feminine and is written with a delicate humor."
+ New Yorker 21:127 D 8 '45 60w

"Helen Stone and the designers have made the story into an exquisite little book. The drawings are so well reproduced that she might have painted them in water-color right on the pages. This will make a charming Christmas present for almost any little girl. It will also make a perfect Valentine." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 D 8 '45 310w
Weekly Book Review p30 N 11 '45 360w
Wis Lib Bul 41:129 D '45

MCGUIRE, EDNA. Daniel Boone; il. by Jack Merryweather [ed. by F. L. Beals]. 252p $1.20 Wheeler pub co, 2831-35 South Parkway, Chicago 16

B or 92 Boone, Daniel—Juvenile literature
45-5845

"The colorful character of Daniel Boone is portrayed against a background of pioneer life

MCGUIRE, EDNA—Continued
on the frontier and especially in the state of Kentucky. In addition to the adventuresome life of Daniel Boone, the author pictures the family life of the times, the difficulties of travel, the danger from Indian attacks, and the roving frontier spirit of the Boone family. The story does not stop with the days in Kentucky but goes on to tell of the part Daniel Boone played in the pioneer days of Missouri." Social Educ

"A rousing good informational story for young people from 8 to 10." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p12 O 14 '45 180w

"It is an accurate biographical sketch written in a fascinating way which fills a decided need for biographies at the elementary and junior high school levels. Teachers will welcome this book and find a place for it in the social studies and the reading programs." J. M. Lacey
+ Social Educ 10:43 Ja '46 200w

MCINNIS, EDGAR WARDWELL. The war: fifth year; with an introd. by Sir Henry Maitland Wilson. 401p maps $2.50 Oxford

940.53 World war, 1939-1945 (40-35128)

"The fifth volume of Professor McInnis's imposing history of the war is a quarter by quarter description beginning October, 1943. Maps serve as the only illustrations, eighteen in all, taken from the New York Times. It is a straight account of military, naval and air campaigns. . . The official texts of the Moscow, Cairo and Teheran conferences, of the treaties between Russia and Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Finland comprise part of a brief but useful appendix." (Commonweal) Index.

"Like its predecessors in the series, this book is simply and forcefully written, and is remarkable in its grasp of general movements and relationships in the complex story it tells. Excellent maps and charts are included." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 D 9 '45 80w
Booklist 42:126 D 15 '45
Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 100w
Kirkus 13:504 N 15 '45 230w

"The present volume of Professor McInnis' series has been prepared with the same care and balanced perspective that have made its predecessors valuable reference works, but even so it suffers from the inherent difficulty of contemporary histories, in having been outdated in certain respects by material that became available while the volume was in process of publication. American readers may regret that, while Professor McInnis identified the British and Canadian divisions that hit the beaches of Normandy on D-day, he did not do as much for their American comrades." F. S. Adams
+ — N Y Times p6 D 30 '45 250w

"His impartiality is praiseworthy both in estimates of a relative importance of the various theaters of war and in space allotted to each member of the great coalition fighting the Axis. He strives with considerable success to record the political and diplomatic as well as the purely military aspects of the war. The maps are helpful, and the documentary appendix, table of chronology, and a satisfactory index facilitate the use of the book for reference." Donald Armstrong
+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 Ja 5 '46 180w
Social Studies 37:48 Ja '46 30w

MCINTOSH, JOHN RANTON. Learning by exposure to wrong forms in grammar and spelling; an experimental study of the effect of correcting wrong forms as a practice method. 61p $1.75 Teachers college

154.4 Learning, Psychology of. English language—Study and teaching A44-5442

Report of an experiment carried on in a New York school with the object of determining what if any advantage there might be in exposing pupils to incorrect forms in learning grammar and spelling.

Reviewed by N. B. Henry
El School J 45:360 F '45 750w

"It presents an interesting and timely clarification of an aspect of Thorndike's 'Laws of Learning' which has practical significance for teacher and textbook writer alike."
+ School & Society 60:335 N 18 '44 90w

MACK, GERSTLE. Land divided; a history of the Panama canal and other isthmian canal projects. 650p il maps $6 Knopf

626.9 Panama canal. Canals, Interoceanic 44-3323

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Bookmark 5:5 N '44

"'The Land Divided' represents five years of research and writing by its author, in the course of which he visited Panama, Nicaragua, and other Central American countries. Supplemented by reference notes, a full bibliography, an adequate index, comprehensive maps, and illustrations, it is a book written with knowledge and insight." W. E. Rudolph
+ Geog R 35:338 Ap '45 1000w

"Although the book brings together the general facts regarding the entire history of the dreams and achievements in relation to an interoceanic waterway, and gives considerable detail regarding Panama, it lacks the characteristics of other outstanding volumes. It is not as lively and fascinating as Bunau Varilla's Panama: The Creation, Destruction and Resurrection. It is not as factual and complete regarding the American exploits as Bishop's Panama Gateway. It is not as valuable for economic phases as Hutchinson's The Panama Canal and International Trade Competition. It is not as scholarly and scientific as McCain's The United States and the Republic of Panama and Padelford's The Panama Canal in Peace and War. However, it will serve as a useful work of reference." R. R. Hill
+ — Pol Sci Q 60:148 Mr '45 600w

MACKAYE, DAVID LORING, and MACKAYE, JULIA JOSEPHINE (GUNTHER) (JULIAN DAVID, LORING MACKAYE, pseuds). Twenty-fifth mission; decorations by Henry C. Pitz. 214p $2 Longmans

45-8767

A story for older boys and girls about a youthful fighter in World war II. Jigs, the hero, is one of the crew of an American bomber, who are forced to bail out over Denmark. In Denmark Jigs comes into contact with the Danish underground and takes a part in their struggles before he escapes to Sweden.

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

"An exciting tale, with some serious, some funny adventures, and a new setting in Denmark under German occupancy. Good going."
+ Kirkus 13:253 Je 1 '45 130w
Library J 70:955 O 15 '45 40w

"Book has two valuable points—the realization by the young middle west farm boy that foreigners are just people and the new background of Denmark under the Nazi. Recommended for purchase now." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 70w

"This book is all of a piece, and all good." Marjorie Fischer
+ N Y Times p8 N 11 '45 90w
School & Society 62:207 S 29 '45 20w
Social Studies 36:376 D '45 30w

MACKAYE, LORING, pseud. See MacKaye, D. L. and J. J. G.

MCKEE, ROBINSON (ROBINSON, pseud). Tootka, the little Russian train. il 50c Am. soc. for Russian relief, inc, 5 Cedar st, N.Y. 5

A picture story book about Tootka,—a little Russian train built for and run by children in Russia. It runs to the picnic grounds in the children's park.

"A delightful story."
+ Kirkus 13:515 N 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by A. H. McGinity
Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 50w

"Slight and inexpertly contrived. But the theme, plus the dashing, funny pictures, should delight the picture-book age." E. L. B.
— + N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 70w

"Here is a gay, decorative little book which will bring pleasure not only with its illustrations but by its novel theme. . . Little children will like both stories and pictures, which are well printed in full color." M. C. Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 Ja 19 '46 110w

MCKENNY, MARGARET. Book of wayside fruits [il. by] Edith F. Johnston. 78p $2.50 Macmillan

582.13 Berries 45-3911

Colored lithographs and descriptive text showing more than thirty eastern wayside flowering shrubs and the fruit of each. Botanical names are listed at the end of the book. Grades five to eight.

"This, surely, is one of the handsomest books of the year. Margaret McKenny has described more than 30 of the wild fruits of the countryside, and Edith F. Johnston has produced meticulous and beautiful drawings in full color for every fruit."
+ Book Week p16 Je 3 '45 130w
Booklist 41:274 My 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

"This volume is not strictly intended for younger readers, but will prove most useful to them if they have any interest in nature. It deals with thirty-three of the lesser American fruits and berries, and the illustrations are admirable for identification." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 50w

"The pictures are clear as well as artistic, making a book which will be welcomed by outdoor lovers of any age."
+ Horn Bk 21:200 My '45 80w
Kirkus 12:451 O 1 '44 40w

Reviewed by R. M. McEvoy
Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 40w

"Some of the seasonal classifications are confusing (as when we see the fruit of the spice bush in the early summer section, and the bitter-sweet opening its berries in the midsummer section) but the descriptions of growth and habitat are helpful, the pictures wholly lovely."
+ — N Y Times p18 My 20 '45 160w

"Of the three books that Margaret McKenny and Mrs. Johnston have made together this is, perhaps, the most beautiful. The exquisite design that the common wayside berries and their leaves make is known to everyone who walks on country roads and sits to rest on low stone walls." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 Jl 14 '45 230w

"Another nature book from such successful collaborators will be greeted with enthusiasm by those who know their previous offerings on wild flowers and garden flowers." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 8 '45 250w
Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. North wind of love. 310p $2.75 Dodd [10s 6d Chatto]

(45-8308)

Book one of the final section of the author's saga entitled The Four Winds of Love. This installment carries the story of John Ogilvie from January, 1931, to May, 1933. "[John] builds a house on his Hebridean island. Athene, his American-born wife dies in Boston on a mission of rescue to her son Arthur. John and the musician Julius Stern visit Poland. An attempt is made to seize the Stone of Destiny under the Coronation Chair in Westminster Abbey and take it back to Scotland. John and his small daughter Corinna travel by air from Croydon to Le Bourget." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p6 O 21 '45 550w
Cath World 162:186 N '45 250w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 43:26 O 19 '45 320w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle
Library J 70:820 S 15 '45 80w

"Read by itself, it would seem to be a somewhat meandering affair in which the author is chiefly concerned to exploit his omniscience by airing his own views on a diversity of matters, such as Scottish Nationalism, education, Spiritualism, Irish Home Rule, the film industry, and British Israelitism. Needless to say, he does so with all his accustomed competence and manages to illuminate his themes by embodying them in shrewdly drawn characters and staging them in appropriate settings. It is perhaps the skilfully drawn scenery that gives the work its chief charm." Wilfrid Gibson
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 1 '44 300w

"Mr. Mackenzie's description of a Scottish Utopia is a fine piece of virtuosity, at once entertaining and for the most part convincing. On the subject of the arts to-day he is less easy to bear, and I suspect a certain defensiveness common in writers who, gifted like Mr. Mackenzie with great fluency, have chosen easy and popular paths." Henry Reed
+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:112 F 17 '45 360w

Reviewed by Barbara Bond
N Y Times p33 O 7 '45 270w

"All this does not make a model novel, but it does provide a certain amount of stimulating reading. Mr. Mackenzie is crotchety, full of unexplained antagonisms and enthusiasms. His new book blends characters and atmosphere suggestive of the Forsytes with the world of Upton Sinclair's Lanny Budd books. The combination is odd, but it is not dull." T. M. Purdy
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:30 O 6 '45 500w

"Occasionally the sun sparkles and the ice crackles gaily; but it is a drear wind blowing from the north, menacing prophetically a dull drab world." John Hampson
Spec 173:604 D 29 '44 200w

Reviewed by Edrie Van Dore
Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p599 D 9 '44 550w

"This fifth volume, like those preceding, has the breadth and warmth and distinction of John Ogilvie's outlook on art and religion and personal relationships. . . The story of John Ogilvie is an important and many-faceted commentary on the course of thinking since the turn of the twentieth century, none the less challenging because, being individualized, it is necessarily limited by the scope of the experience of one man and his friends. The final book, rounding out 'The North Wind of Love,' will complete a work that gives an interesting perspective on our times." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 14 '45 850w

MCKIMMON, MRS JANE (SIMPSON). When we're green we grow. 353p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press

640.7 Home economics extension work 45-2470

The story of home demonstration work in North Carolina, told by a pioneer leader in rural demonstration work. Partial contents: Creating a market; The friendly home agent; The State Fair tells the world; And then came war, 1917-1918; Negroes eager participators; The farm woman in business; What's behind successful marketing; Breasting the depression; Where the community speaks its mind; Working together for the common good; The country woman's college; Associated country women of the world; The power of the demonstration. Index.

"The book is sound and readable, unpretentiously personal, at once factually informative and humanly interesting. It gives an excellent firsthand picture of the problems and rewards of the work, and sound suggestion of its rich long-range possibilities." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Mr 11 '45 180w

MCKIMMON, JANE—Continued
Booklist 41:233 Ap 15 '45
Bookmark 6:7 My '45

" 'When We're Green We Grow' is an imposing record of social accomplishment based on sound pedagogical techniques. It gives a convincing demonstration of what can be achieved by the American family on a family-size farm. Most of all it is the moving testimony of a noble spirit."
+ Commonweal 41:544 Mr 16 '45 1150w

"Mrs. McKimmon has qualified for writing this story by living it. She puts her personal charm into the telling and the characters' personality into the action because she stood by and directed and helped. Bringing to the position of state agent recognized homemaking ability and social graciousness, she added home economics training by earning her bachelor's and master's degrees. She has built this combination into home demonstration work." Ellen LeNoir
+ J Home Econ 37:593 N '45 200w

"Books on this significant work are long overdue. It is hoped that those which follow will measure up to the high standard of this one." E. E. Hoyt
+ Survey 81:183 Jl '45 650w

"Mrs. McKimmon uses real names as freely as Ernie Pyle and with the same personal friendship: her course is charted by what she sees people do and 'by the wisdom they can impart because of what the life-struggle has taught them.' This is a social document and a work of reference, but even more a shared human experience and an unconscious revelation of the personality such work needs." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 1 '45 430w

MCKINNEY, RICHARD ISHMAEL. Religion in higher education among Negroes. 165p $3 Yale univ. press

325.26 Negroes—Religion. Students—Religious life A45-4633

"A careful study of the place occupied by religion in something more than thirty colleges for Negroes, with tables of data collected by visits, questionnaires and examination of catalogs, and with a summary of findings and recommendations." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p4 D 30 '45 30w
Christian Century 62:1011 S 5 '45 70w
Current Hist 9:326 O '45 100w
School & Society 62:96 Ag 11 '45 20w

MCLAUGHLIN, GEORGE DUNLAP, and THEIS, EDWIN RAYMOND. Chemistry of leather manufacture; incl. chapters by Warren E. Emley [and others]. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 800p il $10 Reinhold

675 Leather industry and trade 45-8319

"McLaughlin and Theis have completely rewritten the second edition of the work of the same title by the late John Arthur Wilson, condensing it from 1,140 pages to 790. . . The authors and their collaborators . . . cover the fields of skin histology, chemical characteristics of skin and proteins, curing, soaking, liming bating, pickling, tanning by all well known agents, and fat liquoring and stuffing. Mechanical operations on leather and dyeing, drying and finishing are omitted from consideration and for these subjects the authors refer the reader to Wilson's 'Modern Practice in Leather Manufacture,' and his second edition of 'The Chemistry of Leather Manufacture.' " Chem & Met Eng

"Everything considered, the authors present a book of high merit, not only because of the very complete compilation of published work, but also because of the many constructive suggestions they make as to the paths which should be followed in future research. The publisher is to be complimented for the generous use of graphs and the excellence of mechanical features of the book." J. Bjorksten
+ Chem & Eng N 23:2028 N 10 '45 500w

"This book will prove of value to workers in the leather field and chemical engineers who desire a thorough treatment of the subjects listed. . . Confidence is inspired in the reader's mind that questionable data, which marred earlier works on the subject, have been eliminated." K. E. Bell
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:269 O '45 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 S '45
Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:36 Jl '45

MCLAUGHLIN, ROBERT. A short wait between trains, and other stories. 207p $2 Knopf 45-8406

Short stories about army life and the contrasts between civilian and soldier. Only two of the stories are about overseas duty.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p15 S 23 '45 310w
Booklist 42:76 N 1 '45

"Here are the inadequacies, the personal, selfish manoeuverings, the patience and modesty of the military—with no flags waving nor bands playing. No sentimentality and little action for incisive sketching of today's soldiers."
+ Kirkus 13:276 Jl 1 '45 170w

"The reader will not look here for irony without significance nor for denial of emotion when emotion rises strong. In these stories a good writer deals with the hardships, crudities, inconsistencies and nobilities of living people, in a civilian nation that went to war." Alfred Butterfield
+ N Y Times p12 O 14 '45 260w

"Out of the billions of words written about World War II a few books have emerged which have more universal meaning than specific actions or specific individuals in uniform. Robert McLaughlin's 'A Short Wait Between Trains' is one of these books." Barbara Klaw
+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 23 '45 750w

MACLEAN, DONALD ALEXANDER. Dynamic world order. (Science and culture ser) 235p $2.50 Bruce pub.

341.1 Reconstruction (1939-) 45-4388

"Prefaced by Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec, Monsignor MacLean's well studied discussion of the principles and program of a Christian reconstruction presents a Roman Catholic view of what the postwar world should be, well documented with citations from papal pronouncements." Christian Century

"The book can be recommended as essential reading for every thoughtful man and woman concerned with the problems of peace and justice." Hugh Gibson
+ Cath World 161:357 Je '45 650w
Christian Century 62:710 Je 13 '45 40w
Foreign Affairs 23:687 Jl '45 20w

"Monsignor MacLean, a Canadian Scot with a racial penchant for philosophical thinking and straightforward speaking, is a recognized Catholic authority on international problems for the study of which he has been elaborately trained." R. J. Purcell
+ Pol Sci Q 60:463 S '45 800w

"Mgr. MacLean's main purpose is to expound the social doctrine of the Church in relation to a number of problems of contemporary importance ranging from divorce to the future of civil aviation. It suffers from a too strict obedience to the literary conventions which govern and obscure much serious political writing in America, and from a style which, even freed from those restraints, would still be less than limpid. . . The reader is more often exhorted than persuaded, and, if he is critical, he will be struck by some strange incongruities of thought and expression. . . However, this book is valuable as a courageous and penetrating criticism, not only of the various forms of totalitarianism but of many of the assumptions of liberal democracy."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p411 S 1 '45 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:14 S '45 220w

MCLEAN, SYDNEY ROBERTSON. A moment of time. 210p $2.50 Putnam

45-2935

Beginning shortly before the opening of the American Revolution, the story ends in 1838. Between those dates the story of the woman who was Submit Ellery is told. Submit was of Scottish and English extraction; her beloved Scotch grandfather died in 1775, and left her his heritage of God-fearing uprightness. Her father was killed in the Revolution, and Submit struggled up from poverty, married a "rising" man, and brought up her children on a Massachusetts farm in the early days of the Republic.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Book Week p12 Ap 22 '45 380w

Booklist 41:256 My 1 '45

"It is not a fanciful picture, though it is Miss McLean's own consistent and admirable creation. To read about Submit Huntington is like feeling the breath blown by a summer wind over a pasture full of sweet fern." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 18 '45 450w

"The sobriety, simplicity of the period,—the balance wheel of good and evil,—genuinely and sympathetically rendered."

+ Kirkus 13:40 F 1 '45 130w

" 'A Moment of Time,' despite some fine vignettes of history and genuine local charm, is not particularly moving, either as a character study or as a novel. No novel can really succeed until it arouses the reader's emotions—and Submit's goodness is simply too unalloyed to be interesting. Though she enlists our admiration from the start, she seldom steps up our heartbeat." William Du Bois

+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 8 '45 500w

"A gentle piety gives the novel a rather old-fashioned flavor."

+ New Yorker 21:83 Mr 31 '45 90w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 470w

"An effective, restrained and ingenious first novel."

+ Time 45:104 Mr 26 '45 30w

"What is mainly wrong with the novel is Miss McLean's seeming reluctance to write narrative that is charged with the intensity of the immediate. The facts are there, but they are sifted through time, and time robs them of the meat of a living experience. The promise, early in the book, of Submit as a woman of warmth and passion, remains unfulfilled. One gets a series of two-dimensional portraits, a little on the sentimental side, rather than one cohesive portrayal of a person who is made of flesh, blood and bones." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 29 '45 550w

MACLENNAN, HUGH. Two solitudes. 370p $3 Duell

45-1344

Novel of Canada spanning the years between the two World wars. It is also a study of the two factions which go to make up Canada—the English and the French-Canadian. Athanase Tallard, French-Canadian aristocrat, and his younger son, Paul, are the chief exponents of the one side; John Yardley, a retired Nova Scotian sea-captain, and his young granddaughter, represent the other side.

"A clean-cut novel of great warmth and skill, peopled with flesh-and-blood characters whose personal lives and problems are skeined with the racial and religious life and problems of their homeland, in a way perhaps unparalleled anywhere else in the world." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p1 Ja 21 '45 1550w

Booklist 41:209 Mr 15 '45

"This volume is definitely your passport to two evenings of rare literary delight. The Guggenheim Foundation is to be congratulated for having provided Mr. MacLennan with the fellowship under which it was written." L. L. Marchland

+ Boston Globe p13 Ja 17 '45 450w

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught

Canadian Forum 25:46 My '45 1100w

Reviewed by A. R. M. Lower

Canadian Hist R 26:326 S '45 450w

"It is a book holding great value for the American reader, because it makes Canada real and significant, instead of merely that pleasantly shadowy neighbor to the north." E. W. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 6 '45 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '45

"Mr. MacLennan is to be congratulated on having written a good Canadian novel, that is, a good novel written by an English-speaking Canadian. There have been very few such produced, the Jalna books being about the best of the crop to date. Since Mr. MacLennan deals with a more serious problem than Miss de la Roche—a problem deeply rooted in history and still deeply troublesome—he has attempted a more serious and adult task, and he carries it off with considerable success. Unfortunately his greatest weakness is his tendency—all too understandable in a book of this sort—to have his characters symbols rather than people. . . But his achievement is real, and for the first half of his story he deserves both readers and praise."

+ — Commonweal 41:546 Mr 16 '45 700w

"Certain angles, certainly, bear parallel with Earth and High Heaven; it is however a less concentrated story of prejudice,—a wider picture of national and religious hostility, of ancestral canons and change. A book which should be able to combine critical appreciation with a popular following."

+ Kirkus 12:547 D 15 '44 220w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 160:227 F 24 '45 280w

"More than a little talky, sometimes dull, it is nevertheless a solid performance by a writer of promise."

+ — New Repub 112:310 F 26 '45 40w

" 'Two Solitudes' is . . . not an austere book. Mr. MacLennan is too good a novelist for that —and too thoroughly at home with his theme and his people. Not one of his characters is 'regional' in a foreshortened sense; on the contrary, all of them have a hard, true brightness that is part of the clean, bright land they march through. . . Mr. MacLennan has them all well in hand. He offers them for our inspection—as citizens of a new country that must find itself." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 21 '45 1000w

Discussion by J. D. Adams

N Y Times p2 Jl 22 '45 440w

" 'Two Solitudes' tells a first-rate story in an accomplished and adult manner and, perhaps more importantly at the present time, presents a sincere and unprejudiced picture of Canada's great internal conflict." Merrill Denison

+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 Mr 10 '45 1350w

Time 45:98 Mr 5 '45 40w

" 'Two Solitudes' is uneven: that is, parts of it—the first two-thirds, say—are considerably more interesting, more vigorous, fresher than the rest of it. But the whole is valid, and throws white light on a period and its people." F. H. Bullock

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 21 '45 1250w

MCMAHON, FRANCIS ELMER. A Catholic looks at the world. 334p $2.75 Vanguard

261 Church and politics. Church and social problems—Roman Catholic church 45-9802

"Presents Catholic principles, shows their interdependence and their coherence, traces them back skillfully to their philosophical roots and, by way of background, shows how inconsistent and hopelessly unworkable is any plan to reconstruct the world without considering religion. Excerpts from these pages could easily be shaped into a fine series of meditations." (Cath World) Bibliography. Index.

MCMAHON, F. E.—Continued

"Prof. McMahon is not a 'liberal Catholic.' To a loyal and devout Catholic such a designation constitutes a term of reproach for it carries the implication that the person to whom it is applied does not take his Catholicism very seriously. Such is not the case with Francis McMahon. No liberal can question his sincere and honest espousal of liberal causes; no Catholic can question his loyal and devout adherence to the Catholic faith. He defends both his Catholicism and his liberalism. His book might well be taken as the creed of Catholic progressives throughout the land. . . Gerald L. K. Smith will not like this book, Father Coughlin will not like it. Let this be your guide." J. G. Kerwin
Book Week p5 N 18 '45 450w

Booklist 42:123 D 15 '45

"Many a churchman might well be envious—and the Catholic laity may well be proud—of Professor McMahon's gift for combining learning with clarity and zeal with logic in his discussion of problems now vexing the world—problems that have accumulated to the proportions of a threatening calamity. . . On the whole this book would have been more effective for the carrying out of the author's chief purpose, had he confined himself to the exposition of sound principles and the objective application of them to fundamental problems. Impressive and convincing when he maintains his philosophic calm, he loses power when he betrays emotion in references to highly debatable issues." Joseph McSorley
+ — Cath World 162:375 Ja '46 400w

"This is a reassuring book. It means that some Catholics are thinking clearly, honestly, and within the Christian tradition concerning tomorrow's world. But (even without the author's dismissal from Notre Dame) the reader cannot escape the feeling that McMahon is a 'maverick' and that he represents the kind of Catholic thinking that would be more popular if the Catholic modernist movement had not been thoroughly squelched." R. C. Miller
Churchman 160:16 Ja 15 '46 250w

"Here we have a vigorous and well-written exposition of the world view of a liberal American Catholic. . . The author is an outspoken New Dealer, but is afraid of collectivism which he calls 'a death trap.' He condemns communism, but advocates cooperation with Russia. He is sensitive to the charge of 'clericalism' and minimizes the danger that the Roman Catholic church will 'take over America.' This book should be a liberal education for Catholics and others interested in the position of a liberal Catholic leader."
+ Kirkus 13:514 N 15 '45 260w

"There are certain questions about the relation of an authoritarian religion to the democratic process which are not explored too profoundly. In that sense the book is a little too journalistic. Yet it ought to be read by non-Catholics who fail to do justice to the contribution of socially progressive Catholics to the democratic cause." Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 161:695 D 22 '45 240w

"A persuasive and eloquent plea for democracy and human dignity. Liberals of every faith can subscribe to virtually everything McMahon has to say on domestic and international issues. I say 'virtually' advisedly. Catholic liberals frequently have shown a sensitiveness to other liberal criticism of certain doctrines of their Church; this at times has led them into disquieting intellectual about-faces. . . A sense of resentment is to be found in some of the excerpts from the works of the great Catholic progressive, Jacques Maritain, which are in McMahon's book. McMahon himself is guilty of the same thing." H. J. Bresler
+ — New Repub 113:876 D 24 '45 700w

Reviewed by G. B. Ford
N Y Times p28 Ja 13 '46 750w

"The title seems a little impulsively gregarious, and the book itself is probably too much a tract for the times as well as for eternity. But it is written with singular candor and unselfishness. If Mr. McMahon does not love his enemies, at least he has scrupulously refrained from hating them in public. He may be said to have given a time enamored of name-calling a lesson in courteous controversy." G. N. Shuster
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 20 '46 850w

MCMEEKIN, CLARK, pseud. of MRS DOROTHY (PARK) CLARK and MRS ISABEL (MCLENNAN) MCMEEKIN. Black moon. 238p $2.75 Appleton-Century
45-6106

A circus troup going down the Ohio river in 1831, playing the river towns on the way, provides a haven for a young balloonist who has accidentally slain a man. A beautiful young woman, protege of the circus strong man, provides the note of romance.

Reviewed by John Norcross
Book Week p5 Ag 5 '45 270w

Booklist 42:56 O 15 '45

"Glib writing for a superficially patterned and cast story."
Kirkus 13:186 My 1 '45 190w

"Situations stereotyped. Popularity is assured." M. H. McElfresh
Library J 70:635 Jl '45 80w

"There is a robust love story when Jade falls victim to the beautiful tight-rope walker, a lady regarded as his personal property by the circus strong man. This leads to considerable fireworks at fairly breathless intervals, but it is all excellent fun and should get pretty fancy odds in the Hollywood Open. It's a natural for Technicolor." T. P.
+ N Y Times p25 Jl 29 '45 200w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:127 D '45

MCMICHAEL, STANLEY L. How to make money in real estate. rev ed 378p $5 Prentice-Hall

333.33 Real estate business 45-8734

"A discussion of the money-making opportunities in various types of real property, with suggestions on property management, remodeling, and publicity. Based on a 1924 book, but with no statement of the amount of rewriting." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 42:168 Ja 15 '46

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 50w

MACMILLAN, WILLIAM. Arctic adventure. 192p il $2 Mill
45-5186

Two teen-age boys join in an Arctic exploring trip, led by a scientist friend of one boy's father. Their adventures include being marooned on a floating iceberg, losing their ship, and the rescue of a Canadian mountie, as well as capturing the Arctic animals for which the expedition was planned. For boys of eleven to fourteen.

Kirkus 13:202 My 1 '45 80w

"Best feature of the book is its excellent picture of animal life." Sonia Wennerblad
+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 30w

"The tale which proceeds breathlessly from one adventure to another, would have gained in effectiveness had the author been more selective." A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p28 Ag 12 '45 90w

MACMINN, NEY LANNES, ed. See Mill, J. S. Bibliography of [his] published writings

MCNAIR, SIR ARNOLD DUNCAN. Legal effects of war. 2d ed 416p $6 Macmillan [25s Cambridge]

347 Law—Great Britain. War (international law). World war, 1939—Law and legislation [44-47340]

"The book is technically a second edition, following the first one of 1920, but for all practical purposes it is a completely new work. It is not, as one could perhaps expect from the title and the author's former position as Whewell Professor of International Law in Cambridge University, a book on international law, but a study on the impact of war upon the principles of British law. 'British' means here the United Kingdom, not the British Empire or the British Commonwealth of Nations. . . The author intentionally avoids making use of older and contemporary literature in order to work out his own views. The research is built entirely upon British cases and statutes. The American law and American cases are sometimes taken into consideration, especially in fields where British decisions are scant. But the work is primarily a study in the British common and statutory law, as influenced by war. For the same reason international law and international decisions, as well as the decisions of the Mixed Arbitral Tribunals, set up by the Paris Peace Treaties, are not studied ex professo. Equally, British Prize Court decisions are only occasionally used for purposes of illustration; while there are two short paragraphs on prize law, this topic is, in general, not included. On the other hand, in fields where the law is of respectable antiquity, a full historical survey and study of the older leading cases is given." (Columbia Law R) Index.

"The approach of the author is, as in a scientific legal work it must be, strictly objective and legal; no political or non-legal considerations enter. . . The author himself states that 'it is inevitable that a considerable part of this book should be speculative and that only a part of my speculations should be accepted.' (p. vii) But the book is a work of painstaking research and great learning in a complicated field. There can be no doubt that it will be of great importance to the British lawyer; but it is also of considerable value for the American lawyer and by no means without interest for the international lawyer." J. L. Kunz
+ Columbia Law R 45:103 Ja '45 1450w

Foreign Affairs 23:512 Ap '45 20w

"Sir Arnold has a flair for writing on legal subjects with conciseness, clarity and charm. The book is good and easy reading if one makes allowance for the repetitions which result from the very proper plan of making each chapter a ready source of separate reference on the topic with which it deals." P. C. Jessup
+ Harvard Law R 58:461 F '45 1750w

Reviewed by C. C. Hyde
Pol Sci Q 60:292 Je '45 950w

MCNAMARA, JOHN. Extra! U.S. war correspondents in action; il. by Dan Sweeney. 214p $2 Houghton

070.42 Reporters and reporting. Journalists 45-3689

Sketches of the careers of nearly a score of American war correspondents from Civil war times to the present. Contents: B. S. Osborn; H. E. Wing; G. W. Smalley and Holt White; J. A. MacGahan; James Creelman and Karl Decker; R. H. Davis; Frederick Palmer; Dorothy Thompson; E. J. Neil; Cecil Brown; John O'Reilly and Homer Bigart; Samuel Shaffer; Ernie Pyle; Quentin Reynolds; Robert Capa.

Booklist 41:274 My 15 '45

"A book written for the teens which adults would enjoy equally!"
+ Kirkus 13:68 F 1 '45 190w

Reviwed by E. A. Groves
Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 60w

"The author—himself a reporter—writes vividly and easily." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p18 My 13 '45 150w

Reviewed by Joseph English
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 5 '45 300w

"Written for boys, who will find their fathers reading it too. . . The stories are full of good newspaper stuff and make fast reading that boys won't forget." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 27 '45 270w

MCNAUGHTON, FRANK, and HEHMEYER, WALTER. This man Truman. (Whittlesey house publication) 219p il $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 Truman, Harry S. 45-8046

Brief biography of the president of the United States, which gives something of his background, and traces his career up to the day he became president. No index.

Reviewed by M. P. Akers
Book Week p4 S 30 '45 220w

Booklist 42:36 O 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 6 '45 480w

Kirkus 13:285 Jl 1 '45 250w

"Timely, friendly, somewhat sentimental history of the life and appraisal of the career of Harry S. Truman. . . No literary merit. Book needs an index. Will supply badly needed material. Recommended." E. F. Kelly
+ — Library J 70:634 Jl '45 90w

"Patently a 'quickie,' but as a ready source of accurate biographical data on one of the world's most important current figures, a valuable 'quickie.' The book is a simple, friendly story of a simple, friendly man. If there is anything definitive about it, it is in the sum total—the portrait of an average American with no particular brilliance, who recognizes his own limitations, as well as the limitations of his people, and 'from that very fact derives the capacity to lead.'" Turner Catledge
+ N Y Times p3 S 16 '45 1000w

"This book will provide facts for the people about their President. It is an honest book, I think, if uninspired and incorrect in its judgment about the pattern Truman would give to the Presidency. The President himself seems to have begun to write that chapter. It must be, at last, a story of a man who used every Presidential power to serve the people in the time of their toughest change or the story of a President who set out to please all the politicians and only failed the people of the United States." Jonathan Daniels
Sat R of Lit 28:13 S 29 '45 1100w

Reviewed by L. B. Hill
Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 650w

"The most dramatic portions of 'This Man Truman' are, naturally, those which deal with Mr. Truman's selection as Vice-Presidential candidate, his brief and—according to the authors—unsatisfactory tenure of that office, and his succession to the Presidency. In these chapters the somewhat self-consciously homespun style of the earlier portions of the book becomes vivid and strong, and the reader receives a very lively sense of the strains and perplexities of the period. Like most books of its type, dealing with living figures and current events, the authority for a good deal of the material is not cited. But the events related by McNaughton and Hehmeyer carry conviction of their authenticity." Harry Baehr
+ — Weekly Book Review p16 S 23 '45 600w

MCNEER, MAY YONGE (MRS LYND KENDALL WARD). Story of the southern highlands; pictures by C. H. De Witt. [32p] $1.50 Harper

917.5 Appalachian mountains. Mountain whites (South) 45-37877

This story begins with the Indians in the Appalachians. It goes on to the arrival of the pioneers and then tells of their way of living, their curious speech, their arts and crafts and their dances. There is also a brief description of Smoky Mountain National Park.

Booklist 42:152 Ja 1 '46

+ Kirkus 13:137 O 1 '45 90w

MCNEER, M. Y.—Continued

"Colorful lithographs by Cornelius DeWitt who has illustrated the other books in this series. Text is worthy of the pictures and tells in an entertaining style about the history of the region and the customs of the people. Good descriptions of the country." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 60w

"Less happily portrayed than other sections have been. . . The primitive, gusty life of the mountaineers is described with color and sympathy, but Mr. De Witt, in concentrating on the people, with something less than his usual felicity, has missed much of the grandeur of the country which dominates and molds them." E. L. B.

— + N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 80w

"More distinguished pictorial 'first books' on American regions would be hard to find, and this one will be considered by many as climax of the series." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 18 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:129 D '45

MACNEICE, LOUIS. Springboard; poems, 1941-1944. 63p $1.75 Random house [6s Faber]

821 45-7548

Selected poems from the author's output of the last three years, written after his return to England from America, to help with his country's war effort.

"No one better expresses the bewildered idealist of today than does Louis MacNeice in his latest collection of poems, written during the war years, from 1941 to 1944. Not that the author himself is bewildered. On the contrary, he appears to have pierced to profound truths; but his poet's pity for humanity presents, with skilled artistry, his fellowman's dilemma." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 8 '45 420w

"While never great nor brilliant, this is nevertheless skillful and good modern verse."

+ Kirkus 13:393 S 1 '45 60w

"Always his verse has lyrical buoyancy, and here and there are signs of a new depth and inwardness." H. I'A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 4 '45 100w

"Less ambitious than C. Day Lewis, Louis MacNeice has usually seemed the surer artist. Witty, elegant, and a little diffident, MacNeice writes verse so ingeniously musical that it succeeds despite a certain poverty of thought and energy. Yet the poems in his most recent book are certainly disappointing. . . The best things in the book are two crazy lyrics, Swing-Song and Nuts in May, which are almost as good as the wonderful Bagpipe Music of a few years ago." F. W. Dupee

— + Nation 161:380 O 13 '45 450w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld
New Repub 113:544 O 22 '45 2400w

Reviewed by Brian Howard
New Statesman & Nation 29:64 Ja 27 '45 700w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
N Y Times p5 S 16 '45 800w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 21:96 N 3 '45 100w

"Mr. MacNeice is an accomplished technician, and knows how to say almost precisely what he means to say. . . Few poets today can excel this poet in painting portraits of assorted human beings. That is one of his great gifts. Another is the tang of his turn of phrase." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 28:44 N 10 '45 550w

"Mr. Louis MacNeice as a serious poet is astonishingly uneven. He has a distinct personal idiom, and where idea and expression are well-matched, as in 'Explorations,' 'The Conscript,' 'Nostalgia,' there is a poem; but often the expression proves totally inadequate to carry the poetic content, as in 'Mutations' and 'Brother Fire.' " Sheila Shannon

Spec 174:110 F 2 '45 250w

"The series of portraits he draws of such men and women 'of the Kingdom' are racy and compelling, but here too the gold of immediate vision is mixed with a good deal of intellectual alloy. The same may be said of such character sketches as 'The Conscript,' 'The Mixer,' 'Schizophrene' or 'The Libertine,' and in poems more general in theme, such as 'Mutations,' we have little more than shrewd comments on life strung together in rhyme. But when he looks inward, as in 'Neutrality,' he discovers poetic as well as psychological reality, and such poems as 'Prayer in Mid-Passage,' 'Prospect' and 'The Springboard' express finely the deeps of mystery with which he has yet to integrate his impulsive interest in the social surface. Meanwhile the blend of journalist and poet and the lyrical gusto with which he can inform even the discords of his time, in 'Swing-Song,' for example, or 'Nostalgia' are attractive and, unlike much contemporary verse, exact too little of the reader rather than too much."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p57 F 3 '45 600w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Weekly Book Review p10 S 9 '45 1050w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Yale R n s 35:336 winter '46 140w

MCVEY, FRANK LE ROND. A university is a place . . . a spirit. 478p $3.50 Univ. of Ky. press, Lexington, Ky.

378 Kentucky. University. Colleges and universities. Education, Higher 45-796

"A collection of addresses and articles by Dr. McVey, for 23 years president of the University of Kentucky, arranged by his wife, Frances Jewell McVey." School & Society

"Rather heavily larded with platitudes. Yet President McVey saw the major problems, and stated them clearly and simply." J. T. Frederick

+ — Book Week p2 Ja 14 '45 70w

"The appeal of this book will be primarily to the men and women of Kentucky, to the students and alumni of the university, to the men and women of the state. Others interested in matters related to land-grant colleges and to general educational philosophy and administration, will find it relevant and of value. For Dr. McVey is a firm believer in many-sided education and in the responsibility of the school to the community. His interests and expression are token of a fresh and stimulating institution and of an able and substantial college head." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Je 9 '45 360w

School & Society 60:432 D 23 '44 30w

MCWILLIAMS, CAREY. Prejudice; Japanese-Americans: symbol of racial intolerance. 337p $3 Little

325.252 Japanese in the U.S. U.S.—Race question 44-8958

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Sharing in general the personal view of the author of Prejudice, the present reviewer nevertheless believes it necessary to say that there are reasonable grounds for differing with Mr. McWilliams on important points in his argument. Two examples of conclusions which do not seem to be established by Mr. McWilliams' evidence may be given. The conclusion that race prejudice in California, particularly against the Japanese, is largely a product manufactured by individuals and organizations seems grossly to underestimate the importance of basic social factors which have made it possible for a comparatively few individuals to stir up race conflict. Similarly, the strong plea that Federal action is the main and practically only hope for improving the lot of racial minorities in the United States is one-sidedly unrealistic in terms of the known socio-psychological factors in group tensions and conflict." Donald Young

+ — Am Hist R 50:618 Ap '45 280w

Reviewed by J. F. Embree
Am J Soc 50:318 Ja '45 1700w

"Based on sound and careful research and documented thoroughly, this book deserves a wide reading by the general public as well as by students of history, politics, and government; for the problem exposed concerns itself not only with American citizens of Japanese ancestry, but also by implication with the larger future of American relations with the Chinese and other Oriental peoples who are our present allies." P. H. Clyde

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:185 F '45 650w

"To my mind the outstanding part of the work is a recital of the forces, agencies, and persons who set the stage for the evacuation. . . I have some minor objections. There are avoidable weaknesses in this book largely because of the author's determination to do all possible things in the space of three hundred pages. . . But these are picayune comments and are not meant to obscure the fact that Mr. McWilliams has done a difficult task in a creditable fashion." Leonard Bloom

+ — Am Soc R 10:313 Ap '45 500w

Bookmark 6:4 Ja '45

"The only major influence for good to which Mr. McWilliams fails to give full credit is the work of the churches. A strong anti-church bias makes him far less than just in his appraisal of the influences of the Christian community throughout his book. He does not mention the name of Mr. Galen Fisher, who rendered a service of incalculable worth to the nation on this problem, and his references to Dr. Sidney Gulick of an earlier generation are uniformly hostile. Aside from this blemish, however, this book is by far the best that has been written on this subject." H. E. Fey

+ — Christian Century 62:208 F 14 '45 900w

Foreign Affairs 23:338 Ja '45 30w

"This is a timely book. Written in a swift and readable style, it presents the story of the Japanese in the United States as a case record of prejudice in action. The implications of that record for national harmony and international peace wherever people of different 'races' must get along together are made clear." A. H. Leighton

+ Pacific Affairs 18:199 Je '45 310w

"In spite of minor shortcomings, Carey McWilliams has added to his reputation as a champion of minorities. Prejudice is not merely the best up-to-date discussion of the Japanese in the United States, but is useful also as a textbook dealing with the manufacture of prejudice today. It analyzes problems which should concern those believing in democracy in America." R. W. O'Brien

+ — Social Forces 23:470 My '45 600w

"In the reviewer's judgment, the most useful contribution of this book, apart from its demonstration of the racialist official attitudes underlying the evacuation, is its dramatic analysis of the morphology of race prejudice. Hatred of the Japanese in California is no grass roots phenomenon, but a nurtured product. Anti-Japanese agitation has always been carried on by groups organized for the purpose. . . The record is carefully documented; with unimportant exceptions, the conclusions drawn are supported abundantly by the facts. It is to be hoped that this book will be widely read." Davis McEntire

+ Survey G 34:415 O '45 400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:43 Mr '45 240w

MACY, ICIE GERTRUDE, and WILLIAMS, HAROLD HENDERSON. Hidden hunger. 286p $3 Cattell

613.2 Nutrition. Food 45-7517

"The science and history of nutrition particularly malnutrition and what is being done to combat it. Authors warn against commercial food cultists and 'quacking sciophists' and their high pressure advertisements." Library J

Booklist 42:71 N 1 '45

"While 'Hidden Hunger' will be immensely useful to students of nutrition, it has values growing out of keen interpretation which far transcend the conventional textbook on nutrition. Persons who are concerned with public health, whether leaders in local groups or advisers at national and international levels, will find the document scientifically accurate and constructively stimulating." F. K. Gunderson

+ Chem & Eng N 23:2265 D 10 '45 400w

"Interesting, well-written book." Grace Steininger

+ J Home Econ 37:655 D '45 180w

"There is little new material here, but it is a sound, semi-scientific review."

+ Kirkus 13:236 Je 1 '45 110w

Library J 70:638 Jl '45 60w

"The authors of this commendably readable volume have rendered a real service to us all by their survey of the broad science of nutrition and their account of the progress already made toward alleviating the hunger of mankind. Here one will find a multitude of facts gleaned from many sources and much good advice concerning both personal and social procedures with regard to food." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 Jl '45 1000w

MADGE, JOHN. Rehousing of Britain; foreword by Sir William Beveridge. (Target for tomorrow) 64p il maps $1.50 Transatlantic [4s 6d Pilot]

331.833 Housing—Great Britain 45-4160

"The photographs range from pictures of the Quarry Washington, to photographs of Portal bungalows and of temporary houses, still occupied, erected during the last war. Nearly half of the text is devoted to a survey of the best housing achievements of Europe and the United States . . . to an objective summary of the plans of the Churchill Coalition and to an all-too-brief account of the preelection housing policies of the rival political parties. The rest of the text gives the author's own analysis of housing problems." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 42:58 O 15 '45

Manchester Guardian p3 My 18 '45 180w

"If readers of Mr. Madge's book cannot wholly share the author's optimism, he gives them valuable material from which to form their own judgments. His book is attractive and stimulating, and, in spite of its slightness, an important addition to any reference library on Housing and Planning." I. T. Barclay

+ New Statesman & Nation 29:230 Ap 7 '45 800w

"Mr. Madge is technically well informed, has a good eye for design and an evident awareness of social conditions. He writes well on the harmfulness of urban congestion and the danger of making it worse by an unplanned scramble to build."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Ag 11 '45 330w

MAGARET, HELENE. Who walk in pride. 280p $2.50 Bruce pub.

45-1220

"Novel giving a convincing and horrifying picture of the conditions of slavery in the island of Santo Domingo at the time of the French Revolution. When the Revolution spread to the island, the aristocratic French planters are forced to flee to America and the story thereafter follows the fortunes of only one of them, young Antoine Dejean, who under the influence of the American frontier, loses his arrogance and makes expiation for his past sins." Wis Lib Bul

"This is really a dissertation on justice—and how it should be meted out—in novel form."

Cath World 160:570 Mr '45 250w

" 'Who Walk in Pride' would be good juvenile fiction if it were not for the tawdry incident between Antoine and the lush mestif (halfbreed), Mme. Charot. For anyone interested in Haitian history, a life of Toussaint l'Ouverture would be more nourishing." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 42:98 My 11 '45 350w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 25 '45 90w

Wis Lib Bul 41:48 Ap '45

MAGNER, JAMES ALOYSIUS. Personality and successful living. (Science and culture ser) 251p $2.75 Bruce pub.

137.5 Personality. Christian life 45-5008

"The procurator of the Catholic University of America presents a 'practical, common-sense guide' for developing a sound personality, dealing with everything from neatness in dress and good manners at table to the cure of jealousy and the problems of sex." Christian Century

"It is on the whole a sane discussion of the personality difficulties of the normal individual, though perhaps too abstract and generalized to hold any but the serious reader. Dr. Magner holds up Christ as the great examplar, but Christ in his 'only complete revelation, namely in the Catholic faith. . .' Non-Catholics will find in it nothing that is not stated more fully and concretely in Fosdick's On Being a Real Person, which the Catholic author recommends."
Christian Century 62:709 Je 13 '45 100w

"Perhaps Father Magner should have delved more deeply into the matter of personal maladjustment and have probed the problems men face in their phobias. In that respect his book falls short of Dr. Fosdick's 'On Being a Real Person.' But it may well be amiss to speak of what is lacking when what is had is sound." H. G. J. Beck
+ — Commonweal 42:292 Jl 6 '45 230w

"This well written book should be most helpful to Catholic readers. The approach to human situations is that of one who knows his psychology, but is much more interested in human nature and its potentialities when developed by a vital Christian faith."
+ Kirkus 13:129 Mr 15 '45 150w

MAHONEY, JOHN JOSEPH. For us the living; an approach to civic education. 344p $3 Harper

307 Citizenship—Study and teaching. Democracy 45-9924

"An appraisal of the problems of teaching civics, of which Henry W. Holmes, professor of education, Harvard University, says: 'This book is at once a mark of the great revival of democracy in which we are living and a potent force toward making that revival fruitful in the schools. Education for democracy becomes in its pages both more compelling and more feasible.' " (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:158 Ja 15 '46
Kirkus 13:391 S 1 '45 150w
School & Society 62:312 N 10 '45 70w

" 'An approach to civic education,' and an exceedingly able and comprehensive approach." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4 N 19 '45 360w

MAIER, HOWARD. Undertow. 273p $2.50 Doubleday

45-9768

A psychological novel about an American soldier who ends his army career in the psychiatric ward of an army hospital before he gets his discharge papers. Russ Davis is irritated and frustrated by his army experiences and he cracks up when a tragedy occurs he has tried to prevent. But as the psychoanalyst digs back into Russ' past life other causes for his mental anxieties are gradually revealed.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p16 O 21 '45 600w
Kirkus 13:376 S 1 '45 170w

"That the design of 'Undertow' is deliberate is suggested even by the title; there is the strong forward movement, breaking, and then the turbulent backward tug. The admirable competence of Howard Maier in shaping his work so precisely thus seems in a way regrettable. For by the very certain skill of the author this novel is broken in two. The intentional change of direction results in the unintentional loss of power and meaning. The undertow here is unfortunately not so strong or moving as the wave." Richard Sullivan
+ — N Y Times p3 O 28 '45 500w

"Perhaps a more searching induction examination would have barred Russ from military service. In uniform, though, he might make a good study of the much-publicized 'psychoneurotic.' Yet while Mr. Maier has a talent for often keen and high-tension prose, from the overall hodge-podge of 'Undertow' I doubt whether he is the psychological novelist to do the job." Maurice Basseches
— + Sat R of Lit 28:35 O 27 '45 400w

"It is as narrative, rather than psychology, that 'Undertow' is most interesting. Mr. Maier isn't altogether successful in piecing together Russ Davis as a mental puzzle, or, for that matter, even in weaving his past life into a unified whole. He is an expert short-story writer; he excels in describing isolated instances, but they have a way of squirming loose when he tries to force them into the pattern of a novel." Herbert Kupferberg
+ — Weekly Book Review p12 O 21 '45 500w

MAIN, MRS MARY (FOSTER). Memory and desire. 283p $2.50 Dial press

45-9733

A chronicle of an Argentine family during the last forty years. The central figure in the story is Dona Amalia, wealthy and autocratic, who dominates the lives and loves of sons and daughters, servants and relatives. Widowed while still young her own tragedy comes when she falls in love with a ne'er-do-well and insists upon marrying him with disastrous results.

"The book is a rich and colorful portrait of life in Buenos Aires and rural Argentina." O. C.
+ Book Week p13 N 4 '45 140w
Booklist 42:149 Ja 1 '46
New Yorker 21:118 N 17 '45 140w

"Miss Main's first novel is story-telling in the great tradition, fast moving, dramatic, full of tangled loves and hates. It is to her credit as a narrator that she makes these characters credible while one follows the engrossing action of the book. Only when the reader has put it down does he begin to suspect that these people move rather too obediently as puppets on the ends of elaborately manipulated strings. However this may be, she has written a tremendously interesting book." S. H. Hay
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:31 N 24 '45 650w

"The narrative is crammed with action, but its chief interest lies in the description of daily existence—domestic and agricultural—of a rich estancia." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p19 Ja 6 '46 70w

MAIR, LUCY PHILIP. Welfare in the British colonies. 115p pa $1.50 (5s) Royal inst. of int. affairs

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies 44-9322

"Aimed 'to describe how the varied aims of modern social policy are put into practice' (p. 7) in Africa, Malaya, Hong Kong, Ceylon, Fiji and the Western Pacific Islands, and The West Indies, with respect to Education, Labour, Health, and Social Welfare, this monograph reflects some of the underlying attitudes taken by empire countries toward colonial peoples." Am Soc R

Reviewed by E. D. Graper
Am Pol Sci R 39:831 Ag '45 300w
Am Soc R 10:454 Je '45 50w

"Miss Mair gives all the essential facts and presents a clear picture of the situation in the various colonies. . . A great deal of material has been compressed into very brief compass; the book would be even more valuable if it were considerably longer. As regards accuracy and impartiality, Miss Mair's work leaves nothing to be desired." L. A. Mills
+ Ann Am Acad 239:197 My '45 270w

Reviewed by F. M. Keesing
Pacific Affairs 18:108 Mr '45 220w
Reviewed by Louise Dichman
Survey 81:198 Jl '45 160w

MAKI, JOHN MCGILVREY. Japanese militarism; its cause and cure. 258p $3 Knopf

952 Japan—Politics and government. World war, 1939—Japan. Militarism 45-3717

The author, an American of Japanese descent, surveys Japan's history and traditions which have led up to the present conflict. It is his thesis that the western powers after they have defeated Japan's militaristic leaders, must help Japan's people form an absolutely new way of life.

"This book is obviously the result of much research and careful thought, although no bibliography is listed and few references to sources are mentioned. It may be studied with profit by the student of Japanese history, while its interesting style and vital subject should attract readers with a general interest in that country." W. R. Fee
+ Am Hist R 51:124 O '45 550w

"This is a book which should be read and re-read, marked—and re-marked—and 'inwardly digested,' not alone by all Americans (especially the members of the national government), but by Europeans, Chinese—and the Japanese themselves. Not that there is anything strikingly original in either the material presented or its interpretation; but because, in brief and agreeable form, the study constitutes so objective and altogether competent a survey of the course of Japanese history, and because the American-born but, in part, Japanese-educated, author is so unemotionally sensible in his arguments and conclusions." H. F. MacNair
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1030 O '45 900w
Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p3 Je 17 '45 290w
Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45
Bookmark 6:9 N '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45

"John Maki's book is a superior presentation. He is an American, of Japanese parentage. He has the historical instinct and feel without which history is a dead thing, not the living evolution which history truly is. He is not a ripe scholar, but he is an earnest research student. He treats his subject objectively. Both people are his own people. He could become outstanding, with ripeness and maturity, in a field which will presently be one of the most important there is. He is an American. His blood is Japanese. There are very few men who can perform this vital service of fostering understanding." W. F. Sands
+ Commonweal 42:174 Je 1 '45 90w
Foreign Affairs 24:171 O '45 80w

"An exhaustive book—worthy of special attention for its all-inclusive investigation of the basic, motivating spirit of Japan of the past, and today."
+ Kirkus 13:105 Mr 1 '45 190w

"A 'grown-up' study of Japan. It is written by an American of Japanese descent who knows his way around in Japanese source materials and uses them to good purpose. It will not please those who would whittle down post-war policy to curbing 'militarists' and tinkering with Diet reforms. Maki poses the problem in its true dimensions." T. A. Bisson
+ Nation 160:627 Je 2 '45 300w

"A brilliant and persuasive book. . . No short outline can do justice to Mr. Maki's book, so rich in thought and historical record. In its special field it has few rivals. But the virtues of the book do not march alone; with them go shortcomings." Mark Gayn
+ — N Y Times p6 My 20 '45 1450w

"Mr. Maki examines these elements of Japanese society and urges the victorious United Nations to introduce into Japan new ideas that will enable the Japanese to grow out of their almost infantile political immaturity. This is much easier said than done, and Mr. Maki isn't very helpful at telling us how to go about it, but it is rather pleasant, for a change, to come across a man who doesn't know all the answers. Anyone who has not given Japan the hard and careful attention she deserves could hardly find a better book to begin with."
+ — New Yorker 21:91 My 19 '45 160w
Reviewed by C. N. Spinks
Pacific Affairs 18:386 D '45 1000w

"The author, an American of Japanese ancestry, now employed in the Far Eastern Division of the Office of War Information, was an instructor in Japanese history at the University of Washington until the evacuation of the Japanese from our Pacific coast after Pearl Harbor. His brilliant study, designed not merely to explain the origin and growth of Japanese militarism, but also to facilitate its complete and permanent destruction, is one of the notable contributions of the Nisei to our war effort. . . If one were disposed to criticize this illuminating discussion of Japan's militarism, it would be the failure to supplement the historical analysis by greater attention to the serious agrarian and industrial problems which in recent years were an ever-present threat to the stability of the government. . . But whatever shortcomings the book may have, they are far outweighed by its points of excellence." J. F. Steiner
+ — Pol Sci Q 60:596 D '45 750w

"A scholarly and lucid writer, John McGilvrey Maki has a vital message not only for the peace conferees, but for the AMG and the educators and the missionaries who will work among the post-war Japanese." H. C. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 Je 23 '45 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:34 S '45 240w

"His book is one of the best of many recent studies of problems of the Orient and of America's relation to future developments in Asia. It is based upon a scholar's knowledge—it includes excellent summaries of the political and economic histories of Japan—but is written with a clarity and vigor that would add to the reputation of an able newspaperman." Floyd Taylor
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Je 3 '45 850w

MALIN, JAMES CLAUDE. Winter wheat in the golden belt of Kansas; a study in adaption to subhumid geographical environment. 290p il $3 Univ. of Kan.

633.11 Wheat Agr44-221

"This study is part of a research program dealing with farm operator analysis and adaptation of agriculture to a subhumid environment in several representative regions of Kansas. Its focus is Riley, Geary, Dickinson, and Saline counties, a transition area from the bluestem pasture region to wheat country, in the years prior to 1901-1902. The material is organized under three headings: 'Beginnings'; 'The Soft Winter Wheat Boom, 1872-1882'; and 'The Emergence of the Hard Winter Wheat Regime, 1883-1902.' " (Am Hist R) Index.

"Agricultural historians will welcome this study. Many similar ones are needed. Some readers will challenge the author's position favoring 'the common people following their instincts' against the advice of experts and will disagree with his laissez-faire philosophy. Had the university at Lawrence and the agricultural college at Manhattan been on the same campus, the author might have been exposed to a differing view. None can deny that he provokes thought. Most of the data were gathered from early Kansas newspapers, and little attempt was made to portray the position of Kansas in the perspective of the larger picture of United States agriculture. At first glance the illustrations appear to be more suitable for a technical bulletin, yet they are valuable for the person unfamiliar with the details of farm implements. The type is exceptionally readable. . . The lack of uniformity in the length of the chapters and the grouping of the footnotes at the back of the volume detract somewhat from a work of this kind." M. E. Jarchow
+ — Am Hist R 50:372 Ja '45 650w

"To this reviewer, the approach used in the study would seem to suggest a method that could be adopted for writing the history of the agricultural development and adjustment of many other communities or areas. The book merits special recognition and should be read with interest by historians, geographers, and agronomists alike." J. K. Ableiter

MALIN, J. C.—Continued
+ Geog R 35:688 O '45 330w

Social Studies 35:384 D '44 40w

"The methodology and contents of this volume have great importance and significance for local and agricultural history. It is an outstanding example of a local history contributing to a comprehension of the national scene. It also provides the data needed for the careful delineation of the history of American agriculture, because no accurate overall summary of this subject can be prepared until delineations of the actual year-by-year development of farming and rural life in small areas representative of the main agricultural regions are available. Professor Malin's studies not only point the way but contribute greatly to that end." E. E. Edwards
+ Social Studies 36:231 My '45 360w

MALINOWSKI, BRONISLAW. Dynamics of culture change; an inquiry into race relations in Africa; ed. by Phyllis M. Kaberry. 171p $2.50 Yale univ. press

572.96 Africa—Race problems. Ethnology—Africa. Acculturation A45-2174

"From a wide variety of published articles, manuscript drafts, and mere unfinished notes [Dr Kaberry] has pieced together a coherent volume representing the final message of the late Dr. Malinowski to the scientific world and especially to anthropologists, missionaries, colonial administrators, and others concerned with 'native peoples.' . . In this volume Africa is used as an example whereby to illustrate a vital anthropological principle. The central theme is that, when the cultures of advanced and primitive people come into close contact, the result is not a mixture of the two, but something new." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by R. A. Waterman
Am Soc R 10:819 D '45 650w

Reviewed by H. A. Wieschhoff
Ann Am Acad 242:199 N '45 500w

Christian Century 62:1064 S 19 '45 210w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 42:244 Je 22 '45 1550w

"It is in Malinowski's usual clear and plain style. Some sections are taken from the earlier works of the author. The study will be of interest to the scholar and to the student of post-war problems in Africa."
+ Current Hist 9:128 Ag '45 100w

Foreign Affairs 24:169 O '45 50w

"Recommended for readers interested in ethnology, in mandates and colonial governments." D. F. Lucas
+ Library J 70:354 Ap 15 '45 140w

"Anyone who has tried to integrate scattered fragments of his own writing into a unified whole will take off his hat to Dr. Phyllis M. Kaberry. She has done a much harder job and done it well. . . 'The Dynamics of Culture Change' is not an easy book to read. Much of it is technical, many sentences are hard to understand because they are so complicated—with a length of at least 134 words in one case. Nevertheless, it carries a message which is of the first importance to anthropologists and all other serious students of 'race relations.'" Ellsworth Huntington
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:15 Je 16 '45 1150w

Reviewed by Alain Locke
Survey 81:246 S '45 360w

"This small volume does what Malinowski characteristically did. It amuses ('an anthropologist has to take account of European stupidity and prejudice'); it enlightens (as in the penetrating discussion of topics as diverse as Indirect Rule and witchcraft, warfare and diet); it startles (history 'thrives on sociological generalizations,' without which 'it becomes mere guesswork'); it annoys (by misuse of his own terminology, by over-generalization, by calmly informing scholars of their duty); it conciliates ('the British colonial system is second to none in its capacity to learn from experience, its adaptability and tolerance, and above all, in its genuine interest in the welfare of the Natives'). Most of all, it makes one examine his own assumptions—made either as citizen or as student." J. G. Leyburn
Yale R n s 35:362 winter '46 850w

MALLEABLE FOUNDERS' SOCIETY, CLEVELAND. American malleable iron; a handbook. 367p il $4 The society, Union commerce bldg, Cleveland 14

671 Foundry practice. Testing. Metallography 45-3308

"This manual for the metallurgist, and interested layman, presents technical data and the most generally accepted methods employed in malleable iron founding. Based largely on periodical literature of recent years, it outlines the physical and mechanical properties of malleable irons and describes their metallurgy, manufacture and applications. An appendix includes A.S.T.M. specifications, application of protective coatings, and engineering tables and data. There are a glossary of trade terms and a five-page bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 41:317 Jl 1 '45

Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:25 Ap '45

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseuds). Death at the door [Eng title: He came by night]. 215p $2 Barnes, A.S. [8s 6d Collins] 45-2694

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 Ap 8 '45 90w

Booklist 41:270 My 15 '45

"Very satisfying."
+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 60w

Kirkus 13:43 F 1 '45 50w

"Leisurely, but good."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 10 '45 30w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 110w

"Several stories by Mr. Gilbert are remembered for their portraits of the kind of women who are usually ignored. In his latest book a widow . . . testifies to his wisdom and understanding. Without any fuss he draws a character possessing beauty. . . When the ingenuity of a clever plot is forgotten our imaginations will still fondly recall old Mrs. Manner's quiet courage when facing a bullying coroner."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p329 Jl 8 '44 100w

"Anthony Gilbert handles his plush material with a special touch that turns into an enjoyable serio-comic whodunit; or you can take every word in dead earnest. A pleasing item for one and all, with a number of problems to baffle you while keeping track of the aristocratic Clevelands and checking on the antics of the irrepressible Crook." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p19 Mr 11 '45 200w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseuds). Scarlet button. 169p $2 Barnes, A.S. [7s 6d Collins] 45-9071

Detective story.

Booklist 42:166 Ja 15 '46

"A skillful, exciting and unusual job."
+ New Repub 113:478 O 8 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p10 S 30 '45 180w

"Best of the Crook tales to date. Well-plotted, baffling, suspenseful, and reasonably fast-going."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 O 27 '45 30w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 300w

"Arthur Crook, fairly tough and sometimes amusing lawyer sleuth, nabs his man with his accustomed skill in this readable tale of wickedness. . . Whether or not Anthony Gilbert writes with tongue in cheek, as we have long suspected, you'll find this a satisfactory mixture of dark deeds, smart sleuthing and creepy atmosphere, with emphasis mostly on that perilous commodity, suspense." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p26 S 30 '45 230w

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Mystery in blue. 217p $2 Doubleday
45-9326

Mystery story for older girls.

Kirkus 13:401 S 1 '45 90w

"Here we have a combined career and mystery story, well written and interesting. Sure to be popular with teen-age girls." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 70:1094 N 15 '45 70w
Sat R of Lit 28:68 N 10 '45 40w

"An unusually competent spy-mystery for intelligent girls beginning to read adult fiction and finding the average 'mystery for girls' too easy on the mind. This one keeps the eye on the page and the mind on the jump. If you skip you're lost and to get all it says you must think as well as read. Even the jacket has a grown-up look." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 28 '45 270w

MALLON, PAUL RAYMOND. Ease era; the juvenile oligarchy and the educational trust. 119p $1.50 Eerdmans
370.1 Education—Experimental methods. Juvenile delinquency 45-8084

"Paul Mallon, Washington newspaper columnist serving 261 papers, began a series of articles on juvenile delinquency and progressive education and found himself, he says, 'an unpremeditated crusader for the institution of sound values in youth management and education.' Twenty-two of his articles are now offered in book form." N Y Times

Cath World 162:189 N '45 200w

"The cudgels for authoritarian education are taken up in this book by a distinguished newspaper columnist, whose articles appear in more than 250 daily newspapers with a circulation above 10,000,000. The author claims that he has become 'an unpremeditated crusader for the institution of sound values in youth management and education.' As a trained writer he presents his material skillfully, but, as is often the case with crusaders, his zeal for his cause does not have a favorable effect upon his judgment." Rittenhouse Neisser
Crozer Q 23:98 Ja '46 1100w
N Y Times p28 O 14 '45 280w

MALONEY, THOMAS JAMES. Judy at the zoo; pictures by Jerry Cooke. [55p] $1 U.S. camera 45-9840

Describes in text and photographs a trip to the Children's zoo in Bronx park, with a little girl named Judy.

"A lively amusing story." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Ag 26 '45 130w
Kirkus 13:314 Jl 15 '45 90w

"Not a necessary item." D. M. MacDonald
Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 50w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 120w
Weekly Book Review p12 N 11 '45 180w

MALVERN, GLADYS. Good troupers all. 287p il $2.50 Macrae Smith co.
B or 92 Jefferson, Joseph—Juvenile literature 45-7602

Biography of Joseph Jefferson for high school students. It contains stories of the early days of the theater in America, of traveling from town to town playing one night stands, and of the success of Jefferson's best-known character-role, Rip Van Winkle. Illustrated with photographs and old theatre programs. Bibliography.

Booklist 42:80 N 1 '45

"Well-written, readable tale of one of theatre's favorite sons."
+ Kirkus 13:225 My 15 '45 90w

"Recommended for children's and drama collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 110w

"In this biography for young people we see the artistic development of the actor and we know him, too, as a gentle-souled man whose courage was as great as his gifts." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p22 O 14 '45 200w

"Joseph Jefferson's autobiography is one of the most fascinating of theatre books."
+ Theatre Arts 29:734 D '45 120w

" 'Good Troupers All' is in chatty and popular style, which may bring pleasure to many people who know little or nothing about the early pioneer days of our theater, or about the career of Jefferson. But it so happens that William Winter once wrote a solid critical biography of Jefferson, and Jefferson himself wrote an autobiography which to this day remains the most appealing autobiography of an actor yet produced. Those seriously desiring to learn about our great Rip and his delicate and assured art will hardly be satisfied by this latest effusion." W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p16 S 23 '45 110w
Wis Lib Bul 41:130 D '45

MALVERN, GLADYS. Jonica's island; il. by Corinne Malvern. 255p $2 Messner 45-4924

Jonica was the bound girl in a wealthy Dutch family of New Amsterdam in the 1660's. Altho she came from a poverty-stricken home, and her father was a rascal, Jonica was faithfulness itself, and the kindness of the Van de Voorts to the girl was returned to them later, when the plague came to the little settlement. For grades seven to nine.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Ag 19 '45 200w
Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

"Good family story of life in Nieuw Amsterdam of the 1660's. Authentic feel of life and customs, good characterization."
+ Kirkus 13:136 Mr 15 '45 150w

"Especially recommended for junior high school." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 70:639 Jl '45 80w

"Her adventures, threaded with just enough romance to please young girls, make an absorbing story. Jonica is an appealing heroine through whose appreciative eyes we have a colorful view of old Manhattan." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '45 180w

"Most of the characters are well drawn and the story is absorbing. We must admit, however, to considerable shock in meeting with that rare thing in fiction—the completely wicked father. Jonica's father, to all appearances, has not one single good quality that might justify him as the father of Jonica or even as a human being. . . The picture of Nieuw Amsterdam is well painted. Rather than interfering with the plot the background helps the story and gives it color. The illustrations are very much a part of the text." R. A. Hill
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:34 Ag 11 '45 330w

"It is an old-fashioned story, with the pleasantness of the Sara Crewe period, and enough Dutch New York atmosphere to give it flavor." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 8 '45 250w
Wis Lib Bul 41:104 O '45

MANCE, SIR HARRY OSBORNE. International air transport; assisted by J. E. Wheeler [issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs]. (Int. transport and communications) 117p pa $1 (7s 6d) Oxford

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial. Aeronautics —Laws and regulations [44-4963]

"Issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, this study details the particular questions of public air law, such as freedom of passage, prohibited areas, disputes, etc.; and outlines the machinery for the regulation and development of air transport in all its phases, from customs duties to private air law. There are chapters on civil aviation and war, and civil aviation and collective security." Canadian Forum

Reviewed by S. G. Cameron
Canadian Forum 24:288 Mr '45 280w

"Every expert attending the recent United Nations conference on the post-war control of international commercial aviation would have signally profited by taking along a copy of the Mance-Wheeler handbook. At the very least it would have prevented his wasting any time rediscovering past experience in this complicated field. As we have come to expect of publications sponsored by the Royal Institute of International Affairs, the exposition is terse, detached, and crammed with fact." E. B. Garsie

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 11 '45 310w

Times [London] Lit Sup p59 Ja 29 '44 210w

MANCE, SIR HARRY OSBORNE. International river and canal transport; assisted by J. E. Wheeler [issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs]. (Int. transport and communications) 115p maps pa $1 (10s 6d) Oxford

386.3 Transportation. Inland navigation 44-47839

"This volume describes broadly developments in the international regime from the time of Vienna to the peace treaties of 1919 and the Barcelona Conference. The general situation and the problems of specified waterways all over the world are examined in some detail, and particular attention is given to the principal European rivers." Am Hist R

Am Hist R 51:145 O '45 80w

Foreign Affairs 24:161 O '45 20w

"This survey of an important subject appears at a fortunate moment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p542 N 11 '44 450w

MANCHESTER, HARLAND. New world of machines; research, discovery, invention. 313p il $3 Random house

608 Technology. Inventions 45-3014

"With release of war inventions, this greatest inventive age since development of the internal combustion engine, will portend for man's comfort in communication, housing, new motors, tools and processes. Author, from firsthand interviews with manufacturers and scientists, fascinatingly gives a bird's-eye view, tracing inventions and personalities with historic backgrounds. . . Among the contents are radar, electric eye, polarized light, fluorescence, high octane gasoline, Moss and the turbosupercharger, gas turbines, Whittle and jet propulsion, Sikorsky and the helicopter, self-oiling bearings, powdered metal products, synthetic products and tungsten carbide cutting tools." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Unless you are willing to find yourself moving in a fog in the postwar world, overwhelmed by mysterious contraptions, you will want to read a book such as this to secure some comprehension of the monsters you must learn to control, and with whom you may even appear to compete for your daily bread. Manchester follows standard formulas for writing popular books on science and engineering. He colors his story with the human side. . . On the whole 'New World of Machines' is a thorough book." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p8 Ap 1 '45 450w

Bookmark 6:7 My '45

"It is a book that anyone interested in the mechanical world about him will profit by and enjoy reading." G. S. Brady

+ Chem & Met Eng 52:239 My '45 180w

"The author is one of the most popular writers in his field, the technical front of modern civilization. Graphic, lucid descriptions of developments in and out of the news make a handbook leaving little to be desired by anyone seeking to understand the world about him." R. K. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 11 '45 550w

Horn Bk 21:208 My '45 90w

"There is good grounding of historical background; there are vivid bits of biography; and throughout, even the most intangible subjects, remote from the lay understanding, are made exciting reading and, for the average need, intelligible."

+ Kirkus 13:23 Ja 15 '45 210w

"No single book contains so much information on modern inventions. . . Recommended." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 70:218 Mr 1 '45 140w

New Repub 112:486 Ap 9 '45 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:29 Ap '45

"The author is at his best when he deals with electronics, but so sketchy when it comes to some other subjects that he gives little more than a catalogue of accomplishments." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 15 '45 400w

"Mr. Manchester's book comes at a most opportune time. It provides an intensely interesting and truly revealing survey of the entire field. It is written with zest and a keen sense of the dramatic elements in the story. Best of all, it displays a real flair for elucidation of inherently complex data and an analytical approach that makes for relatively easy comprehension. Among the now considerable number of 'science writers' in the United States, none has done a better job than this in many a year." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 Ap '45 1150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:50 Je '45 200w

"Unlike many of the other books on the wonders of the new world to come, Mr. Manchester has his feet solidly on the ground, and his pages are liberally sprinkled with words of caution." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 1 '45 600w

MANEY, STACEY, ed. It's fun to make it yourself. 384p il $2.95 Garden City pub. co.

680 Woodwork. Handicraft 45-1410

"The primary object in producing this volume has been not only to inform readers how they can best proceed to carry out a piece of construction or a simple repair about the house, but also to indicate the precise procedure by means of diagrams and photographs." (Introd) Contents: The home workshop; Tool manipulation; Sharpening and setting; Finishing woodwork; Joints and jointing; Woodturning; Constructional woodwork; General home handiwork; Metalwork; House painting and decorating; In and for the garden.

Booklist 41:205 Mr 15 '45

"Recommended."

+ Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon
Springf'd Republican p4 Mr 10 '45 550w

"This is the nearest to an encyclopedia of house repairs and general home handiwork as we have had for anything like its price."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 11 '45 130w

MANN, HEINRICH. Little superman; tr. by Ernest Boyd. 317p $2.75 Creative age

45-8917

"A reissue of an earlier novel of Mr. Mann's, published in 1918 in German as 'Der Untertan' and in English as 'The Patrioteer.' The life story of a ruthless German, the chilling archetype of the German who made and accepted the Nazi tyranny, analyzing his temperament from its beginnings in a complex and tortured family relationship to its flowering in unscrupulous political ambition." New Yorker

---

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p13 O 14 '45 270w
Christian Science Monitor p17 Ja 12 '46 160w

"Not a good novel though of immediate interest in its depicting of the sustained similarity in German character."
Kirkus 13:345 Ag 15 '45 170w

"In its vitriolic way 'Little Superman' is entertaining as well as provocative, with its often ferociously humorous picture of the supermen in action in the Germany of the Nineties." Richard Watts
N Y Times p11 D 16 '45 600w

"An excellent example of the talent and perceptiveness which won for the author the successive distinctions of an honored place in the Academy of Art in Berlin and then exile to France."
+ New Yorker 21:106 O 13 '45 80w

" 'Little Superman' is a book of lasting importance, full of wit, satire, irony, and wisdom." F. C. Weiskopf
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 O 20 '45 850w

Reviewed by Rhea Morgan
Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 240w

MANN, THOMAS. Tables of the law; tr. by H. T. Lowe-Porter. 63p $2.50 Knopf

Moses—Fiction 45-4719

Novelette based on the life of Moses, which describes his heritage, his young manhood, the exodus from Egypt, and the engraving of the tablets of the law on Mt Sinai. Appeared earlier in The Ten Commandments (Book Review Digest, 1943).

Kirkus 13:193 My 1 '45 40w

"When this short novel appeared a while back in 'The Ten Commandments' (a collection of stories, by several writers, dealing with the evils of Nazism), this department could see no great subtlety in the present-day implications Herr Mann finds in the story of Moses. Though it has now been more expertly translated and beautifully got up in a volume by itself, this still seems a not so worthy effort of a great novelist."
New Yorker 21:77 Je 9 '45 90w

"The author has given undeniable proof of his talent as a novelist. While this work is calculated to delight the votarist of pure reason, it can only evoke a chuckle in Biblical circles." K. J. Cooley
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 360w

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM. Adsorption. 386p $4.50 McGraw

660.284 Adsorption. Chemical engineering 45-1300

"In this volume an attempt has been made to correlate the practical, commercial, and the engineering aspects of adsorption. The volume has been written from the viewpoint that adsorption is a 'unit operation' of chemical engineering; it has underlying bases and characteristic 'laws' which are the same irrespective of the process industry in which it may find application. For those who desire it, a brief chapter on theories of adsorption is included, but there is a reminder that the operational man or the designing engineer is more concerned with pressure drops, dry-gas capacities, and volume throughout than he is with theories." Pref

---

Booklist 41:205 Mr 15 '45

"This reviewer recommends the book heartily for all those interested in the operation or design of adsorption equipment." D. F. Othmer
+ Chem & Eng N 23:667 Ap 10 '45 360w

"The initial chapter on the 'Unit Operation of Adsorption' fails to develop any unity in the several applications or to set to engineering calculations the steps in the design of an adsorption operation. The deficiency in engineering aspects is offset by what appears to be a thorough reporting of the technology of the large number of commercial adsorption processes. The book will serve as a ready reference to students and engineers who desire a general treatment of the subject or who are searching for a precedent to their problem involving adsorption." D. L. Katz
+ — Chem & Met Eng 52:241 Ja '45 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:3 Ja '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:51 Je '45 240w

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM, and HARDY, C. H. Calcium, metallurgy and technology. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 148p il $3.50 Reinhold

669.7 Calcium 45-7275

"This volume correlates available information regarding the properties and methods of production of calcium. The greater part of the book deals with the manufacture and properties of alloys produced by the combination of calcium and such metals as aluminum, copper, iron, gold, lead, magnesium, nickel, silicon, silver, tin and zinc. Two final chapters discuss the preparation of chromium, thorium, uranium and zirconium metal powders by the use of calcium; and calcium in the petroleum industry. Bibliographies are given at the end of each chapter." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Undoubtedly, this volume will stimulate new interest in this little-appreciated metal. It should suggest many new scientific and practical applications of this alkaline-earth metal." H. S. Booth
+ Chem & Eng N 23:2264 D 10 '45 150w
Chem & Met Eng 52:263 S '45 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45
Library J 70:687 Ag '45 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:21 Ap '45

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1944-45; and the Year book of the drama in America. 501p il $3 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections

"The Mantle choices for the best of the season of 1944-45 were 'A Bell for Adano,' 'I Remember Mama,' 'The Hasty Heart,' 'The Glass Menagerie,' 'Harvey,' 'The Late George Apley,' 'Soldier's Wife,' 'Anna Lucasta,' 'Foolish Notion' and 'Dear Ruth.' . . [Also includes a] summary of the theatre as it took place in the West, the Middle West, off Broadway and especially on The Street, itself." N Y Times

---

"For the theatergoer, it is a fascinating volume, for the theater worker or student, an invaluable one." H. T. Murdock
+ Book Week p6 D 9 '45 270w
Booklist 42:124 D 15 '45

"Mr. Mantle's new volume is like the others, a major necessity." Lewis Nichols
+ N Y Times p10 D 16 '45 400w
Theatre Arts 30:62 Ja '46 160w

MAPLE, FLORENCE. Family tree. 268p $2.50 Knopf

45-3926

Judelle Cameron, orphaned at seventeen, leaves the circus in California and comes east to the little town of Kakana to hunt up her father's unknown cousins, the Calets. Cordially greeted by some, looked on with suspicion by others, Judelle stays with the Calets for three weeks but before she goes back to the circus her coming has changed the course of several lives.

MAPLE, FLORENCE—Continued

"A Hoosier educated in Michigan, this writer comes up with very real people and makes them grow between pages one and two-sixty-seven. She handles the threads of a quite complex plot and does not get them snarled. She observes the interaction of personality on personality in a way that it quite diabolical; she must be a holy terror to her friends. She received a major fiction award for 'Family Tree' in 1944, Avery Hopwood Contest. The judging was very shrewd, if you ask me." Leonard Bullen
+ Book Week p6 Je 3 '45 450w

"The story has suspense, several undeveloped sub-plots as unnecessary as tassels attached to a skirt hem, and the whole is written in the manner of the traditional desk chair romance. It will leave thoughtful readers (but thoughtful persons will not read it) greatly depressed. Where the author has seen romance they will see a dry rot eating at the vitals of our society." Sister Mariella
Commonweal 42:341 Jl 20 '45 180w

+ Kirkus 13:95 Mr 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle
Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 70w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 180w

"Miss Maple had several good basic ideas in the writing of 'Family Tree' which the novel does not quite realize. Frequently glamour has to pinch hit for something deeper that she has evidently meant to suggest. But, as it stands, it is an extremely good popular novel, plus." F. H. Bullock
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 My 27 '45 550w

MARAIS, JOSEF. Koos, the Hottentot; tales of the veld; il. by Henry Stahlhut. 188p $2.50 Knopf

398 Folklore—South Africa 45-35236

Tales of the veld as told by Koos who was Marais' nurse when he was a small boy living in South Africa.

"The book is a fascinating mixture of fantasy and reality. . . The tales themselves are marvelous. . . Henry Stahlhut's illustrations, done in effective blue and brown and orange, are as fascinating as the stories, and the whole makes a beautiful gift book for any youngster who likes stories of imagination."
+ Book Week p3 N 11 '45 200w

Booklist 42:113 D 1 '45

"Strange characters, warm gentle people, a new fantasy and a true folk quality will satisfy the child's need for fantasy and imaginative tales, and the adult reader who is interested in authentic folk material. Libraries, both public and school, may find it of more permanent value than bookshops, but the extraordinary drawings by Henry Stalhut give it a definite merchandise value for the discriminating purchaser."
+ Kirkus 13:493 N 1 '45 110w

"Well illustrated by Henry Stahlhut. Will be welcomed by storytellers looking for 'different' stories. Boys and girls from nine to twelve will enjoy it." Elizabeth Burr
+ Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 80w

"From my own twenty years of travel across the spacious dark continent I would say this is a true interpretation of the folklore of the Hottentots, written with warmth and feeling. It gives the reader a sense of strangeness and the beauty that is Africa. The book will be immensely enjoyed by young readers." T. J. Waldeck
+ N Y Times p8 N 11 '45 90w

"Stylish pictures in color, words and music of native songs, and a fine format all add distinction to a unique book."
+ New Yorker 21:128 D 8 '45 60w

MARCH, ANTHONY. Quit for the next. 308p $2.50 Scribner
45-4018

A story of a cavalry troop, and especially of its commander, Captain Kilbride, as the Americans retreated down Luzon to Bataan.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p7 My 13 '45 360w

"Of the novels that have come out of this war this is perhaps the best. . . The only false note in the book is the girl, Alexandra." Harry Sylvester
+ — Commonweal 42:96 My 11 '45 700w

"Another angle on those early 'expendables', bristling with military detail, but the small group focus, the individualizing of the members of the troop, the importance of the job they did, makes this convincing reading."
+ Kirkus 13:139 Ap 1 '45 240w

"A first novel by an author who is himself an Army lieutenant, 'Quit for the Next' is as straightforward and conversational as an Ernie Pyle battlepiece. There is evidence that Lieutenant March has been reading Ernest Hemingway (a rather widespread practice), especially 'To Have and Have not' and 'For Whom the Bell Tolls.' But the Hemingway influence is to be observed less in the style than in the approach and conception." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 15 '45 400w

"A vivid, honest, deeply moving story." R. N. Fuller
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 270w

Time 45:100 Ap 30 '45 30w

"A good, honest novel of the Pacific war, a story of both national and personal tragedy." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 15 '45 550w

MARCH, WILLIAM, pseud. See Campbell, W. E. M.

MARCHAND, LESLIE ALEXIS, ed. See Hood, T. Letters

MARGULIES, LEO, and MERWIN, SAMUEL. The flags were three; a novel of old New Orleans. 283p $2.50 Curl
45-1817

Novel of New Orleans and its development from a wilderness outpost in 1732, thru the periods of French and Spanish rule, down to the sophisticated city of the early nineteenth century. The story is told by means of the love stories of three women—Juliette Michaux of lowly birth, who rose to prominence as the wife of a French aristocrat, and her daughter and granddaughter.

"With one eye on a compendious knowledge of two centuries of history, fashions and colonial living, and the other eye on a Hollywood view of 'a woman's heart,' Margulies and Merwin seem to have concocted something strongly in the 'Forever Amber' tradition." Sherman Conrad
— Book Week p6 F 25 '45 270w

"A lush to lurid tale."
— Kirkus 12:547 D 15 '44 130w

"Working with potentially colorful material, the Messrs. Margulies and Merwin have run off a determinedly romantic triple-barreled novel. . . None of the barrels make a very loud noise; each is in effect a separate—and very routine—novelette. By making the growth of New Orleans a vital element, the authors might have given their story a dignity it lacks." R. M.
— N Y Times p29 Ap 15 '45 360w

"An engaging narrative. . . Interwoven with the love stories are highlights in the history of New Orleans over a period of about 100 years. The novel would have a stronger appeal if the authors had delved deeper into historical lore and developed this background with more color and detail."
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 160w

MARIELLA, SISTER. See Gable, Sister Mariella

MARIL, LEE. Crack and crunch; nuts in fact and fancy; il. by [the author]. 64p $1.75 Coward-McCann

634.5 Nuts—Juvenile literature Agr45-145

Presents eight varieties of nuts often mentioned in history and literature. For each there is a full-page picture in color, with accompanying description in scientific terms. Location, cultivation and uses of each are given briefly, and a story for each of them.

"A most rewarding little book." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Ag 26 '45 200w
Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:277 Jl '45 90w

Reviewed by G. E. Joline
Library J 70:639 Jl '45 70w

"Like its predecessors, this is an appealing little volume; the drawings in four colors have charm as well as accuracy." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p18 Je 10 '45 100w
Weekly Book Review p8 Je 17 '45 100w

MARIL, LEE. Mr. Bunny paints the eggs; il. by Irena Lorentowicz. [26p] $1 Roy pubs.
45-5127

"In colors that suggest the spring, Irena Lorentowicz presents in pictures the story which Lee Maril tells: how timid Bunny discovers the secret of painting Easter eggs and how this seals a friendship with a little boy." N Y Times

Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:273 Jl '45 40w

"A delightful tale—timely for the Easter season."
+ Kirkus 13:158 Ap 1 '45 130w

"Lovely picture book. Gay borders and end papers in the thoroughly peasant coloring which is typical of Irena Lorentowicz's illustrations." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 70:588 Je 15 '45 70w

"The drawings, original and full of vigor, will appeal to small children: the story (which has the repetition they enjoy) makes a pleasant if undistinguished addition to the list of Easter tales." A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p20 My 27 '45 90w
Sat R of Lit 28:35 My 19 '45 180w

"The book is gay, the colors sing, the rabbit laughs all over." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 27 '45 110w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Dream of Descartes. 220p $3 Philosophical lib.

194.1 Descartes, René 45-2003

"In these five essays Maritain examines in detail the famous 'dream' which began the philosophy, the meaning of the reform, its results on theology, philosophy and science, the Cartesian proofs of God's existence and a summary of its heritage. Author concludes that we must rid ourselves of naturalism, agnosticism, dualism, the deification of science and other errors resulting after three centuries of Descartes' domination, replacing it with Christian metaphysics before we can cure a confused world." Library J

"The intellectual vigor of St. Thomas has been emphasized in other books and so has the failure of Descartes. In this book they are presented in strong contrast which gives to the work its special excellence among Cartesian studies. Throughout there are many fine philosophical insights as there are in all of Maritain's writings. Their discovery will richly reward the reader who refuses to be discouraged by the obscurities of Maritain's language." J. F. Coffey
+ Cath World 162:183 N '45 400w

"Few other books have inspired in me so many different moods of critical reflection—marvel at the clarity and simplicity of exposition which appears in the final chapter, admiration for such profundity, disgust with much obscurity and what is worse, pure cavil, and enthusiasm for profound insight into the failures of modern philosophy. Here is one of the most erudite of modern literati, a French neo-scholastic, resorting to every device of criticism in trying to eradicate what he characterizes as the 'French sin in modern history,' Cartesianism. Being neither a Frenchman nor a Cartesian, but very much a modernist in philosophical orientation, I thus find my feelings mixed." A. R. King
Christian Century 62:789 Jl 4 '45 950w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 41:498 Mr 2 '45 520w

"I find this the most readable of Maritain's books and also the soundest." Charles Hartshorne
+ Ethics 55:321 Jl '45 200w

Reviewed by A. G. A. Balz
J Philos 42:359 Je 21 '45 900w

Reviewed by P. A. Reynolds
J Religion 25:301 O '45 600w

"Compressed, parenthetical style makes difficult reading. For larger libraries." R. J. Hurley
Library J 69:761 S 15 '44 110w
New Yorker 20:67 Ja 20 '45 90w

"Of Maritain's scholarship in the field of philosophy it is impossible to speak too highly. This book exhibits his analytical power on a most profound and exacting level. It is written, in addition, with a grace, a luminosity, and an economy of statement which are all too rare in philosophical writing. It is with such felicity of style, perhaps, that men may write when they possess the truth—a felicity often denied to those who only modestly and humbly inquire after truth." Robert Bierstedt
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 F 17 '45 750w

"Only a trained philosophical mind can grasp the whole book. Ordinary interested readers, however, who realize the importance today of the attack on Descartes will find the first and last essays understandable and readable." C. D. Kean
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 14 '45 650w

"This book, incomplete and somewhat inchoate, suffers also from bad proofreading and the translator's worthy though desperate struggle with language difficult to transcribe into English. But it is interesting as being one great Frenchman's examination of a significant contribution to the store of French philosophy and human insight." G. N. Shuster
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 F 11 '45 700w

MARITAIN, RAISSA (MME JACQUES MARITAIN). Adventures in grace. (Golden measure ser) 262p il $2.75 Longmans

B or 92 Roman Catholic church—Converts
45-6247

A continuation of the author's We Have Been Friends Together (Book Review Digest, 1942). This volume is both a tribute to her husband, and a further description of their conversion to the Roman Catholic church, and their work as leaders in the Catholic intellectual revival in France. The book closes with the death of their friend Léon Bloy.

Reviewed by K. L. Brewster
Book Week p9 Jl 29 '45 550w
Cath World 162:285 D '45 200w
Christian Century 62:1164 O 10 '45 210w

"There are things, though, in this journey into grace that I do understand. There are in these pages of clear, clean, exact writing such plumbed wells of understanding, of sympathy, of charity, of pity that one is amazed as if he had suddenly looked into the blinding light of the sun. But what emerges more strongly than anything else, what comes, rising up out of the precise and luminous prose, what flashes around your mind, stunning like the lightning at Damascus, is the terrible honesty that is the clean, new die out of which

MARITAIN, RAISSA—Continued
these sentences are stamped. For, as Potsdam made clear again, honesty is not the coin of the realm and words, in our generation, are the materials by which counterfeiters live." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 42:480 Ag 31 '45 1150w

"Those interested in modern philosophical and religious trends, and in developments in the intellectual life of France at the time of World War I will find these memoirs of absorbing interest."
+ Kirkus 13:244 Je 1 '45 230w

"The book is written with sincerity, in simple style and is recommended for purchase, if the first volume is obtainable. For the discriminating reader." E. H. Crowell
+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Hannah Arendt
Nation 161:289 S 22 '45 480w

" 'The truth shall make you free' epitomizes Mme. Maritain's rich and glowing record, none of the force or charm of which is lost in Miss Kernan's translation." J. S. Kennedy
+ N Y Times p21 D 16 '45 650w

Reviewed by Jacques Ducharme
Springf'd Republican p4 Jl 16 '45 300w

Theatre Arts 30:64 Ja '46 40w

"Madame Maritain has spoken bravely and plainly on a great theme. It would be a poor tribute to her character to comment on her book with less forthrightness. Reading it, I have felt vague and unaccustomed misgivings about France and the children of France. There has long been a resurgence of faith among that wonderful people, but if their faith is to be measured chiefly by their prayers, by their inward and cloistral disciplines, by their preparations for death, then France will need rescue not once but many times, at the hands of saints of a cruder but sturdier fibre—Péguy's kind of saints, believing in the active as well as the contemplative life." John Erskine
Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 26 '45 850w

MARKEY, MORRIS. Well done! an aircraft carrier in battle action. 223p $2.75 Appleton-Century

940.545973 Essex (aircraft carrier). World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean 45-9445

"An account of events aboard the aircraft carrier Essex in the battles for the Marianas and the Marshalls, campaigns Mr. Markey went through as a correspondent aboard the ship." New Yorker

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p30 N 11 '45 180w
Booklist 42:107 D 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45
Kirkus 13:358 Ag 15 '45 130w

"Morris Markey, who two decades ago originated The New Yorker's 'A Reporter at Large,' sailed with the aircraft carrier Essex on her mission last year in support of the invasion of Saipan. He has produced from the voyage a work of talented journalistic craftsmanship not only about that cruise but about fighting Americans generally." Barrett McGurn
+ N Y Times p8 D 9 '45 500w

"As instructive reporting the book is fine. . . But when the author becomes emotional, in the casual, tight-lipped style fashionable with too many war correspondents, about the men, the ship, dawn, or whatever, what he achieves is sentimentality and not poignancy."
+ — New Yorker 21:106 N 10 '45 100w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 29:11 Ja 12 '46 270w

"Mr. Markey's understanding of the men he served with is evident everywhere. He describes with equal sympathy a ball-turret gunner whose ambition was to write a two-volume work on electronics, and a chief petty officer whose pride was the remarkable system he had devised of cataloguing spare plane parts." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 25 '45 750w

MARKOWA, EUGENIA. The glowing lily [life of St Hedwig of Poland] introd. by Robert Speaight. 113p $1.25 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Hedwig, Saint 44-8304

"The story of Hedwig, wife of Henry, twelfth-century Duke of Silesia, is a saga of suffering and endeavour and a passionate faith. This short life of the saint, told in the historic present which gives it an added poignancy, is presented in a series of dramatic and colourful scenes." Times [London] Lit Sup

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45
Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Jl 14 '45 60w

MARLIO, LOUIS. Can democracy recover? [tr. by Alice Storms] with an introd. by Eric A. Johnston. 190p $2 Doubleday

321.8 Democracy. Totalitarianism. International cooperation 45-3669

"Louis Marlio has combined the careers of successful business man, scholar, statesman, and teacher to an extent which is rare in Europe, almost non-existent in the United States. And while it might not be wholly unexpected in these days to find that a man who was for thirteen years chairman of the International Aluminum Cartel is now associated with the Brookings Institution in Washington, it is still surprising that he has deserved his present position because he was also formerly professor of economics at the Paris Ecole des Sciences Politiques. . . 'Can Democracy Recover?' was printed in French in 1943 under the title of 'La Révolution d'hier, d'aujourd'hui et de demain.' The primary emphasis, however, is on the French Revolution of 1789. The author's cure for democracy's present plight is a combination of return to the principles of Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity, and economic liberalism of the Manchester School. His diagnosis of the ways in which not only France but all the other nations that make up Western civilization strayed from the original revolutionary principles is scholarly, persuasive. and illuminating." Nation

"The book is difficult to appraise; as it stands, there is just enough of it to make the reviewer desire more." C. W. Shull
Am Pol Sci R 39:1243 D '45 300w

"Marlio, a Frenchman, occasionally is a special pleader for a more tolerant view of French activities between World Wars I and II than many observers take, but his reasoning is logical. The book is an intelligent appraisal of recent events and future possibilities." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p2 Ap 29 '45 300w
Booklist 41:264 My 15 '45

Reviewed by William Agar
Commonweal 42:145 My 25 '45 650w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 8:543 Je '45 120w

Foreign Affairs 24:159 O '45 20w

"Obvious and unoriginal material. . . Redundant, rhetorical prose."
— Kirkus 13:53 F 1 '45 80w

"Although he is far less extreme than Friedrich Hayek in his devotion to economic orthodoxy, his book is no more convincing than 'The Road to Serfdom' in its thesis that a slightly modified laissez faire economy, plus the social good-will represented by the revolutionary slogan, would bring out all that is best in the best of possible worlds. One of the most insidious arguments of the defenders of nineteenth-century capitalism is that its defects should be cured by moral suasion rather than by political action. Marlio presents this argument with considerable brilliance, and many of his comments are well worth reading, but he still fails to demonstrate that if all business men were made completely free to pursue their own selfish interests, their combined efforts would automatically produce the greatest good for the greatest number." C. E. Noyes
+ — Nation 160:578 My 19 '45 450w

Reviewed by H. B. Parkes
Weekly Book Review p8 Je 10 '45 550w

MARLOWE, GEORGE FRANCIS. Coaching roads of old New England; their inns and taverns and their stories; il. with drawings by the author. 200p $3.50 Macmillan

917.4 New England—Description and travel. Roads—New England 45-784

Folklore, history, and tales of wayside inns, taverns, houses and other points of interest about the five main highways between Portsmouth and New York in the early days of New England.

Booklist 41:222 Ap 1 '45

Bookmark 6:13 My '45

"There is quiet charm in George Francis Marlowe's 'Coaching Roads of Old New England,' which is illustrated with exquisite little drawings by the author. . . The book is an appetizer. A list of references at the end hints at a way for readers to continue and substantiate Mr. Marlowe's studies for themselves by reading, until such time as they can do so by road." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 24 '45 850w

"Recommended only for large libraries." E. L. Lewis

Library J 70:117 F 1 '45 50w

"The many drawings are a delightful addition to an unusual book." R. A. Brown

+ Nation 160:393 Ap 7 '45 120w

"Mr. Marlowe has not made, and clearly did not set out to make, what the scholar calls in a favorite stereotype a 'contribution to knowledge.' Those who are at home in New England history will find in his pages much that is familiar, and an occasional bit of less familiar detail, but they will not find much to nourish their own work. Those less at home will find a pleasant guide, thoughtful but not crotchety, careful but not pedantic, to encourage them in their own travels in southern New England." Crane Brinton

+ New Eng Q 18:429 S '45 380w

"One of those pleasant journeys into the American past which in the midst of global warfare serve to reinforce and invigorate the texture of national consciousness. . . New Englanders themselves will welcome this book as a graceful survey of their treasures, enriched by the author's own sketches. Outsiders, finding Mr. Marlowe more courteous than accurate in his assumption of their basic acquaintance with New England history, may freshen their knowledge with this gentle anthology of anecdote." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p23 F 25 '45 400w

"Mr. Marlowe has put his book together neatly enough and made some pleasant pencil drawings for it, but only those who make a hobby of New England will really be interested."

New Yorker 21:80 F 17 '45 60w

"'Coaching Roads of Old New England' pleasantly fills a gap in New England regional literature. Take it from your book shelf when the war is over and carry it in your car. Your peace-time rides will become more meaningful." A. M. Jakeman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 550w

"Whenever an anecdote or an incident in history adds to [the] interest, it is easily and pleasantly told, and the drawings that come thick and fast in the pages that follow these routes are so true to place and atmosphere that they add greatly to the usefulness as well as the appearance of the volume."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 4 '45 250w

Wis Lib Bul 41:46 Ap '45

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. Repent in haste. 152p $1.50 Little

45-9462

The story of a war marriage that went wrong. The tale is told as it was gradually revealed to war correspondent Briggs, the friend of the young flyer in the Pacific, "Boysie" Boyden. When Briggs visited Boyden's parents and Daisy, the young wife, he learned the truth and then it was up to him to go back and tell it all to Boyden.

"The story is told with Marquandian skill, but it is Marquand in new guise. We have known him as a writer to whom the intricacies and inner motivations of the entire complex of modern life are grist, a writer whose understanding and ability to explain and interpret is on a par with his excellence as a story teller. Now, in 'Repent in Haste,' we see him forced to be a reporter. He can not encompass the things he saw and heard, he can only report them. . . When it comes to explaining what happened inside Boyden . . . Marquand is at a loss." A. C. Spectorsky

+ — Book Week p25 N 11 '45 650w

Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 10 '45 650w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 43:210 D 7 '45 420w

Kirkus 13:475 N 1 '45 190w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart

Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 80w

"It might have been just one more engaging story about wild and valiant fliers if Mr. Marquand had not taken the trouble and had the skill to inquire into their wildness and their valor, to look back into the past one of them left behind him and into the future to which he planned to return. The result is a moving and convincing story." Charles Poore

+ N Y Times p3 N 11 '45 1100w

"We have plenty of novelists in America who make Mr. Marquand's abilities seem as modest as his pretensions. And a book like 'Repent in Haste' cannot be called anything better than a thirty-five-thousand-word job that is Grade B but does not let down." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 21:97 N 10 '45 280w

Reviewed by T. M. Purdy

Sat R of Lit 28:13 N 10 '45 500w

"Untold reams of paper and millions of words have been used to caution, admonish and instruct the 'home folks' as to what their attitude should be toward their returning soldiers. It seems to me that in this little book Mr. Marquand speaks as the proxy of the soldiers themselves. Through him they seem to be saying, 'Don't be so frightened and upset about us. You are old, but remember, we are still young. You have seen we can dish it out, and you'll see we can take it, too.'" Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 2 '45 750w

"Within its modest scope Repent in Haste is masterly. And it has a surprise dénouement which is excellent, integral to the theme and yet still a surprise." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 35:381 winter '46 600w

MARRIOTT, ALICE L. Ten grandmothers. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 306p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

970.3 Kiowa Indians 45-1584

Short stories and sketches of life among the Kiowa Indians, bearing dates from 1847 to 1944. The stories are based on knowledge of Kiowa manners and customs, their traditions and beliefs, gained from the reminiscences of older members of the tribe and from their legends.

Am Hist R 50:859 Jl '45 100w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Mr 18 '45 800w

Booklist 41:207 Mr 15 '45

"Miss Marriott is an anthropologist but don't let that academic title scare you away; she can write. . . Her book will be of great interest to historians but the general reader will get as much pleasure in it as in many of the current crop of novels."

+ Boston Globe p13 F 7 '45 210w

"The author is an ethnologist of expert experience, which is good; but all her knowledge would hardly have mattered if she had lacked her sympathetic understanding of the Indians. For two summers, Miss Marriott lived among them and more than eight years she devoted to preparation for the writing of The Ten Grandmothers. The result is startlingly impressive." Margaret Williamson

MARRIOTT, A. L.—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 24 '45 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '45

"In the unself-conscious style, in the very human touches, in the tracing of the coming of the white men and the changes their advent set in train, this is able ethnological material, which makes the history of one tribe of American Indians a readable, interesting story."
+ Kirkus 13:55 F 1 '45 80w

"For the one reader in a million who has known any of these intimately, in an unspoiled native setting, this book stirs memories fragrant with wood-smoke and the clean scent of sage, and it is still pleasant reading for the uninitiated. Ceremonies and superstitions unfolded from the heart outward no longer appear strange or repellent, but natural and touching." E. G. Eastman
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 11 '45 650w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams
N Y Times p2 Ja 13 '46 1000w

"I do not know how high Miss Marriott may rank as an anthropologist but in the management of her material as an author she is a genius. Tales told hundreds if not thousands of times are improved in each retelling until, in the end, there is little if any room for improvement. True folk tales are perfect things. This story is told with the stark simplicity and economy of line of a Chinese brush-drawing and with the stimulating and vital directness which authenticates the illusion of direct translation." E. DeGolyer
+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 Mr 3 '45 550w

"This book by an ethnologist is done with considerable charm and unquestioned authenticity." E. G. Eastman
+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 7 '45 330w

"Each of the thirty-three sketches is a competently told short story, complete in itself and enjoyable as well. All are bound together by the continuity of acculturation and by the recurrence of the characters seen in successive ages until their places are taken by their children and grandchildren."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:21 S '45 220w

Reviewed by C. L. McNichols
Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 25 '45 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:100 O '45

"For the general reader, the story is as interesting as a good novel about the plains Indians, and for those who appreciate genuine authenticity it is, of course, vastly superior. But the professional reader in the social sciences should be warned, perhaps, that the book cannot be compared with systematic ethnography or with even first-rate life histories of a primitive people. Indeed, it would be unfair to judge it by such standards." L. W. Simmons
+ — Yale R n s 34:563 spring '45 900w

MARSH, DONALD BAILEY. Taxes without tears? 207p $2.50 Cattell

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Finance—U.S. Taxation—U.S. 45-3670

A discussion of the theory and methods, aims and objectives of taxation, in particular as taxes effect the national economy and especially the problem of full employment.

"This book is worthy of careful study and it should stimulate interest in the use of fiscal policy for a variety of purposes, although it probably will not bring many converts to the altar. The proposals for handling the monopoly problem appear to weaken, rather than to strengthen, the treatise. On the whole, however, a point of view on a controversial issue is skillfully presented." C. W. Macy
+ — Am Econ R 35:714 S '45 500w

"Keynesian economists will find many specific points of difference with the author, and many anti-Keynesians will reject this book with a wave of the hand. Nevertheless, the author is to be commended for a courageous, well-reasoned statement and analysis of a point of view. It is a point of view with which the reviewer finds himself much more often agreeing than disagreeing." H. M. Groves
Am Pol Sci R 39:795 Ag '45 600w

Reviewed by E. A. Beder
Canadian Forum 25:72 Je '45 280w

"In whole-heartedly embracing the doctrines of the fiscal policy school, the author places himself among a large group whose influence is undoubtedly great. Up to the present, however, their contributions have been mainly in the realm of theory. Apparently, the objective is an ideal society in which even moderate unemployment over and above a minimum classed as frictional would be nonexistent. But a convincing explanation how—through fiscal policy or otherwise—variations in employment and business activity can be held within a range of 10% of the average has not yet been presented. The application of the type of fiscal policy assumed to be desirable to our present economic and governmental structure might prove to be an insurmountable task." L. H. Kimmel
Chem & Eng N 23:1576 S 10 '45 300w

Current Hist 9:128 Ag '45 50w

"Dr. Marsh has obviously chosen a title which he hopes will have popular appeal, but he has not fully lived up to it. After an excellent and smoothly written introduction, the book shifts rapidly into the style of a good economics textbook. Even so, Dr. Marsh provides as good an introduction as any to the trends in economic theory initiated by Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, and Professor Alvin Hansen." C. E. Noyes
Nation 160:628 Je 2 '45 350w

MARSH, ELLEN. Drink to the hunted. 413p $3 Dutton
45-3505

The heroine of this novel is young Laurie Bailey, daughter of an American soldier in the first world war, and a German girl. Part of Laurie's childhood was spent in America, part in traveling about Europe, but the most of it was lived in the home of her grandparents in a Rhineland town. The book ends with Laurie's departure from Germany in the first year of the second world war.

"The author of 'Drink to the Hunted' has, beyond most writers, the gift of expressiveness. She can distill the essentials of a complex feeling into a single phrase, or present a significant fragment of an individual's or of a nation's life in a single brief, unforgettable scene. And, in 'Drink to the Hunted,' better than anyone else whose efforts I have seen, she has managed to put a major portion of the Germany of our time into the overflowing pages of a single novel." F. H. Bullock
+ Book Week p3 My 6 '45 700w

Booklist 42:19 S '45

"Ellen Marsh's first novel is a remarkable achievement, for despite the fact that the story is apt to move too slowly at times, the author's writing is characterized by delicacy and human understanding." Eveline Dienes
+ Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 300w

"Ellen Marsh has written a first novel of depth and perception. Whether you agree or not with her facile explanations of how nazism got the upper hand in a land where thinking people took a back seat, you will be held by her characterizations and her understanding and feeling for her mother's countrymen. . . While I do not always agree with Miss Marsh in her arguments (she is not sure of herself in her religious passages, and at times her political answers are too simple) and although her book is occasionally over-written and at the same time too spotty in its short episodes, she has displayed an unusual writing talent and one that we should certainly hear from again." P. T. Hartung
+ — Commonweal 42:435 Ag 17 '45 650w

"A substantial sympathetic, provocative first novel, introducing a youthful writer who knows the two continents of which she writes."
+ Kirkus 13:141 Ap 1 '45 210w

"Drink to the Hunted is notable, as a first novel, for its ambitious scope—life in Germany from about 1920 to 1940—and thesis. . . The book grows considerably in interest when Miss Marsh begins to describe the changes in the lives of her characters brought on by Hitler's coming to power and the present war. But the Nazi and anti-Nazi characters are all rather dim beside Laurie and her mother, whose fortunes, in turn, remain insignificant in terms of the book's political theme. Which will probably not prevent this novel's being unjustifiably attacked . . . as propaganda for a soft peace." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 112:764 My 28 '45 300w

"The novel captures expertly the atmosphere of the burgermeister grandfather's Rhineland home, the Germanic mixture of sentiment and violence, piety and vulgarity, so bewildering to Americans. If this were not the icing on the cake, nothing more would be required than to vote another round of applause for a new and charming talent. But every page, every paragraph, puts forward its justification of the 'good' German. . . The author has obviously had her own struggle, and her conclusions shine for her with the still untarnished aura of discovery; she believes her own words sincerely. Time will answer best whether she has been tricked by her hopes." Thelma Purtell

+ — N Y Times p22 My 6 '45 310w

"Miss Marsh, who is very young, has done the sort of capable job which publishers love to hail as a 'remarkable first novel' and she may before long become a competent writer of fiction."

New Yorker 21:89 My 12 '45 120w

"The author, who completed this first novel before her twenty-second birthday, has probably lived through many of the experiences she describes. . . Her style lacks distinction and occasionally has a slightly foreign flavor. Yet in its final effect this novel is a distinct achievement: many of its portraits, both of persons and events, possess a photographic actuality; the central conflict between mother and daughter is sometimes painfully real; above all, the author seems faithfully to reproduce minutiae of existence in Germany between the two wars that have special importance today and that might otherwise remain inaccessible." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:29 S 8 '45 750w

"Ellen Marsh is well acquainted with the people about whom she writes and has probably drawn heavily upon her own life to supply many of the incidents of the story. This in no way detracts from her book, but rather gives it the substance and sincerity that come only from experience." Ander Hartshorn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 420w

"Ellen Marsh is twenty-two years old in calendar years. She is a great deal older in mind and in emotion. Her first novel, 'Drink to the Hunted,' is a story of childhood and youth, but the backward glance is free of the conventional nostalgia and dramatization that burdens most books of this sort. Her clear-visioned portrayal of her characters, sensitive and perceptive, is rooted in a maturity that recognizes the precarious balance of strength and weakness in human beings as individuals and in human beings in the mass." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 6 '45 850w

MARSH, GEORGE TRACY. Ask no quarter. 572p $3 Morrow

45-2395

Historical novel of colonial Newport, the hero of which is a blond young giant named Hugh Jocelyn. Against a background of Indian fighting, privateering, pirates, and sea warfare, Jocelyn rises from poverty to comparative power and marries an aristocratic young beauty.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts

Book Week p7 My 6 '45 600w

Booklist 41:287 Je 1 '45

"It's a great story for all who like action piled on action."

Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

"An overlong, overlush but eminently readable tale."

+ — Kirkus 13:42 F 1 '45 190w

"The tale is vigorous, colorful, full of action, for men in the Sabatini, Stevenson, Van Wyck Mason tradition, and will be popular. Of some special Rhode Island historical interest." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 70:355 Ap 15 '45 70w

"Mr. Marsh is a fine hand at describing fights —from fist fights under sea-water to privateer attacks against heavily armed pirate ships. But the Jocelyn adventures are bogged down by the abundance of his information on a hundred details. . . The style is stilted and stiff in its adherence to the manners of the time. Jocelyn's love affairs too are on the wooden side. Shorn of its learned padding the book would run to a livelier tune. As it is, its chief appeal for the general reader will lie in its rousing sea fights and Jocelyn's stiff-necked war against injustice." Barbara Bond

+ — N Y Times p24 Ap 29 '45 230w

"A better than average historical novel by a literate writer who shows an easy familiarity with the special character of Colonial Rhode Island, where part of the scene is laid. . . There are some chapters in which Mr. Marsh manages a sailing vessel superbly. If he only had equal ability to control his characters, who talk the reader's head off, his novel would have benefited."

+ — New Yorker 21:90 My 19 '45 130w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 390w

"'Ask No Quarter' is a refreshing and able story, a fine piece of entertainment, with a sound historical basis. Some of the conversations are inordinately long, but this seems to be a fault of all historical novels. When characters are seated in a tavern over noggins of rum talking to each other in an outlandish sort of lingo they go on for pages and can't seem to stop. There never yet was a historical novel that couldn't have been boiled down a third to good effect. But this is a minor point, after all; the reader can skip it, as he always does. The fact remains that 'Ask No Quarter' is a bully yarn, told with genuine enthusiasm and skill." Lincoln Colcord

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 My 6 '45 750w

MARSH, IRVING T., and EHRE, EDWARD, eds. Best sports stories of 1944. 335p il $3 Dutton

796 Sports

Fifty some sketches from newspapers and magazines reflecting the American sport scene in wartime. Included are "sixteen of the year's best sports pictures and a sports record book including the year's headlines day by day, 1944 champions in all sports, track and field and swimming records." (Subtitle) No index.

Book Week p6 Jl 8 '45 230w

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45

"Swell job both of selection of variety of material and top drawer quality, livelier, more human than the Esquire collection."

+ Kirkus 13:214 My 15 '45 150w

"Humor, pathos, controversy, criticism and human interest are contained in this very readable cross-section of one of the most unusual years in sports history. Recommended for older boys and girls." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 70:640 Jl '45 110w

New Yorker 21:70 Jl 28 '45 100w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 1 '45 390w

"The editors announce that they intend to make a practice of getting out a yearly collection, or anthology, of sports stories, pictures and facts. Not a bad idea. Especially if it continues to be as sound a record as this." Stanley Walker

MARSH, I. T.—Continued
+ Weekly Book Review p21 Ag 5 '45 400w
Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

MARSH, NGAIO. Died in the wool. 270p $2 Little [8s 6d Collins]
45-2360

Detective story.

"Due to elaborate exposition in the opening chapters, some readers may find the first half of the book somewhat slow going, but once Alleyn turns from assimilating information to using it, a rapid and suspenseful pace is maintained to the end. As usual, Miss Marsh's well-known attention to detail is rewarding." Elizazeth Bullock
+ Book Week p8 Ap 1 '45 140w
Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 90w

"Good psychological background for a well-sustained crime story."
+ Kirkus 13:44 F 1 '45 70w
New Repub 112:455 Ap 2 '45 70w

"Here is a story Ibsen might have told, if you can imagine Ibsen writing with this light-fingered ease. In fact, it is all so absorbing as character-revelation that one is a little startled (when the killer makes his second try) to realize that this is a detective story after all. By that time, of course, Alleyn has discarded such obvious red herrings as the purloined Johnny Walker, and the Bach fugue played in the spring afterglow, and knows he need only hide next to the wool-press at midnight to solve his case. Hardened fans, who should know better, will hold their breath in that chill vigil." William Du Bois
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 11 '45 500w

"A sluggish mystery redeemed by fine local color."
+ — New Yorker 21:96 Mr 17 '45 80w

"Tops."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 10 '45 40w

"The solution is no particular surprise, but the book is a thoroughly interesting and well-constructed example of the more literate whodunit." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 190w

"Baldly stated the idea seems either horrible or comically ruthless, but in the calm, unhurried, not-to-be-questioned style of 'Died in the Wool' it is simply a problem that has occurred and must be investigated. The only drawback is that the author, confident in her well-earned reputation for technical dexterity, allows herself repetitions which are tiresome to all but the most expert readers."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 24 '45 120w

"Ngaio Marsh has taken a sterner line this time, omitting much of her peace-time social play; but there's still the matchless Marsh quality throughout. As for the Phoebe Atwood Taylor title, we guess it was simply too good to resist, though it hardly clicks with the pervading mood of the story. All in all this is Grade A plus." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p19 Mr 11 '45 190w

MARSHAK, IL'IA IAKOVLEVICH (M. ILIN, pseud). How the automobile learned to run; pictures by Herbert Kruckman. (Young world bks) [28p] $1.25 Int. pubs.
629.2 Automobiles—Juvenile literature
45-35208

This is the story of the automobile from the early steam-driven wagon of Paris in 1769 to the jeeps, buses and streamlined cars of today.

"Thanks to Ilin's lively text and Herbert Kruckman's humorous drawings, what might have been a dull, informational treatise is so much fun that you don't even notice that you're learning while you read. . . Ilin can make the world of science more interesting to children than almost any other writer today."
+ Book Week p4 N 11 '45 180w
Booklist 42:80 N 1 '45

"The historical background is excellent, the section on modern motors necessarily rather loose. Perhaps a later edition, when new cars are on the market, can revise this. Excitement, humor and accuracy are heightened by Herbert Kruckman's big, brightly colored pictures, in two colors and black and white. Clear type—attractive page layout—cloth binding. Excellent merchandise as well as library appeal. Good value."
+ Kirkus 13:397 S 1 '45 190w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney
Library J 70:1027 N 1 '45 60w

"The illustrations are graphic and vigorous. They recreate the periods in history with humor and realism. They are printed in red and yellow as well as in black and white and the type and format are attractive. It is an informing picture book that boys will especially enjoy." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:50 N 10 '45 180w

"Here is a typical Ilin book—and nobody but this Russian popularizer of science for children and adult illiterates can present an invention of man quite so well to young children as he can." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 28 '45 360w
Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

MARSHALL, BRUCE. The world, the flesh and Father Smith. 191p $2.50 Houghton 45-5839

Portrait of a naive, humorous Scottish Catholic priest, whose cherished dream is that Scotland will return to the ancient faith. To that end he goes once a year to the protestant cathedral to pray for Scotland's conversion. The sketches of Father Smith and his parishioners cover the years 1908 to the present.

"The greater the fear and uncertainty, the greater the need for faith. That is why, despite our shell of skepticism, men everywhere are listening for the note of affirmation. I have never met Bruce Marshall, but I think I should enjoy doing so. I read him to be a fearless Scott with a trinity of virtues which would make him distinguished in any modern company of novelists: he writes with an open heart, a salty understanding of frailty, and with the most delightful, impertinent wit that I have chuckled over this year." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 176:127 Jl '45 600w

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p4 Jl 1 '45 500w
Booklist 41:341 Jl 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 N '45

"This vastly entertaining and unmistakable original story contains 99% distilled genius and 1% deadly virus. . . As indicated above the book has a fatal flaw. Perhaps from anxiety to correct the notion that Catholics exaggerate the gravity of sexual sin, the author leans so far backward that he topples over; and his readers may easily receive the impression that the Church in practice condones transgressions against the Sixth Commandment as offenses which hardly require repentance." Joseph McSorley
+ — Cath World 161:438 Ag '45 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"The author of 'Father Malachy's Miracle' has given us a novel of clerical life which is even better than his first great success. It is better because the canvas is broader and the treatment more deeply serious, though nowhere does he lose his delicacy and charm and lightness of touch. . . All in all, 'The World, the Flesh and Father Smith' is the best novel of Catholic clerical life to have appeared since the days of Canon Sheehan. There may be some readers who simply do not like novels of clerical life, but this class apart, it is difficult to conceive of anyone—Catholic, Protestant or unbelieving—who will not enjoy every page of this book and some pages of it mightily."

+ Commonweal 42:314 Jl 13 '45 450w

"There's a contagious humor, a warmth of characterization, a whimsical awareness of the foibles, the human weaknesses, the inconsistencies of the faith, while at the same time there's a profound undercurrent of belief not only in the tenets of Catholicism but in the basic values."
+ Kirkus 13:183 My 1 '45 230w

"Can be recommended as superior entertainment even for heretics." Diana Trilling
+ Nation 161:139 Ag 11 '45 100w
New Repub 113:358 S 17 '45 120w

"If this novel is short on plot, if it is not a work of great range or variety, it has depth and poignancy. It is that rare and welcome thing, a study of genuine goodness, goodness which is of tenacious dedication to the right, of unspectacular but unquenchable courage. It is delightfully written in a style almost conversational. Mr. Marshall has a sharp eye for human foibles, whether in Bishops and baronets or in novelists and navvies. But his flicking of a phrase draws not blood but wholesome laughter. The novel's cumulative effect is, gratifyingly, as heartening as it is sobering." J. S. Kennedy
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 1 '45 500w

"It's hard to make the peculiar charm of this novel sound convincing. . . It is written with simplicity, a serious, G. K. Chesterton reverence, and a touch (not too offensive) of sentimentality. Such things as a group of fluttery French nuns, parochial gossip, and Father Smith's hopes and disappointments are bound together by only the most tenuous plot, and yet there is in this brief narrative a delicate but very real vitality."
+ New Yorker 21:59 Je 30 '45 120w

"There is warmth and beauty and good humor in Mr. Marshall's faith as well as wit in its defense. There is nothing dramatic in Father Smith's story. Mr. Marshall gives him no miracle like that he provided for Father Malachy. Or, maybe there is a miracle here in good reading about a good man secure in his faith." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 28:7 Jl 14 '45 600w

" 'The World, the Flesh and Father Smith' is delightful from start to finish. It surely would disarm many bigots who fear and hate what they have not experienced. And the sincere, even gallant, faith of the little priest warms the heart and feeds the soul, even while the reader chuckles or sighs with Father Smith over the frailties of mankind." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 550w

"One is grateful to Mr. Marshall for introducing into his pages priests like Father Bonnyboat, Monsignor O'Duffy and the Bishop. They lighten the burden of Father Smith's preoccupation, however poetic, with matters of theology, ritual and the state of the human soul. As a character study of a Priest of the Church, a gentle, wise, scholarly and deeply devout man, this book holds distinction. As a work of fiction, its appeal is limited." Rose Feld
+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 1 '45 1150w
Wis Lib Bul 41:113 N '45

MARSHALL, EDISON. The upstart. 280p $2.50 Farrar
45-3112

A fast moving adventure story which begins in London in 1753 and after a half dozen years in the English provinces, ends as the hero departs for Georgia. Dick Fingers in 1753 was a London street gamin and petty thief, but the years as a strolling player with a provincial acting troupe eventually enabled him to play the role of gentleman he had always believed himself to be.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p4 My 20 '45 700w

"Good yarn of its kind."
Kirkus 13:20 Ja 15 '45 190w

" 'The Upstart' lacks some of the gusto of the author's 'Great Smith.' . . But the reader who is looking for a truly relaxing historical novel, with the pull of adventure on every other page, will find his meat here in generous portion. Mr. Marshall knows all the tricks, from love in a haymow to the aftermath of well-planned murder. Even in its swashbuckling moments, his romance has a solid underpinning; even as he hurdles his wildest coincidence, he does not let the audience down." William Du Bois
+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 15 '45 500w

"This is a fine picaresque novel of the slums and theatres of England in the earlier years of the eighteenth century. . . Condensation makes the book sound somewhat like Mrs. Southworth or The Duchess but it is really closer to Dickens and Fanny Burney, or some of Thackeray's stories. It is historically veritable, without intruding learned data, and warm and moving in almost every page." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 My 5 '45 400w

"No Edison Marshall fan should miss 'Upstart,' for it is one of his best." George Conrad
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 15 '45 300w
Wis Lib Bul 41:85 Jl '45

MARSHALL, FRANCIS. London West. 95p il $3.50 (15s) Studio
914.213 London—Social life and customs
45-1604

"As staff artist to Vogue, Mr. Francis Marshall roamed at large, sketchbook in hand, through the pre-war London of the leisured and pleasure-loving, and in 'London West' he has collected his sketches, clothed them with his own recollections and made them into a book that is infinitely nostalgic." Times [London] Lit Sup

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ag 25 '45 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p572 N 25 '44 420w
Weekly Book Review p3 Je 3 '45 270w

MARSHALL, GEORGE CATLETT. General Marshall's report. See United States. Army. Chief of staff

MARSHALL, GEORGE CATLETT. Selected speeches and statements; ed. by H. A. DeWeerd. 263p $2.75 Infantry journal
355.04 Military art and science. U.S.—Defenses. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 45-7478

"The statements and speeches cover the period from Oct. 1, 1938, when Marshall was Assistant Chief of Staff (he became 'the professional head of the Army' on the day the Germans invaded Poland) to June 16, 1945, when, the Germans having capitulated and the Pacific struggle being on the point of liquidation, he spoke before a House committee to urge universal peace-time military training. Some of the speeches contained in the volume are 'occasional pieces'—an Army Day address, a brief message to the graduating class of General Marshall's alma mater, the Virginia Military Institute. Some of them are highly detailed expositions of military needs and policies, evoked by Congressional committees during a period of national crisis." Weekly Book Review

Book Week p10 O 7 '45 170w

"This is a record of how one man met his great responsibilities during one of the great periods of crisis for this country and for the world. It is a record written not in retrospect but from day to day through the years as the crisis developed. It would seem to be mandatory reading for future historians of the war and of our democracy." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p8 S 23 '45 500w

"It is most encouraging to see, at so early a date, such a volume as this one emerging from the fog of war. General Marshall speaks as he thinks, in clear and orderly terms. Throughout the book, there is no single instance of loose thinking, or confusion, or of rhodomontade. General Marshall's style has a simple eloquence which springs from complete knowledge of his subject and an utter sincerity; but there are no purple passages." G. F. Eliot

MARSHALL, G. C.—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 28:8 S 22 '45 1000w

"Major De Weerd's illuminating introduction and his careful editing, briefing, and indexing of these papers facilitate their use for what Dr. Donald S. Freeman proclaims them, 'a major source book of American military history.' "
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 D '45 240w

"The book is well worth reading, not only as a vital part of recent history, not only as a revelation of character, but as an example of the type of man and the type of thinking which is absolutely necessary for the maintenance of effective military force in a republic." H. W. Baehr
+ Weekly Book Review p10 S 16 '45 500w

MARSHALL, JAMES, pseud. See Rister, C.

MARSTON, FRANK SWAIN. Peace conference of 1919; organization and procedure; issued under the aupspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 276p $3.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

940.31412 Peace conference, 1919 45-6755

"This monograph traces the process by which the transition from war to peace was effected between 1918 and 1920. The author, whose attention is given over primarily to organizational problems rather than to the substance of the treaties, shows clearly how heavy was the price paid for the failure to foresee the dangers that would arise from a too rapid demobilization, both military and economic." Foreign affairs

Reviewed by F. M. Anderson
Am Hist R 51:98 O '45 400w

"Dealing with a rather technical subject, this book is indeed a model of historical scholarship, supported by maturity of judgment and political insight." H. J. Morgenthau
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1212 D '45 750w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 My 20 '45 60w

"A most valuable and timely monograph."
+ Foreign Affairs 23:691 Jl '45 80w

"Dr. Marston's concern is not with the content of the peace settlement as such but with how it was brought about. His description of the organization and procedure of the conference is perhaps the most detailed we have had, and has clearly involved an immense amount of research. It has not been his purpose to draw up an indictment, but what his careful study brings out with startling clarity is the utter lack of preparation for making the peace."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1 Ja 6 '45 450w

MARTIN, A. E. The outsiders. 218p $2 Simon & Schuster

45-2947

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p8 Ap 1 '45 110w

"Only fair in interest."
Kirkus 13:22 Ja 15 '45 80w

"Interesting for its unusual background and characters, but no great shakes as detection." E. H.
+ — New Repub 112:455 Ap 2 '45 60w

"The story is notable for its sympathetic characterization of show people." I. A.
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 1 '45 140w

"Very difficult material well handled by the author of 'Sinners Never Die,' who seems to be shaping up into a first-rate mystery writer."
+ New Yorker 21:84 Mr 31 '45 70w

Sat R of Lit 28:32 Mr 17 '45 40w

"Admirers of 'Sinners Never Die,' Mr. Martin's 1944 mystery, should enjoy this one even more." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 25 '45 90w

MARTIN, ALFRED WILHELM OTTO VON. Sociology of the renaissance [tr. by W. L. Luetkens]. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 100p $2.50 Oxford [8s 6d Routledge]

945.05 Renaissance. Italy—Social conditions 45-7707

"Study of the social and economic background of the Italian Renaissance, showing the material conditions which accompanied and to some extent determined that great period of artistic and intellectual activity." (Publisher's note)

"This is a smooth translation of a work first published in Germany in 1932. . . The slender book shows the roots of the author's scholarship to be solidly embedded in history in spite of his efforts to submerge it by rationing citations and relegating them to the end of the book." F. C. Church
+ Am Hist R 51:108 O '45 480w

Reviewed by J. H. Mueller
Am J Soc 51:78 Jl '45 330w

Am Soc R 10:456 Je '45 50w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 F 25 '45 90w

"To see in Machiavelli a sixteenth century Oswald Spengler is perhaps less a sociological interpretation than a deplorable 'modern' mistake. (The passage of the Discorsi to which von Martin refers proves that Machiavelli was a democrat and not a forerunner of Fascism.) All the same, if read with caution, the book is suggestive and interesting, though clearly stamped by the 1931 situation in Germany."
New Statesman & Nation 29:98 F 10 '45 180w

MARTIN, FRANCES GARDINER (MCENTEE). No school Friday; with pictures by Dorothy McEntee. 135p $2 Harper

45-9574

Ronny and his friends engage in many of the usual boy activities over a long week-end.

Booklist 42:113 D 1 '45

"A rambling story, without much focus, but real boy stuff, not prettified."
Kirkus 13:398 S 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 70:1138 D 1 '45 50w

"Less substantial than the author's 'Knuckles Down!' this is still an entertaining and realistic story."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 6 '46 90w

MARTIN, FREDERICK. Junker menace. 155p $2 Smith, Richard R.

940.5314443 Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany. Prussia—Nobility. National characteristics, German 45-4499

"A penetrating analysis of Prussian Junker domination over the minds and institutions of the German people. The history of this feudal influence dating back many centuries is told briefly, and the psychology by which it flourished and extended itself is explained in such a way as to constitute a constructive approach to the German problem. The author's program for the future treatment of Germany is given persuasive and realistic presentation." Booklist

"The principal weakness of Mr. Martin's otherwise excellent study is his failure to see the German problem in its relation to the interests of the Great Powers." H. L. Childs
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1036 O '45 900w

Booklist 41:299 Je 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 14 '45 360w

"Mr. Martin's book is full of over-simplifications, exaggerations, distortions of historical facts—all typical of those authors who in writing about Germany offer a very simple formula for the solution of an extremely complicated problem." Joseph Bornstein
Nation 161:65 Jl 21 '45 80w

"Mr. Martin's analysis of the Junker menace is both economic and social. His material is not new and most of the questions connected with his subject have been quite recently threshed out in the more scholarly studies of Mr. Gerschenkron and Miss Muncy. Because of the considerable importance of the Junker question for the correct understanding of German history, the more journalistic treatment by Mr. Martin would still be justified if his book were better written and if it did not put the entire problem in a thoroughly unhistorical framework." H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 113:196 Ag 13 '45 190w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 26 '45 500w

MARTIN, HARRISON P. Heritage of the navy; drawings by Gordon Grant. 145p $2 Hebberd

359 U.S. Navy—Juvenile literature. U.S.—History, Naval—Juvenile literature

"A very brief story of our Navy from its origin as the Continental Navy in 1775 to Pearl Harbor Sunday, told in highlights. The brightest of these is the victorious one-ship battle of the Wyoming, commanded by McDougal, against the Japanese off Shimoneski in 1863." Library J

"Various gallant enterprises of our Navy are competently described, but the interest to young people will stem from the facts rather than the style. Moderately recommended." Alice Vielehr
Library J 70:1192 D 15 '45 80w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 70w

MARTIN, JOHN STUART, ed. Picture history of Russia; with the consultation of members of the staff for the intensive study of contemporary Russian civilization at Cornell university. 376p il maps $3.75 Crown

947 Russia—History—Pictorial works
45-9897

"Over 1,200 reproductions of photographs, paintings, prints, maps and charts serve to give color and life to the involved and stormy story of the Russian land. Besides the brief text that goes with each picture, each of the successive periods in the thousand-year-long tale is introduced by perhaps 1,500 words of solid matter, representing considerable skill in synthesis." (N Y Times) Chronology. Index.

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor
Book Week p5 N 18 '45 550w

Booklist 42:126 D 15 '45

Kirkus 13:504 N 15 '45 170w

"To student and layman alike, this picture history of Russia will prove a fascinating record." B. D. Wolfe
+ N Y Times p12 D 2 '45 500w

"A volume of innumerable pictures, not very well reproduced but worth the moderate price. Half the accompanying text is taken up with the Revolution and Soviet Russia, which it discusses without political bias. Unfortunately, it is written in a sort of Time style and sounds as if the author had done a quick reference-library job."
+ — New Yorker 21:68 D 29 '45 50w

Reviewed by Louis Fischer
Sat R of Lit 29:8 Ja 12 '46 650w

"Every book which may contribute to our knowledge of Russia performs a highly useful function in these days when Russian-American relations are of such vital importance. Pictures cannot possibly tell the whole story of Russia's past, nor provide an adequate interpretation of the forces which made present-day Russia, but within such limitations, Mr. Martin has done an excellent job."
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 20 '46 250w

MARTIN, SIDNEY WALTER. Florida during the territorial days. 308p il maps $3 Univ. of Ga.

975.9 Florida—History 45-848

"The book deals primarily with the American territorial period in Florida, from 1821 to 1845. In addition, there is an opening chapter, wherein Dr. Martin reviews the events after 1810 leading to the treaty of purchase and its aftermath. A topical arrangement is used. . . A satisfactory bibliography and index, as well as maps and other illustrations, add also to its general value." Am Hist R

"The present study by Sidney Walter Martin is another important contribution to the growing list of work relating to the history of the southeastern region, and deserves the careful attention of all interested in this phase of our national development. As the title suggests . . . possibly the most apparent shortcoming is the author's failure to include certain background materials that might have greatly aided the reader to understand territorial Florida." V. E. Chatelain
+ — Am Hist R 50:854 Jl '45 240w

"The informal and conversational style makes the book interesting and readable; sound scholarship is evidenced by the carefully prepared footnotes."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:27 Mr '45 160w

MARX, ALEXANDER. Studies in Jewish history and booklore. 458p $3 Jewish theological seminary of Am.

296 Jews—History. Jewish literature
44-6901

"The studies included in this volume are a product of some thirty years of research. All except one of them were published previously in various scientific periodicals and are brought together here and presented as a token of appreciation to Professor Marx's outstanding scholarly attainment in bibliography and history. . . The first twelve of the twenty-six essays 'deal with problems of Jewish history and literature and are arranged chronologically according to the persons, books, or events with which they are concerned. The next six papers are chiefly bibliographical while the last eight contain short biographical sketches' of personalities and scholars, some of whom the author knew intimately." (Am Hist R) Index.

"This tome comprises a most unusual and excellent collection of essays on rare and unique books hitherto unpublished or not easily available. The volume presents a cross section of scholarship and thought contributing immensely to the understanding of Jewish history and learning. . . The book is more than a reprint of essays and addresses. Each essay or note has undergone revision and enlargement, and many new notes were added, based on the author's scholarly research. For example, the essay on the Hebrew type in non-Hebrew books occupies now fifty pages instead of the original twenty-eight. The six studies representing the bibliographical section, written in a lucid style, enhance the scholarly volume. In fine, the essays are representative of the mighty handiwork of a brilliant and assiduous historian and bibliophile. It is a book of real distinction, rich, colorful, and stimulating." A. I. Katsh
+ Am Hist R 50:305 Ja '45 700w

Reviewed by L. C. Wroth
Weekly Book Review p15 Ag 6 '44 1050w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. New chum. 268p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 45-5972

"Mr. Masefield's book 'is another chapter in his autobiographical series which opened with In the Mill,' but I feel certain that the author had youthful readers very much in mind when he wrote it. It lacks all the usual historical element of an autobiography; dates, names of people and places have been omitted; and with all other human beings shielded behind a nickname, official title, or collection of initials, the interest never shifts from the author himself. Everything is seen through the eyes of a 13-year-old boy, and the greatness of the book—apart from the fascination of its subject—lies in the exactness with which Mr. Masefield has recollected and reconstructed the scenes of that first term in the 'Conway.'" Spec

MASEFIELD, JOHN—Continued

---

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
Atlantic 176:135 Ag '45 550w

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Jl 29 '45 450w

Booklist 42:17 S '45

Bookmark 6:14 N '45

Cath World 161:525 S '45 200w

"Mr. Masefield's style is natural; that is, it is sober and factual when talking of common things, and rises to an easy poetry when considering ships and seagulls. The effects are never forced; and all Mr. Masefield's experiences while in training, in the ship's school or swabbing decks, are beautifully rendered. But is Mr. Masefield's life quite momentous enough to justify the immense length at which he is telling it?" Harold Hobson
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 14 '45 250w

"The market is primarily for those to whom ships are of paramount interest. There is little of Masefield the boy, apart from the intense concentration on the job in hand."
Kirkus 13:150 Ap 1 '45 170w

"Excellent for older boys." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 70w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 22 '44 300w

"Mr. Masefield's memory does not suffer a sea change. For most of us, if we remember them at all, our youthful days are seen as either a late Turner or a Hieronimus Bosch, according to our temperament; but for this remarkable man the picture after more than fifty years has become neither rich nor strange. . . How much better is this honest, vivid account than the 'tall ship' songs, the nostalgic anthology pieces, by which Mr. Masefield the seaman is all too generally known." Naomi Lewis
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:97 F 10 '45 600w

"As in the best of his poetry, the vitality, stemming from his years at sea, is combined with the conservatism of his later years. Only at times is the mixture of vitality and conservatism a trifle one-sided and then, for all its carefully pruned writing, 'New Chum' is undeniably dull." William Kehoe
N Y Times p3 Jl 22 '45 600w

"Mr. Masefield, in this story of his gradual transformation from a new chum (apprentice seaman) into an old hand, has written some of the most impeccable prose of his career and, in addition, has given an essentially simple record more drama and intensity than is to be found in a whole batch of novels."
+ New Yorker 21:60 Jl 21 '45 80w

"Most readers will probably not bother with the underlying implications of 'New Chum.' It is worth reading for its surfaces alone. The writing has moments of great beauty, unfortunately set off by a good deal that seems glib and careless." Alexander Laing
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:8 Ag 4 '45 1050w

Reviewed by G. P. Griggs
+ Spec 173:602 D 29 '44 450w

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 24 '45 360w

"Britain's 67-year-old Poet Laureate puts his memories, in pure and simple descriptive prose, to better use than ever. Like its great predecessor Life on the Mississippi (which Author Masefield has re-read once a year for decades), New Chum has the freshness of a story that never grows old—the story of a boy's initiation into a man-sized job."
+ Time 46:90 Jl 9 '45 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p598 D 9 '44 850w

" 'New Chum' is a kindly and important piece of autobiography, as well as an invaluable addition to our nautical literature. With all the sweetness of utter truth, it reveals where that love of ships and the sea that has dominated Masefield's life had its beginnings. We must have more of this, for 'New Chum' is all too brief, and does not even take the boy on his first trip to sea. Masefield must now give us the story of his sea career in full details, ships and dates and voyages, shipmates and impressions by the way, storms and landfalls, the joy and anguish of bygone days." Lincoln Colcord
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 22 '45 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 41:100 O '45

MASING, GEORG. Ternary systems; introd. to the theory of three component systems; tr. by B. A. Rogers. 173p $4.50 Reinhold

541.39 Phase rule and equilibrium. Solutions, Solid. Alloys 44-9445

"An advanced mathematical discussion for metallurgical engineers, explaining the equations of state and space diagrams employed in the calculations of three component alloy systems. Specific application of the principles is presented in the last three chapters: Iron-silicon-aluminum alloys; Tin-zinc-copper alloys; and The allotropic forms of iron in the ternary system. The book is a translation from the German." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Originally published in 1932 [in German], this book should be of real value to anyone interested in the geometry of three-component liquid-solid systems. It is not a book for casual reading, but one that requires careful study." E. R. Gilliland
+ Chem & Eng N 23:196 Ja 25 '45 150w

"B. A. Rogers has supplied an excellent translation of this work, and added some critical footnotes which indicate that he is thoroughly familiar with both the technological and the linguistic aspects of his assignment. He has succeeded in imparting to his English edition all the qualities which make Masing's sober, objective way of presentation so attractive. The illustrations as well as the index and the typography leave virtually nothing to be desired." M. F. A. Wulfinghoff
+ Chem & Met Eng 51:219 D '44 150w

Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:62 O '44

MASON, BERNARD STERLING. Book for junior woodsmen; drawings by Frederic H. Kock. 120p $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.54 Lumbering. Camping 45-35158

Pictures and text tell in detail how to live in the summer woods, with emphasis on the use of the axe.

Booklist 42:23 S '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

"Designed for readers from 12 and up—but should prove valuable for amateur woodsmen of all ages. Good scout material for boys and girls. The author sets forth his facts succinctly and vividly; the diagrams are clear, the photographs telling, the text handled with sufficiently light touch. Good gift for boys who like outdoors."
+ Kirkus 13:400 S 1 '45 90w

Wis Lib Bul 41:114 N '45

MASON, JOHN PHILIP, and MANNING, JOSEPH FRANCIS. Technology of plastics and resins. 493p il $6.50 Van Nostrand

668.4 Plastics. Resinous products 45-9248

"First college textbook on plastics and resins covering chemical reactions involved in their preparation and practical applications. First theory, then methods of preparation, properties and uses of resins and plastics and last, fabrication techniques—compounding and mold designs, molding, casting, laminating and coating procedures." (Library J) Index.

"The book, written for use in college courses, is well up to the standard of most college texts. To those who have a fair knowledge of general and organic chemistry, the book can be recommended as being instructive and helpful. Those who have no training in chemistry will still find it helpful to some extent but much of it will be beyond their understanding."

+ Chem & Eng N 23:2264 D 10 '45 400w

Reviewed by W. P. Moeller

Chem & Met Eng 52:263 D '45 200w

Library J 70:638 Jl '45 60w

MASON, MRS MARY (FRANK). Patients' library; a guide book for volunteer hospital library service [2d ptg, with new foreword]. 117p il $1 Wilson, H.W.

027.66 Hospital libraries 45-4015

"Mrs. Mason's useful guidebook first appeared in paper covers in 1942 (reviewed in the Library Quarterly, XIII [1943], 273-75). It is now issued more durably in cloth. The bibliography of book-selection aids has been brought up to date; a six-page section on 'Case Histories of Patients' Reading,' consisting of an article on the subject by Ruth M. Tews which appeared in the Library Journal for June 1, 1944, has been added; and there are a few minor textual revisions." Library Q

Library Q 15:278 Jl '45 70w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 23 '45 250w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Happy Jack; il. by George and Doris Hauman. 136p $1.50 Macmillan

45-10359

Story of a black mule, one of the performers in a dog and pony show. He manages to get to a farm where he considers there is too much work, so he takes to kicking. On the way back to the pony show he rescues the farm children from drowning, and finds himself a hero.

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46

"A successful story for first and second graders, with clear large type for ease in self reading."

+ Kirkus 13:337 Ag 1 '45 90w

"A good story for third-and fourth-graders to read. Large print and good format." G. E. Joline

+ Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 80w

"A young black mule with high spirits and an enormous bray is the hero of this story. His enforced acceptance of the adjustment between work and play is woven by the author into a plot that will be sure to interest the six or eight year olds who will read and enjoy it." M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 Ja 19 '46 230w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 9 '45 240w

MASON, SARA ELIZABETH. Crimson feather. 224p $2 Doubleday

45-5728

Detective story.

"Pleasant puzzlement which is female but not fussy."

+ Kirkus 13:187 My 1 '45 90w

"The story is well plotted and skillfully worked out." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Je 10 '45 120w

"Ably concocted plot, enlivened by sharp pictures of Southern small-town life and family squabbles. Unostentatious sleuth does believable job. Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 Je 23 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 Je 10 '45 70w

MASTERS, RUTH DOROTHEE. Handbook of international organizations in the Americas. See Carnegie endowment for international peace. Division of international law

MATHEWS, ARTHUR GUY. Take it easy; the art of conquering your nerves. 239p il $2.98 Sheridan

616.85 Nervous system—Hygiene. Nervous system—Diseases SG45-301

The author describes the symptoms of nervous disorders and presents advice on how to conquer one's nerves. Illustrated with diagrams.

Reviewed by Peter Quinn

Book Week p18 N 18 '45 230w

Kirkus 13:418 S 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside

N Y Times p16 N 4 '45 500w

Reviewed by Harry Daum

Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 550w

MATHEWS, BASIL JOSEPH. Unfolding drama in southeast Asia. 184p $1; pa 60c Friendship press

266 Missions—Asia, Southeast. Missions—Oceania 44-8999

"A compact and meaty volume on the peoples of the western Pacific, southeast Asia and the East Indies—their races and religions, the history of their relations with Occidental powers and culture, their aspirations and prospects, and the responsibility of the Christian church for missionary programs which will promote their total welfare in the dangerous future." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 61:1419 D 6 '44 40w

"This is a timely, if simple, book." W. P. Sears

+ Churchman 159:15 Mr 15 '45 140w

Foreign Affairs 23:521 Ap '45 20w

Reviewed by M. M. Deems

J Religion 25:306 O '45 200w

MATHEWS, JOHN JOSEPH. Talking to the moon. 243p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 A45-3207

"J. J. Mathews, the product of a characteristic blend of pioneer English, French and aboriginal American ancestry, informs his literary style with the elements of an unusual personality, as noted some years ago in his 'Wah-Kon-Tah: The Osage and the White Man's Road.' This new book . . . embodies the observations and the dreams of a solitary Nature-lover, living alone for 10 years in a little sandstone house, among the black-jacks on a Kansas prairie. Many of his adventures have to do with friendly furred and feathered neighbors, with winter blizzards and summer floods." Springf'd Republican

"Sportsmen will love the book. And I particularly commend it to readers of Lewis Mumford, that they may see how unerringly two men may converge, from vastly different backgrounds, toward the vision of our world as a place of dignity and dynamic order. A postscript seems in order. After the manuscript was completed Joe began to try pen and ink for the first time in his life. His vigorous text-figures are the result. Innocent of the conventions of the trained artist, they show how much more truly art is in the eye and mind than in the hand." P. B. Sears

+ Book Week p9 Je 24 '45 450w

Booklist 42:17 S '45

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 23 '45 700w

"Although somewhat restricted in topic for a wide audience, 'Talking to the Moon' is well constructed and excellently written. It will be of much interest to anyone concerned with the region or with the detailed observation of nature. It is also another valuable book in the exploration of America, for if we do not learn first about our country in detail we can scarcely expect to know about it in the large." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 29 '45 480w

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 18 '45 360w

MATHEWS, J. J.—Continued
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:15 S '45 240w

"His book is a restorative and rare delight." Alan Devoe
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 19 '45 650w

MATTHEWS, WILLIAM, and PEARCE, ROY HARVEY, comps. American diaries; an annotated bibliography of American diaries written prior to the year 1861. 383p $4; pa $3.50 Univ. of Calif. [21s Cambridge]

016.92 Diaries—Bibliography. U.S.—Biography—Bibliography. U.S.—History—Sources A45-1983

"This volume presents a chronologically arranged bibliography of nearly 2500 diaries produced in English-speaking North America between 1629, when the Reverend Francis Higginson set down the daily occurrences of his voyage to his new church at Salem in New England, and 1860, when young Lester F. Ward began to record those experiences which would ultimately make his the first great name in American sociology. Each diarist is entered under the year of the earliest published portion of his diary; he is briefly identified, with his dates when ascertainable; his diary is summarized and its contents are summarized; and it is often evaluated with respect to its interest for the general reader and the linguistic specialist. The compiler includes diaries of Americans abroad—unless they were missionaries—but does not list foreign-language diaries in America, unless they have been translated. Canadian diaries have been included." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"The concise comments on the diaries are definite and discerning and will serve admirably the needs either of the student searching for material in a special field or the general reader who is looking for interesting books of this kind. Adequate bibliographical information is given. This is a new reference book of very real value." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 S 23 '45 100w

"The great diversity of publications in which these diaries appear demonstrates the value of the undertaking. This is a valuable reference work for every student of American civilization, but most unfortunately does not contain an index of localities."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:69 D '45 320w

MATTHIESSEN, FRANCIS OTTO. Henry James: the major phase. 190p $2.50 Oxford

813 James, Henry 44-47752

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"A fine analysis of James's sources, intentions, form and style." R. B. Heilman
+ New Eng Q 18:268 Je '45 1900w

"Simple in structure and temperate in expression, 'Henry James: The Major Phase' is almost a model of the critical monograph. There is, however, one fault or omission to be noted that does not greatly affect the quality of the book, but that does have a bearing on the debate about Henry James. Mr. Matthiessen has not so much answered the arguments of the anti-Jacobites as he has introduced totally different arguments. Almost everything he says about the later James is true, but it is not quite the whole story." Malcolm Cowley
+ — New Repub 112:177 F 5 '45 2850w

Reviewed by John Russell
New Statesman & Nation 29:339 My 26 '45 1900w

"Mr. Matthiessen never overstates his case; but he does occasionally insert a suggestion which if pursued too far might come to grief—though Mr. Matthiessen could bring it off if anyone could." George Stevens
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:7 Mr 3 '45 1200w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:7 Mr '45 260w

"If Mr. Matthiessen does not quite make out his case, he has written one of the most suggestive of the books on James; he deals with many of the principal issues that James's work offers; and he sets going trains of thought that are long and complex." E. K. Brown
+ Yale R n s 34:536 spring '45 420w

MAULDIN, WILLIAM HENRY. Up front; text and pictures by [the author]. 228p $3 World pub

940.5497 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 45-3484

Collection of Willie and Joe cartoons, plus interpretative text, by this famous twenty-three-year-old American cartoonist. Young Mauldin has been in the army for five years so he knows the subject of which he writes and draws. Many of the cartoons have appeared in the army paper Stars and Stripes.

"There are several reasons why his cartoons and prose, Up Front, hold so much sardonic truth: first, because he has been an infantryman who took part in the invasion of Sicily and Italy, and who wears the Purple Heart; secondly, because when promoted to a sergeant he was allowed to rove, and rove he did . . . and thirdly, because he is above all else an artist whose cartoons have made us see the muck and terror of the dogfaces and with what humor they shrug off the unbearable. The pictures of his bearded heroes, Joe and Willie, are unlovely, but their heroism belongs on the same shelf with Ernie Pyle." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 176:129 Jl '45 170w

Reviewed by J. G. Dowling
Book Week p1 Je 17 '45 950w
Booklist 41:299 Je 15 '45
Bookmark 6:11 My '45

"Mauldin has somehow managed to combine a grimly realistic portrayal of the combat infantryman at his soul-searing work with the only ingredient that ever made it palatable and truthful, a bellyful of humor and understanding."
+ Boston Globe My 31 '45 300w
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 21 '45 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"No one has told the story of the infantry man so well as young Bill Mauldin. The text and cartoons, with their impressive simplicity, give the whole picture of war in Europe. Perhaps because of his own youth, Mauldin is top favorite among all the war authors with young people." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 21:366 S '45 50w

"This soldier can write—yes, as well as he can draw. His word pictures are clear, crisp, humorous, cynical, bitter, sympathetic, understanding. He doesn't get down to the intimate, personal closeups that Ernie Pyle did, he has a unique ability to translate the type into a personality. His dirty doughboys aren't a pretty picture, but even the squeamish have learned to laugh with Joe and Willie, and now and again to share the hunger of heart, the loneliness, the suffering, the sacrifice. Bill Mauldin is giving us your dogfaces, Ernie Pyle."
+ Kirkus 13:191 My 1 '45 260w

"A sort of comic strip dedicated to the proposition that the war is funny. The cartoons are not funny, and the text is characteristically illiterate." John Senior
— Nation 161:18 Jl 7 '45 70w

"Mauldin, it turns out, writes almost exactly as he draws. When this book was first projected, some of us on Stars and Stripes thought it ill advised of the publishers to want text as well as pictures. We were somewhat snobbishly afraid that Mauldin the writer would look awkward beside so accomplished a guy as Mauldin the artist. By being casual, and himself, half brat and half sage, by ignoring the restraints of chapter divisions and the other paraphernalia of nice organization, he has put together the one indispensable book that any one man has so far published about Americans in action in this war." Herbert Lyons
+ New Repub 112:847 Je 18 '45 2700w

"This is a vigorous, brash, youthful but excellent book; a book which everybody who has a son or husband or brother in the United States Infantry, especially below the rank of second lieutenant, should buy, read and treasure. Furthermore, one must hasten to add that the book contains some very magnificent cartoons whose excellence has previously been best attested by the fact that, while the European war was going on, you could find them stuck up in many a dilapidated, semi-permanent foxhole or half-wrecked command post and, for that matter, although I don't know how pleased Mauldin would be by the idea, in certain rather less rugged habitations where dwells the brass." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p1 Je 17 '45 2100w

"A collection of cartoons, nearly all of which are excellent, plus a text, nearly all of which is also excellent, by the twenty-three-year-old soldier who might perhaps be called the Ernie Pyle of artists."

+ New Yorker 21:70 Je 23 '45 90w

"Mauldin's Willie and Joe are even more real than the British Old Bill, Bert, and Alf. And now, in this book, Mauldin has written thirty thousand words to accompany his pictures, words that show him as uncompromising a truth-teller with the typewriter as with the pencil. His text has the same biting humor that has gone into his drawings of weary, unshaven, sardonic dogfaces. It makes the whole a 'must' book of the war." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Je 16 '45 650w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 850w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:8 D '45 240w

"Make no mistake about it, Bill Mauldin is some kind of genius. The power and vividness of his draughtsmanship, the lash of his wit, the all-encompassing warmth and range of his sensibility, make him a phenomenon the Army needed and for which it is grateful. Just as Ernie Pyle spoke for the infantry, Bill has seen and drawn and made wry jokes for them, with them and through them. It is to be hoped that American society somehow will provide a similar opportunity for him to evolve, in peace time, some further expression of the minds of millions—that collective and probably unconscious projection which is his remarkable talent." Vincent Sheean

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Je 17 '45 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 41:83 Jl '45

MAULE, HARRY EDWARD, ed. Great tales of the American West; with an introd. by [the editor]. 361p 95c Modern lib.

Short stories—Collections 45-4772

Contents: The outcasts of Poker flat, by Bret Harte; Buck Fanshaw's funeral, by Mark Twain; The winning of the biscuit-shooter, by Owen Wister; Hearts and crosses, by O. Henry; A corner in horses, by S. E. White; Beyond the desert, by E. M. Rhodes; Tappan's burro, by Zane Grey; Last warning, by W. M. Raine; Hopalong sits in, by C. E. Mulford; Sunset, by W. C. Tuttle; Routine patrol, by J. B. Hendryx; A shot in the dark, by H. H. Knibbs; Dog eater, by C. M. Russell; Court day, by Luke Short; Stage to Lordsburg, by Ernest Haycox; Wine on the desert, by Max Brand; The Indian well, by W. V. Clark; To find a place, by Robert Easton.

Booklist 41:303 Je 15 '45

"It is good to find this collection of Western stories, particularly good to find them treated with understanding and respect. And Harry Maule's introduction is an excellent essay on the subject of this anthology." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 1 '45 480w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Franklin, the life of an optimist; drawings by Howard Simon [tr. by Haakon M. Chevalier]. 79p $2.50 Didier pubs.

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature 45-4643

Brief, compact biography of Benjamin Franklin, written for young readers, and illustrated in color and in black and white. The narrative begins in 1716, when Franklin was ten years old, covers the important events of his life, and closes with his death.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:275 Jl '45 90w

"A competent but not particularly inspired biography of Benjamin Franklin written for young people by a famous French biographer. Unfortunately he falls into the pitfall that too often attends such ventures and is inclined to moralize and write down to his audience."

+ — Kirkus 13:222 My 15 '45 90w

"Lively, well-written biography for readers ten and older. . . The book is colorfully and attractively designed and illustrated and expensively priced." Dorotha Dawson

+ Library J 70:588 Je 15 '45 60w

N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '45 110w

"M. Maurois never sentimentalizes, and within the limits of his enterprise he gives the story in fair perspective."

+ New Yorker 21:139 D 8 '45 60w

Sat R of Lit 28:33 S 8 '45 180w

"An interesting, pleasant book." E. J. L.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 60w

"The story [is] thoroughly good-humored, not only because some of Franklin's stories are told, but because he took life in a manner at once down-to-earth and looking toward the sky; he has the optimism of one who doesn't expect more than human nature is likely to give. . . The pictures are chiefly in color, full page and lively: they suit a biography for children as young as seven."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 My 20 '45 330w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Woman without love; tr. from the French by Joan Charles. 230p $2.50 Harper

45-8516

"An egocentric and sexually cold Frenchwoman makes a mess of two brilliant marriages. When her second husband dies, she finds, in the dedication of her life to his memory, a satisfactory substitute for love and the only real outlet for her emotions she has ever known." New Yorker

Reviewed by Mona Van Duyn

Book Week p4 O 7 '45 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"Full length portrait of a femme frigide, approached with the French fondness for psychosexological detail, in intimate terms—but not for our market."

— Kirkus 13:278 Jl 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

— + Nation 161:346 O 6 '45 900w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber

New Repub 113:543 O 22 '45 60w

"It is difficult to sympathize with or even believe in Claire. Despite the importance of her problem she remains a pale, unrealized figure; pathetic but not very interesting. The author is more successful with the others. . . One wishes that Maurois had turned his keen perception of certain types, his grasp of social forces and his Gallic wit to the dissection of something other than the erotic confusion of a frustrated woman who at no time is as real as her neurosis." F. W. Leary

N Y Times p6 O 28 '45 320w

"A smoothly urbane study, done with all the author's old deftness, charm, and superficiality."

New Yorker 21:85 S 29 '45 60w

"Its technique, intermittently using the form of a 'frank diary,' is somewhat moth-eaten. And so in the end is the author's preoccupation with his precious and preciously unhappy heroine—and, perhaps, despite the daring frankness of many scenes and the book's semblance of 'progressiveness,' its subject as such." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 28:12 O 6 '45 750w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 440w

"The novel has little action; there are times when Claire's self-examination and self-analysis verge on the monotonous, but Mr. Maurois succeeds in making her understandable. She will strike a familiar, if not a sympathetic, note to many readers. Although the book is French, Claire has a legion of sisters throughout the world. Larraque and Ménétrier are drawn with Mr. Maurois's fine flair for the witty and ironic." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 30 '45 700w

MAXWELL, WILLIAM. Folded leaf. 310p $2.50 Harper 45-3288

Story of the friendship of two boys of very different temperament. Lymie was the studious type; Spud was the perfect extravert, handsome, athletic. The friendship began in high school, when Spud saved Lymie from a bad time in the swimming pool. After high school came college, and the boys were still friends until they fell in love with the same girl. With the failure of Lymie's attempted suicide, they all took a more adult attitude toward life.

" 'The Folded Leaf' will be read long after most of the current successes have passed through the cheaper reprints to inevitable oblivion. I wish I had, at hand, a list of the novels that have been published in America during, say, the past 20 years; only then would I be able to state exactly how long it has been since I have read as good a book as 'The Folded Leaf.' Katherine Anne Porter, it seems to me, is the one American writer who has no reason to envy William Maxwell his gifts; and offhand the only novel I can think of that is at all comparable in quality to 'The Folded Leaf' is 'The Apple of the Eye,' also a story of adolescence, written by Glenway Wescott 20 years ago." Charles Jackson

+ Book Week p1 Ap 15 '45 1650w

Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45

Bookmark 6:15 My '45

"A realistically acute—if modulated—story, with greater literary distinction than popular appeal."

Kirkus 13:41 F 1 '45 130w

"Mr. Maxwell has a remarkable, if quiet, gift for observation; his record of Middle Western American life in the '20's adds up to a more important social document than he was perhaps conscious of. But in the last third of the novel, when, because the story must be brought to a climax and conclusion, Mr. Maxwell concerns himself with purely emotional developments, he becomes spare and even unconvincing." Diana Trilling

+ — Nation 160:466 Ap 21 '45 600w

"Within the limitations of its own subject, which admittedly furnishes no vast or heroic theme but only a good and sound one, 'The Folded Leaf' does precisely, beautifully and completely what it sets out to do. And in a time of much loose and slap-dash writing it is a satisfaction to read prose always so admirably controlled, so governed with distinction, as that of William Maxwell." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 8 '45 500w

"Mr. Maxwell has fixed upon a segment of experience and has molded it into a work of fiction through a style and a narrative skill which have been learned in the struggle with his subject. . . This drama of the immature, with no background more glamorous than middle-class apartments and student fraternity houses, is both more moving and more absorbing than any of the romantic melodramas which have been stimulated by the war." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 21:81 Mr 31 '45 700w

" 'The Folded Leaf' is a fine and moving book, full of true sympathy and understanding of human relationships." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 Ap 7 '45 850w

" 'The Folded Leaf' has been given a title with the sort of wise tenderness which gives the entire book distinction. It has been written with respect for the word, with love for human beings and a warm pity that leaves the reader resolved to read no more for a time, the better to savor the good work she has so richly enjoyed. Using superlatives is a thankless business, but this reviewer is ready and willing to go 'way out on a limb and say that this is the best novel to appear in the last decade." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 22 '45 500w

Time 45:100 Ap 30 '45 20w

"A novel of rare sensitivity and beauty. In prose of unusual flexibility, which can range from the most convincing American conversation as one daily hears it, to eloquently poetic discursions, the novelist conducts the reader through the complex relationship between Lymie Peters and Spud Latham."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:10 S '45 280w

"Since the theme is unusual and since the subject of adolescence itself has made many a writer self-conscious, it is particularly remarkable that the author has avoided both preciosity and sentimentality. An exceptional, deeply-felt sympathy and understanding have obviously guided him between these pitfalls. His general approach comes, therefore, not from any exterior attitude, but springs directly from an affectionate insight into the frailties of immaturity." Colby Walworth

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 8 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:85 Jl '45

MAY, EARL CHAPIN. Principio to Wheeling, 1715-1945; a pageant of iron and steel. 335p il $3 Harper

338.4 Iron industry and trade. Steel industry and trade 45-3458

"A pageant of iron and steel within which is developed a previously little known connection of George Washington's family with the Principio (Md.) mining and smelting properties; well documented." (School & Society) Index.

"This is a difficult book to review. It is difficult to review because it is difficult to read and because the author in turn exasperates and tantalizes the reader. . . Despite its lack of objectivity, balance, and documentation, this volume contains much that is interesting and suggestive for the student of American industrial history." L. C. Hunter

— + Am Hist R 51:165 O '45 480w

"[The author] has not fully overcome the problems of organization presented by this wealth of material, and his feeling for detail sometimes leads to confusion rather than vividness. The book is marred, too, by frequent examples of slipshod writing, which careful editing should have removed. Perhaps 'pageant' is the best word for the effect given by this book: a crowded, somewhat disorderly pageant, but one in which certain characters and incidents carry a real flavor and meaning of American life." J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ap 22 '45 550w

Booklist 41:282 Je 1 '45

Reviewed by R. E. Zimmerman

Chem & Eng N 23:1026 Je 10 '45 350w

"From the standpoint of historical accuracy the book is to be commended for its documentation. But documentation, unfortunately, has a way of getting in the way of the narrative, and there will be times when the reader will wish that a little less attention had been given to minor characters around the fringes of the plot. One gets the impression that the author is giving the 'names and numbers of all the players' simply because he worked hard to dig them out of dusty old records and he hasn't the heart to throw away such hard-won data. It is only fair to add, however, that he does not indulge himself very often."

+ — Chem & Met Eng 52:215 Je '45 370w

Current Hist 9:47 Jl '45 80w

Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 100w

Management R 34:158 Ap '45 40w

"Mr. May has made a timely contribution to the story of an industry whose wartime output has helped determine the course of history." Allan Taylor

+ N Y Times p7 My 27 '45 440w

School & Society 61:256 Ap 21 '45 40w

"Altogether the book is disappointing, even though the author has unearthed good unused material." R. E. Riegel

— + Social Educ 10:43 Ja '46 240w

"A great deal of research has gone into the making of this book. There is a helpful bibliography, an index and reproductions of a score of historical documents and illustrations. The chapters are uneven in quality, both as to accuracy and as to writing, and the synthesis is inadequate. In general, however, this is an interesting and valuable project in a fallow field." R. A. Brown

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 My 25 '45 170w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 30 '45 250w

Weekly Book Review p39 N 11 '45 200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:81 Jl '45

MAYER, EDITH H. Our Negro brother; il. by Else McKean; introd. by Anne Coolidge. 32p $1.50 Shady Hill press, 17 E. 96th st, N.Y. 28

325.26 Negroes—Juvenile literature 45-4987

"To help elementary school children toward a better sense of racial understanding, this picture book biography has been written in short sentences and easy words. The lives of the following leaders are briefly summarized: Pedro Alonzo Nino, Crispus Attucks, Harriet Tubman, Frederick Douglass, Matthew Henson, George Washington Carver, Mary McL. Bethune, O. Philip Randolph." Horn Bk

Booklist 41:306 Je 15 '45

"The stories are honestly and vividly told and should be useful."

+ Horn Bk 21:199 My '45 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 25 '45 270w

MAYERBERG, SAMUEL SPIER. Chronicle of an American crusader; foreword by Julian Morgenstern. 148p $1.50 Bloch

B or 92 44-7756

"An autobiographical account of the experiences of Rabbi Mayerberg not only with the congregations he has served in Dayton and Kansas City but in larger religious and educational enterprises, such as those involved in the founding of a Jewish chair in the Bible College of Missouri, in social reforms, and especially in fighting the Pendergast machine in Kansas City." Christian Century

"Dr. Morgenstern, president of Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, explains in a foreword that he gave the book its title without the knowledge or consent of the author. The book justifies the title."

+ Christian Century 61:1355 N 22 '44 110w

"I regret that I do not know Rabbi Mayerberg, save as the Chronicle of an American Crusader reveals him. He writes of his unusually effective social ministry with modesty and restraint; yet he cannot wholly conceal himself behind the garment of the God of righteousness whom he serves. If the reader sees him first as an Elijah walking unafraid into the court of Ahab and thundering under the window of Jezebel, he knows him at the end as a Jeremiah who entreats the souls of his people by the tender mercies of the Eternal." R. M. Grey

+ Crozer Q 22:167 Ap '45 600w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Pillars of the church. (Heywood Broun memorial lectures, 2d ser) 308p $3 Longmans

922.2 Roman Catholic church—Biography 45-8465

Brief, informal portrayals of twelve representative Catholic figures. Contents: Saint Benedict; Saint Patrick; The Venerable Bede; Saint Dominic; Saint Louis; Saint Thomas More; Saint Francis Xavier; Saint Teresa; Saint Philip Neri; Saint Vincent de Paul; Coventry Patmore; Blessed Francesca Cabrini. Illustrated end papers. Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by B. L. Conway
Cath World 162:185 N '45 400w

"Mr. Maynard's book is not only for those within the colonnade of the Church; non-Catholics will find it equally readable." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 43:52 O 26 '45 1000w

"This is a book through which the Catholic layman may absorb something of the results of scholarly historical and biographical research."

+ Kirkus 13:512 N 15 '45 150w

"Recommended as informative, interesting and inspiring reading. For all libraries, including Catholic high school." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 120w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Too small a world; Francesca Cabrini. 335p $2.50 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Cabrini, Mother Francesca Saverio 45-4172

"The canonizing a year ago of the first American citizen to become a saint drew widespread interest in Mother Cabrini. Full-length portrait of that amazing woman by dean of American Catholic biographers in his usual conversational style. That the world was too small for her multitudinous activities, establishing sixty-seven charitable institutions, founding a religious order numbering four thousand, championing Italian immigrants and ceaseless prayer, is very evident in what we think is the best of Maynard's work. Dying in Chicago in 1917, buried in New York, Mother Cabrini is of our time and place." Library J

Am Hist R 50:849 Jl '45 50w

"Unfortunately one never really gets to know or to feel the force of this many-faceted personality in Theodore Maynard's book. The facts of her accomplishments are there in careful, accurate reporting. But the saint herself is superimposed on this background as a rather vague, abstract personage enveloped in a psychological mist. Yet 'Too Small a World' is a good book. The author has sifted the enormous amount of material at his disposal and integrated it so that in less than 350 pages there is a complete chronological record of 67 years of vision, work and prayer." J. O. Supple

+ — Book Week p6 Ap 22 '45 600w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 161:361 Je '45 550w

Christian Century 62:606 My 16 '45 80w

"It is difficult to restrain the ego in writing, modern style, and even when the popular form of biography does not seek after sensational effects and excessive intimacies, the author will obtrude. That is why the objectivity of Theodore Maynard's 'Too Small a World' is so striking. Of course Mother Cabrini's career is so astounding and her character so appealing that her life naturally tells its own story. Mr. Maynard's biography is more objective in appearance than in reality, for his keen sense of the important and his responsiveness to truly spiritual values disclose considerable about the biographer himself."

+ Commonweal 42:95 My 11 '45 700w

"This seems to be a definitive biography of Mother Francesca Cabrini, founder of the Institute of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. The author had access to the documents used in support of her canonization as well as to other sources throwing light on the missionary activities of this remarkable woman, and as a result has produced a biography which for Catholic readers is authoritative, as well as inspiring."

+ Kirkus 13:130 Mr 15 '45 350w

"Highly recommended for public and school libraries." R. J. Hudley

+ Library J 70:354 Ap 15 '45 110w

"Theodore Maynard is a convert to Catholicism, a student of mysticism, and a talented writer. These qualities combine to make him an ideal interpreter of Mother Cabrini—restrained, objective, but appreciative and warmly human." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p16 S 2 '45 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p296 Je 23 '45 390w

MAYO, ELEANOR R. Turn home. 281p $2.50 Morrow

45-2147

Life in a Maine coast town is the background of this novel. Bub Dolliver, who had come from a shiftless family, and had been the town bad boy, came back after several years unexplained absence, to clear his name in Minot's Harbor. He wanted to stand on his own merits, so did not explain that he had been at Guadalcanal. His old reputation clung to him, and Bub was accused of theft. But one fine girl believed in him and together they cleared his name.

MAYO, E. R.—Continued

" 'Turn Home' tells a good story. The style, though undistinguished, suits its purposes, is as frankly unpretentious as a good homemade hit-or-miss rag rug—and quite as serviceable." F. H. Bullock
+ Book Week p4 Mr 11 '45 550w
Booklist 41:226 Ap 1 '45

"The hard way of winning respect in refusing to trade on hero worship in a story that is unpretentious but has enough story interest and plot and characterization to hold attention."
+ Kirkus 13:5 Ja 1 '45 170w

"Apparently a first novel, it has a punch and cocksureness that command respect and interest. . . Miss Mayo does a good job of the small Maine harbor town with its people so conservative as to approach mean-mindedness. She makes you feel the openness of the sea air and the closeness of the native sons. . . It all adds up to a fresh and exhilarating story, with hoodlum fireworks—absorbing enough to make the reader overlook an occasional strain on the normal elasticity of coincidence." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p24 Mr 11 '45 180w

" 'Turn Home' is a good story but Miss Mayo's definite contribution is in her portrayal of Maine folk. These are the village people whom most of us rusticators come to know best, rather than the hard-driven, hard-bitten out-islanders whom we met in last year's fine novel 'The Weir.' . . If you just want a good story about real people and a town so real you could walk its streets blindfolded, 'Turn Home' was written for you—and for this reviewer." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 480w

"Miss Mayo has a good ear for Down East talk, real sympathy for slow-thinking Bub and his fight for his rightful place in the community. She tells a story which is valid in itself and has value as a study in adjustment—a soldier's return to the foreign atmosphere of a place that used to be home." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 10 '45 140w

MAYO, WALDO. Mozart; his life told in anecdotal form; il. by Andre Dugo. (Hyperion bk) [40p] $1.75 Duell

B or 92 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus—Juvenile literature 45-5204

Brief storylike chapters on the life of Mozart, with illustrations in color and in black and white. For young readers.

"Young children of musical tastes will take much pleasure in these books." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:275 Jl '45 20w
Kirkus 13:201 My 1 '45 60w
Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p18 Je 10 '45 30w
New Yorker 21:138 D 8 '45 20w

"The musical horizon of many may be broadened by these human-interest stories which read like radio comments and gain their emphasis by sentimental popularization of the subjects rather than through any sense of style and story-telling. Informing as they are, they seem entirely removed from reality." Maria Cimino
Sat R of Lit 28:39 Je 16 '45 110w

"Spirited text and brisk, colorful pictures make these little collections of musical anecdotes a friendly introduction of composers to children." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 5 '45 60w

MAYO, WALDO. Tchaikovsky; his life told in anecdotal form; il. by Andre Dugo. (Hyperion bk) [40p] $1.75 Duell

B or 92 Tchaikovski, Peter Ilyitch—Juvenile literature 45-5205

Similar in format to others in this series of short chapters on the lives of famous musicians. For young readers.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:275 Jl '45 20w

"One has a sense of over simplification, of lack of cohesion, of selection of rather sugary incidents, augmented by the pretty-pretty illustrations in delicate colors. Colorful merchandise, with less content value than one might hope for."
Kirkus 13:252 Je 1 '45 90w

"Waldo Mayo, concert violinist, has written an attractive and pleasing biography in anecdote form of Tchaikovsky which will appeal to music lovers of all ages. Beautifully illustrated with colored pictures, the book not only will appeal to the very young but also to the older reader." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 70:639 Jl '45 70w
Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p18 Je 10 '45 30w
New Yorker 21:138 D 8 '45 20w
Reviewed by Maria Cimino
Sat R of Lit 28:39 Je 16 '45 110w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. Best one-act plays of 1944. (V8) 224p $2.50 Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections (38-8006)

Contents: The picnic, by Arnold Sundgaard; It ain't Brooklyn, by David Dempsey; District of Columbia, by Stanley Richards; That they may win, by Arthur Miller; Miracle on the Pullman, by Ben Hecht; Concerning the Red army, by Norman Rosten; Slip ahoy!, by A. A. O'Keeffe; On the way home, by E. M. Hawley; Strange rain, by Sonia Brown; 27 wagons full of cotton, by Tennessee Williams; The Admiral, by Archibald MacLeish. Two bibliographies: Selected plays of the year, and New collections of one-act plays.

Booklist 41:337 Jl 15 '45
Library J 70:636 Jl '45 60w
Reviewed by Lewis Funke
N Y Times p22 S 16 '45 500w
Theatre Arts 30:62 Ja '46 10w
Weekly Book Review p10 S 23 '45 100w

MAYR, ERNST. Birds of the Southwest Pacific; a field guide to the birds of the area between Samoa, New Caledonia, and Micronesia; with color pl. by Francis Lee Jaques; and line drawings by Alexander Seidel. 316p $3.75 Macmillan

598.2996 Birds—South Sea islands 45-951

"This handbook is intended primarily for the field student. It will help him to identify and name the birds that he encounters, and to ascertain what kinds of birds can be expected on a given island. The emphasis has therefore been placed on identification marks, the 'field characters.' In addition, a condensed summary is given of the present knowledge of distribution, geographical variation (subspecies), and habits. . . The region covered includes the following groups of islands: Samoa, Fiji, New Caledonia, Loyalty Islands, New Hebrides, Banks Islands, Santa Cruz Islands, Solomon Islands, Marshall Islands, Carolines, Marianas, and Palau." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 41:205 Mr 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"Naturalists, museum curators, ornithologists, and possibly some of the boys in the service who have been puzzled and interested in the birds of the Pacific area—provide the market for this highly specialized book."
+ Kirkus 13:9 Ja 1 '45 170w
New Yorker 20:84 F 10 '45 60w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 My '45 180w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:46 Je '45 120w

"As we might have expected Dr. Mayr has done an excellent job in this particular field, and in arrangement and diction has brought to his subject succinctness and clarity. . . This volume should satisfy every outbreak of curiosity of an intelligent G. I. with a taste of ornithology, and kindle his enthusiasm for bird watching." William Beebe

\+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 28 '45 380w

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Skippy's family; il. by Elizabeth P. Korn. 153p $2 Harcourt

45-8411

"Skippy adopted the Meader family and lived with them for 17 wonderful years. He was only a small, brown, mongrel dog, but he played a big part in bringing joy and companionship to four kids and their parents." Springf'd Republican

Churchman 159:8 N 15 '45 40w

"He writes with a depth of feeling that all dog lovers will appreciate, giving an attractive picture of a pleasant household." A. M. Jordan

\+ Horn Bk 21:460 N '45 100w

"Fourth and fifth graders will enjoy the parts of this book that tell of the stray mongrel pup's coming into the family, and his conquest over a rather unwilling daddy. For the rest, the account of the family never comes alive and is much over-written. The characters are not real, the incident is dull, and loads of talk is stretched over the poor bones of Skippy."

— + Kirkus 13:338 Ag 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller

Library J 70:894 O 1 '45 70w

"The reader feels in every line that this is a true story and a tribute to a dog with personality who, as the author says, was sometimes comical, sometimes exasperating, but always intelligent, lovable, loyal and courageous. Children who own a dog and those who do not will be equally charmed with this tale of an engaging pet who belonged to his owners no more than they belonged to him." A. T. Eaton

\+ N Y Times p26 S 23 '45 130w

"A true dog story, honestly and unpretentiously told."

\+ New Yorker 21:130 D 8 '45 60w

Sat R of Lit 28:73 N 10 '45 30w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 50w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). The moved outers; il. by Helen Blair. 154p $2 Houghton

45-2267

Story of a young Japanese-American girl and the year her family spent in a Relocation camp before Sue went away to college.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p19 Mr 25 '45 450w

Booklist 41:227 Ap 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

"No thoughtful girl can fail to be moved by the events that befell Sue Ohara in her last year of high school, when her world crashed about her. No older person should be able to read complacently of the methods by which the evacuation of citizens of Japanese background was handled."

\+ Horn Bk 21:37 Ja '45 160w

"The Moved-Outers . . . by its humanity and the simplicity and naturalness of presentation should take a place of its own among the books Mrs. Means has been adding to the shelves for girls and boys of high school age since 1931." A. C. Moore

\+ Horn Bk 21:108 Mr '45 750w

"An exceptionally interesting idea for a story, but it doesn't quite come off. Florence Means did so fine a job in her story dealing with Negroes (Shuttered Windows) that I had hoped she could be equally successful with this Japanese-American problem. But she somehow fails to get at the hearts of her people, the characterization seems static."

Kirkus 13:109 Mr 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 70:309 Ap 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p29 Mr 11 '45 270w

"The book is no masterpiece of style, but it is honestly written, it has a factual background, and it is quite convincing on the psychological problems of a loyal American of Oriental blood."

New Yorker 21:120 D 8 '45 160w

"This is not only an interesting and moving story of attractive young people who courageously faced complete upheaval of their ordered, happy lives. It is, too, an accurate and very human record of one of our country's most tragic experiments." R. A. Hill

\+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Ap 21 '45 380w

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 18 '45 220w

Reviewed by A. R. Issler

Survey 81:275 O '45 350w

"The story is told with restraint and dignity —and it took courage to tell it now. But Florence Crannell Means has never lacked courage in presenting young folks with material for serious thinking on racial discrimination. The trouble is, of course, that in times like these, matters of this sort are not settled by thinking, but by obscure, almost irresistible emotional reflexes. It is hard to see just what else could have been done for or with the Oharas. But a story that shows young people how the Oharas felt about it calls out qualities in a reader that usually go into cold storage during a war." M. L. Becker

\+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 18 '45 400w

Wis Lib Bul 41:48 Ap '45

MECKLIN, JOHN MOFFATT. My quest for freedom. 293p $2.75 Scribner

B or 92 45-3956

Autobiography of an American professor of philosophy and ethics who has taught at Lafayette, University of Pittsburgh, and Dartmouth.

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Book Week p4 Jl 1 '45 360w

Booklist 41:300 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:14 N '45

"Besides being an interesting autobiography the book is also an illuminating commentary on America written by a mellow, kindly and wise man. Prof. Mecklin is a great teacher and this is a noble record of a career full of richness and variety far beyond the lot of most teachers." H. F. West

\+ Boston Globe p15 My 2 '45 320w

"Every page of this autobiography reveals the genial, tolerant, humorous and temperate man who has written it. True, he carries his scars. And I suspect that I will not be the only reader who will doubt whether Calvinism is quite as much of a jailer set to keep the human spirit in bondage as Dr. Mecklin believes. However, we have traveled a different road, and perhaps I do not sufficiently realize the fearsome nature of the obstacles on other paths. As the record of one man's experience, this is thoughtful, witty and a story worth the telling." Paul Hutchinson

\+ Christian Century 62:791 Jl 4 '45 750w

Kirkus 13:79 F 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock

N Y Times p8 Ag 12 '45 500w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Sat R of Lit 28:43 S 15 '45 650w

MEEKER, ARTHUR. Far away music. 308p $2.50 Houghton

45-9784

Novel of family life in Chicago in the 1850's. There is a strong-minded mother, three ladylike daughters, and a father whose search for far away music had led him to San Francisco, and unsettled any slight tendency toward domesticity he might have had.

MEEKER, ARTHUR—Continued

"Here is a book with all the charm its title suggests. 'The Far Away Music' should be hailed by those who can appreciate writing in the Jane Austen tradition; it is one of those true and valuable and timeless books which is at once a comedy of manners and a portrait of an era and a place." Edith Roberts
+ Book Week p6 N 4 '45 600w

"This is a memorable book. It has no plot as plot is generally understood. It is not exciting. It presents the reader with a set of circumstances and resulting emotional, highly restrained and suggestive situations that are enthralling." F. W. MacVeagh
+ Commonweal 43:314 Ja 4 '46 350w

"Uninspired, pedestrian writing, with a pattern that suggests somewhat Tree of Liberty though it lacks the richness of historical background and perception of character that made that book distinguished."
— Kirkus 13:406 S 15 '45 210w

"The story is presented in a careful, mannered style, almost as though it had been written in the period with which it is concerned. It is a style reminiscent of that earlier delver into the genteeler aspects of America's past, Joseph Hergesheimer. There is evident the same careful research into the details of daily living, and many of the sentences fall into the Hergesheimer pattern. But Mr. Meeker lacks the Hergesheimer warmth and brilliant coloring." N. K. Burger
N Y Times p25 N 25 '45 500w

"A pleasant enough story with its heart in the right place."
+ New Yorker 21:101 N 3 '45 80w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 28:74 D 1 '45 180w
Weekly Book Review p43 N 11 '45 270w

MEEKS, MRS ESTHER K. Little red car; il. by Ernie King. [32p] $1 Follett 45-9322

This is more than a story of a little red car which outgrew its usefulness and then was happily needed and used again. It tells also of the changes in trolleys, fire engines, automobiles, milk wagons and buildings throughout the years when the parents of today were growing up.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p18 O 28 '45 180w

"Very nice, as well as useful, picture book suitable to be read to preschoolers or for a second grade child to read for himself." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 70:1027 N 1 '45 50w
N Y Times p12 N 11 '45 100w

"It is a pleasant way to remind little children of how an American city has grown, and the large colored pictures, rightly on the comic side, give an excellent idea of what our streets once looked like and successive changes in traffic."
+ Weekly Book Review p32 N 11 '45 270w

MEERLOO, ABRAHAM MAURITS. Total war and the human mind; a psychologist's experience in occupied Holland. 78p $1.75 Int. univs. press [5s Allen, G]

940.53492 Netherlands—History—German occupation, 1940-1945. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Dutch 45-5671

The author, a Dutch psychologist and medical doctor, lived for two years in Holland under German rule. His book, in part a personal narrative, has as its purpose, the exploration of the effects of German propaganda and German terrorism on the people as a whole.

Foreign Affairs 23:696 Jl '45 30w
Kirkus 13:268 Je 15 '45 170w

"The major has nothing particularly new to say, and he cannot in such brief compass deal adequately with any of the topics he treats. He furthermore goes in on occasion for the self-assured, dogmatic over-simplification that mars so much psychiatry. Nevertheless he writes for the most part with the clarity, simplicity, and temperateness that denote an exceptional command of one's subject." Martin Lebowitz
+ — Nation 161:185 Ag 25 '45 420w

MEIKLEJOHN, ALEXANDER, and others. Religion and education. See Sperry, W. L., ed. Religion in the post-war world, v4

MEINECKE, CONRAD E. Your cabin in the woods. rev ed 187p il $2.50 Foster & Stewart
728.74 Log cabins. Outdoor life 45-35126

"Plans and construction details for log cabins with added practical suggestions on furniture, furnishings, and outdoor life. Originally privately printed; revised for commercial publication." Booklist

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45

"Revised, containing the charm of the original, privately printed edition. Simply written, with homely philosophy, with ample plans on building log cabins, with one to five rooms and guest tents for vacation or week-end use. . . Attractively illustrated. Good reading." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 90w

MEISENHELDER, RACHEL. God bless our aunts; il. by Dorothy McKay. (Whittlesey house publication) 262p il $2.50 McGraw 45-10148

An account of an Irish family, the Shannons, and their settling in the Dutch town of York, Pennsylvania, in the 1890's. The aunts of the title were the Shannon girls, Augusta and Lucy, who so far forgot their aristocratic ancestry, as to ally themselves with the Dutch families of York.

"Mrs. Meisenhelder's book is not one to be classed as serious literature. But if you want an evening full of chuckles and a pleasant harking back to the good old days, by all means read 'God Bless Our Aunts.' " Rosemary Taylor
Book Week p7 Ja 6 '46 650w
Kirkus 13:357 Ag 15 '45 150w

"Though the story is not too well written, the author shows a thorough knowledge of the manners, customs and events of the period. Still the fact remains that the 90's have been so well covered by more able writers and there is hardly a need for this except perhaps as local material." M. H. Zipprich
Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 70w
Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 120w

"It's a sick world, surely, and a bit of guffaw is needed all round. Rachel Meisenhelder does her bit to relieve the tension. Not comedy but pure farce is what she offers, and a very pleasant change it is from the customary introverted autobiographical first novel, full of revolt against society and parents." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 25 '45 800w

MELVILLE, HERMAN. Selected poems; ed. by F. O. Matthiessen. 30p $1 New directions
811 A45-1571

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Booklist 41:271 My 15 '45

" 'Herman Melville: Selected poems' is admirably edited and prefaced. . . Melville said of Benjamin Franklin that he was grave without being serious. Melville himself was surely both; and some of the greatness of his temperament appears, however garbled and attenuated, in his poetry." F. W. Dupee
+ Nation 160:225 F 24 '45 450w

"While it is not necessary to write prose well to write it greatly—and Moby Dick is indeed a very great book—, if one sets out to write verse in constricted verse forms and brings in all one's faults as a prose writer, one is not likely to be a success. If, however, one can make one's verse forms a little more interesting—or 'organic,' as Professor Matthiessen has it—one can write badly and still produce great poetry, as witness Whitman. Nevertheless, Melville's verse has the merit of imaginative concern with the larger problem of good and evil. The imagery is often interesting and echoes his prose." J. V. Healy

+ — Poetry 66:47 Ap '45 300w

MELVIN, ARTHUR GORDON. Teaching; a basic text in education. 270p $2.40 Day
371 Teaching 44-9254

In his foreword the author says "This book on teaching is written as a first book for those interested in modern teaching on any level from kindergarten to university. It is intended as an introduction to my earlier books in which the areas of method, curriculum, program, psychology, and philosophy have been separately explored. For this reason it is so arranged that the unified over-all treatment of this book can naturally branch out into fuller study of any topic of special interest to the reader at any time. It is so indexed at the ends of chapters that students and teachers of education who use it may investigate the more detailed discussions of each aspect of education as they have been presented in my earlier books." (Foreword) Index.

Reviewed by John McGrath
Book Week p6 My 20 '45 220w

"[A] volume presenting copious illustrative detail and discussing the aims of education with the freshness and vigor of a professional debutante. Although primarily a textbook of orientation for young students of education, this book will also prove to be of value as a handbook of check-list items for the experienced instructor. Despite the fact that it is officially intended as an elementary textbook, Teaching is cumulative in character as compared to the author's previous publications." C. D. Champlin
+ School R 53:623 D '45 1250w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. American language; an inquiry into the development of English in the United States; suppl. 1. 739p $5 Knopf
420.9 English language. Americanisms

Not a new edition but a "supplement" to Mr Mencken's well known work on the American use of the English language. "The original work, first published in 1919 as a 'preliminary inquiry' of three hundred and seventy-four pages, has since had three editions, each of them representing more or less thorough rehandlings of the subject. Each was larger than the one before, and since the appearance of the fourth edition, fresh materials have been coming in in such quantities as to make it impossible for the author to incorporate them in a new edition. He is bringing out, instead, two entirely new volumes, which follow, chapter by chapter, the arrangement of 'The American Language,' adding new illustrations and documents and bringing the record of American up to date." (New Yorker)

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa
Book Week p1 Ag 19 '45 1500w
Booklist 42:6 S '45

"A brilliant, audacious, luxuriant work. Only occasionally does his eagerness to record all which may be of use for future inquiry impel him to include material that, from my point of view, appears slightly irrelevant. Sometimes, too, one feels that his instinct for satire blinds him to all the truth." Horace Reynolds
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 S 8 '45 1000w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45

"It is not a book for quick reference, but for thoughtful consultation and pickup reading."
+ Kirkus 13:288 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Mr. Mencken has grown weary of the recurring task of ripping apart and rewriting 'The American Language.' He has gone through the process three times, and the third revision he has described as 'almost appalling.' It resulted in what was virtually a new book, almost two and a half times as long and inestimably better in scholarship than the original edition of 1919. All this is simply the penalty that attaches to writing a book so good that it can neither be superseded by the work of another nor be allowed to fall into obsolescence." George Genzmer
+ Nation 161:374 O 13 '45 1050w

"One of the most delightful books imaginable. . . I found myself dropping everything else and devoting two days to devouring its 683 pages, footnotes and all. For sheer fun of reading, it is the treat of the season. A wonderful combination of scholarship, festivity, social history, Tory crochets, political and literary feuding, industry, genuine love of country, unashamed bias, humor, commentary on the world, compendium of American manners and anthology of Mencken prejudices, it is so filled with gusto and a high relish for the national life and language that it is far more than the mere commentary on our linguistic habits any other equally energetic student might have made it." Richard Watts
+ New Repub 113:355 S 17 '45 1350w

"This first volume of Mr. Mencken's 'Supplement' is a meritorious achievement. It is highly readable, as is everything Mr. Mencken writes, and it is extremely informative." M. M. Mathews
+ N Y Times p1 Ag 19 '45 1700w

"For anyone with an interest in words, the new volume is absolutely fascinating. Mencken has already set forth the rudiments of the subject in 'The American Language' proper, in which he was sometimes rather cramped for space to give examples and speculations, and he is now free to report at length on a great many interesting matters and to print more comprehensive lists." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 21:57 Ag 25 '45 1800w

Reviewed by R. E. Spiller
Sat R of Lit 28:7 Ag 25 '45 1300w
Time 46:100 Ag 27 '45 850w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:9 D '45 340w

"Abundance is the word for Mencken as philologist, but it is a critical abundance, and also a high-spirited one. He moves through the ocean of American speech as Moby Dick moved through the waters of the Pacific; confidently, but carefully, too." Carl Van Doren
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ag 19 '45 1650w

Reviewed by R. J. Menner
Yale R n s 35:354 winter '46 1000w

MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY, FELIX. Letters; ed. by G. Selden-Goth. 373p il $4.50 Pantheon bks.
B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-5930

In new or revised translations this volume contains a large selection of Mendelssohn's letters to his family and friends. The letters bear dates from his twelfth year (1821) to a few days before his death in 1847.

Reviewed by Felix Borowski
Book Week p8 Je 17 '45 450w
Booklist 42:17 S '45

Reviewed by B. L. Conway
Cath World 161:520 S '45 350w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding
Commonweal 42:413 Ag 10 '45 600w
Kirkus 13:241 Je 1 '45 130w

"The volume makes interesting and delightful reading and is beautifully illustrated. Recommended especially for the general library." H. E. Bush
+ Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 110w

"Like his music, some of Mendelssohn's letters are somewhat faded. But a great majority are filled with the thoughts of a perceptive mind, of a poetic nature, and of a keenly critical intelligence. They are not the writings of a self-centered artist, but the communications of an eminently human soul, and one searches in vain for the outpourings of woe which characterized the bulk of Wagner's letters." M. A. Schubart

MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY, F.—Continued

+ N Y Times p6 Je 17 '45 1100w

"Mrs. Selden-Goth has done an admirable job of editing and the publishers have done an admirable job of bookmaking. Probably imperative for anyone interested in Mendelssohn."

+ New Yorker 21:72 Je 16 '45 90w

"Mendelssohn's letters, written from his many travels, make uncommonly interesting reading and not a few of them can be ranged among the gems of nineteenth-century epistolary literature. The anthology compiled and edited by Mrs. Selden-Goth is therefore most welcome to all students of the romantic era. It is regrettable that the present volume is still a selection only, like the previous and dated Victorian translations, but the selections are judicious, well arranged, and in many instances fill in the gaps so badly felt in the translations of Lady Wallace and Lady MacFarren." P. H. Lang

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:35 O 6 '45 400w

"This is the most attractive selection of Mendelssohn's letters which has yet appeared, and we shall have nothing to surpass it for a long time, if ever. . . What we needed was a selection of the best available letters, an anthology wisely chosen and skillfully presented; and here it is." John Erskine

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 8 '45 1000w

Reviewed by Richard Donovan
Yale R n s 35:351 winter '46 700w

MENZIES-KITCHIN, ALEXANDER WILLIAM. Future of British farming. (Target for tomorrow) 64p il $1.75 Transatlantic [5s Pilot]

338.1 Agriculture—Great Britain [45-9866]

"Dr. Menzies-Kitchin is head of the Economic Department of the School of Agriculture in Cambridge, and it is therefore not surprising to find that his book is full of useful agricultural statistics. He approaches the agricultural problem as an economist, but he shows at the same time that he has a very close understanding of the difficulties confronting farmers. He subscribes to the view usually associated with the names of Astor and Rowntree that the future of British farming rests mainly in livestock, livestock products, vegetables and fruit, and he lends weight to these arguments by various figures. . . Dr. Menzies-Kitchin realises that the big problem facing agriculture is not maximum production per acre or per animal, but maximum production per unit of labour and unit of capital. He is opposed to price subsidies. . . On the other hand, such subsidies as those on fertilisers, or subsidies which encourage the improvement of farm buildings in order to reduce labour costs, may be advisable, since these tend to lower costs of production, and, therefore, to stimulate efficiency. He also pleads 'for a thorough investigation into the economics of ley farming.'" Spec

---

Booklist 42:130 D 15 '45

"This book, as well as being a useful source of information about pre-war agricultural production, is attractively printed, considering wartime restrictions, and has some pleasantly contrasting photographs showing different forms of farming." H. D. Walston

+ Spec 175:204 Ag 31 '45 470w

MERCEY, ARCH A. and GROVE, LEE, eds. Sea, surf and hell; the U. S. Coast guard in World war II; introd. by Ellis Reed-Hill. 352p il $3 Prentice-Hall

940.545 U.S. Coast guard. World war, 1939–1945—Naval operations. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-9633

An account of the work of the United States coast guard in World war II, by some forty writers. "The tales range over human emotions and actions from humor to tragedy, shrewd cunning to magnificent courage, and they cover all of the seven seas plus a good amount of land area besides." (Weekly Book Review) Coast guard chronology, glossary, and index of men and ships.

Reviewed by F. N. Litten
Book Week p3 N 25 '45 360w

Booklist 42:126 D 15 '45

"It is amazing the uniformity of crispness of style, essential drama, lack of heroics. First rate reading."

+ Kirkus 13:411 S 15 '45 150w

"Informal in style, instructive and yet as thrilling to read as any modern adventure story. Don't pass this one up." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 70:978 O 15 '45 40w

"For what it is—an assortment of journalistic efforts, written under editorial pressure or at odd moments between more important and arduous tasks—it is first-rate." W. E. Wilson

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 20 '46 450w

"Probably the best group of coast guard action stories stemming from the war. Some pieces have appeared elsewhere, others are from official reports and logbooks, many were written by coast-guardsmen who lived through the incidents they were requested to report upon. . . It is an all-around book of all-around adventure and self-sacrifice." G. W. Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p4 N 27 '45 420w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles
Weekly Book Review p38 D 2 '45 400w

MERLUB-SOBEL, MENAHEM. Metals and alloys dictionary. 238p $4.50 Chemical pub. co.

669.03 Metallurgy. Metals 45-2508

"This dictionary of metals and alloys includes metallurgical terms relating to American practice. It is intended for the use of lay workers as well as the technologist. The majority of the definitions are brief, and the list of terms is selective rather than exhaustive." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Very useful up-to-date dictionary. . . Author, chemical, metallurgical and research engineer, has used his own specialized experience in description of rare metals."

+ Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:58 O '44

"The author intended the book for lay workers at the bench and behind the torch, no less than technologists with university training. He has produced a book which will be of value to experts and to amateurs in metallurgical operations."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:59 Mr '45 120w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. Systematic politics. 349p $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press

320 Political science A45-4394

"As name implies, well-organized comprehensive text on development of government toward objectives of human progress. Historic material expertly handled but emphasis is on how to make democracy work and methods of establishing justice among nations. Difficulties of teaching participation in authority, possibilities of establishing new rights of man on world basis are discussed. Chapters dealing with the use of experience to diminish mistakes and errors and increase the chance of success in operating a modern state are worth careful thought." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor
Book Week p8 S 23 '45 700w

Current Hist 9:461 N '45 100w

"A scholarly book, well able to continue Dr. Merriam's place among authorities on science of government. Recommended for adult students." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 70:684 Ag '45 130w

"One reads such a great work with gratitude for all the wealth of wisdom which enters the discussion of detailed problems but with a sense that the task of establishing a genuine community within the framework of a technical civilization is more difficult and the road toward the goal more tortuous than the author assumes." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 161:379 O 13 '45 480w

Reviewed by R. M. MacIver

N Y Times p12 Ja 6 '46 1650w

"Replete with references to Professor Merriam's earlier works, this is indeed a Summa of one of America's most prominent political scientists. It is written in a mellow and urbane spirit, an attitude to be expected in a man who was never partial to radicalism either intellectual or emotional. What it lacks in distinctiveness of viewpoint and originality of contribution, it gains in breadth of outlook and range of interest. Inclusiveness, rather than poignancy, moderation rather than challenge, wisdom rather than imagination are its virtues."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:42 D '45 400w

MERRILL, ELMER DREW. Plant life of the Pacific world. (Pacific world ser) 295p il $3.50 Macmillan

581.99 Botany—Islands of the Pacific
45-10571

"Author is America's leading authority on the flora of the Pacific region; he himself lived and botanized for twenty-two years in the Philippines and in other Pacific areas. His new book [contains] a simply written yet scientifically accurate account of the botany of the regions covered. It provides descriptions of the most common and the more important plants which the traveler is likely to meet. Illustrated. Comprehensive index and glossary." Library J

Booklist 42:71 N 1 '45

"Highly recommended." E. C. Hall

+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 70w

"Dr. Merrill debunks many of the lurid tales concerning tropical jungles, and insists that with reasonable precautions the Old World tropics are safe places in which to live and work. . . His discussion of the problems of plant distribution is a real contribution to knowledge, and his notes on specific islands and island groups are of interest to the specialist as well as to the lay reader."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ag '45 140w

MERRIMAN, ROGER BIGELOW. Suleiman the Magnificent, 1520-1566. 325p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Sulaimân I, the Magnificent, sultan of the Turks
A44-5977

Biography of the greatest of the Ottoman sultans, who captured Belgrade in 1521, besieged and captured Rhodes in 1522, invaded Hungary in 1526, and besieged Vienna unsuccessfully in 1529. In 1566 he once more invaded Hungary and died while besieging Sziget. The volume is based on notes and papers of the late Archibald Cary Coolidge.

"This is a learned and authoritative but vigorously written and exciting account of the lush career of one of the four great monarchs of the 16th century." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ja 21 '45 140w

Booklist 41:223 Ap 1 '45

"Professor Merriman writes not only a fine biography of the Turkish Sultan, but relates the history of his reign in precise yet entertaining fashion." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 8:154 F '45 70w

"Professor Merriman has not written a biography which fulfills the requirements of modern critical scholarship. No satisfying explanation of his failure to deal adequately with his subject is apparent. . . And yet, despite its limitations, Professor Merriman's book is interesting and valuable. It is clear in arrangement; it is straightforward—though a trifle pretentious—in style." W. L. Wright, Jr.

— + N Y Times p7 F 11 '45 1050w

"Professor Merriman's Suleiman the Magnificent may not be the definitive work on the subject in the English language but it is, in the reviewer's judgment, by far the best work so far published and it will serve as a great aid to students of European history of the sixteenth century which must be studied with the background of Turkish influence in Europe. Furthermore, this book will help remove some of the existing prejudice regarding the Turkish people and will be regarded by unbiased scholars as a solid contribution in the field of the history of the Ottoman Empire and the sixteenth-century world." Taraknath Das

+ Pol Sci Q 60:311 Je '45 1000w

"Written by one of the most popular Harvard professors of history, with many years of service in that institution, this biography of the greatest of Turkish sultans is interesting historical reading. . . This is a well-documented book, but not too intricate for appreciative popular reading." M. J. Boyer

+ Social Educ 9:237 My '45 400w

"'Suleiman the Magnificent' will delight students of history qua history. . . With authoritative scholarship and felicitous style [Professor Merriman] presents not the first but certainly one of the most complete and informative biographies of a superlative ruler whose deeds shine fully as brilliantly as those of his renowned contemporaries, Charles V, Henry VIII, Francis I and Phillip II. . . Much can be learned from the life of any outstanding man and Suleiman is a whole series of lessons. Professor Merriman's study is glowing romance, authentic narrative and textbook all in one, invaluable to student and fascinating to the general reader." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 24 '44 1100w

MERTON, THOMAS. Thirty poems. [29p] $1; pa 50c New directions

811
45-763

"The author, twenty-nine and educated on two continents, is now a Trappist monk in Our Lady of Gethsemani Monastery in Kentucky. His poems unite a semi-surrealist technique with religious feeling and thereby frequently produce fresh and moving effects." New Yorker

---

"As graceful a sheaf of devotional verse as has been originally published in some decades." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p10 F 18 '45 350w

"Thomas Merton's poetry is lofty in tone, finely-molded, with the fluency of diction and wide-ranging allusiveness of a travelled scholar. Many of his poems—especially his 'Aubade: Lake Erie'—show a strong feeling for the soil." Alan Creighton

+ Canadian Forum 24:266 F '45 170w

"Merton is a modest, not altogether satisfactory minor writer. But he is also, as far as my experience goes, easily the most promising of our American Catholic poets and, possibly, the most consequential Catholic poet to write in English since the death of Francis Thompson. Why the last forty years of the Catholic literary revival, which have seen the prose of Chesterton, Dawson and Waugh, have produced nothing as lasting as the light verses of Belloc is no doubt due to complex, partially intangible, causes. We must take what comes. What Merton writes is his own, subtle and intense. So small and genuine an achievement is worth consideration." Robert Lowell

+ Commonweal 42:240 Je 22 '45 1700w

Reviewed by John Berryman

N Y Times p10 Mr 18 '45 420w

New Yorker 20:56 D 30 '44 40w

"There is no lack of grace and innocence here: cadences are pleasant; diction bright and pale; images easy and at times exact. But Merton is fond of refulgences; he likes words like 'white,' 'bright,' 'sweet,' 'smile,' 'ray'; and he uses them again and again. If there is little thinking or passion here, there is much radiance and joyful meditation. Gewgaws of surrealism (Merton has appeared in

MERTON, THOMAS—Continued
View) bedizen his otherwise decorous manner. . . Merton's few secular poems are stronger: The Night Train; Iphigenia: Politics; and the very fine and earthy-colored poem in memory of Lorca are, to my thinking, far the best in the selection." J. F. Nims
+ — Poetry 65:264 F '45 750w
Weekly Book Review p23 F 11 '45 210w

MERWIN, SAMUEL, 1910- Knife in my back. 256p $2 Arcadia 45-2145

"Amy Brewster, rich, obese, cigar smoking Boston amateur is one of the main characters in this tale of love, money, murder and rare French paperweights." Weekly Book Review

"With the possible exception of the mad Frenchwoman who imagines that she is the Empress Eugenie, all the people in this story talk and act pretty much alike. Considering their widely divergent characters, for which we must take the author's word, this makes them seem singularly unreal." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Mr 4 '45 180w

"Mr. Merwin manages a not too complicated plot with neatness and dispatch." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 29 '45 30w

MERWIN, SAMUEL, 1910-. Message from a corpse. 256p $2 Arcadia 45-9833

Detective story.

"Shorn of its overlong descriptions and its inane wise-cracking, this might have been an exciting, if not too convincing, detective story." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p20 D 2 '45 180w

"A swiftly paced, tempestuous, and explosive puzzle."
Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p40 D 2 '45 130w

MEYER, ADOLPH ERICH. Voltaire: man of justice. 395p $3.50 Howell, Soskin
B or 92 Voltaire, François Marie Arouet de 45-35052

A biography of the great eighteenth century French philosopher, which gives an account of his trials and persecutions, his failures and successes. Index.

"Mr. Meyer may indeed have written an important biography, although this reviewer is otherwise persuaded. . . There is breadth to this study, considerable intelligence, and occasionally the lively color that comes of quoting those quick, flashing phrases of personal correspondence which, more than pages of formal analysis, reveal the springs of personality. There is, however, less depth than breadth, more oversimplification than investigation, and an absence of systematic presentation of Voltaire's intellectual growth." Leo Gershoy
— + Am Hist R 51:111 O '45 480w

"It is doubtful whether any competent biographer could fail to write a reasonably interesting life of Voltaire, but Adolph Meyer has written a fascinating one. Not only does Voltaire, Man of Justice offer a picture of the amazingly many-sided Voltaire, but it provides an excellent vignette of a century almost as incredible as the individual who is its central figure." Hilden Gibson
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1242 D '45 400w

"A study of Voltaire and his time that reads like an exciting novel of the first order. It stresses psychological facts that hitherto had gone unnoticed, offers a large quantity of new documents and intimate letters, and easily succeeds in establishing the 'persecutor of the human race' (as his enemies like to call Voltaire) for what he really was: The Man of Justice. Delightfully written, this biography is by no means a panegyric, but is a critical interpretation of the philosopher's complete literary work." H. L. Reich
+ Book Week p10 Ap 29 '45 500w

Booklist 41:254 My 1 '45

"Prof. Meyer, thoroughly adept in matters of psychology and scholarship, has had access to a large store of documents, letters, and factual materials, both in this country and in Europe. This sterling biography gives a full picture of its protagonist and his times." W. P. Sears
+ Churchman 159:16 My 1 '45 240w

"Mr. Meyer's book meets a real need. To the uninitiated it brings knowledge of the main events in Voltaire's long and active life and the commonly accepted lessons of his major writings. It is not a controversial book—it does not go deep enough for that—and it attempts no new interpretation. The inevitable errors are usually of minor nature, and chronology often yields, as it probably should in a work of this kind, to the exigencies of narrative." N. L. Torrey
+ N Y Times p18 Je 3 '45 800w
New Yorker 21:91 Ap 14 '45 160w

"Voltaire's peculiar blend of levity and earnestness is hard to recapture. This study is well meant and well done, yet it sounds almost constantly off key." Albert Guerard
+ — Weekly Book Review p20 My 20 '45 600w

MEYER, DICKEY, pseud. See Chapelle, G. L. M.

MEYER, HANS. Philosophy of St Thomas Aquinas; tr. by Frederic Eckhoff. 581p $5 Herder
189.4 Thomas Aquinas, Saint 44-6018

"In three introductory chapters the author sketches an excellent portrait of St. Thomas as a thinker and a saint, besides telling of his debt to Aristotle, Plato, St. Augustine, the Arabians, the Jewish philosophers, the Fathers and the early Scholastics. . . The main part of this volume—thirty-nine chapters—treats of the structure of individual things, the hierarchy of the forms of being, the origin and corruption of things, and order in the universe." Cath World

"We know of no writer who has written a more detailed, or a more critical estimate of St. Thomas's philosophy." B. L. Conway
+ Cath World 160:478 F '45 200w

"The present work is a translation of 'Thomas von Aquin, Sein system und Seine Geistesgeschichtliche Stellung,' by Dr. Hans Meyer, professor of philosophy in the University of Würzburg, published in Germany in 1938. . . The translation omits nearly all of the historical footnotes and many of references to the Thomistic text. Checking at random also showed that some sentences and parts of sentences found in the original are omitted. The English is frequently obscure and awkward in expression. The translation repeats an inconsistency of the original in placing the birth of Saint Thomas in 1226 or 1227 in Chapter I and in 1224 or 1225 (the latter is correct) in the appendix." William O'Meara
Commonweal 40:379 Ag 4 '44 410w

MEYER, JEROME SYDNEY. ABC of physics. 346p il $3.50 Dial press
530 Physics 45-1405

"Appropriately titled, this book spells out in simplest terms those phases of the intricate science of physics with which the layman is vitally concerned. It is 'a physics guide rather than a physics text-book.' The first part deals with matter and motion, the second with 'the world of vibration,' including electronics, and the third with practical applications, running the gamut from suspension bridges to sound reproduction and the electron microscope. Biographical notes concerning the great contributors to knowledge in this phase of science are skilfully woven into the text. Numerous diagrams add greatly to its clarity." Scientific Bk Club R

"With the exception of a very few relatively modern applications this book contains much less than Millikan and Gale's 'First Course in Physics' of 1913, and does not begin to explain things as well. It seems to me that one who does not already understand physics will not learn it from this book, but will do much better to read any good elementary high school text." E. B. Zeisler

— + Book Week p2 F 11 '45 310w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:12 Ja '45

"Mr. Meyer is a layman, now a professional physicist, and he knows precisely what are the stumbling blocks in the layman's path toward understanding. Moreover, he has a real flair for expository presentation of his material. Experts may find items to criticize among his concise definitions and descriptions or in certain of his attempts to simplify what is inherently complex, but the total picture he presents is surprisingly accurate, and the net result of his effort is exceptionally commendable."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ja '45 300w

MEYER, JEROME SYDNEY. Picture book of astronomy; il. by Richard Floethe. 36p $1.75 Lothrop

520 Astronomy—Juvenile literature 45-35097

In colored pictures and simple text the author and illustrator attempt to show young children some of the simple facts of astronomy—why doesn't the earth stop turning; what is the sun, and why the seasons; why does the moon shine, etc.

"Here is a book about the sun, the planets and the stars which can be greeted with real enthusiasm. Never have I seen astronomy so graphically and understandingly explained. The author has worked out such vivid examples—examples which relate to the world a child knows—and the artist, Richard Floethe, has pictured these examples so clearly in his drawings, that the mystery of the skies is scaled to the understanding of even quite young children."

+ Book Week p23 Je 3 '45 270w

Booklist 41:306 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"Here is an excellent science book for Junior High School levels—and up. It answers just the questions that most children ask about the sun, the seasons and the solar system. It is lucid, without being oversimplified, and many adults find it worthwhile reading for themselves."

+ Kirkus 13:223 My 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 70:588 Je 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p18 Je 10 '45 180w

"There are certain children who will find this book more fascinating than a fairytale. It is told so clearly, so graphically that even very little boys and girls will comprehend it. And the drawings, the whole design of the book is dramatic, arresting." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 Ag 11 '45 310w

"It is a book of distinction because of its format and the fine illustrations by Richard Floethe. Grown-ups will also glean much from the pages because of the clear concise presentation of facts. An index, however, would have added to the usefulness of the book." M. K. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 70w

"At first sight these boys and girls cheerfully tumbling about in space, these merry-go-rounds in the sky and surrealist landscapes on distant planets, may seem like flights of pure fantasy, particularly as they are in fairy-tale colors and often with an illusion of roundness almost like a stereoscopic view. But closer inspection reveals these drawings and the spirited text accompanying them, as an attempt to present to young children, in forms intelligible to their experience, some of the basic elements of astronomic science."

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 20 '45 270w

Wis Lib Bul 41:87 Jl '45

MEYNELL, FRANCIS. Seventeen poems. 29p $2 Nonesuch [4s 6d Dent]

821 45-6300

"Alice Meynell's son, one of the founders of the Nonesuch Press, brings together light and serious verse written over a period of thirty years." New Yorker

New Yorker 21:87 S 29 '45 30w

Reviewed by W. R. Benet

Sat R of Lit 28:41 O 20 '45 90w

"Lyric and epigrammatic, these brief poems are exceedingly well knit, yet succulent, with a precise, freshly employed idiom." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 14 '45 230w

MIERS, EARL SCHENCK. The ivy years. 229p $2.50 Rutgers univ. press; Presbyterian bd

45-35116

An account of the author's undergraduate days written in fiction form. "This book is a realistic account of what takes place on the American college campus—its tangled web of experience inside and outside the student's mind and heart—and of the resultant character and perspective on life that come out of it all." (School & Society)

Booklist 41:321 Jl 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 14 '45 270w

"The Ivy Years is autobiographical and will be read as eagerly by those who are familiar with the university scene as by those who intend to become a part of it."

+ School & Society 61:368 Je 2 '45 80w

"While 'The Ivy Years' has a Rutgers setting, the life it depicts is sufficiently typical to make it, in some measure, a useful guidebook for prospective students of any American college. By the same token, many 'old grads,' regardless of their particular collegiate ties, may find in this story numerous pleasant reminders of their own youth." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 360w

MIKHAILOV, NIKOLAI NIKOLAEVICH. Russian story; the coming of age of a great people [Eng title: Russian glory]. 191p $2.75 Sheridan [7s 6d Hutchinson]

947 Russia—History. Russia—Civilization. World war, 1939-1945—Russia 45-7464

"After stating that the events of the winter months of 1941 threatened to end a thousand-year process of Russian history and the genius and independence of the Russian people, the author goes back to those occasions in the past when Russia survived a similar threat. He conjures up the circumstances of the defeat by Alexander Nevsky of the Teutonic Knights on the ice of Lake Peipus, the victory of Dmitri Donskoi over the Tatars at Kulikovo, the Time of Troubles and the rescue of Moscow under the leadership of Minin and Pozharsky, Peter the Great's victory at Poltava, 1812, and the Red triumph in the civil war." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 S 16 '45 360w

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 22 '45 250w

"In less than two hundred easy pages with a graphic sweep and compelling pace Nicholas Mikhailov gives in essence a clearer portrait of the Soviets than most of the weightier tomes that have been pouring off the presses." W. H. Melish

+ Churchman 159:16 O 15 '45 210w

"I read The Russian Story and I still feel as if I had been out in a big east wind. As history it is more curious than convincing, but the spirit of the book is extremely informative. Mikhailov is described as a great Soviet geographer and historian, and he has written a hymn to Soviet geography and history which is enough to sweep Russians off their feet and make Henry Luce tremble in his boots. It reminds one, in a way, of the self-glorifying American oratory of the last century. . . With the great difference that, according to Constance Rourke, who ought to know, the American encomiums were as often as not regarded as 'buncombe' by both orators and auditors. 'The Russian Story,' needless to say, is preternaturally solemn." Margaret Marshall

MIKHAILOV, N. N.—Continued
Nation 161:464 N 3 '45 700w

"It should be noted that in this telescoping into 184 pages of 1,000 years of Russia's turmoil and growth, Mikhailov has no political axe to grind. His book, simply and directly written, is rather a historic and geographic travelogue, reading with the speed of a novel, letting the facts speak for themselves." Annette Robin
+ N Y Times p7 S 2 '45 500w

"This book, which crams a thousand years of Russian history into less than two hundred pages, is apt to make the American reader a little cross. Anyone can sympathize with the conscientious Soviet historian whose delicate task it is to present the full panorama of Russian history down to the present and keep his self-respect as well as his ration card. But for American publishers to palm off an ecstatic piece of Soviet propaganda as the 'whole story' of the Russians (the italics are theirs), as 'brilliant historical writing,' and a 'literary landmark' is something else."
New Yorker 21:86 S 22 '45 160w

"Anyone not familiar with the declamatory and pamphleteering style often employed today in Russia by writers on historic subjects . . . would have tough going making head or tail of this book by a Soviet geographer and historian. . . No less disconcerting by Western standards is the author's disregard for time sequence, his habit of skipping back and forth over the stairs of history at breakneck speed, sometimes sliding down the banisters. . . Despite this rather hectic, and, to the American reader, impermissible disregard for the canons of composition, and the historic method, Mikhailov's book is illuminating as an expression of the Russians' new-found pride in their national past." Edmund Stevens
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:34 O 6 '45 400w

"Russian history gains a certain simplified dramatic force by these means, though the drama tends to outweigh the history, and now and then the interpretations of modern history are rather unsubtle. But the book is too disorderly and perhaps too much of a hotchpotch of elementary fact and patriotic sentiment to serve its intended purpose."
Times [London] Lit Sup p436 S 15 '45 240w

MILBANK MEMORIAL FUND. Demographic studies of selected areas of rapid growth; proceedings of the Round table on population problems; twenty-second annual conference, April 12-13, 1944. 158p map pa $1 The fund
312 Population

"These seven papers, presented at the Twenty-second Annual Conference of the Milbank Memorial Fund, deal with the population problems of Japan, India, Eastern Europe, the Balkans, the Near East and Egypt." Foreign Affairs.

Reviewed by R. R. Puffer
Am J Pub Health 35:526 My '45 360w
Am Soc R 10:453 Je '45 160w
Foreign Affairs 23:514 Ap '45 30w

MILHOUS, KATHERINE. Snow over Bethlehem [il. by the author]. 98p $2 Scribner 45-37876

A story based on the historical records of the Moravians. It describes the Christmas of 1755 celebrated at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, when the children from the settlement at Nazareth were sent to Bethlehem to save them from an Indian attack.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p7 D 23 '45 230w
Booklist 42:152 Ja 1 '46

"That Miss Milhous spent a Christmas in Bethlehem and was deeply moved by the Moravian festival is evident in the atmosphere and authenticity of her drawings. She has also done careful research. The old map reproduced on the end papers shows the town of Bethlehem as it was in the year 1755, in which the events of the story take place. I find the text less interesting and convincing than the pictures, owing to the mingling of historical and fictional characters with a lack of drama." A. C. Moore
+ — Horn Bk 21:446 N '45 160w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p42 D 2 '45 230w

"A new chapter from American history and a touching story."
+ New Yorker 21:136 D 8 '45 40w

"Katherine Milhous has made some of the loveliest drawings of her career for this Christmas story of early America." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 D 8 '45 500w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 100w

"While the preparations for reception of the children and for carrying out the festival are in progress, so much is explained about the history and significance of the settlement that the book belongs not only among those for ten-year-olds, but with those that light up for any one the rich, varied background of Pennsylvania." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 9 '45 220w

MILL, JOHN STUART. Bibliography of [his] published writings; ed. from his ms. with corrections and notes by Ney MacMinn [and others]. 101p $2.50 Northwestern univ.
012 Mill, John Stuart—Bibliography
45-5303

"The particular significance of this bibliography is that it is John Stuart Mill's own record of his published writings, found, in the form of a manuscript note-book, in a miscellany which was part of the Mill collection acquired by the British Library of Political and Economic Science. The first page of the note-book is in Mill's own hand, the rest in that of his stepdaughter, Helen Taylor, or an amanuensis. . . The editors have added exact bibliographical references to the accurate, yet variable and often incomplete, descriptive note-book entries. Following nearly every bibliographical reference is a 'succinct digest' of the subject matter of the item described. A foot-note in the editors' preface lists Mill's books, articles, and speeches which were published after his death." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"The bibliography within its limits seems to be substantially complete and to be wholly free from improper inclusions. But the editors in their preface go somewhat too far when they say that it accounts for 'practically everything that Mill had put into print' (p. ix) and that it accounts for 'practically everything from his pen that got into print' (p. xii). This latter statement should, of course, be read as intended to apply only to Mill's lifetime." Jacob Viner
Mod Philol 43:149 N '45 950w

"Since Mill's articles, reviews, and letters to editors on a wide diversity of subjects were frequently unsigned, or signed with a pseudonym or initials, this carefully kept note-book of his becomes an authentic and complete chronology of his writings published during his lifetime. . . Except for possible, though unlikely, omissions, this bibliography is as complete a record of an author's writings as is rarely achieved."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:70 D '45 200w

MILLAR, MRS MARGARET. The iron gates. 241p $2.50 Random house 45-2399

Psychological mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 Ap 8 '45 180w

"A book that has an irresistible attraction for those who like their mysteries intricate and intelligent. George Simenon could do no better."

+ Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 180w

"A novel of crime, this is a closewebbed tale of emotional exaggeration and mental unbalance, and a very accomplished performance."

+ Kirkus 13:44 F 1 '45 90w

"In spite of an excellent section on life in a sanitarium, this 'psychological thriller' (publisher's billing) of why Lucille Morrow ran away from husband and family left me feeling I'd been had—in spades."

— + New Repub 112:455 Ap 2 '45 80w

"The psychothriller, or spook sonata played pianissimo, has had a mighty vogue these past years and the present author has won deserved plaudits as an expert in the field. But for this reviewer's money she has over-reached herself in 'The Iron Gates'; for him, at least, the book is too often grotesque rather than terrifying." James MacBride

— N Y Times p28 Ap 1 '45 320w

"A return to the straight psychological horror story, by the author of 'Fire Will Freeze,' which attempted to combine horror and farce. . . Just the kind of material, evidently, that Mrs. Millar handles most successfully."

+ New Yorker 21:92 Ap 7 '45 70w

"Tops in terror."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 Ap 7 '45 40w

"Mrs. Millar's straight-shooting prose, clicking at every point with a superior sort of tough-mindedness, is probably the most notable feature of the act. . . Inspector Sands, already familiar to this author's fans, is a honey. You can't go wrong with this 'psychological thriller' in your clutches." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 1 '45 300w

MILLER, ARTHUR. Focus. 217p $2.50 Reynal 45-9586

"An American of English descent named Newman begins to wear glasses, from then on is mistaken for a Jew and becomes the victim of anti-Semitic persecution." Library J

"'Focus' is the most exciting novel I have read in a twelve-month. It is as spine-tingling as an ice-cold needle shower; it is also a momentous work of truth and art. It is a tract of literates on the anatomy of native Fascism; an indictment of bigotry and social irresponsibility in a consummately skillful literary form." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p28 N 11 '45 650w

Booklist 42:111 D 1 '45

"A realistic handling of an unreal story." E. F. Keefe

Commonweal 43:219 D 7 '45 230w

"A mechanical device used to make a grim novel of those who walk in fear of senseless bigotry—not wholly successful, but interesting and with a certain challenge."

Kirkus 13:345 Ag 15 '45 190w

Reviewed by J. L. Ross

Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by Saul Bellow

New Repub 114:29 Ja 7 '46 850w

"This is a novel about anti-Semitism, a strong, sincere book bursting with indignation and holding the reader's attention despite its many faults. Its author handles his explosive materials skillfully, but not skillfully enough to keep his novel from sounding like a tract. And as a tract it depends too much on melodrama to be fully convincing." Alfred Butterfield

+ — N Y Times p15 N 18 '45 300w

"A pertinent idea for satire these days, but enough is enough and you get the point long before Mr. Miller has finished belaboring it."

New Yorker 21:102 N 3 '45 80w

"How true to fact the novel is the reader does not know, or whether the nightmare has become or can become reality. But the author's sincerity is evidence that it exists in America, that it is to be feared, and that it must be stopped. It would appear that Arthur Miller knows what he is talking about and that he feels our danger deeply." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 N 17 '45 700w

"[This] is in a class with the propaganda novels of Charles Reade, or Harriet Beecher Stowe, which is a pretty good class to be in. The happiest fortune we can ask for it is that it may be read not by the completely tolerant members of our large populace but by those, so much more numerous, who either have not had occasion to face the problem it propounds or who chose simply to close their eyes to it. If it can help them indeed to focus on the ugly sight it discloses, self-interest as well as decency may well compel them to take the same kind of remedial measures that its modest hero finally adopted." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 18 '45 750w

MILLER, FRANCIS TREVELYAN. History of World war II. 966p il maps $5 Winston

940.53 World war, 1939-1945 45-8888

"Mr. Miller, following the military rule about getting there fustest with the mostest, has compiled (with the help of over two hundred editors in thirty countries, according to the publishers) an enormous volume dealing with all the military phases of the war and many of the non-military events, such as the rise of a man named Adolf Hitler, that led up to it." New Yorker

"The best I can say about this volume of nearly 1,000 pages is that it is a good chronology. As history it's sadly lacking." David Karno

— + Book Week p17 O 28 '45 180w

Booklist 42:107 D 1 '45

"As a reference book for the period—and indeed as a personal memento of the terrible struggle—it is invaluable."

+ Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 70w

Kirkus 13:467 O 15 '45 90w

"It is unfortunate that the grandiose claims made for 'History of World War II,' tend to obscure the fact that a great deal of careful, competent preparation of the best material available at the time of writing has gone into it. And what is one to say of a 'standard history' of nearly 1,000 pages that does not even possess an index!" F. S. Adams

N Y Times p6 D 30 '45 310w

"Mr. Miller's volume will not stand as the definitive history of the war. It will probably be of considerable interest, however, and possibly some value, for those who can't wait for their history to cool."

New Yorker 21:99 O 27 '45 100w

Sat R of Lit 28:74 N 10 '45 20w

MILLER, GEORGE LAFLIN (AESOP GLIM, pseud). How advertising is written—and why. (Whittlesey house publication) 150p $1.75 McGraw

659.1 Advertising 45-4575

"Book on copy writing for advertising writers. Embodiment of Aesop Glim's 'Copy Clinic' that appeared in Printer's Ink and in an advertising course. Fundamentals and principles tested and proved in advertising. Includes layout and illustrations as well as headlines and copy." Library J

"The book is full of stuff that every advertising writer knows but is likely to forget; drudging copy men should read it every now and then as a refresher course." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p5 My 20 '45 270w

Booklist 41:317 Jl 1 '45

Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 60w

MILLER, HARRY, and COOPER, PAGE. Footloose fiddler. (Whittlesey house publication) 326p il $2.75 McGraw

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-5202

"A pleasant autobiographical account of what happened to a youthful Cleveland musician in

MILLER, HARRY—Continued
the eighties when he got a bad case of the wanderlust and set out to see the world. In quick succession he became a salesman of human hair, barker for a side show, salesman of decalcomania pictures for windows of New Orleans bawdy houses, and entrepreneur for grand opera and minstrel shows in Mexico and the American Southwest. Mr Miller was about 16 when he began his amusing and not unprofitable career, and was still under 20 when he returned home." Springf'd Republican

---

Reviewed by J. A. Brandt
Book Week p5 My 20 '45 800w

"This has a come-what-may appeal, engaging gusto."
Kirkus 13:124 Mr 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 110w

"Even if only most of the things in 'Footloose Fiddler' are true, Harry Miller had himself a time, and that is certainly what the reader has." N. K. B.
+ N Y Times p7 Je 3 '45 300w

"Perhaps, had Mr Alger heard of how Mr Miller returned home broke, he would have been moved to point a moral, but Mr Miller also returned home very happy and pleased with his experiences, which should never have happened to a boy who liked to try his luck. His wanderings, the friends he made and the enterprizes he attempted probably carry no message for the youths of today, but they are fun to read about, and carry with them the color of an American era which, for better or for worse, will never return." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 15 '45 300w

Reviewed by Richard Match
Weekly Book Review p22 Ag 5 '45 480w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Dark sails; a tale of old St Simons. 256p $2.75 Bobbs 45-9402

Historical novel of colonial days in Georgia. The chief characters are a group of English men and women who, under Oglethorpe's leadership, attempt to settle on the island of St Simons in spite of Spanish threats.

Booklist 42:129 D 15 '45

"A distinct contrast to all previous titles, this however is dependable reading fare of romance and history adequately blended."
+ Kirkus 13:322 Ag 1 '45 210w

"At most it seems like a typical scenario for a Grade B historical movie." F. W. Leary
N Y Times p15 N 18 '45 140w

"A novel robust and stirring, quite eclipsing the light formula of romance she usually presents. It is, perhaps, historical fiction with a feminine touch, but it gives a rounded picture." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p43 N 11 '45 150w

MILLER, HENRY. Air-conditioned nightmare. v1 292p il $3.50 New directions
917.3 U.S.—Description and travel (45-11390)

An American author who has lived and published his novels abroad, here describes his return to his native country. On a long trip over much of the United States he points out our failings, in landscape and in matters of the spirit.

"His literary style is akin to Saroyan and Proust, but the beauty is overshadowed by egotism. Recommended with reservations." Katharine Shorey
Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 110w

"'The industrial desolation of the steel towns deserves everything he says about it, but it is unfair to compare Pittsburgh and Detroit, which he visited in mid-winter, with memories of the French countryside in summer. And he seems never to have visited a steel mill to watch a blast furnace in action—a gorgeous and impressive sight, which would at least have given him some idea of the extraordinary achievement of power and skill to which the landscape and the people have been sacrificed. . . 'The Air-Conditioned Nightmare' is one of the best of Henry Miller's books that have come out in his native land (his novels have been published only in Paris), and, since its subject is of general interest, I hope that it will make him more widely known. Henry Miller's approach to any subject is always quite unlike anyone else's, and he is here at his most entertaining as well as, in places, at his most eloquent." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Yorker 21:65 D 29 '45 600w

"As in most of his books, the prime beef is liberally pieced out with baloney. But the observation is often keen and clinical, the virulence both ferocious and funny."
+ — Time 46:106 D 24 '45 600w

MILLER, HENRY WISE. All our lives, Alice Duer Miller. 229p il $3 Coward-McCann
B or 92 Miller, Alice (Duer) 45-35102

This biography of Alice Duer Miller by her husband is informally written, consisting of rambling reminiscences, brief anecdotes, character sketches of friends and relatives, all set forth with charm and affection.

Booklist 41:300 Je 15 '45

"The book is more than the biography of Alice Duer Miller, it is the story of a successful married life. It is a tribute from a husband to a wife who remained beautiful to him all her life."
+ Boston Globe My 31 '45 150w

"Mr. Miller's is a delightful account of an almost perfect marriage; it's a cockle-warming book, civilized, agreeable, amusing, full of good anecdotes and appropriate quotations. It builds up, as a biography should, so lively a picture of its subject that at the end the reader both feels he knew her and wishes to goodness he had known her. And perhaps the most important point about this singularly slight, unpretentious story is that it is both true and pleasant." Anne Fremantle
+ Commonweal 42:360 Jl 27 '45 1100w

"It has a certain indefinable charm, and a good deal of snob appeal."
Kirkus 13:268 Je 15 '45 100w

"A marital biography should be prejudiced in its subject's favor, and this one happily is. It would be poorer fare if it were served cold. Nobody will read it without feeling that he or she has missed something in life by not knowing Alice Duer Miller, which is, one may guess, the kind of success that Mr. Miller would most wish for his portrait. And what a subject he has!" S. H. Adams
+ N Y Times p6 Je 24 '45 900w

"The likelihood that an intimate memoir of Alice Duer Miller would be of interest to many people seems, on the surface, extremely slim. However, Mr. Miller, in this book about his wife, is like a man turning over the pages of a family album, and he is so pleased with what he sees, and has so many pleasant memories, that he manages to communicate much of his pleasure to the reader."
New Yorker 21:71 Je 23 '45 90w

"The structure of the book leaves something to be desired, and the best way to read it is to pick it up anywhere and simply run from one thing to another. There is much to amuse, some snobbishness peculiar to an earlier day, a great deal that is gay and human, thoughtful and loving. Sometimes the discussion of serious matters becomes a bit portentous, and the law is laid down rather too flatly on Mr. Miller's part. . . These are minor matters. The story concerns two well-bred, well-read, cultivated people who lived gallantly and, on the whole, intelligently; and the end of the book is truly moving because obviously a true reporting of the last days of a brave woman." W. R. Benét
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:29 Jl 21 '45 1100w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 15 '45 1100w

"If at the end of the year an intelligent general reader is asked what book he most enjoyed and why, I shall be much surprised if this one is not most often named and for the greatest number of reasons, many of which may surprise the reader himself." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Je 10 '45 1650w

MILLER, MRS MADELEINE (SWEENY), and MILLER, JOHN LANE. Encyclopedia of Bible life. 493p il maps $4.95 Harper

220.3 Bible. Whole—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 44-51116

A reference book for ministers, Sunday schools, and the home. Material is grouped under large headings, alphabetically arranged, from agriculture and animals to water supply and worship. The many illustrations include photographs of ancient monuments and modern ways of life which reflect the ancient ways.

Booklist 41:145 Ja 15 '45

"Dr. and Mrs. Miller are to be warmly congratulated on having produced a work such as this, notwithstanding their engrossment in the heavy tasks of important pastorates. Doubtless they will have their reward in the usefulness of the volume to a wide circle of Bible students. It is unfortunate, however, that the general excellence of the book is marred by a large number of small errors, in some sections one or two on each successive page. Here are some illustrations: The plain of Esdraelon does not 'merge into the fertile valley of Jezreel' (p. 14); they are the same, the former name being a Greek corruption of the latter. It is implied that the plain of Dothan is near Shechem (p. 14); actually it is many miles away." W. A. Irwin
+ — Christian Century 62:680 Je 6 '45 800w

"The authors of the Encyclopedia of Bible Life, according to the jacket of their volume, have made nine trips to the Eastern Mediterranean in the years preceding the war. The work which they have written shows very clearly that they have read widely and diligently in the most recent archaeological materials. They are personally acquainted with some of the leading scholars. The illustrations, largely their own photographs, which cover one hundred pages, are of excellent quality. However, in spite of commendable features, the Encyclopedia of Bible Life cannot in any sense be recommended as either reliable or authoritative." R. S. Haupert
— + Crozer Q 22:173 Ap '45 1100w

"The personal acquaintance of the authors with life in the Near East today is evident on every page. Their observations are correlated accurately with biblical lore and customs and aid greatly in making the Bible live. This general impression is, unfortunately, disturbed by numerous small inaccuracies. . . They need not, however, blind one's eyes to this volume's many excellent qualities. Dr. and Mrs. Miller have done a commendable piece of work." F. C. Prussner
+ — J Religion 25:307 O '45 250w

"The ministers, Sunday-school teachers and other biblical students for whom this book was written owe a substantial debt to its authors. Every page reflects the Millers' thorough knowledge of the Bible, their experience in teaching and preaching, their keen perception of the relationship between ancient and modern life in the 'unchanging East,' and their intelligent study of the works of Albright, Glueck, Woolley and others, whose research has so greatly expanded the materials for an interpretation of Bible life within the last twenty-five years." E. M. Sanford
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 1 '45 900w

"A thick, well-organized, splendidly illustrated book crammed with information about the persons and places, the arts and crafts, the social and economic conditions that prevailed in the world at the dawn of the Christian era, and about nearly everything else that is part of the background of the Bible. It is intended for religious workers, but it should be enormously interesting to anyone who likes to read the Bible."
+ New Yorker 20:79 Ja 13 '45 80w
Wis Lib Bul 41:35 Mr '45

MILLER, MARGERY. Joe Louis: American. 181p $2 Current bks.

B or 92 Louis, Joe 45-9394

A biography of the Negro heavy-weight champion from his childhood days on a rocky Alabama farm, thru the years of his climb to success in the prize ring, to the day when he joined the Army.

Reviewed by Warren Brown
Book Week p6 N 18 '45 500w
Booklist 42:109 D 1 '45
Kirkus 13:411 S 15 '45 150w

"Rather sentimental biography of the Negro heavyweight champion. Clear picture of a man who is not only good with his fists but of good character. Writing is undistinguished, and the influences around Louis which helped him shape his actions are not given enough attention. Recommended for older boys and men." G. E. Cartmell
+ — Library J 70:1140 D 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by J. C. Nichols
N Y Times p22 D 2 '45 500w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 28:28 D 8 '45 1200w

"The author of this biography of Joe Louis, Miss Margery Miller, is a young woman, not long out of college, who somehow has become fascinated with the doings of the prize ring, and with the character of the champion in particular. . . Her study of Louis is possibly a shade too admiring, and she ignores or glosses over many of the more unpleasant associations of the ring, but at the same time it is a fresh note in pugilistic history." Stanley Walker
+ — Weekly Book Review p22 N 4 '45 1000w

MILLER, MAX. The far shore. (Whittlesey house publication) 173p il $2.50 McGraw

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-3573

An account of the Normandy invasion. "Lieutenant Commander Max Miller, U.S.N.R., conveys with great force and simplicity a picture of the establishing of a beachhead for invasion. The realization of tremendous planning ahead so that every vital need can be met, the kind of vessels taking part (he was aboard a command vessel of the Landing Craft Infantry 'LCI'), the importance of weather and the other unpredictables, the suspense as plans are maturing, the invasion itself, the work that continues on the beach until the area is secured, the matter-of-fact attitudes of the men, the close coordination of Army and Navy are all parts of the picture." Library J

Reviewed by W. H. Fetridge
Book Week p4 My 20 '45 300w
Booklist 41:252 My 1 '45

Reviewed by Hy Hurwitz
Boston Globe p17 My 9 '45 70w

"If anything, the book is too brief in facts and continuity. But Commander Miller does give a word-picture that convinces, as war reporting should, that war is not a series of heady, heroic encounters but contains plenty of muscle-aching work, puzzlement, and just plain boredom for most servicemen. And he illustrates the book with over 50 handsome graytone photographs of amphibious operations, which expertly point up the printed pages they parallel." W. H. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 14 '45 800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45
Kirkus 13:51 F 1 '45 100w

"Warmly recommended." Thelma Brackett
+ Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 110w

"Max Miller, the newspaper reporter who wrote 'I Cover the Waterfront,' tells in this book his observations as a Navy officer at the invasions of Normandy and Southern France. He does a good job of setting down the typical reactions and experiences of an American in such operations." Barrett McGurn
+ N Y Times p26 Jl 22 '45 450w

MILLER, MAX—Continued

"A touching and interesting narrative told from the particular angle of those men of the Navy whose job it was to land the armies on the northern and southern coasts of France and then to see that they were supplied with everything they needed. Their story is a gallant one and Commander Miller's telling of it merits a high place on any list of the innumerable war books for which the American public now has an insatiable appetite." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 Jl 28 '45 700w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 600w

"A short book, Max Miller's, but he has a way of going right to the heart of war in very few words." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 22 '45 900w

MILLER, MAX. It's tomorrow out here; with official U.S. navy photographs by Charles E. Kerlee. (Whittlesey house publication) 186p $3 McGraw

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean 45-37886

Records mainly the story of what happened on remote Pacific islands after the battle had moved on. The author discourses on the lives of the men in supply depots, air bases, hospitals, and recreation camps, with copious bouquets for the Seabees. Illustrated with many photographs.

Booklist 42:162 Ja 15 '46

Kirkus 13:391 S 1 '45 110w

"The Pacific waterfront, which Comdr. Miller covers here, is a bit unwieldy. Despite his engaging style, which is a soothing antidote to Mr. Huie's slambang account of the same subject, the book as a whole is so sketchy and subjective that you will have a hard time remembering what it was about two days after you have read it. Comdr. Kerlee's photographs, although individually good, add to the general haziness." David Dempsey

N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '46 90w

"'Miller sets about to do a specific job here, and he goes at the task calmly, with rare insight, and a charming, sensitive literary touch. He tries to make the stranger understand what it feels like to be stuck on a coral island for a long, long time. They have a name for the feeling, and the name is 'coral happy,' and you may be many other things. It is doubtful if any other writer has succeeded so well at conveying this sort of thing." G. W. Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 650w

"Now and then the author grows overly dramatic and bursts out with purple patches of eloquence which would slightly embarrass the actors if they were spotlighted. Mention must be made of the numerous splendid photographs which . . . provide a vivid portrayal of action in the Pacific." P. J. Searles

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 D 23 '45 250w

MILLER, MERLE. Island 49. 186p $2.50 Crowell 45-4538

Short novel describing the personal experiences of a group of American soldiers during a three day fight for possession of a small coral island in the Pacific.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Book Week p8 Je 17 '45 360w

Booklist 41:301 Je 15 '45

Boston Globe Je 6 '45 180w

"A direct, unglamourized account, written in novel form by a staff correspondent of Yank. Competent—not extraordinary."

+ Kirkus 13:114 Mr 15 '45 130w

"In one or two characters, such as the strange chaplain who is so moved by the death of Sam Levinson that he 'cannot pray just then,' Miller's creatures strike this reader as more the product of his imagination than his observation. In the rest, however, he has skillfully described the Pacific war as seen through an enlisted man's eyes. The work earns its author a prominent place in the ranks of new writers developed in this war." Barrett McGurn

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 3 '45 700w

"Mr. Miller is a good reporter and when he writes about fighting he is interesting. The story, though, is composed largely of flashbacks to the pasts of the officers and men, which do not add any significance to the narrative and really only give it a confused quality."

+ — New Yorker 21:77 Je 2 '45 80w

"'Island 49' is a mass of promising material rather than a finished work. In appearance this slender volume recalls two of the memorable cameos of this war, 'A Walk in the Sun,' by Harry Brown, and 'Into the Valley,' by John Hersey. Merle Miller's book, however, lacks the liveliness of the former and the sweep and movement of the latter; it remains, therefore, a cameo in the rough, but one worth respect and worth reading." Maurice Basseches

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:32 Jl 28 '45 600w

Reviewed by V. H. Fuller

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 300w

"Combat correspondent and one of the editors of 'Yank,' Sergeant Miller has put some of his experiences into a novel that is grim, compact and sharply realistic. . . The narrative is a composite picture of civilians suddenly aware of themselves—and aware of their destiny—as an armed force." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 24 '45 130w

MILLER, NORMAN MICKEY. I took the sky road; as told to Hugh B. Cave; il. with official U.S. navy photographs. 212p $3 Dodd

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-5235

Account of a navy flier's career from the age of eighteen when he determined to get into Annapolis the hard way, to his days as commander of a Liberator bombing squadron. To their credit "Bus" Miller and his crew have in eight months sunk or damaged sixty-six Japanese vessels, fifteen enemy planes, and numerous small vessels and shore installations. The book contains a record of bombing squadron 109, photographs, and maps on end papers.

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer

Book Week p5 Je 24 '45 180w

Booklist 41:320 Jl 1 '45

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 21:366 S '45 60w

"If the story is not as Commander Miller might wish it told or as he might have told it himself had he had the inclination and the time to sit down and write it out, it will have to do until he does just that. More than most such second-hand told stories, 'I Took the Sky Road' has a ring of authenticity. The three-dimensional picture of Miller that emerges fits well into the factual record of what he has done. Mr. Cave appears to have felt the spirit and to have written the letter of the record. It is an exciting, solid account of the way brave men wage war, and the way one fitted himself for the job." Foster Hailey

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 19 '45 800w

Reviewed by Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p13 Ag 19 '45 550w

MILLETT, FRED BENJAMIN. Rebirth of liberal education. 179p $2 Harcourt

378 Education, Higher 45-1862

"Description of methods being used experimentally in certain colleges and universities to vitalize and emphasize the teaching of the humanities. Investigation was made under sponsorship of Rockefeller Foundation, assumption being that the humanities are the most essential disciplines in a liberal education, and that they have been unduly subordinated by pressure of other subjects. In appraising methods used, author considers also qualifications of teaching personnel, and suggests means of raising the level of instruction." Library J

"Many readers, though convinced of the importance of the humanities, will probably sense an imbalance in this account of the revival of liberal education. That sciences should have a qualified place in the humanistic curriculum, Professor Millett admits; but his study is concerned with language, literature, fine arts, music, philosophy, history, and their 'primary position.' To balance this discussion, one would relish an equally critical contemporary Huxley's views of liberal learning." Thomas Woody

Ann Am Acad 240:178 Jl '45 650w

"Despite a certain amount of unavoidable detail, Millett writes clearly and often brilliantly, and etches with acid phrase and sharp insight the weaknesses of modern higher education, especially in his own discipline of the humanities." J. A. Brandt

+ Book Week p3 F 18 '45 650w

Booklist 41:248 My 1 '45

"The core of Prof. Millett's book is an evaluation of new techniques in teaching that seek more enlivening intellectual processes than the formal lecture, recitation and examination. He looked into many current experiments in breaking down the tight compartmentalization of knowledge. It is a valuable report on much that is shaking up the dry bones of pedagogy, especially in some of the new colleges, to make learning a more vital experience to many." L. M. Lyons

+ Boston Globe p15 F 28 '45 240w

Reviewed by K. I. Brown

Christian Century 62:494 Ap 18 '45 1450w

"The book is full of stimulating suggestions for the rejuvenation and revitalisation of liberal education." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 159:16 Ap 1 '45 210w

Reviewed by Leo Camp

Commonweal 42:338 Jl 20 '45 600w

"Here is a book which offers no solution, but a survey of various experiments, and which underlines the values of this type of education for a too materialistic world. For educators largely."

Kirkus 13:46 F 1 '45 140w

"Significant and provocative, but will be read by few other than those concerned with college teaching and administration." J. S. Cleavinger

Library J 70:163 F 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

New Repub 112:453 Ap 2 '45 400w

School & Society 61:112 F 17 '45 40w

"I fear that the author would not consider me competent to review his book for he believes that, with a few exceptions, college presidents are incapable of 'more than the obvious banalities about the significance' of the educational process. However, he is equally truculent towards his faculty brethren and despite his studied provocative style, or perhaps because of it, the book should be read by both presidents and faculties." H. W. Dodds

Survey G 34:137 Ap '45 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:24 Je '45 280w

"The professional reader may often be tempted to throw the book into the fire, but if he persists to the end he will be rewarded with more than a shock to his complacency. The book is well balanced and vigorously thought through. It might well be made required reading for most college faculties. It should also be read and taken to heart by college presidents and deans, for it contains a forthright and courageous condemnation of the policy generally followed by college administrations at the outbreak of the war." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 25 '45 600w

MILLGRAM, ABRAHAM EZRA. Sabbath, the day of delight. 495p il $3 Jewish pub.

296 Sabbath 44-51032

"A copious and varied collection of materials concerning Sabbath observance, drawn from Jewish lore and tradition, from the Bible, the Talmud and the literature of many lands." Christian Century

"Doubtless the primary purpose is to instruct the young and their parents in proper and enjoyable ways of observing the Sabbath, but the historical, literary and musical resources that are drawn upon give the book an appeal to anyone interested in folklore, folk music or the sociology of religion."

+ Christian Century 62:210 F 14 '45 70w

Reviewed by Gerald Ellard

Commonweal 42:49 Ap 27 '45 420w

"It is a good book, and both Dr. Millgram and the publishers deserve to be congratulated on a fine contribution to the understanding and appreciation of the Sabbath as a day of delight." M. B. Pekarsky

+ J Religion 25:307 O '45 220w

" 'Sabbath, The Day of Delight,' produced primarily for the English-speaking Jewish communities, will be of interest to a considerably wide circle of readers as well in England as in America. . . . The Jewish Publication Society of America is to be congratulated upon the pleasing format of this book, not least upon the forty-three illustrations, and also upon the reasonable price."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Je 2 '45 480w

MILLHAUSER, BERTRAM. Whatever goes up. 190p $2 Doubleday

45-4812

Detective story.

"Clever and funny."

+ Boston Globe Je 6 '45 60w

"Slangy and stream-lined in style—but competently plotted."

Kirkus 13:145 Ap 1 '45 110w

"An exciting time is had by all, and it makes a rattling good story. Mr. Millhauser is a newcomer to the mystery field, but he is no novice at writing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 My 13 '45 130w

"Readable."

Sat R of Lit 28:28 Je 2 '45 40w

"Classification, wacky." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p23 My 20 '45 100w

MILLIS, HARRY ALVIN, and MONTGOMERY, ROYAL EWERT. Organized labor. (Economics of labor, v3) 930p $6 McGraw

331 Trade unions. Strikes and lockouts

"Volume III of the authors' well-known series, The Economics of Labor, constitutes an extensive analysis of the organized labor movement in the United States. Among the topics covered are: nineteenth-century American unionism; American trade union history, 1890-1920; American unionism in the 1920's; American unionism since 1930; trade union structure, government and interrelationships; trade union institutionalism; the union in industry; the theory of collective bargaining; trade union policies and methods; trade unions, the law and the courts; the problem of strikes and lockouts; conciliation and arbitration of labor disputes; labor and politics; employee representation plans and independent unions; etc." Management R

"No single volume can possibly deal fully with all aspects of trade unionism. Professors Millis and Montgomery, however, have succeeded in digesting the essence of trade union-

MILLIS, H. A.—Continued
ism and presenting it in a single volume. This book should prove of great benefit to students of the labor movement throughout the Nation." P. A. Dodd

+ Ann Am Acad 242:194 N '45 650w
Foreign Affairs 24:164 O '45 20w
Management R 34:157 Ap '45 90w

MILNE, CALEB. I dream of the day . . . letters from Africa, 1942-1943. 122p $2 Longmans

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-1349

A group of letters written by a young American to his mother, during 1942 and 1943, while he was with the American ambulance drivers in the British Eighth army during the African campaign. He was killed in May, 1943, somewhere in Africa.

"A series of letters which compose, at every level, a beautiful, enticing book and an invaluable document in the history of war and peace." Marguerite Young

+ Book Week p6 S 16 '45 650w
Booklist 42:73 N 1 '45
Christian Century 62:1097 S 26 '45 70w
Kirkus 13:354 Ag 15 '45 210w

"Rarely, since the passing of St. Exupery, have we been privileged to read such beauty of language and profundity of thought by a war author. . . Recommended for all libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 110w

"It would not be easy to soften the impact on heart or mind made by the accusing significance of a book like this. For these are inspiring and moving letters. . . Reflected on every page is the seeking nature, the fresh perception of a person trying always to see more than surface values." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p4 S 16 '45 550w

"On his own account he had no fears. 'I don't understand life,' he wrote, 'so naturally death seems very simple to me.' It was simple, too, for him to write that most difficult of letters, the one a soldier leaves for his mother, in case. . . . It is a message to every mother who has lost a son to show her how to bear her loss—perhaps to transform it."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 16 '45 270w

MIMS, EDWIN. Great writers as interpreters of religion. 176p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

801 Religion and literature 45-6889

"The spiritual element in great literature needs frequent review with fresh illustration and interpretation. William Lyon Phelps and Halford E. Luccock have made great contributions in this field. Dr. Mims, professor emeritus of English literature at Vanderbilt, has been giving attention to this theme for forty years and his book is worthy to be placed beside theirs." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Book Week p8 Ag 26 '45 230w
+ Christian Century 62:1012 S 5 '45 70w

MISES, LUDWIG, edler von. Omnipotent government; the rise of the total state and total war. 291p $3.75 Yale univ. press

321.6 Totalitarianism. Germany—Nazi movement A44-1787

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"This extremely readable and stimulating book presents two aspects of unequal value. The one is a restatement of the belief, current a century ago, that in a world of perfect and unhampered capitalism, of free trade and democracy, there would be no incentives for war and conquest. This faith is as utopian as the presently widely accepted myth that in a world of unhampered socialism and of the common man there would be no incentives for war. . . By far more important, and in many ways brilliant, is the interpretation of recent German history in Part III of the book." Hans Kohn

+ Am Hist R 50:531 Ap '45 1200w

Reviewed by F. R. Yoder
Am Soc R 10:326 Ap '45 850w
Foreign Affairs 23:332 Ja '45 70w

"This book is narrow and rigid in its whole conception. It dictates a prescription for our present discontents that even its author apparently does not expect to see applied. Translated from the realm of theory to the realities of politics it is essentially reactionary in its implications. Yet it is a major work, full of learning, powerful in construction, trenchant in style." T. P. Peardon

— + Pol Sci Q 60:130 Mr '45 900w

"The author of this volume is one of the outstanding economists of the world who has to be credited with rearing a generation of excellent scholars. He is also a brilliant writer and fighter of his cause. The reader, wherever he stands, will enjoy the thought-provoking propositions of von Mises, presented with unsurpassed intellectual courage. Moderate liberals will regret that the argument of von Mises is not based on available alternatives. Even these 'moderates' will read this volume with profit and delight." Ervin Hexner

+ Social Forces 23:466 My '45 1000w

"Essentially the book is the product of a mind that turns with nostalgia to the formulas of the past, that puts a low value on the capacities of the human self, that sees the complexities of the future with foreboding and with panic at the challenge presented to men's constructive imagination by the creative tasks ahead." Ordway Tead

— Survey G 34:104 Mr '45 360w

MISES, RICHARD, edler von, and others. Theory of flight. 629p $6 McGraw

629.1323 Aerodynamics. Flight. Airplanes 45-3150

"This work is designed for students who have had considerable college work in mechanics and mathematics. The subject is developed under the main headings of Equilibrium and steady flow in the atmosphere; The airplane wing; Propeller and engine; Airplane performance; Airplane control and stability. Mathematics is extensively used in the discussions. A few problems for the student are included in most of the chapters. The bibliographical and historical notes collected at the end of the volume trace the development of important theories and cite the fundamental literature." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:120 F 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:3 Ja '45

MITCHELL, MRS LUCY (SPRAGUE). Guess what's in the grass; pictures by Edward J. Glannon. [29p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

A little boy asleep in the grass gives a number of animals something to wonder about. As each sees only a part of him the animals do not know what he is until his mother comes to get him for his supper.

"A truly delightful story that will give every youngster a satisfying sense of participation. It is skillfully told so that while the child can anticipate the climax, he will thoroughly enjoy every step leading up to it. . . Edward Glannon's colorful drawings are simple and direct. This is the type of illustration which I find has strong appeal for youngsters because it strikes that nice balance of giving ample delineation, and yet leaves something to be supplied by the child's own rich imagination." Naoma Zimmerman

+ Book Week p21 N 11 '45 230w
Booklist 42:80 N 1 '45

"Beautiful end papers and a gay cover will help put this over as good merchandise, but critical adults will find the scale of drawing confusing (blades of grass emphatically large around and above both boy and mouse—use of brilliant red even for the boy's face will annoy children above four.)"

Kirkus 13:420 S 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by L. M. Palmer

N Y Times p10 N 11 '45 130w

Wis Lib Bul 41:129 D '45

MOATS, ALICE LEONE. No passport for Paris. 275p $2.50 Putnam

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-4383

An account of the author's trip to Spain in 1943, whither she was sent by Collier's magazine and the New York Herald Tribune. She stayed in Spain about fourteen months. In April 1944, with a false identity card, she crossed the Pyrenees on foot, and stayed about three weeks in France, notably Paris.

"On the whole this account of the mighty and the low both in France and in Spain is likely to win from readers unblinded by prejudice the tribute of instant acceptance." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 161:522 S '45 250w

"Miss Moats puts the personal element foremost in her writing. She has many friends abroad, especially in Spain; she moves freely in high society, and has a thoroughly sophisticated point of view. Underneath a large amount of frou-frou, played up, no doubt, for the purpose of entertainment, can be found certain realistic conclusions." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 2 '45 600w

"A record with human interest rather than political import; lively, assured 'smart gal' stuff, which will appeal to some—antagonize others."

Kirkus 13:120 Mr 15 '45 130w

"A wordy, dull book of unimportant sensations and political chatter, of conservative but not perverse import." Ralph Bates

— Nation 160:724 Je 30 '45 300w

"Miss Alice-Leone Moats, who is a girl reporter (as distinguished from Quentin Reynolds, say, who is a boy reporter), would never be guilty of trading on her sex; but now and then, possibly, she trades a bit on her trade. She cannot help sharing with her readers her simple wonder at her Creator's lavishness in endowing her with journalistic talent. Some of her exploits leave her breathless; she was still gasping when she sat down to write 'No Passport for Paris,' an account of how, seven weeks before D-day, she crossed the Pyrenees on foot for a three-week visit to France, including a stopover of some days in Paris. This was an astonishing thing to do, no question about it. And yet, and yet. . ." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p3 My 27 '45 650w

"Another series of adventures . . . by the lady journalist who seems out to establish herself as a Chanel-scented Quentin Reynolds. She is well on her way to turning the trick, as this book shows, but it does seem a rather curious ambition."

New Yorker 21:80 Je 2 '45 40w

"I gather from reading both of Miss Moats's books, 'Blind Date With Mars' and this one, that she is a tall, good-looking blonde, quite sure of her social position, with a malicious ready wit, and lots of nerve bolstered up by her confidence in sex appeal. That she has ever been or ever will be able to understand what goes on in the minds or lives of the submerged and suffering millions, either in Europe or elsewhere, is not indicated by her works. I do not mean by this that they are not interesting, often stimulating, reading. Also they contain many isolated and unrelated scraps of information or observation that may prove useful. . . The adventure in what Miss Moats conceives to be Spain is the more harmful of the two, the second taking place in a Moats-Paris. . . The feeling one gets from the book is that Miss Moats is anxious to convey that collaborationists, fascists, anti-democrats, and other totalitarian ladies and gentlemen are just folks, after all, and one should not be squeamish about them." Elliot Paul

— Sat R of Lit 28:25 Je 2 '45 600w

Reviewed by H. L. Mitchell

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 15 '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:83 Jl '45

MODAK, MANORAMA RAMKRISHNA. Land and the people of India. (Portraits of the nations ser) 109p il $2 Lippincott

954 India—Juvenile literature 45-35172

An outline of India's geography, history, and national character. Prepared for young people.

Booklist 42:40 O 1 '45

Christian Century 62:1321 N 28 '45 10w

+ Kirkus 13:399 S 1 '45 60w

"Recommended for sixth to ninth graders." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 70:982 O 15 '45 70w

N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '46 50w

"Excellent full-page photographs, immediately catch the reader's atention in this new history of India. Under Mrs. Modak's expert guidance he is introduced to India's history, geography, and national characteristics. The author, an American married to an Indian leader, writes in a clear, straightforward style of things that she knows thoroughly and deeply appreciates, often enriching her text with quotations from Indian classics and contemporary biography." B. W. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:46 O 20 '45 360w

School & Society 62:144 S 1 '45 10w

Weekly Book Review p24 N 11 '45 190w

MOLEY, RAYMOND. Hays office. 266p $3.75 Bobbs

791.4 Moving picture industry. Motion picture producers and distributors of America, incorporated. Hays, Will H. 45-5378

"In 200-odd pages the eminent teacher and publicist has compressed a vivid description of 'the Hays office' and of Mr. Hays, of the social and civic responsibilities which this 'office' aims to fulfill and of its peculiarly ingrown position in a complex industry." (N Y Times) Index.

Am Hist R 51:167 O '45 40w

"Professor Moley's volume goes a long way towards making the Hays Office better understood. However, a more critical analysis of censorship as practised by the Office under the Code, a fuller discussion of the financial resources of the organization, and a franker discussion of the Hays lobbying techniques would have made the volume an even more valuable instrument for the removal of misunderstanding." Belle Zeller

+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1017 O '45 800w

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock

Book Week p7 Jl 15 '45 650w

Booklist 42:9 S '45

Reviewed by P. W. Facey

Cath World 161:439 Ag '45 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 28 '45 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

Reviewed by Richard Watts

— New Repub 113:83 Jl 16 '45 1150w

"Raymond Moley has outlined in terse, dramatic episodes some of the colorful history of the screen and has made a case from the records for industrial self-control. As a matter of fact, Mr. Moley's enthusiasm for this latter aspect appears to be the essential inspiration for the book—that and his unremitting admiration for Mr. Hays. . . Mr. Moley has paid a passionate tribute to a friend and to an idea in this book. But he has not fully searched and surveyed either in his labor of (platonic) love." Bosley Crowther

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 17 '45 1500w

"Dr. Moley first conceived his book in 1936, did most of the research and composition in '38-'39 and, interrupted by the war—with knowledge that new post-war problems would necessitate radical revisions—he put it aside until early '45, when he brought it up-to-date. And a good job it is too." Abel Green

MOLEY, RAYMOND—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 Je 30 '45 900w

Time 45:90 Jl 2 '45 800w

"The approach to the subject is enthusiastic and descriptive rather than critical, and the history is written so that the average moviegoer, as well as the student of social problems and the tradesmen of the industry, will find it interesting reading. The selected annotations and references, the complete and detailed index, and the appendices containing basic codes and agreements provide useful source material for students of the motion picture industry."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:30 S '45 200w

"It is possible that an enthralling book could be written about the history and operation of a protective association. This is hardly the case with Mr. Moley's account of the one known as the Hays office, which serves the motion-picture industry. Though his book clears up a number of misconceptions about the functions of this office there is little that is new in it, nor could it be described as particularly readable." Iris Barry

Weekly Book Review p12 Je 17 '45 600w

MOLLOY, MRS ANNE STEARNS (BAKER). Bird in hand; il. by Mary A. Reardon. 181p $2 Houghton

45-8771

Add Look lived in Maine among fishing smacks, herring nets and lobster buoys; he knew the blueberry lands well. He wanted to play baseball, catch a baby fish hawk and earn money to go to the academy. The money he and his sister earned went for another purpose but Add was not disappointed either.

"A capital story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:352 S '45 110w

"A very uneven book. Dramatically sprawling, dotted with good incident and description, this has too adult an atmosphere of tension and emotion."

Kirkus 13:338 Ag 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 70:1094 N 15 '45 70w

"A delightfully fresh and natural story." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 60w

"A readable, mildly exciting story, with good human values. . . For once the Maine background is accurate (no sentimentalizing, no emphasis on quaintness), and the book will give city boys of nine to thirteen some idea of the life of a lobsterman's son."

+ New Yorker 21:134 D 8 '45 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 70w

MOLLOY, ROBERT. Pride's way. 355p $2.75 Macmillan

45-35063

The scene is Charleston, beginning in 1910, and the chief characters are two eccentric old ladies. Miss Julie and Miss Tessie were widows and sisters, and they had not spoken in six years when the story opens. Both were devout Catholics and a sermon on "Blessed are the peacemakers" prompted them to make up. When they decided to go even farther and live together the stage was set for a difficult four years. The book closes with the opening of the first World war.

"As one who distrusts the word charm, somehow associating it with tearooms, tourist literature and movie travelogues, I hope I am not doing 'Pride's Way' an injustice by using it to describe the bond used to hold together such flimsy material. It is a slight book at best and one which has no real distinction, yet there is about it the feeling of charm." Bucklin Moon

Book Week p10 My 27 '45 450w

Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45

Reviewed by Ray McPartlin

Boston Globe p13 My 23 '45 400w

"I do not believe that anyone below the Mason-Dixon line will enjoy this satirical commentary on the Southerner's family pride—with its boastfulness, insincerity, meanness and constant quarreling. . . How Aunt Julie tires of her foolish venture, and goes back humbly to her daughter's home, how Aunt Tessie goes madly insane and makes herself a nuisance to her relatives and friends is told with a vivid realism. Did such unpleasant people ever exist, the Yankee reader asks?"

— Cath World 161:364 Je '45 220w

"Few American writers have practiced the art of gentle satire as successfully as Mr. Molloy in this novel. In Miss Julie and Miss Tessie, . . . he has created two eminently viable people."

+ Christian Century 62:684 Je 6 '45 280w

Reviewed by Norah Piper

Commonweal 42:196 Je 8 '45 130w

+ Kirkus 13:93 Mr 1 '45 250w

"Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 80w

"The fragile humor is delightful."

+ New Repub 112:854 Je 18 '45 90w

"As literary editor of The New York Sun, Robert Molloy has probably suffered his share of the faults of first novels. In his own, he avoids them. 'Pride's Way' runs smoothly past the snares usually set for the novice: the labored structure, the luscious style, the embarrassing or irrelevant autobiography. The art in this little book makes for ease, and if the characters are drawn from life, they are drawn with exemplary detachment." Nancy Flagg

+ N Y Times p7 My 20 '45 550w

"Those who have been complaining that we never get any more comfortable, old-fashioned novels which present few problems but are at the same time not too cozy for the intelligent reader ought to be pleased with this one."

+ New Yorker 21:89 My 19 '45 120w

"Poignant, engaging, very funny, and very appealing book. Charlestonian customs and Southern tradition are expertly and wittily satirized, but with such kindliness and understanding and lack of malice that Mr. Molloy needn't be afraid to go home again. 'Pride's Way' is rich with color and atmosphere, as full of charm as Charleston itself." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 28:31 My 26 '45 700w

"In a sense this unique story follows no organic pattern. . . 'Pride's Way' is in reality the author's flavorsome interpretation of the minutiae of the life of the city, the hierarchy of the Gerrards who gather each time death or disaster visits the family, the shrill cries of the crab man vending his wares in the still heat of Meeting and Legare streets, in the Gullah negroes, servants, handymen and an integral part of the families they serve. Every word is authentic Charleston from the hominy and hopping john for breakfast to the Christmas firecrackers that touch off Miss Tessie's heavenly visions." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 420w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:10 S '45 120w

"Hugh Walpole once wrote a novel about old ladies that was almost terrifying in its view of pent up and misdirected energies. 'Pride's Way' also shows the enduring force of human vitality but with tenderness and humor. Sharing the exasperation of Henry, Annette and the children, one also shares the affection that somehow, most of the time, kept the family together." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 20 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:85 Jl '45

MOLNAR, FERENC. Captain of St. Margaret's; tr. by Barrows Mussey. 176p $2.50 Duell

44-51331

"Tall tale and high comedy form the memoirs of a Captain of the Hussars, recorded by the famous playwright who knew him in the days before the first World War—when they met on the Danubian island of St. Margaret. Exuberant, inexhaustible, a gifted gambler and a fabulous figure, here are scapegrace scandals as told by the Captain—some which might have happened, many which never did." Kirkus

---

"This is an unimportant book, but it is lively and gay and entertaining."

+ — Boston Globe p15 Mr 7 '45 150w

Kirkus 13:3 Ja 1 '45 130w

"This skillful, slender, slightly sentimental narration belongs not so much to Budapest as to the Austro-Hungarian school. In Molnar's own words, it is a story of that vanished time 'when not even a shadow of war was cast on the future.' Yet the reader who imagines he has heard every tall after-dinner tale there is to tell will find in this collection a brand new string of anecdotes about his neighbors in the next block." Kenneth Fearing

+ N Y Times p5 F 18 '45 700w

"The Captain's stories start off entertainingly enough, but there are too many of them, and even Herr Molnár's light, romantic style probably won't keep you from being gently bored with his charming hero before the end of the book."

+ — New Yorker 21:78 F 17 '45 80w

Reviewed by V. H. Fuller

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 480w

Time 45:100 Mr 5 '45 40w

" 'The Captain of St. Margaret's' has the charm of a vanished past and youth, and the special magic to be found in such a backward look by the author of 'Liliom.' " Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 11 '45 900w

MOLNAR, FERENC. Farewell my heart; tr. by Elinor Rice. 211p $2 Simon & Schuster 45-5598

Romance of a middle-aged Hungarian journalist, who came to America in 1939, and a very young compatriot dancer whom he met on the way. After a bad heart attack in New York, the journalist sent the girl he loved away, and later when his health improved, he married. But inevitably the girl came back and just as inevitably the journalist died.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Book Week p3 Jl 8 '45 400w

Booklist 42:37 O 1 '45

"A blend of the sentimental and the sophisticated which is subtly attractive. But not a book for the average public."

+ — Kirkus 13:257 Je 15 '45 170w

"Story is short, slight and unrewarding. Unnecessary for most libraries." Margaret Owen

— Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 161:139 Ag 11 '45 180w

"Every synopsis is unfair, even to so contrived a story as Molnar's, and it must be admitted that until the exigencies of the plot overwhelm this slight book there are some moving and true passages between the hopelessly disparate lovers." George Mayberry

— New Repub 112:877 Je 25 '45 360w

"It's difficult to guess what Mr. Molnar was up to when he wrote this novel. The whole thing might be an allegory: the journalist dies, as an idealistic soldier dies in battle, for something he doesn't want to live without. But the story is too lightweight to stand up under such a ponderous interpretation. It may have been conceived as a psychiatric study but it seems too glib and superficial for that. Perhaps the best way to take it, and to like it, is as a rather shocking little joke." Nancy Flagg

— N Y Times p6 Jl 22 '45 700w

"Mr. Molnár's well-known charm shows signs of wearing thin in this love story. . . The American setting, a departure for this Hungarian author, is the only surprise the novel has to offer."

— New Yorker 21:64 Jl 7 '45 60w

"Of course, the successful playwright Molnar has a hand in the twisting and turning of the plot. To my taste there is something too much of it, as there is of those shifting lightning effects that on every other page hold out a new promise. Mr. Molnar knows extremely well how to sound the full depth of a human heart; yet at times . . . he gets impatient and prefers to take to a tempting short-cut. But shortcuts or not, his book will prove highly rewarding reading to any mature reader. Miss Rice's translation is excellent; you never feel it as such." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:28 Jl 21 '45 650w

"It is very possible the novelist has written merely a clever dissection of morbid carnal passion, the kind of thing that in the theater-world of the 20's was known as 'typically Molnar.' 'Farewell My Heart' could indeed be many things to many readers, but in any case the story is poignantly sad because it is the liebestod of lost people." L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 390w

"While Mr. Molnar writes with a practiced hand and is incapable of penning a dull page, 'Farewell My Heart' never attains the dignity of a first-rate love story, nor does it reach any real emotional depths. The adventure of the elderly gentleman and the determined young dancer seems both a little shoddy and a little ridiculous." Marion Sturges-Jones

— + Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 8 '45 550w

MONAGHAN, JAY. Diplomat in carpet slippers: Abraham Lincoln deals with foreign affairs. 505p il $4 Bobbs

973.72 U.S.—Foreign relations. Lincoln, Abraham
45-3706

Study of one facet of Abraham Lincoln's career which has not received full attention: his dealings with the diplomats both in this country and abroad. "The book opens on the eve of the war which cleaved the country, at a time when the old predatory powers of Europe, already restive over the radical Republicans' victory with Lincoln at the polls, were preparing to jump in at the first good opportunity and walk off with substantial prizes. [The book describes] the Illinois lawyer, harassed by the intrigues of a coalition cabinet and threading a careful diplomatic course through the war years, playing one foreign ambassador against another, vacillating here, conceding there, to reach his great goal." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. B. Miller

Ann Am Acad 241:196 S '45 550w

"Scholarly, astute, readable book." Elmer Gertz

+ Book Week p3 Ap 29 '45 600w

Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45

"Author Monaghan, able scholar and skilled writer, has done full justice to this mural-sized canvas. No student of Lincoln will want to miss it and, in these days, when foreign relations are so much to the fore, no one else can afford to overlook this revealing picture." L. L. Marchand

+ Boston Globe p17 My 9 '45 350w

"Like most of our great Presidents, Lincoln was a moral hero not only to his own people, but to struggling radicals everywhere. In a fine work of narrative history, which combines in rare fashion humor, imagination and scholarly research, Jay Monaghan reminds us of Lincoln's importance as a world figure." Richard Hofstadter

+ New Repub 112:797 Je 4 '45 650w

"Mr. Monaghan has told this whole complex story of Lincoln's conduct of foreign affairs with vigor and wit. He presents it as almost entirely a personal affair, a Lincoln triumph. As Lincoln is the hero, so Seward is, if not the villain, at least the marplot. Actually Lincoln was neither so prescient nor Seward so stupid as Mr. Monaghan would have us believe. The persistent lampooning of Seward is the most serious flaw in this book." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 3 '45 1900w

"A fascinating story, and Mr. Monaghan gets the most out of it. Good photographs and contemporary cartoons."

+ New Yorker 21:87 My 5 '45 130w

"Mr. Monaghan, who has steeped himself in Lincolniana, has written a book which deserves the much abused adjective 'brilliant.'

MONAGHAN, JAY—Continued
It is brilliant in style, brilliant in narrative sparkle, and above all brilliant in its easy mastery of an immense body of factual data. The author has descriptive skill and epigrammatic verve. In half a dozen lines he can draw a vivid scene. The personages of his crowded story are all real to him, and he makes them real to the reader." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 My 26 '45 1550w

Reviewed by R. S. Ullery
Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 480w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 D '45 370w

"This is an exciting book because the author is, for all his ability as a conscientious researcher and historian, brilliantly alert to drama. For four years, as editor of the publications of the Illinois State Historical Library, he toiled over that institution's recently published 'Lincoln Bibliography.' During that time he was quietly simmering with the dramatic story of Lincoln's foreign policy as, little by little, the characters and scenes unfolded themselves to him. Digesting the enormous Lincoln literature, he was able to piece together, fragment by fragment, the one chapter in Lincoln's life which had not previously been written—the chapter on foreign affairs." Lloyd Lewis
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 29 '45 1400w

Wis Lib Bul 41:67 Je '45

MONAGHAN, JAY, comp. Lincoln bibliography, 1839-1939. v 1-2 519;560p $5 Ill. state hist. lib.
012 Lincoln, Abraham—Bibliography
A45-103

"The bibliography is arranged chronologically by year and lists all printed books and pamphlets by Abraham Lincoln and those that deal principally with him—a total of 3958. Periodicals, separates of periodical articles, and various other types of material, such as advertising bulletins, are excluded. Foreign language titles are listed separately. A location symbol indicates where a copy of every item described may be found. The bibliography attempts to be complete within the defined scope. The introduction gives a brief historical review of Lincoln bibliographies." Booklist

"Lincoln dealers and collectors will find this work indispensable; historians of the period will find it useful, but disappointing in some respects." K. M. Stampp
+ — Am Hist R 51:163 O '45 320w

Reviewed by A. B. Miller
Ann Am Acad 241:196 S '45 130w

Booklist 41:281 Je 1 '45

"This, the first adequate listing of the tremendous literature that has dealt principally with Abraham Lincoln, is the work of a man not to be easily catalogued as a 'bibliographer.' For all that it is a magnificent bibliography which will make Jay Monaghan's reputation as a scholar. The compiler's gifts as a big-game hunter, aerial photographer, folk-lore collector among the Indians, adventurer with Madero's revolutionists when a boy, and sheep-baron in the range wars of Utah and Colorado, are all evident in the zest with which he has, in four years of historical research, hunted down Lincoln books in odd corners of America, and in the swift, often humorous, brevity with which he has thumbnailed the items in footnotes. His humor, incidentally, is more fully to be savored in 'Diplomat in Carpet Slippers,' the story of Lincoln's foreign policy." Lloyd Lewis
+ N Y Times p6 My 13 '45 1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:60 S '45 320w

MONAHAN, JAMES. Far from the land, and other poems. 36p $1.25 (4s) Macmillan
821 [A45-2247]

"[This volume contains] British Commando officer James Monahan's poetry, which ranges from heroic reflections on Sparta, old and new, to thoughts of prisoners returning home. Often colloquial, Monahan never departs from the impact and impressions of the war, for his discernment engulfs the terrible pattern which war makes in all things, feelings and places." N Y Times

"Mr. Monahan's war pieces are both realistic and imaginative. Even when they treat of war direct, as in 'Far From the Land' or 'Ghosts,' they carry the reader into realms beyond the immediate horrors of battle, into the Irish countryside of another dimension than that through which the nightly bomber usually drones." H. I'A. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 10 '45 150w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 29:144 Mr 3 '45 40w

Reviewed by Harry Roskolenko
N Y Times p31 O 7 '45 80w

Reviewed by F. C. Golffing
Poetry 67:227 Ja '46 210w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 17 '45 90w

"Perhaps the best of Mr. Monahan's poems reveal least of his life as a commando officer and most of the world before the war with its features heightened in memory by the gulf that lies between. . . His words are precise and actual and communicate the feeling through the things remembered. The poems that directly reflect the war display the qualities of the journalist which he was as well as the poet."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p95 F 24 '45 180w

"Sensitive to the best tradition in verse, yet not clutched by it, James Monahan has produced some simple, factual and dramatic scenes from the war years. . . A poet's natural eye for selective detail, plus a commando's training to learn the exact physical aspects, the 'feel' of a land, together make the trenchant, memorable picture of Kippure, Ireland, in the volume's title poem." Ruth Lechlitner
+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 14 '45 180w

MONKS, JOHN. A ribbon and a star; the Third marines at Bougainville; il. by John Falter. 242p $2.75 Holt 940.542 Bougainville, Battle of, 1943. U.S. Marine corps. 3d regiment. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-10181

An anecdotal account of the making of Bougainville in the Solomons by the 3rd marine regiment, written by one of the participants and illustrated by another.

"In a story such as this, where the focus is sharp and the field narrow, there is danger of repetition. The tactical elements of jungle warfare repeat a pattern, and in writing of the men who fought these desperate and often lone-handed engagements the author was repeatedly obliged to use the same framework. He has, however, handled this difficult assignment well, enriching the narrative with dramatic quotes by the officers and men who experienced the action. If at times the histrionics are heavy, and the writing swings toward an over-emphasis on sentiment—well, it must be remembered that author Monks is a playwright ('Brother Rat') and actor in civilian life. . . The illustrations by John Falter are superb." F. N. Litten
+ — Book Week p21 N 18 '45 400w

"John Monks Jr. will be remembered as coauthor of 'Brother Rat.' . . Shortly after Pearl Harbor Mr. Monks joined the Marine Corps. The happy result of this union is a book about his regiment on Bougainville, and in it you will find many prankish and irrepressible characters from 'Brother Rat,' as well as others who would never, I suspect, make the team of V. M. I. They are real persons this time, grown up, grimmer, and playing the game for keeps. War has matured but not embittered them. They have lost none of their talent for wise-cracking, and Mr. Monks has lost none of his for putting their antics on paper." David Dempsey
+ N Y Times p7 N 25 '45 950w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ja 12 '46 270w

"No review can do justice to a book which is quotable on every page or to the hundreds of men who flash across the scene, far more real than your next-door neighbor. . . John Falter contributes to the book dozens of drawings which were among the finest to come out of the war. They are alive, vigorous with motion, depicting fighting men in action and in what semi-repose was possible during two months of almost unceasing battle. His instantaneous arresting of movement is so real, so expressive of vitality, that one can almost hear breathing and rustle. 'A Ribbon and a Star' is no ordinary war book, punched out hastily as spot news. It is personal reporting of the best." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 25 '45 800w

MONSARRAT, NICHOLAS. Leave cancelled. 124p $2 Knopf

45-8114

A young English officer and his bride had planned to spend a three-weeks leave in London. At the last minute the leave was cancelled and they had just twenty-four hours together, before he went to the Eastern war theater. In what purports to be a letter to his bride the officer describes their brief honeymoon and parting.

Reviewed by Marguerite Young

Book Week p8 O 28 '45 450w

"Beautifully handled, with restraint and a sensitive appreciation of a balance between realism and poetry."

+ Kirkus 13:280 Jl 1 '45 190w

"As it has little psychological importance and no particularly distinguished literary style, the philosophy of life which it contains is lost in a welter of emotion that is too private to be printed in book form. Read before purchasing." Katharine Shorey

Library J 70:750 S 1 '45 70w

"Whatever the inadequacies and over-conscientiousness of Mr. Monsarrat's example of contemporary British sexual sophistication, it surely comes closer to a desirable mark than Mr. Maurois's French 'wisdom.'" Diana Trilling

+ — Nation 161:347 O 6 '45 60w

"Nicholas Monsarrat's rueful little sketch has more than one genuine moment. But the dominant motif is stressed so relentlessly that it obscures the real tragedy beneath. Aphrodite trips Melpomene in her tracks, and the average reader will remember the whiz-bang of the bedroom scenes long after he's forgotten the heartbreak of the couple's parting—and the very real problems that such partings will multiply in the future." C. V. Terry

— + N Y Times p20 S 30 '45 500w

"'Leave Cancelled' by Nicholas Monsarrat, needn't take up too much of our time. Slight in size, bound in a pink jacket (bearing a chubby cupid) that might have been better wrapped around a jar of bath salts, it is even slighter in content. . . I felt damned embarrassed and I got no enjoyment out of listening in." Hamilton Basso

— New Yorker 21:82 S 29 '45 140w

"When two intelligent young persons fall in love and are united in lawful matrimony and have a day and night to spend under the shadow of impending departure and possible death, what do they think? what do they feel? what do they say? The book is the record of the young husband's side of the story. He manages to combine intelligence and physical passion to a just degree, and he manages to describe a night in a hotel bedroom in a way that will not trouble even Boston and that yet makes you feel a night in a hotel bedroom in these circumstances was so and not otherwise. I think this is effective writing." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 28:82 O 13 '45 360w

"'Leave Canceled' is as tender a bit of erotica as the season has yet produced. Hardly a novel in length, it is a toast to passion with asterisks omitted. Mr Monsarrat succeeds in saving a hackneyed situation from the fate it has met in the women's magazines." Charlotte Litman

Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 300w

"The author's device of telling the story as if the young man were addressing his thoughts to the girl, while it achieves a certain immediacy of effect, is not always a happy one and at times seems a little strained. Aside from this, 'Leave Cancelled' is a memorable piece of work, a pure distillation of young love, its wonder, delight and implicit physical discovery all heightened by the urgency of the fleeing moments. Utterly frank without sordidness, bitter-sweet without self-pity, tender without sentimentality, it mirrors the experiences and dreams of thousands of young people everywhere whose lives have been torn apart by war." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p2 S 30 '45 450w

MONSEES, CARL HENRY. Industry-government cooperation; a study of the participation of advisory committees in public administration. 78p pa $1 Am. council on public affairs

338.91 Industry and state. World war, 1939—Economic aspects 44-47838

"[This work] is presented by the author as a contribution 'to a better understanding of the advisory committee technique.' The first two chapters discuss 'Background and Development' and 'Administrative Significance.' Succeeding chapters describe the policies and procedures used in advisory committee work in the War Production Board, Office of Price Administration, War Manpower Commission, War Food Administration, Petroleum Administration for War, Office of Defense Transportation, War Department, Bureau of the Budget, Board of War Communications, Solid Fuels Administration for War, and Foreign Economic Administration." Am Pol Sci R

"The work is essentially a factual document. It is in such abbreviated form that one learns very little from it about the actual functioning, the real significance, and the value or limitations of industry advisory committees." M. L. Faust

Am Pol Sci R 39:392 Ap '45 150w

Am Soc R 10:577 Ag '45 100w

"This is an excellent presentation of source material for both the student of government and the teacher of government." E. A. Lissfelt

+ Social Studies 36:136 Mr '45 360w

MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS ASHLEY-. See Ashley-Montagu, M. F.

MONTGOMERY, DAVID KEMBLE. Why go to church? a book for laymen. 174p $2.25 Morehouse

264 Church attendance. Public worship 45-1998

The material in this book was first presented in the form of lectures on the meaning and action of worship, delivered by the author at a summer conference of the Diocese of Newark.

Christian Century 62:401 Mr 28 '45 60w

"As an informational and handy textbook for those already interested in the customs and (with some reservations) the beliefs of the church, this book is useful. Pleasantly written and easy to read it commends itself to discussion groups or the more mature church school classes. But it hardly lives up to its title if it is intended to arouse the interest and allegiance of that great multitude which is, alas, apathetic to the church." J. T. Titus

Churchman 159:18 Je 1 '45 200w

MONTGOMERY, MRS ELIZABETH RIDER. Story behind great medical discoveries; with an introd. by Hyman Miller; drawings by Vartanian. 247p $2 McBride

610.9 Medicine. Scientists SG45-326

Forty-three brief dramatic stories of famous discoveries in medicine, written for boys and girls. Bibliography.

Booklist 42:152 Ja 1 '46

MONTGOMERY, E. R.—Continued
"It is not written with anything like the charm of style of Sir William Osler, but it covers much more ground and should interest children with a bent in this direction." H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 43:24 N 16 '45 80w

Kirkus 13:372 Ag 15 '45 110w

"The forty-three episodes in the book hold the suspense and excitement of a mystery story, richly rewarding the reader with their human interest and their inspiring portrayal of how the world's great medical challenges have been met." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p22 N 11 '45 100w

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT BRUCE (EDMUND CRISPIN, pseud). Obsequies at Oxford [Eng title: Case of the gilded fly]. 208p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Gollancz]

45-2203

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p6 Ap 15 '45 140w

"Smart and smooth."

+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 60w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 17 '44 40w

"If young (he is 22) Mr. Crispin's range of literary allusion doesn't overpower you, you may enjoy the Oxford setting and some fairly unusual characters."

New Repub 112:398 Ja 19 '45 80w

"The author puts enthusiasm into his dialogue and some life into his characters, but betrays his inexperience by the demands he makes on his villain. The poor creature is neatly chosen for the work; but it is hardly fair to have to help out the solution as well as commit the crime. The motive, I'm afraid, is unworthy of such a thoughtful person." Ralph Partridge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 28:94 Ag 5 '44 120w

"We have here the makings of a baffling crime puzzle. The solution, however, is something less than satisfactory. Or perhaps the story might have made a better impression had it not been for all that erudition." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Mr 4 '45 140w

"A well-plotted first mystery in the Sayers-Marsh tradition."

+ New Yorker 21:92 Mr 10 '45 60w

"Good plot and some interesting characters—all cluttered up with pyrotechnical display of erudition that doesn't help one bit. Exasperating."

Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 10 '45 50w

"The characters are lively and credible. The murderer's motive seems plausible; his methods rather dubious. Professor Fen, one hopes, will be heard of again: unlike so many amateurs, he is never a bore." John Hampson

+ — Spec 172:276 Mr 24 '44 270w

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 18 '45 170w

"A professor of English language and literature is the sleuth, though most of the persons concerned belong to the theatre. Some of them become jumbled, and though Jean and Jane sort themselves out, Nigel and Nicholas stay Siamese twins to the end. The story, readable in itself, excites keen interest in what Mr. Crispin will write next."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p129 Mr 11 '44 120w

"Considering that Edmund Crispin wrote this larkish and eminently readable killer-diller in fourteen days, looks as though his is a name to mark well as a comer in Mystery Land. Youthful the tale is in some respects, notably in certain unbridled bits of dialogue; but it is well enough baked in most departments." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p19 Mr 11 '45 170w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE (EVERITT PROCTOR, pseud). Thar she blows [il. by David Hendrickson]. 143p $2 Presbyterian bd.

45-3538

"Story of whaling. . . Peter McLean went to sea as a common seaman and found in these two years strange and thrilling experiences with a captain greedy for the rich prizes of whale oil and bone." Library J

Booklist 41:344 Jl 15 '45

Kirkus 13:182 Ap 15 '45 100w

"Recommended for boys twelve years of age and up." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 60w

"A forthright, authentic story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 15 '45 130w

"Speed is rapid as that of the operations, adventures real, suspense sustained." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 15 '45 400w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE (EVERITT PROCTOR, pseud). Thunderboats, ho! il. by E. Franklin Wittmack. 256p $2 McKay

45-1820

Story of a lieutenant in the United States navy and a tiny group of PT boats sent to help the marines hold a Guadalcanal beachhead. Grades six to eight.

Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45

Kirkus 13:110 Mr 1 '45 120w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney

Library J 70:416 My 1 '45 70w

"For boys who want war stories, some of the accounts of real experience would be better. Not recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

— Library J 70:416 My 1 '45 50w

"The author, writing with an effective directness and economy of words, makes the reader an eyewitness of stirring adventure and quiet courage. A timely book that all boys from 10 to 13 and many girls will enjoy." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 1 '45 140w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE (EVERITT PROCTOR, pseud). Warhawk patrol; il. by Clayton Knight. 246p $2 McKay

44-8526

Combination of mystery and a story of flying in World war II for older boys. The scene is North Africa, and it describes the success of a young American flyer, his mechanic, and their plane.

Commonweal 41:257 D 22 '44 10w

Kirkus 12:300 Jl 1 '44 100w

"Older boys' interest in war and flying will be satisfied by Montgomery's latest mystery of World War II. . . Purchase if book collection needs additional stories of this type." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 70:121 F 1 '45 70w

MOODY, ALAN B. Sleep in the sun; il. by Edwin Earle. 137p $2 Houghton

45-3048

Episodes in the lives of a group of poverty-stricken Mexican families living in a California canyon. Their days are spent in a few dabs of work on their slim crops, which they are often too lazy to harvest until they are spoiled, and on drinking wine.

"Alan Moody has done a fine piece of work here, both of sociology and of story-telling." F. H. Bullock

+ Book Week p4 Ap 1 '45 600w

Bookmark 6:15 My '45
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 28 '45 480w

"More subdued than Steinbeck—and with a folk quality and none of the sexual."
Kirkus 13:91 Mr 1 '45 170w

"'Sleep in the Sun' is reminiscent of Steinbeck's 'Tortilla Flat,' but it stands on its own graceful feet." Theodore Pratt
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 25 '45 340w

"'Sleep in the Sun' is full of an indigenous humor which serves not as a sugar coating but rather as a leaven to all the sordidness of life among the 'Greasers'—as the storekeeper in Oxnard insultingly calls Mamá Chula to her face—of San Marqué Canyon. Coming 'in the bus-machine back to civilization' is the last reluctant act in Mr. Moody's charming little drama in the sun." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 1 '45 550w

MOODY, JOHN. John Henry Newman. 353p $3.75 Sheed

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal 45-9074

Biography celebrating Cardinal Newman's conversion to Catholicism, written by one who is himself a convert. "In this book I am attempting a popular readable narrative of Cardinal Newman and his times, giving equal attention to both his Anglican and his Catholic careers. I have tried to be interpretative, insofar as my capacity allows, introducing his Protestant background, with a somewhat detailed description of the Oxford Movement." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46

"The Newman presented here with warmth and understanding possesses strength no less than sweetness. He has won his biographer's affection and he will reach the reader's heart as well." J. J. Reilly
+ Cath World 162:372 Ja '46 500w

"Simply written and without display of erudition, it may indeed prove serviceable to many, yet it must be conceded that it adds little, either in the way of fact or of interpretation, to what has been said before of its subject. Its merit is to have paid equal attention to the two halves of Newman's life, the one passed within the Anglican, the other within the Catholic communion." H. G. J. Beck
+ Commonweal 43:150 N 23 '45 120w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
New Repub 114:27 Ja 7 '46 190w

Reviewed by F. J. Sheen
N Y Times p6 D 2 '45 650w

New Yorker 21:104 N 10 '45 80w

"No doubt the originality of Mr. Moody's book derives from the fact that it is the story of a conversion, told by one who has had a comparable experience. . . Mr. Moody has a very refreshing zest for argument, and a lively interest in the stake for which the argument is conducted. In other words, he knows that there is no point in playing the game of debate unless one is in search of truth. Nor will any reader fail to note a robust interest in men as human beings. He will enjoy what is set down concerning the personal history of Newman as well as the brief, often admirably pointed sketches of men like William George Ward and Cardinal Manning." G. N. Shuster
+ Weekly Book Review p42 N 11 '45 650w

MOODY, PAUL DWIGHT, and others. Religion of soldier and sailor. See Sperry, W. L., ed. Religion in the post-war world, v2

MOON, BUCKLIN, ed. Primer for white folks. 491p $3.50 Doubleday

325.26 Negroes 45-7185

An anthology of prose writings by and about the American Negro from slavery days to the present. Partial contents: African culture, by W. E. B. DuBois; Let my people go, by Henrietta Buckmaster; Emancipation proclamation and the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments; Little white girl, by Sara Haardt; White on black, by Tess Slesinger; Trouble keeping quiet, by L. W. Robinson; Arrangement in black and white, by Dorothy Parker; Slave on the block, by Langston Hughes; The ethics of living Jim Crow, by Richard Wright; The people vs. Abe Lathan, colored, by Erskine Caldwell; Citizens of Negro blood, by Wendell Willkie; Count us in, by S. A. Brown; Report from England, by Roi Ottley; The truth about the Detroit riot, by Earl Brown; The Negro comes of age in industry, by R. C. Weaver; Addressed to white liberals, by Lillian Smith.

"Mr. Moon has done an excellent and knowing job in selecting the material for this book." J. C. Smith
+ Atlantic 176:150 O '45 330w

Reviewed by E. R. Embree
Book Week p7 Ag 5 '45 550w

Booklist 42:4 S '45

"As a reference book it is a significant work, for which the editor must be complimented, both in his selective taste and his organization." R. K. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 4 '45 420w

Reviewed by Theophilus Lewis
Commonweal 42:459 Ag 24 '45 480w

"A sizeable collection, both impressive and readable—an eloquent restatement of an issue still to be met. One could wish for a title that gave it more dignity. In the South the term 'white folks' is accepted; in the North it's a bit on the corny side."
+ — Kirkus 13:262 Je 15 '45 190w

Reviewed by E. F. Frazier
Nation 161:319 S 29 '45 350w

Reviewed by Ralph Ellison
New Repub 113:535 O 22 '45 2400w

"The literary value of these pieces is not at stake in this discussion. It is the moral that counts, and the moral that runs through every story is that for the Negro this is not yet a free country. Is he ever going to find it a free country?" R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p3 Jl 29 '45 950w

"Mr. Moon, who has drawn his material from many and scattered places, says in his introduction that it is intended for the average American who feels disturbed by the rising racial tension and by the paradox of the relationships between white and Negro in a democracy. He might have said, more accurately, that it is a revealing examination of how the Negro got to be looked upon as a second-class citizen, in the North as well as in the South, and why he doesn't intend to stay that way."
New Yorker 21:69 Jl 28 '45 150w

"'Primer for White Folks' presents a kind of fiction about Negroes and whites that has never before been written, but that promises to come increasingly from the pens of writers who have become sensitive to the major tragedy of the two races. This, in fact, is one great hope that the book reveals: our writers —nineteen of them are here represented—are beginning to write fiction with a poignancy of understanding and skill of portrayal that must eventually crack the hard crust of white ignorance and complacency. Nor are these stories mere moralistic tracts dressed up as fiction. They are fictional art in the highest sense of the word: stories that stand in their own right as stories, but that tell tales the human race now needs to know." H. A. Overstreet
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 S 29 '45 1250w
Wis Lib Bul 41:98 O '45

MOON, PENDEREL. Future of India. (Target for tomorrow) 76p il $1.75 Transatlantic [5s Pilot]

954 India—Politics and government. India—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (1939-)—India [45-3487]

"[The author] believes that the fundamental internal problems which vex India to-day, such

MOON, PENDEREL—Continued
problems as the relations between the Indian States and the rest of India, Pakistan—that is, the partition of India into Hindu and Moslem countries,—and other such formidable tests of statesmanship, would be far less intractable without the presence of the British in India as rulers. This belief is the basis of his thinking, but he is fully aware that any sudden cessation of British rule might, on the other hand, lead to disaster." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 42:130 D 15 '45

"There is much useful information in The Future of India to serve as the foundations of the author's arguments. . . Mr. Moon sums up fairly on both sides and does not cheat those of his readers who have no knowledge of Indian history and affairs by making dogmatic statements. . . There is some sound discussion of economic and social needs and problems which will be read with profit. But why quote Mr. Lionel Fielden and Mr. Palme Dutt as authorities on the problem of the Indian States?" J. C.
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 14 '45 250w

Reviewed by H. G. Rawlinson
Spec 174:294 Mr 30 '45 450w

"What Mr. Moon has done is to set out a closely-reasoned case in support of a clear-cut policy. The book deserves to be read widely, and to be answered by those who disagree with it. The task will not be simple."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 17 '45 1100w

MOON, PENDEREL. Strangers in India. 184p $2 Reynal [7s 6d Faber]
954 India—Politics and government 45-3228

"Penderel Moon here raises the well modulated voice of a young English civil servant in a roundabout discussion of the various problems of British rule in India. As a vehicle, he cleverly uses the method of casual conversations between a cynical, experienced officer, whom he calls Lightfoot, and a junior officer, Greenlane, who is learning about India as he goes along. Mr. Moon himself arrived in India in the early '30s and resigned from the civil service in 1944. During that time he served as Deputy Commissioner of Multan, Gujart and Amritsar and as secretary to the Governor of the Punjab." Weekly Book Review

"This book will not be popular among supporters of Gandhi's Congress party. They will not find it easy, however, to present a factual rebuttal of the picture that it draws." L. A. Mills
Am Pol Sci R 39:1229 D '45 600w
Booklist 41:320 Jl 1 '45

"Amid the flood of fresh literature on India today, this modest little volume is liable to escape attention—but it is worth making a special effort to read. We have heard almost every angle of India's problems but that of the man who has had the particular job of trying to solve them. Mr. Moon, a young Englishman, formerly of the Indian Civil Service, now gives us this viewpoint." H. J. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 31 '45 600w

"The author offers a fair and broad-minded discussion of the current political problems with typical Indian incidents, illustrative of the way of life and the modes and speech of the people. It is a very honest book and a thoughtful and informative one—so that no serious student of Asiatic problems should miss reading it." Max Fischer
+ Commonweal 42:76 My 4 '45 420w
Foreign Affairs 23:699 Jl '45 50w

"Criticism of British rule is balanced by some recognition of causes and possible solutions. Not a blueprint, but a revealing analysis."
Kirkus 12:561 D 15 '44 130w

"There are good and bad things in this book. The chapter 'Mercenaries or Missionaries' is one of the most illuminating disclosures we know of the dilemma in which present and future conditions of service in India place the capable and conscientious British official. On the other hand, the impression is left that the Indian Civil Service is the only service that matters. In particular the Indian police come off badly, and the administration as a whole is not quite so aloof and impersonal as the argument suggests. Still, the book is a contribution to the better understanding of a complex and formidable problem." J. C.
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 7 '44 200w

Reviewed by John Senior
Nation 160:495 Ap 28 '45 240w

"It is refreshing to find complete candor on the Indian question on the part of an upper-class Englishman, particularly one who has been exposed, for long years, to the politically atrophying influences of the British Civil Service. Mr. Moon gives us a most welcome offset to Beverly Nichol's well publicized recent book which provided a witty but completely biased picture. Mr. Moon looks at the same scene but through totally different glasses." H. J. Bresler
+ New Repub 112:765 My 28 '45 550w

"A brilliant and readable little book on the theme that we are and always were 'strangers' in India who have imposed our own culture and procedure too recklessly. He was a Civil Servant, and throughout the book he instructs and entertains us by reporting what happened in his own experience as a district magistrate." H. N. Brailsford
+ New Statesman & Nation 28:28 Jl 8 '44 80w

"Mr. Moon, who writes in a non-patronizing and sympathetic vein, has cast his book in a loose, Socratic form—a device not always successful, since his dialogues tend to length and breathlessness. He has the point of view of an enlightened but still conservative Englishman."
+ — New Yorker 21:90 Ap 7 '45 160w

"Penderel Moon, who spent fifteen observant, if, from his own point of view, also somewhat barren years as a civil servant in India, has written an honest and courageous book on India. It has some obvious limitations—he saw within a narrow circle . . . and he suffered from a growing sense of frustration which ended in the termination of an exceptionally promising official career—neither of them good qualifications for writing an objective book." B. Shiva Rao
+ — Pacific Affairs 18:389 D '45 1100w

"Using a question and answer method in a breezy, conversational style, Mr. Moon has written a thoughtful book. Its chief merit lies in an honest attempt to appraise the British position, and to criticize constructively both native and English institutions. The author, who for over fifteen years was in the Indian Civil Service, indicates his modesty by the very title of his book, in refreshing contrast to those who after a few months of residence would pass a verdict on India." A. E. Kane
+ Pol Sci Q 60:626 D '45 750w

"A singularly witty and outspoken commentary on life in rural India to-day." H. G. Rawlinson
+ Spec 172:530 Je 9 '44 650w

Reviewed by H. L. Mitchell
Springf'd Republican p6 My 17 '45 489w
Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Je 10 '44 550w

"Mr. Moon is witty and has a gift of phrase, with the result that this is one of the most readable books that has appeared on India in some time." Nym Wales
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 8 '45 650w

"Here is a book about India that is different. And it is different because of the author's standpoint, his purpose, and his method of presenting his material. Furthermore, it is a work that may profitably be read alongside any one of the more expository books on India which have appeared in such numbers during the past few years, since its main purpose is interpretive rather than descriptive or controversial. Without pretentiousness it offers a framework of reference that enables the reader to see in better perspective the clash of those militant urgencies that make up Indian politics today." C. H. Driver

+ Yale R ns 34:755 summer '45 850w

MOORE, ARTHUR L. The farmer and the rest of us. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 226p $2.50 Little

338.1 Agriculture—U.S. Agriculture—Economic aspects Agr45-134

"The author, using his home territory of McLean County, Illinois, heart-land of good corn-producing soil, builds up his case that 'corn-belt farming, with its emphasis on town patterns of success, does not support a rural life on a scale of comfort and beauty justified by the land.' This is his conclusion about a first-class farming area. On a large scale he says baldly that farming as a part of our economic order is a failure unless all people have an adequate diet. A main point is that the bigger, family-type farm is the hope of the future so far as food production is concerned. Arthur Moore is editor of a newspaper in McLean County." (N Y Times) No index.

"To give the needed knowledge and understanding of farming and farm people to city readers, 'The Farmer and the Rest of Us' is the best book I have ever read. It is unfailingly concrete and specific—a book of people and events, of general information in terms of actual cases. It is refreshingly moderate, sensible and just." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p10 Ap 15 '45 500w
Booklist 41:248 My 1 '45
Bookmark 6:4 N '45

"This is a wise book, a mellow and understanding book, and an important one... Mr. Moore is thinking out loud about the relationships between the farmers and the rest of us. He can do this with a clarity, sense and good temper rare to find." L. M. Lyons
+ Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 420w

"[The author] himself is not a farmer, yet he writes for at least 10,000 farmer subscribers; so, both of necessity and by inclination, he is vitally interested in farm matters. Such a person is qualified both to tell city people about farming and to tell farmers of their dependence on city consumers. Mr. Moore does both with objectivity, good nature and skill." R. H. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 6 '45 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45
Commonweal 42:123 My 18 '45 750w

Reviewed by E. A. Curtiss
J Home Econ 37:656 D '45 180w

"Experienced rather than experimental theory—non-partisan—succinct."
+ Kirkus 13:80 F 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by P. A. Waring
Nation 161:186 Ag 25 '45 580w

Reviewed by L. A. Salter
New Repub 112:596 Ap 30 '45 750w

"Mr. Moore says his book is a 'direct and unquarrelsome chronicle of a town dweller who wanted to understand the relation of farmers to assembly lines and to national health and security.' The time has come in the development of a great industrial nation when food production must be related to the welfare of all the people. The author has gone far toward the goal he set himself." H. S. Pearson
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 8 '45 850w

"The structure of Mr Moore's book is admirable. Its readability is further enhanced by delightful humor and felicity of phrase. Besides that, it has the newspaperman's flavor about past events and present figures that is reminiscent, if only a little, of Frederick Lewis Allen's 'Only Yesterday.'" A. H. Fuller
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 850w

"Recently, like gaseous matter rushing into a vacuum, books aiming to make the American farmer comprehensible have begun to appear. This one by Arthur Moore is excellent. Taken alone, it is a fine piece of illumination. Taken together with a number of others, most particularly with Ladd Haystead's book of last year, it is all the beter." W. W. Waymack
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 6 '45 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 41:51 My '45

"This is a well-reasoned, moving plea for progress, eminently worth a farmer's evening and highly instructive to 'the rest of us.'" A. W. Griswold
+ Yale R n s 35:164 autumn '45 500w

MOORE, HARRIET LUCY. Soviet Far Eastern policy, 1931-1945. (I.P.R. inquiry ser) 304p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations—East (Far East) A45-5523

"Issued under the auspices of the International Secretariat, Institute of Pacific Relations, this volume presents a dispassionate and objective report of the Far Eastern situation from 1931-1945 with accompanying sidelights on European developments. Carefully documented, chiefly, of course from Russian sources, it records the official words and deeds of the Soviet Government in the years that saw the western powers, disturbed by fears of Communism and loss of colonial privileges, drifting into World War II, while Russia urged the principle of collective action to insure peace." Library J

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 16 '45 40w
Booklist 42:142 Ja 1 '46

Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 43:240 D 14 '45 1100w

"Provides brief, factual and intelligent background to present problems in the Pacific. Recommended to college and public libraries." J. H. Berthel
+Library J 70:820 S 15 '45 100w

MOORE, JOHN EUGENE. Indian Paul. 159p $2 Harcourt
54-8894

A lynching in a small town in Michigan is the subject of this short novel. An Indian youth murders his aged mother and is put in jail. There is an attempted lynching, frustrated by a courageous doctor, and a surprise ending.

"This is a vigorously written first novel which may be said to be in the John Steinbeck tradition."
Christian Century 62:1165 O 10 '45 100w

"The author of 'Indian Paul' has nothing new to say about the crime of lynching; what is unusual about his book is its flat, objective style. John Moore never screams or even editorializes; his story has none of the suspense of 'The Ox-Bow Incident'; and for these reasons, as a work of art 'Indian Paul' doesn't quite come off. Such a tale of violence needs more than the well written, photographically accurate reporting that Moore gives it." P. T. Hartung
Commonweal 42:626 O 12 '45 500w

"The indecision and fear of the boys as they contemplate and then accomplish their crime—and the author's feel of place—give this novel what distinction it has. Otherwise the author leaves the character of the Indian, as do most writers, a mystery to the reader—and hardly scratches the surface of the plot's potentialities."
— + Kirkus 13:381 S 1 '45 110w

"Despite a general meagerness of execution, and an ineptitude with dialogue and character which the Hemingway style fails to hide . . . there is such vividness in the action itself that the reader is conscious, on the whole, of having had a mild esthetic experience." Marjorie Farber
+ — New Repub 113:542 O 22 '45 150w

MOORE, JOHN E.—Continued

"Mr. Moore sticks so relentlessly to his thesis, and has so little skill with either plot or dialogue, that his characters emerge only as paper cutouts: bumbling marshal, weakly profane bully, sadistic adolescent, chowderhead camp follower and the rest. The fact that a child's mind is capable of distilling pure evil has been proved before in novels; here it is merely stated flatly, with no real attempt to probe the terror. As a result, Indian Paul's death is as meaningless as his life . . . it is briefly shocking—and no more rewarding than a wax-work museum piece." James MacBride
— N Y Times p36 S 16 '45 360w

"Mr. Moore, in this first novel, sets his scene in northern Michigan and makes the victim an Indian. These are the two notable differences in this novel about a lynching; otherwise it reads much the same as any other, except for the ending, which is just plain preposterous."
— New Yorker 21:85 S 22 '45 130w

"Mr. Moore's narrative is weak at its crucial point. There is too little difficulty—in fact there is no difficulty at all—in the execution of the boys' plans. . . 'Indian Paul' is a tight little story with important sociological and psychological implications. But as a narrative it is broken, jerky, made up of fragments. It suffers from failure to find a point of view which would carry us beneath the surface of events and provide a meaningful continuity of experience." Walter Hammond
— + Sat R of Lit 28:87 O 13 '45 400w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 270w

"It is a powerful theme, fraught with social and psychological meaning. That it falls short of realization here is due to faulty handling and to weaknesses in the author's style." Jennings Rice
Weekly Book Review p18 S 23 '45 550w

MOORE, JOSEPH A. Famous leaders of industry; fifth series; life stories of men who have succeeded. (Famous leaders ser) 326p il $2.75 Page

923.8 Business men. U.S.—Biography

Brief biographies, with portraits, of many outstanding industrialists. Contents: John A. Brown; Walt Disney; Nelson Doubleday; Donald W. Douglas; Willard H. Dow; Lincoln Filene; George Horace Gallup; John C. Garand; William Green; Leon Henderson; Andrew J. Higgins; William M. Jeffers; Eric A. Johnston; Henry J. Kaiser; William S. Knudsen; Henry R. Luce; Donald M. Nelson; Edward J. Noble; Igor I. Sikorsky; Alfred P. Sloan, Jr; Edward Reilly Stettinius, Jr; Carl A. Swanson. Index.

Booklist 42:164 Ja 15 '46
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 20w

MOORE, THOMAS VERNER. Personal mental hygiene. 331p $4 Grune

131.32 Mental hygiene SG45-58

"The author's purpose is to present 'various attitudes of mind, ideals, and principles which may be of value to the individual confronted with the difficulties of life.' He achieves this objective by offering the usual principles of mental hygiene in intimate association with religious precepts." J Home Econ

---

"Because of Dom Moore's unique qualifications, anything he writes is worth reading. Richly experienced psychiatrist, high ranking contributor to the technical literature of his profession, and also priest, monk, spiritual director, he publishes nothing out of which the patient reader is unable to glean at least a little fruit."
+ — Cath World 161:190 My '45 180w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

"The style for the most part is rather informal and the material easily understood. The author frequently makes assumptions which are not generally accepted by psychologists or psychiatrists. . . The chapters on the actual, practical adjustment of the individual to the various aspects of his environment are very well done. The basic premise of the book—that religion is a way of life which in itself provides an excellent mental hygiene—will be recognized as true by anyone who has had extensive experience in dealing with people and who is himself a well-rounded individual." M. M. Parker
+ — J Home Econ 37:522 O '45 400w

MOORE, ZOE (STEEN) (MRS JAMES SCOTT MOORE), and MOORE, JOHN BEATTY. Essentials of parliamentary procedure. 221p $2.50 Harper

328.1 Parliamentary procedure 44-7454

"Fairly comprehensive guide to conducting a meeting. Some of the material on complicated procedure with regard to motions is set down in chart form. 'Rules and procedures stated and explained are those recognized and accepted as correct in this country. The authority followed, in cases where the recognized authorities or practices differ, is Robert's Rules of Order Revised.'—p.x." Booklist

---

"This little volume will prove of value both to those who already know something about the subject and those who do not." W. B. Munro
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:186 F '45 450w
Booklist 41:119 D 15 '44
Wis Lib Bul 41:50 My '45

MOORMAN, JOHN RICHARD HUMPIDGE. Church life in England in the thirteenth century. 444p il $5.50 Macmillan

274.2 Great Britain—Church history 45-7788

"During the last half-century a vast amount of research has been under way in parish records, episcopal 'visitations,' and many other sources which casts an abundant light upon the conditions of church life in England during the Middle Ages. Mr. Moorman has limited himself to one century—the greatest—and without attempting to discover new material in hitherto unused manuscripts has aimed to present a synthesis of the material already in print. He has limited himself further by concentrating his attention upon the practical organization of the Church, the daily life and financial status of the clerics both secular and regular, and the relationship existing between the clerics and the laity." Weekly Book Review

---

"Mr. Moorman brings to his task the qualifications of a widely-read scholar and an experienced parish priest, and he has produced an eminently readable and absorbing book. While historians may wish to make some criticism in detail of his handling of evidence, no one is likely to quarrel with his main conclusions." C. R. Cheney
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 22 '45 230w

"Mr. Moorman's style is that of a man who has himself lived much of the life that he describes; he deals directly and clearly with matters of perennial interest, and he moves over the treacherous ashes of by-gone controversies with a serenity which comes very near to impartiality." G. G. Coulton
+ — Spec 175:156 Ag 17 '45 900w

"Upon some minor matters it is probable that readers will differ from Mr. Moorman, and they may well interpret some of his evidence differently. But he has presented a well-documented, interesting, and entirely readable account of English church life in the thirteenth century. He has done full justice to the lofty ideal and to the magnitude of the actual achievement of the medieval English church at the height of its glory; and he has enabled the reader to see the incipient causes and grounds of its later decline."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p318 Jl 7 '45 2650w

"This is a welcome and worthy addition to the long line of medieval studies which have come to us from Cambridge." S. C. Chew
+ Weekly Book Review p44 N 11 '45 800w

MORGAN, ARTHUR ERNEST. Edward Bellamy. 468p il $5 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Bellamy, Edward A44-5392

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"One cannot help wishing that the first biography of Bellamy could have been less pretentious and more perceptive. To begin with, the plan of the book is heavy-handed and clumsy. . . Mr. Morgan makes startling claims for Bellamy, representing him as the equal or superior of Freud, Marx, Emerson, Thoreau, Hawthorne, and Henry George. . . A less extravagant evaluation of Bellamy as thinker might have led Mr. Morgan to give us a clearer account of Bellamy as a person and would almost certainly have led him to look more closely at American life in the eighties and nineties for an explanation of Bellamy's influence. . . The truth is, one fears, that Mr. Morgan does not fully understand socialism or American history or even Edward Bellamy." Granville Hicks
Am Hist R 50:575 Ap '45 700w

Reviewed by J. O. Hertzler
Ann Am Acad 238:196 Mr '45 600w

Bookmark 6:10 My '45

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 22:180 Ap '45 750w

"The book is not only brilliant but thorough as well."
+ Current Hist 8:441 My '45 80w

Reviewed by Louis Filler
Pol Sci Q 60:468 S '45 600w

"Unfortunately the book shows signs of having been crowded into the cracks of an otherwise busy life. The chapters are really separate essays, with much repetition which could have been edited out and much long quotation which could have been better blended into the narrative. . . But Mr. Morgan does succeed in making the life and the personality of the author of 'Looking Backward' a little better understood; and he gives us a sane and sympathetic analysis of the faults and the virtues of Bellamy's social theory." R. E. Spiller
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:12 Mr 17 '45 850w

"Dr. Morgan's biography, put together over ten years with the aid of several collaborators, is fact-packed and scholarly. Unfortunately, it is also uneven and undigested. It fails to synthesize the social philosophy which Bellamy scattered through many an article and book. But, until a better biography is written, thoughtful readers will value it for rescuing a fertile thinker from his half-forgotten reputation as a one-book man."
+ — Time 45:94 Mr 5 '45 1000w

"Ten years of conscientious documentation, immense labor in following in many languages the after effects of Edward Bellamy's strange best seller, and study of much unpublished material have gone into this book. . . This book is full of surprises and clues to American history. . . Dr. Morgan's index and bibliography are excellent and full of tempting paths to explore, looking backward or looking forward." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p2 F 4 '45 1650w

MORGAN, CHARLES. Reflections in a mirror. 225p $2.50 (8s 6d) Macmillan

824 Literature—History and criticism 45-3992

Collection of short reflective essays on varied subjects, mainly literature and art. With one exception they were selected from a weekly series, called Menander's Mirror, appearing in the Literary Supplement of the London Times. Partial contents: On being born now; The integrity of Pascal; The idea of Europe; A leisured civilization; Why birds sing; The heritage of symbolism; 'La douceur de vivre'; Thomas Hardy; Italia irredenta; Ivan Turgenev; Nausicaa and the pelicans; Tolstoy: "War and peace".

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 15 '45 360w

Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45

"This is an ideal book for those who love beautiful prose, can find a quiet corner, and are in a meditative mood." J. J. Reilly
+ Cath World 162:184 N '45 350w

Christian Century 62:887 Ag 1 '45 40w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 29 '45 420w

"A refreshing and pleasant volume."
+ Current Hist 9:49 Jl '45 50w

"How fortunate are readers and thinkers to have these leisurely dissertations done with the conviction and charm of Charles Morgan, novelist, now essayist. Reminiscent of Virginia Woolf's The Common Reader. For all libraries." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 110w

"Charming little essays. . . In his cultural ideas, one must confess, Mr. Morgan's downrightness is most welcome and timely. He emphasizes what every candid thinker knows, that education is not a levelling but a distinguishing process, and sees that a country's vitality depends on providing the best education for such as can assimilate it—who will never be very many. Delightful, too, are his remarks on poetry, with their refreshing faith in a revival of the natural English joy in song." B. S.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 5 '45 360w

"There will always be an England. I trust there will always be Butlers, Beefeaters, and Belted Earls, even under a Labor government. And I devoutly hope there will always be The Times. The charm of Charles Morgan's essays, is their timely timelessness. London was blitzed and robot-bombed: but 'Menander' kept writing of Why Birds Sing, of Ivan Turgenev, of Nausicaa and the Pelicans." Albert Guerard
+ Nation 161:209 S 1 '45 420w

"This book is a war book, one of the best and most permanent through its sheer lack of anger and topicality. It reflects the sweetness, the tolerance, the freedom, the tentative judgments, the consciousness of large and spiritual issues that have made the great democracies (Morgan names Great Britain, France and the United States) enduring. And if some future Scourge of God wishes a textbook to discover what he must conquer to achieve world domination, he will find here those elements which he can never overcome." D. A. Stauffer
+ N Y Times p3 My 20 '45 1100w

"This volume of essays is past question a remarkable and delightful book. And the author's limiting idiosyncrasies, of which he is acutely conscious, add to the charm and interest of the work." Leonard Bacon
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 My 26 '45 550w

"Mr. Charles Morgan's mellow and persuasive voice is here raised for art, idleness, and the humane. It is good that such a carol should be heard today, when art, never much prized by our unimaginative thinkers, is seen as something functional; when idleness is scorned by those who want to keep us all busy, and when the humane has been overlaid with blueprints. . . It is a good book, and valuable at this time. If it were less measured, sometimes a little less sententious, sometimes a very little more effervescent, it would be better still." Frank Swinnerton
+ Spec 173:588 D 15 '44 700w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 150w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p594 D 9 '44 2200w

"That in the midst of war and at the heart of a bomb-torn city these essays, steadily continuing a search for ultimate values, should have been written at all is scarcely less remark-

MORGAN, CHARLES—Continued
able than that a great newspaper, cruelly conditioned by newsprint famine, should give them each a full page, week after week, in which to mirror an eternal moment of passing time. . . Held at one angle or another, Mr. Morgan's mirror reflects the human scene, so tilting as to present not the past only nor yet only the future, but the workingout, in this present, of the middle truth that 'in all societies and at all times there are constants and variables, and that what gives to an age its distinguishing character is the relationship, the friction, between them.' " M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 19 '45 850w

MORGAN, GUY. P. O. W.; il. by John Worsley [Eng title: Only ghosts can live] (Whittlesey house publication) 226p $2.50 McGraw [8s 6d Lockwood, C.]

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 45-8560

The brother of the English author, Charles Morgan, was a lieutenant in command of a "fishing schooner" which was supposed to join Tito's Partisans. Captured by the Germans, Lieutenant Morgan was wounded, and spent many months in prison camps and hospitals from Jugoslavia, to Italy and Hanover. He was finally repatriated thru Sweden. This is a series of short stories or sketches about his experiences in prisons and hospitals.

Reviewed by Ernest von Hartz
Book Week p5 O 28 '45 600w
Booklist 42:73 N 1 '45

"The book is a must for relatives and friends of ex-prisoners, or for anyone interested in the adjustment of a fine, sensitive mind to the isolation and inertia of a prison camp."
+ Kirkus 13:357 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Unique feature is glossary of terms frequently used by prisoners, with non-academic definitions. Recommended." Emily Garnett
+ Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 140w

"The book is rather awkwardly organized, nor is it in any sense great writing. But it is a competent job of reportage and serves, or should serve, to correct a good many excited notions about German POW camps. From a hostile point of view one can of course complain that this is a book by a British officer, not by an American, just as one can complain that this is a book about an officers' camp, not about one occupied by private soldiers. Neither objection has validity." H. M. Jones
N Y Times p3 O 21 '45 1100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p495 O 20 '45 600w

"Even a period of solitary confinement, Mr. Morgan found, could seem, in retrospect, 'full of colorful figures and unexpected twists,' for 'life to whatever terms it is reduced can never be uneventful.' One hopes that all his fellow-Gefangeners exacted as much in experience and wisdom for the high price they paid." Richard Match
+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 21 '45 650w

MORGAN, HOWARD KEY. Industrial training and testing. 225p $2.50 McGraw

658.386 Employees, Training of. Employment management 45-10196

"This book is not a generalization, but offers a specific plan, arrived at through ideas furnished by industry, government, and the Armed Forces, by which the workingman may be systematically trained, tested and advanced in accordance with his aptitudes and abilities." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:143 Ja 1 '46
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 30w
School & Society 62:343 N 24 '45 60w

MORGAN, WILLARD D., and LESTER, HENRY M. Correct exposure in photography. 123p il $1.50 Morgan & Lester

771.37 Photography—Exposure 44-5052

"An explanation of the principles of the photo-electric exposure meter and its uses in judging light intensity for snapshots, color photography, portraiture, or motion pictures. Also touched upon are such special applications as copying, table-top, aerial, and underwater photography. The use of a Weston meter is the theme of this book which gives the salient features of the four Weston models and recommendations concerning them." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 41:37 O 1 '44
N Y New Tech Bks 29:63 O '44

MORGENTHAU, HENRY. Germany is our problem. 239p $2 Harper

940.5314443 World war, 1939-1945—Peace. Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 45-8623

Outlines the famous "Morgenthau plan" for controlling Germany, with some differences from the first "Program to prevent Germany from starting a World war III," the document which President Roosevelt took to the Quebec conference in 1944. "In this book Mr. Morgenthau cites many statistics to prove that it would be possible for German economy to be directed away from heavy industry and concentrated upon agriculture and the service trades without producing chaos in Germany or in the general European economy. He gives figures to show that German agriculture was relatively inefficient before the war, and that by drainage, clearing off forested lands and the like, as well as by cutting up large estates and eliminating power-driven machinery, Germany could support an increase of some 50 per cent in her farm labor force, and, by bringing her agricultural production up to the point of self-sufficiency, eliminate the necessity of paying for food imports with industrial exports." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p4 O 14 '45 850w
Booklist 42:93 N 15 '45

"It must be said in praise of the book that it is honest and direct in its approach; that the author has succeeded in presenting such intrinsically dry matters as economical statistics in an attractive manner, and that his arguments are well-nigh irrefutable, provided one accepts his thesis that the Germans have set their mind on a third trial by arms. The author's proposals are humane, sensible and entirely free from vengeful sentiments. . . But it is worth repeating that the aggressor nation of the coming century need not be located in Central Europe; perhaps not even in Europe. Moreover, Mr. Morgenthau's book was written in the pre-atomic era. Since then, we have learned to tip the heaviest scales by means of a few pounds of uranium. A Germany barred access to this secret is no problem." E. S. P.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 O 8 '45 700w

Reviewed by George Doherty
Commonweal 43:95 N 9 '45 1500w

"The volume is must-reading, but that does not entail must-agreement in everything."
Current Hist 9:458 N '45 250w

"An interesting book to weigh against the Hauser book."
Kirkus 13:388 S 1 '45 260w

"Most people are familiar with the general outlines of the Morgenthau plan for Germany. But I recommend that this book be read from cover to cover, copiously underlined, and kept handy in the magazine rack as background for news stories on the subject, which will serve to illumine the plan's weaknesses and strengths. The German problem will be with us for many moons. Current procedure will be reorganized many times, it is safe to predict, but the Morgenthau plan in toto will never be adopted. It can be, however, a yardstick to measure our 'flagging will' to render Germany impotent for war." Leon Henderson

+ Nation 161:433 O 27 '45 1850w

"No book since 'Mein Kampf' has offered the American people information so important for their survival as Henry Morgenthau's 'Germany Is Our Problem.' If we had read and understood Hitler's doctrine in time we might have avoided the second World War. If we read and profit by Mr. Morgenthau's warning we should be able to prevent that third World War for which we know preparations have already begun." Elizabeth Simon

+ N Y Times p3 O 7 '45 2700w

New Yorker 21:98 O 27 '45 180w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Sat R of Lit 28:11 O 6 '45 800w

Social Studies 37:48 Ja '46 20w

Reviewed by Harry Baehr

Weekly Book Review p3 O 7 '45 900w

MORNEWECK, MRS EVELYN (FOSTER). Chronicles of Stephen Foster's family; il. from contemporary paintings, photographs and prints; pub. for the Foster hall collection. 2v maps $5 Univ. of Pittsburgh

B or 92 Foster, Stephen Collins 45-3167

"Two volumes compiled by Stephen Foster's niece, the daughter of his favorite brother Morrison. . . The author 'does not presume to call this book a literary work. It is simply a compilation of notes and letters and personal recollections that we hope will bring a message of kinship to many admirers of Stephen Foster, and also to members of the Foster clan.'" Atlantic

"The book is valuable mainly for its subject matter. It collects many loose ends of Foster material and binds them between four convenient covers. It refutes several erroneous conceptions about Stephen and his wife Jane. It answers many questions about Stephen's life and his music, especially during his last years in New York. It adds many details. Moreover, it shows Stephen Foster's proportionate relationship to his family and friends; he is a member of a large group, not the chief actor holding the center of the stage." Henrietta Hardman

Atlantic 176:150 O '45 300w

Booklist 42:109 D 1 '45

"This is in several ways an admirable work. In its 603 pages of narrative and its four appendices it presents a great mass of detail. Its illustrations are interesting. Its only obvious lack is that of bibliography. . . But I found it heavy going. A biographer, I think, should have an equal regard for truth and for art. He should not shovel out details in merely chronological order; he should select and arrange details in a way that represents his subject clearly and truly and he should note the existence of additional evidence in a scrupulous but unobtrusive fashion. This is not Mrs. Morneweck's method." D. S. Norton

+ — N Y Times p20 Ag 26 '45 650w

"A timely and remarkable specimen of family documentation which offers fundamental data to all students of Foster's achievements, as well as a surprising amount of interesting material to regional historians of the early nineteenth century. . . The two volumes are packed with attested information and form a source book of undoubted value."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:15 S '45 400w

MORRIS, CHARLES LESTER. Pioneering the helicopter. 161p il $2.75 McGraw

629.13335 Helicopters 45-418

"'Les' Morris, known in aviation as the first man to fly a helicopter over 100 miles per hour, was chief test pilot for Sikorsky during the three critical years of the development of this type of rotor plane. He tells the story of the first successful helicopter in the Western hemisphere—the first production helicopter in the world. He clears up misconceptions of the helicopter and, in nontechnical language, gives the story of the past and the probabilities of the helicopter." Library J

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer

Book Week p6 F 18 '45 300w

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:8 Ja '45

"'Les' Morris is most certainly in a unique position to give his readers 'inside' information and trustworthy data." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 F '45 1250w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p22 N 18 '45 220w

MORRIS, EDITA. Three who loved. 142p $2 Viking

45-1872

Three short stories, all with Sweden as a background, in which the author of My Darling From the Lions (Book Review Digest, 1943) deals with different types and manifestations of love.

"Edita Morris is a talented writer who can weave fragile spells of lyric beauty, though the beauty is more a matter of fragments than of a whole, and in the shapeless, wandering narrative one feels a disturbing lack of form. Her reliance on metaphor is heavy and the results are varying, sometimes delightful, often inane. These stories, bordering on the mawkish, possess some music, some magic, and there will be many who will be charmed, content to wander in a land of falsehood so long as it be fair." Dorsha Hayes

+ Book Week p8 Mr 11 '45 600w

Booklist 41:209 Mr 15 '45

"The conquest of human evils, human failings, by unselfish, selfless love, in gentle, touching tales."

+ Kirkus 12:549 D 15 '44 140w

"I have been wondering what accounts for Mrs. Morris's ability to involve and charm me against, as it were, my better judgment. In part, of course, it must be simply—or not so simply—the communicating power of her creative intensity. But I think it is also in large measure the Swedish setting of her stories, her use of an environment that is so lacking in the usual touchstones of sordid reality that it becomes a Never-never Land of poetic possibility, a fairy tale country where there is just enough of the recognizable paraphernalia of our own lives to give point to the moral lesson. I very much doubt that the stories in 'Three Who Loved' would maintain their fairy-tale appeal or exercise the charm they do, if they were to be translated from their present setting to the familiar world of, say, Rhode Island or Illinois." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 160:227 F 24 '45 420w

"We wish through the whole book for the flesh-and-blood gaiety that was in 'My Darling,' the rambunctious energy and candid play, the imagination and the humor. Here the glowing Scandinavian setting of Mrs. Morris' other stories is muted, stylized, or symbolic. The action is just so, for the stories are really fables, set and molded from the start. All is still—fresh winds do not blow except when allowed by the author, for a specific, hushed purpose." Eudora Welty

N Y Times p4 F 18 '45 950w

"Mrs. Morris employs a pseudo-simple style which you may or may not find irritating; the tales she tells, however, would unquestionably be more fresh and charming if she were not so bent on making them fresh and charming."

+ — New Yorker 21:74 F 24 '45 100w

"What is almost impossible to translate in a review is the simplicity and clarity of Mrs Morris's writing. The air is fresh and sweet, the pale sunlight rests lightly on the characters who walk through her pages. There is something of the childlike quality of an Italian primitive about this book, and the reader closes it feeling refreshed and restored to something lost and missed far too long. Admirers of Kathleen Mansfield will find again in 'Three Who Loved' something of the magic

MORRIS, EDITA—Continued
that vanished when she died. In times of confusion and loud noises, this quiet voice telling an ancient and beautiful story is like music." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 330w

Reviewed by Marion Sturges-Jones
Weekly Book Review p4 F 18 '45 550w

MORRIS, MRS TERRY. No hiding place. 255p $2.50 Knopf
45-5350

A story of a group of young women, army wives, living in an Armytown on the outskirts of the camp where their husbands are in training. The story is told from the point of view of Sue Devereaux. who has economic security, a newspaper job to keep her busy, an apartment where she and her Geeorge can be together, but not all the girls have as much and their various problems, economic, emotional, and social, are set forth in the story.

Reviewed by Dorsha Hayes
Book Week p8 Jl 1 '45 270w
Booklist 41:322 Jl 1 '45
Kirkus 13:185 My 1 '45 170w

"Speaking in general critical terms, this is the writing of a social worker, with all the material neatly corralled and worked out, with attention and sentiment evenly distributed. Enough characters are on hand to express every possible angle and shade of the problems (including native fascism)—sometimes in well-planned scenes, more often in conversation, or even in contemplative monologues. The result is an intelligent, editorial dramatization of an idea that misses novel stature." Gertrude Buckman
N Y Times p20 Je 17 '45 200w

"The theme is a moving one, but Mrs Morris writes with neither the perceptiveness nor the wit to produce more than a rather commonplace narrative."
— + New Yorker 21:71 Je 16 '45 80w

"This book is more successful as current history than as a novel. . . In spite of the book's shortcomings as fiction, however, it presents thoughtfully a philosophy and a way of life. 'No Hiding Place' is obviously the product of reflection and judgment set to work on personal experience. Because Mrs. Morris's judgment is good and her observation precise, the book will be a mirror to Army wives of the things they saw and an expression of the emotions they felt." Barbara Klaw
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 8 '45 450w

MORRIS, WRIGHT. Man who was there. 237p $2.50 Scribner

Character sketches of a number of people, whose lives have been influenced by the personality of one man, Agee Ward, reported missing in action.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p30 D 2 '45 450w

"The final impression has somewhat the confusion of a dream, into which you want to get back so as to know the end. Odd blend of impressionistic treatment, and realism, down to a photographic accuracy of minutiae—and phonographic record of sound. The man can write—and someday he may achieve some degree of order and balance that this lacks. I cannot see a large audience, but it will be an appreciative one."
Kirkus 13:349 Ag 15 '45 300w

"Mr. Morris's characters are real enough and he shows considerable skill in drawing American genre pictures, but the pattern of his story is confused."
+ — New Yorker 21:101 N 3 '45 120w

"Reading this book gives one the same sort of pleasure and excitement and annoyance that leafing through an album of snap-shots and sketches would provide if the album were a joint production of Daguerre, Braque, Grant Wood, Brady, Dali, and the Fresno News staff photographer. . . The dust-cover assures us that 'It is a novel for discerning readers who are willing to go deeper than pretty patterns, and find life itself, frankly and honestly portrayed.' But being willing is not enough: one wishes that the author had been a little more coöperative, even with discerning readers." R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:41 N 10 '45 400w

"There is good writing in the novel and various episodes are set down with vigor and a sort of sardonic detachment, but the total effect is foggy. Mr. Morris is, by avocation, an expert photographer, so perhaps his purpose was to create fiction in trick photography technique, with double-exposure effects that may have been inspired by James Joyce." Lisle Bell
— + Weekly Book Review p8 D 16 '45 350w

MORTON, DAVID. Poems, 1920-1945. 209p $2.75 Knopf
811 45-9337

"Some of the poems in this volume are taken from the author's previous books, Ships in Harbour, Harvest, Nocturnes and Autumnals, etc. Other poems here, not previously included in any of the author's books, appeared originally in magazines and newspapers." Acknowledgments

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p10 N 4 '45 270w

"There is quiet comfort in the poetry of David Morton. He has a tender touch and a delicate perception which never, in any period, become too common. . . Our criticism of this poet is of nothing that appears in his well-turned lines, but of what does not appear. Here a poem whispers of Wordsworth, there one suggests Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and here again one echoes Keats. But nothing, it seems to us, has the author's own trademark indelibly stamped upon it." P. P. S.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p20 N 10 '45 240w

"His occasional poems often give delight, but gathered together, they carry less weight and conviction than when they are read singly."
Kirkus 13:388 S 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by L. T. Nicholl
Sat R of Lit 28:40 N 17 '45 230w

"David Morton's poetry, written with a careful regard for metrical form as well as for beautiful musical cadence and artistic picture, is distinguished. It is a rare delight." C. M. Sauer
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 180w

MOSENSON, MOSHE. Letters from the desert; tr. from the Hebrew by Hilda Auerbach; ed. with an introd. by Shlomo Grodzensky. 222p $2 Sharon bks, 45 E. 17th st, N.Y. 3
940.5315296 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Jewish. Jews in Palestine 45-18208

The author was a Jewish volunteer who fought with the British forces from El Alamein to Tripoli. In his letters he gives an almost daily record of his thoughts and feelings, the events of his day, and describes his meetings with Jews from other countries.

"One of the most remarkable books written by a soldier of World War II. . . These letters were obviously not intended for publication, which gives them the freshness and charm of intimate messages written to loved ones by a highly sensitive and idealistic young man." Mendel Kochanski
+ Book Week p4 Ja 13 '46 800w
Booklist 42:146 Ja 1 '46

"There is little sound and fury in them: it is indicative of his outlook that, although he was present at the siege of Tobruk, he mentions it only in passing. Instead, there is a series of vignettes of men and places, a few of them almost pastoral in tone. . . In sharp contrast with the blood-and-guts school of war reporting, his descriptions are almost always in a minor key. They may not be any the less true for that. There is much in the letters of special interest to Jews. . . He is at his best, however, in writing of experiences common to men of all nations." W. H. Hindle

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Ja 19 '46 250w

MOTHER GOOSE. Mother Goose tells time; arr. by Alice Schneider; with il. by Roberta Paflin. [28p] $1.25 Citadel 45-3542

"Here are twelve familiar rhymes arranged with appropriate illustrations to mark the hours. The clock strikes one, hickory, dickory, dock and so on around the clock to eleven pears hanging high and twelve ships a-sailing on the sea. A clock-face with movable hands provides a practical demonstration, and illustrations which are bright and pleasing add to the general gaiety." N Y Times

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 My 6 '45 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p20 Jl 22 '45 90w

"Prettiest of recent time-telling devices for very little children." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 22 '45 120w

MOTHER GOOSE. Sing Mother Goose. See Wheeler, O.

MOULTON, FOREST RAY, and SCHIFFERES, JUSTUS JULIUS, eds. Autobiography of science. (Science publications council bks) 666p $4 Doubleday
504 Science 45-4699

"An anthology of the key passages from the master works of all sciences. The selections are in general arranged in chronological sequence by periods. Occasionally the time order has been violated to permit grouping by topics, and some attempt has been made to keep the biological sciences and the physical sciences together within periods." (Pref) Index.

"The excerpts are not mere fragments, but well written papers, usually several pages in length. For those interested in public health there are many pertinent excerpts, beginning with two from anonymous Egyptian physicians and four from Hippocrates, and continuing with highlights in medicine, chemistry, and public health to the present time. Altogether these medical excerpts make up about one quarter of the entire volume, a proportion which seems to be a very fair allotment." C. F. Bolduan
+ Am J Pub Health 35:1090 O '45 330w
Booklist 42:7 S '45
Bookmark 6:7 My '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 29 '45 480w

"An unusual approach to an overall picture of science growth."
+ Kirkus 13:30 Ja 15 '45 330w
Library J 70:638 Jl '45 90w

"This book should help stimulate further interest in the history of science not only among professional scientists but also among generally well informed people."
+ New Repub 113:85 Jl 16 '45 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:29 Ap '45

" 'The autobiography of Science' professes to repeat the best things the foremost scientists of all time have said about the most important things they ever did. Motivated also by the beauty of literary expression, the editors have selected passages rich in colorful words and metaphors, and intelligible translations from foreign tongues, and have modernized punctuation and omitted freely to simplify and clarify the presentation. Also, they have prefaced each selection with a vignette of the author, evaluating his work in its relation to the whole pattern of science. Layman and scientist alike should enjoy and profit from 'The Autobiography.' " H. N. Alyea
+ N Y Times p6 My 27 '45 700w

"The editors of this anthology faced a far more difficult problem than that which confronts the man who quotes the best in English poetry from Chaucer to Frost. There must be a plan in an anthology of science. We may disagree with Moulton and Schifferes about their plan, but we must admit that they have given the general reader a compilation which is eminently readable and useful." Waldemar Kaempffert
Sat R of Lit 28:55 N 17 '45 700w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 Jl '45 240w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:51 S '45 280w

MOWRER, PAUL SCOTT. House of Europe. 647p $3.75 Houghton
B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-8228

Autobiography of this American journalist from his childhood days in an Illinois town in the 90s, to his return to the United States in 1934 after twenty-four years as a foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News.

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p8 S 30 '45 850w
Booklist 42:36 O 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45
Kirkus 13:352 Ag 15 '45 270w

"I can see no reason why a Nation subscriber should read 'The House of Europe.' It is a bad instance of that pathetic fallacy which leads many foreign correspondents to suppose that the factual record of their lives has a vital interest for others." Ralph Bates
— Nation 162:80 Ja 19 '46 280w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
New Repub 113:507 O 15 '45 650w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams
N Y Times p5 S 30 '45 650w

"Mr. Mowrer writes entertainingly, and while he is frankly subjective (there is apparently a canon that insists that foreign correspondents be explicit about their most intimate affairs), he is not self-consciously picaresque or exhibitionistic."
+ New Yorker 21:88 S 22 '45 160w

"A story skilfully and often excitingly told." H. W. Weigert
+ Sat R of Lit 28:68 O 13 '45 600w

"No one concerned with the development of a recognizable foreign policy by the United States can afford to miss this account of the fits and starts of American participation in the wars and revolutions, moves to balance power and abortive attempts at European federation. Mr. Mowrer is always the reporter, not the emotional proponent of any partisan solution. The book is full of the names of famous persons, but brought in as part of the day's work and the year's memories, not as has too often been the case to exalt the prestige of the journeyer to strange and foreign places." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p2 S 23 '45 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 41:112 N '45

MUMFORD, LEWIS. City development; studies in disintegration and renewal. 248p $2 Harcourt
711.04 City planning 45-35070

"A collection of essays, otherwise inaccessible. It begins with 'The City,' published as a part of a symposium in 1922, and concludes with two not heretofore published in this country, 'The Social Foundations of Post-War Building' and 'The Plan of London.' Also here are his challenging pieces on 'The Metropolitan Milieu' (1934), 'Mass-Production on Housing' (1930), and 'Report on Honolulu' (1938), brought together into a book for the first time." Sat R of Lit

"It goes without saying that City Development should be 'must' reading for those with a serious interest in city and regional planning." J. C. Phillips
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1026 O '45 650w

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher
Ann Am Acad 240:183 Jl '45 650w

MUMFORD, LEWIS—Continued

Reviewed by Robert Lasch
Book Week p9 My 20 '45 150w

Booklist 41:266 My 15 '45

Reviewed by F. J. Adams
Boston Globe p12 My 23 '45 480w

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 9 '45 550w

Eng N 135:127 Jl 12 '45 100w

Kirkus 13:169 Ap 15 '45 170w

"Mr. Mumford inspires readers to a new scale of values, emphasizing stability and culture." Rebecca Rankin
+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard
Nation 161:16 Jl 7 '45 700w

"For the many readers familiar with the author's other works, and particularly with 'The Culture of the Cities,' this will be a welcome collection of footnotes, practical examples, addenda and corrigenda. But the book exists in its own right. Although composed of detached essays, it has unity. It is a substantial epitome of Mr. Mumford's thought. It offers on a convenient scale the combination characteristic of his whole career: earnestness, practical sense and charm." Albert Guerard
+ N Y Times p3 Je 3 '45 850w

New Yorker 21:79 Je 9 '45 100w

"It is a sincere tribute to the author to say that, regardless of date, all six of the essays are fresh and relevant today, as I suspect they will be for many years. The two final essays, 'Post-War Building' and 'The Plan of London,' are especially useful because Mumford regards them as serving 'to show what revisions have taken place in my thinking about the planning and ordering of cities, as a result of the catastrophe that has been steadily engulfing our whole civilization.'" A. M. Lee
+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 My 12 '45 900w

Social Studies 36:282 O '45 60w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
Survey G 34:416 O '45 360w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:38 S '45 240w

"If city planning, which was first a plaything of courts and then an instrument of economic development, becomes, as seems likely, a religion of the masses, that will in large measure be because Lewis Mumford made it so. . . 'City Development' is a distillation of the high purpose which has informed a lifetime of writing. A little volume, it yet spans the totality of the author's thought; of that thought which quickened the conscience of his time. Six essays, the first published in 1922, the last in 1945, compress in brief compass the history of an idea, illumined by successive interventions of reality. An autobiography reflected in observation and document, the voyage of a sensitive mind from youth to maturity, the book reveals the world as it presented itself to the author in successive unveilings. Here we discover with him the chaos and inhumanity of our cities, share his angry protest against their iniquities, and know the aristocratic and generous spirit which sought to overcome these with new patterns of justice and order." Joseph Hudnut
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 3 '45 2100w

Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Condition of man. 467p il $5 Harcourt [25s Secker & Warburg]

901 Civilization—History 44-5038

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Mr. Mumford fully recognizes the importance of the physical and economic factors in the life of man, but the ruling concept in this book is the prime importance of those things by virtue of which a man is a person—and not alone his reason but 'his dreams, his purposes, his ideals, his utopias.' It would be a liberal education to read and think one's way slowly and critically through this book, with excursions into the collateral paths which it suggests (and for which it supplies an excellent bibliography), and with the intent of applying its wisdom to the end of making oneself more completely human." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 62:178 F 7 '45 1200w

Reviewed by A. W. Levi
Ethics 55:313 Jl '45 1000w

Reviewed by W. H. Mohr
Social Studies 36:329 N '45 550w

"This impressive volume is the third of a series which Mr. Mumford opened in 1934 with his Technics and Civilisation and followed up in 1938 with the Culture of Cities. It is an essay in the philosophy of history, written in the grand manner, and traverses the entire course which Western man has followed not only in the realm of social and economic organisation, but also in art, religion and science. It will appeal to those who look for a synoptic study of human development and who believe that the results of specialised studies can be brought together in a comprehensive interpretation of human nature and its possibilities." Morris Ginsberg
+ Spec 174:272 Mr 23 '45 1200w

"Mr. Mumford refuses to share the gloomy conclusions of Spengler. Our society has, indeed, been disintegrating, and if we go farther along the same road we shall fare worse. But this offers a basis for renewal if we recognize the fact and have the courage to accept the challenge. . . For this confident message alone Mr. Mumford's great book would be well worth reading. Its learned and wise pages deserve to be pondered by all minds concerned with the trend of our civilization."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 20 '45 2350w

MUNCY, LYSBETH WALKER. The Junker in the Prussian administration under William II, 1888-1914. 256p $3 Brown univ.

943.1 Prussia—Politics and government A45-603

"So much is being said about the Junkers as the backbone of Prussia, pan-Germanism and German aggressiveness that any study which sheds authentic light on Junker influence, social life and political mentality is highly welcome. The present book confines itself to the role of the Junkers in the reign of William II. Yet from its material a general picture of the class and some conclusions about pre-1914 Germany can easily be drawn." N Y Times

"A good and useful book, fair in spirit, well-considered in judgment, clear in method, lucid in organization. One must congratulate this young scholar for the high accuracy of her work, especially as it deals with so many foreign names and conceptions. The very few misprints and mistakes (for instance, 'Moscow' instead of 'St. Petersburg,' p. 47) are negligible. However, there are some objections of a more general character. If one writes a book on the Junkers, one should make it perfectly clear what is understood by a Junker." Veit Valentin
+ — Am Hist R 50:528 Ap '45 1700w

Reviewed by Gerhard Krebs
Am Pol Sci R 39:592 Je '45 650w

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson
Ann Am Acad 239:196 My '45 500w

"This competent and scholarly volume should interest wider circles than those for which it is apparently intended." H. K.
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 18 '45 700w

"A very competent, well-organized, and well-documented study." W. C. Langsam
+ Pol Sci Q 60:474 S '45 600w

MUNSON, GORHAM BERT. Aladdin's lamp; the wealth of the American people. 420p $3.75 Creative age

332.7 Money—U.S. Credit 45-3010

"Debt-free national money or the credit power of the people is the Aladdin's lamp, according to the author, which can bring greater production, wealth and leisure for better living. This credit power, he says, is now in the hands of a private monopoly but should be freed by a new Treasury policy." (Publisher's Weekly) Index.

Reviewed by I. H. Flamm
Book Week p16 Ap 22 '45 700w
Christian Century 62:710 Je 13 '45 20w
Current Hist 9:325 O '45 90w

"International in scope, national in application, this is strictly for monetary circles, interested in prophetic, controversial utterances."
Kirkus 13:148 Ap 1 '45 90w

"Recommended for those who wish to study the latest presentation of social credit." Walter Hausdorfer
+ Library J 70:354 Ap 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by C. E. Noyes
Nation 160:677 Je 16 '45 500w
New Repub 112:685 My 14 '45 180w

"Mr. Munson is not only very fresh but very entertaining. He writes, as usual, with wit and vigor and, far from being destructive, is mainly bent on offering a method for achieving a life of material luxury for all and banishing forever a third worldwide outbreak of man's ancient sport of making life intolerable for himself."
+ New Yorker 21:90 Ap 21 '45 220w

"With many of the book's propositions, I disagree; I regret, for example, that the author has painted his picture of the struggle between The People and The Bankers in such unadulterated blacks and whites. Nor can I believe that his proposed solution is as simple as he would have the reader believe. But the book represents a type of thinking which is desperately needed if we are to achieve a world of peace and plenty when the war comes to an end." J. F. Wharton
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:24 My 5 '45 550w

Reviewed by H. W. Cross
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 21 '45 600w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:26 S '45 280w

"The bankers are Mr. Munson's pet aversion; he sees them under every bed and in every woodpile, the perennial troublemakers of history. His other aversion is debt, of any sort and description. He equally finds it unjustified, in our times, that men should work to live; to 'full employment' he opposes 'full enjoyment.' All of this is neither novel nor correct and the principal interest of Mr. Munson's book lies outside his rehash of naive economic fallacies and historic misinterpretations, in the political implications of his story." M. A. Heilperin
Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 15 '45 1050w

MUNSON, IDA NORTON. Surgeon's hands, and other poems. 79p $2 Humphries 811 45-345

A volume of religious and inspirational poems, many of them reprinted from such periodicals as Christian Century, Christian Endeavor World, Spirit, Unity Publication, etc.

+ Christian Century 62:145 Ja 31 '45 60w

"These are not necessarily enduring verses, but they do remind the reader, in well turned lines, of many of the perennially worthwhile aspects of life—yes, of eternity." A. M. Jakeman
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 1 '45 240w

MURPHY, ALBERT L. Rockets, dynamators, jet motors. 169p il $2.50 Wetzel
629.13338 Rockets (aeronautics) 44-47046

"A collection of questions and answers on the principles and applications of jet propulsion. The terminology is simple and the treatment is designed for the beginner without technical education. There is a detailed index; nevertheless the manner of presentation hinders concentrated study. The book will be useful mainly to inventors and experimenters who need answers to elementary questions in the subject." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:39 Jl '45

MURPHY, GARDNER, ed. See Society for the psychological study of social issues. Human nature and enduring peace

MURPHY, MRS LOIS (BARCLAY), and LADD, HENRY ANDREWS. Emotional factors in learning. (Sarah Lawrence college. Publications) 404p $3.50 Columbia univ. press
370.15 Learning, Psychology of. Educational psychology A44-5574

"This study, one of a series of reports of work done at Sarah Lawrence College under a five-year grant from the General Education Board, will prove profitable to college administrations, curriculum planners, guidance workers, and teachers who want their students 'to learn in the most effective way.' It is a pioneer work on the problem of suiting courses of study to the psychological needs of students." (School & Society) Index.

Reviewed by A. J. Jones
Crozer Q 22:181 Ap '45 1400w

" 'Emotional Factors in Learning' has a vital message. It will help make teaching as enriching an experience for the teacher as learning should be for the student." Paul Klapper
+ N Y Times p23 F 18 '45 800w
School & Society 60:400 D 16 '44 80w

"Gulliver would not have been surprised to find this book in the library of the Grand Academy at Lagado. Its author-editor employs an academic jargon which would have been the envy of all those benighted 'scientists' of Swift's third book. . . I challenge neither the value of the purpose nor the earnestness and efficacy of the work. Again, I have no quarrel with the case studies which comprise Part II of the book. . . They are written simply and intelligibly, for the most part, and show an insight and sympathy which give them a genuine, if limited, appeal. . . But style is not exclusively responsible for the poverty of the diet." Hiram Haydn
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 28 '45 650w

MURTAUGH, JANET, ed. Wonder tales of giants and dwarfs; il. by Florian. 65p $1 Random house
398 Fairy tales

Contents: Jack the giant-killer; Rumpelstiltskin; The selfish giant; Tom Thumb; Paul Bunyan and his blue ox; Snow White and the seven dwarfs; Seven at a blow; Rose Red; David and Goliath; Thumbelina; The boastful tailor; Jack and the beanstalk.

"The book is large—a proper housing for any giant—and is handsomely designed. Florian's colors are bright without being garish and the big pages and double page spreads give distance and depth to the mountain and forest scenes he does so well." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p20 N 25 '45 90w
Booklist 42:152 Ja 1 '46
Kirkus 13:517 N 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 N 25 '45 110w

MUSGRAVE, GEORGE MCCOY. Competitive debate; rules and strategy. 147p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.
808.5 Debates and debating 45-3989

Study of the principles, rules, and strategy of modern debating, set forth for judges as well as debaters. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 41:319 Jl 1 '45
Wis Lib Bul 41:65 Je '45

MUSSELMAN, MORRIS MCNEIL. Wheels in his head; father and his inventions; il. by Bill Pause. (Whittlesey house publication) 203p $2.50 McGraw

818 45-35217

Father was an inventor with a penchant for wheels, altho one of his earliest attempts was on a wind-proof umbrella. Many of his inventions cost him dearly, but sometimes he actually made a lucky strike. The book recounts in the main his dreams which went wrong, because they were the funniest.

Book Week p11 N 4 '45 140w
Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45
Kirkus 13:332 Ag 1 '45 210w
Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 28:34 N 17 '45 270w

MUTHER, RICHARD. Production-line technique; with a foreword by Erwin Haskell Schell. 320p il $3.50 McGraw

658.5 Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial 44-41866

"This book discusses the advantages and limitations, design and operation and special problems of assembly- or production-lines in manufacturing. It is based largely on field studies and reflects the experiences of more than one hundred industrial establishments. The treatment of the material is designed for college students and plant executives." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 50w

"This volume comprises one of the most interesting and helpful analyses of production methods in manufacturing that this reviewer has ever read. It is the product of extended research in a diversity of manufacturing industries during the prewar and war periods. While most of the illustrations and text references are concerned with war work, production engineers and operations men will find in the book a wealth of material applicable to their peacetime problems. Mr. Muther has succeeded in combining here the best of both the academic and practical viewpoints." G. S. McKee

+ Management R 34:237 Je '45 260w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:12 Ja '45

MYDANS, SHELLEY (SMITH) (MRS CARL M. MYDANS). The open city. 245p $2.50 Doubleday

45-35017

Novelized account of life in the Japanese internment camp in Manila (Santo Tomas camp). The author and her husband, photographers for Life magazine, were imprisoned at Santo Tomas for eight months, before they were repatriated on the Gripsholm.

"The story is a slight one, but as it develops, one is caught in a sharp atmosphere of dread, of impending doom. Betrayal of officers disguised as civilians in a civilian internment camp—betrayal which means certain death—hangs over the closing chapters like a pall. Yet the book is not a gloomy one. There is a matter-of-fact courage lighted by humor throughout, an authentic story of prisoners who now, thank God, are free." R. E. Danielson

Atlantic 175:129 Je '45 210w
Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p4 Mr 4 '45 450w
Booklist 41:197 Mr 1 '45

"Although her novel reads something like the matter-of-fact reporting of a good newspaperwoman, it builds with steady intensity to a rather grim and absorbing climax. It highlights the way in which the latent characteristics of individuals develop under the influence of crowded internment until the finer spirits appear heroic while the weaker sink into degradation." G. C. Bartter

+ Boston Globe p6 F 21 '45 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '45

"A moving tale, cleancut, tensely styled, episodic in handling. . . Good reading."

+ Kirkus 12:539 D 1 '44 150w
Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:284 Mr 10 '45 210w
Reviewed by William Poster
New Repub 112:429 Mr 26 '45 420w

"As a work of fiction 'The Open City' is ingenuous. . . The fact remains that Mrs. Mydans, for all her keen observation, is not a natural story teller. She describes—but the people and the atmosphere she limns do not come alive and proceed under their own power. Her theme is clearly intended to be the psychological effect of internment on those who undergo it; but the result is chiefly a report of its day-to-day routine. A factual journal by Mrs. Mydans would almost certainly have been impressive. Her novel is not, for reasons having to do with the difference between a professional reporter and an amateur novelist." James Fuller

N Y Times p4 F 18 '45 270w

"If 'faction' didn't already mean something else, we could use it to designate a special kind of writing that flourishes in wartime, an oil-and-water mixture of fact and fiction which retains the best features of neither. It would be applicable, for instance, to 'The Open City.' . . All Mrs. Mydans has really done is present a candid-camera picture of some nice people who are understandably upset by being thrown into a prison." Russell Maloney

New Yorker 21:72 F 24 '45 400w
Time 45:96 F 19 '45 440w

"Few stories could be more timely than the one Shelley Smith Mydans has to tell in 'The Open City.' . . Most of the characters in the book are drawn rather sketchily, though not disturbingly so. Perhaps it is their bizarre surroundings that make them seem almost too matter-of-fact. . . The ugliest aspect of the picture is represented not by the Japanese, but by one Lance Diamond, who tries to run a one-bed brothel in the camp, and when he is barred from doing so, takes a vicious revenge on his fellow-prisoners. But despite this one piece of villainy, which shrouds the book's final chapters in gloom, 'The Open City' leaves one with a sense of pride in the steadfastness and courage of the men and women who lived through their three-year ordeal. They weakened, but never despaired." Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p4 F 18 '45 700w
Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

MYERS, HENRY ALONZO. Are men equal? an inquiry into the meaning of American democracy. 188p $2.50 Putnam

323.41 Equality. Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government 45-2082

Six chapters tracing the development of the idea of human equality in America. Contents: The great issue: the justice of equality versus the justice of inequality; Are men equal?; Equality and the American mind (1776-1856); Slavery or equality? (1856-1861); War, progress, and free enterprise (1861-1941); The meaning of American democracy. The author has been leading discussions on American civilization at Cornell university for several years. Index.

"Mr. Myers' contribution does not lie so much in the field of philosophical analysis of the equality of man as in the correlation of the political and literary contributions to American equality. By joining literature to politics, he has enriched the thinking of students both of American politics and American literature." J. B. McConaughy

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:836 Ag '45 450w
Reviewed by F. E. McMahon
Book Week p12 Ap 8 '45 650w
Booklist 41:333 Jl 15 '45

"Dr. Myers gives a thoughtful and informed discussion of a vital topic."

+ Christian Century 62:887 Ag 1 '45 220w
Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 8:544 Je '45 110w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Ethics 55:311 Jl '45 1050w
Foreign Affairs 23:694 Jl '45 10w
J Philos 42:303 My 24 '45 500w

"Professor Myers's book is unfortunately weakened by his addiction to the conventional vocabulary and assumptions of liberal thought. He is troubled, for example, by the libertarian critics of democracy who doubt that equality, which they associate with collectivism, is compatible with liberty; he fails to see that every type of society, good or bad, generates its own kind of freedom." Martin Lebowitz
Nation 160:456 Ap 21 '45 460w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 Jl '45 360w

"[The author's] qualified affirmative answer will comfort those who look for a simple answer to the confused problems of humanity; it will encourage those who feel that we are making progress in the transformation into realities of new ideals of personal freedom; it will hardly satisfy the hard-headed realist who looks with a jaundiced eye at the manifest inequalities in the troubled world as it exists today." R. N. Fuller
Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 16 '45 360w

"My enthusiasm for Mr. Myers's essay has almost but not quite disarmed criticism. It is my feeling that his thesis is in no way aided by his dictum that science has nothing to do with values. . . But my reservations in no manner detract from the wish that this small but important book shall be read by all Americans who now realize their responsibility for clarifying their ideas about the essence of the democratic struggle." E. C. Lindeman
+ — Weekly Book Review p15 Jl 8 '45 550w

MYERS, HENRY ALONZO. Spinoza-Hegel paradox; a study of the choice between traditional idealism and systematic pluralism. 95p $1.75 Cornell univ. press [8s Oxford]

193.5 Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich. Spinoza, Benedictus de 44-2784

"The object of this essay is to point out the nature of the Spinoza-Hegel paradox, the historical puzzle of two philosophers who start with the same premises and come to diametrically opposed conclusions." Pref

"This trenchant little book, rich in ideas, clearly expressed, should be read, at least by all who are interested in Spinoza or Hegel; for it contains original, ingenious, and, I think, illuminating interpretations of these philosophers. The book also presents some theses about metaphysics in general which are important if valid." Charles Hartshorne
+ Ethics 55:71 O '44 1350w
J Philos 42:108 F 15 '45 600w

MYERS, HERBERT J. Simplified time study, for factory supervisors, shop stewards and cost men. 140p il $2.50 Ronald

658.5421 Time study 44-47209

"Clear and simple book on time study written for supervisors, foremen, cost men and others who can get definite results by following the instructions. Illustrations of tables, time study sheets and equipment." Library J

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 40w

"Beginners, learners, and others who need to know the basic principles and mechanics of time study, but who do not have to master its technical refinements, would do well to start their education by reading this volume from cover to cover." C. H. Cox
+ Management R 34:284 Jl '45 850w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:66 O '44

MYKLESTAD, NILS OTTO. Vibration analysis. 303p $3.50 McGraw

620.1123 Vibration 45-99

"A text for courses in vibration analysis, prepared by a Research Associate at the Guggenheim Aeronautical laboratory of the California Institute of Technology. The first half of the book discusses the theory of the subject and the various phases of vibration phenomena. The remaining sections outline methods for the solution of vibration problems, particularly those relating to airplane structures. Each chapter contains several worked examples, practice problems, and review questions." (N Y New Techs Bks) Index.

"Suitable for any engineer interested in vibration, and last chapter will show advanced students and practicing engineers how problems of practical importance can be solved by relatively simple means, many of which were original with the author."
+ Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:67 O '44

N

NAJDER, KASIMIR WLADYSLAW. Machine designers' guide; formulas, mechanics, graphics, strength of materials, examples. 3d ed 281p il $2.75 Machine designers' guide, Lake Orion, Mich.

621.81 Machinery—Design 44-7645

"The third edition of this reference book of formulas for machine designers and mechanical engineers has been enlarged to include twenty-four pages on the principles and mechanics of flight. Other chapters on construction of curves, mechanics, graphics, strength of materials, simple and combined stresses, and plates and cylinders remain the same. Concise explanations and illustrative examples make the book useful to the draftsman with limited engineering experience." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:119 F 1 '45 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:26 Ap '45

NASATIR, ABRAHAM PHINEAS. French activities in California; an archival calendar-guide. 559p $10 Stanford univ. press

979.4 French in California. California—History—Sources A45-2244

"The volume does not disclose merely what the French did; it records what they observed. Their comments are not limited to California, but extend to the Isthmus and the Hawaiian Islands, as well as to Oregon, Texas, Mexico, and power politics in the Pacific generally. Special attention should be directed to the astute analysis of American strength and weaknesses made by the French consul, Jacques Antoine Moerenhout. . . With very few exceptions, the material has been translated into English and is arranged in archival order. It is preceded by a 59-page sketch of French activities in California, which unfortunately is limited to the period prior to statehood, whereas the manuscripts calendared generally extend to 1856, and in the case of the 'Correspondence Politique: Iles Sandwich,' to 1870. Dr. Nasatir relied heavily upon the guides to manuscript materials published by the Carnegie Institution of Washington, but he has supplemented them by giving a fuller description—often a complete quotation—of the items listed, as well as annotations stating where the material has been published." Am Hist R

"Lack of an index constitutes a serious defect, and the reviewer wonders whether microfilm publication might not have been as useful as the excellent, but more expensive, lithograph form employed. Yet thanks instead of criticism are due Dr. Nasatir for his altruism in undertaking the laborious but highly commendable task of making his notes available for others, instead of hoarding them for future exploitation in his own publications." L. A. Harper
+ — Am Hist R 51:175 O '45 320w

NASATIR, A. P.—Continued

"Absence of an index and of, at least, a table of directions for use, make the book more cumbersome than need be, but undoubtedly the cost of production which dictated the use of offset typewriter script required these omissions. The book is by all odds the most vast of such references for California, and in view of the probable state of French archives after the occupation, the volume assumes even greater importance."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:61 S '45 240w

NASH, ANNE. Cabbages and crime. 189p $2 Doubleday

45-6550

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:209 My 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Jl 1 '45 120w

"Diverting spinsters and their manifold troubles bolster up not entirely opaque puzzle. Detecting shrewdly done—but 'atmosphere' carries the story. Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Je 30 '45 30w

"Complete with a bit of love and competent detection. Suitable for hot weather perusal." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 1 '45 80w

NASH, OGDEN. Many long years ago. 333p $2.50 Little

811 45-8449

"Ogden Nash published five volumes of verse before the appearance of I'm a Stranger Here Myself in 1938. They were Hard Lines, Happy Days, Free Wheeling, The Primrose Path, and The Bad Parent's Garden of Verse, and they are all out of print. Now Mr. Nash has taken from those five volumes all the poems which he would like to have available to his steadily growing public and he has added thirty-one poems heretofore unpublished in book form except in the volume of his selected verse, The Face is Familiar. Here then is a volume which, with I'm a Stranger Here Myself and Good Intentions, represents his collected verse as of 1945." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 O 7 '45 180w

Booklist 42:161 Ja 15 '46

Kirkus 13:456 O 1 '45 50w

"Nash is one of the rare people who can make a pun and make you like it. He can write sentimental rhymes about his children and make you like those, too. In short, he can do almost anything in the poet line, and he has been doing it for fifteen years. A hair-spring sense of outrage is Nash's most valuable bit of professional equipment. He can be as angry at marshmallow or whipped cream on a salad as at an absconding banker, and as mad at the absconding banker as at Hitler. He is an urbane and articulate Donald Duck, an Alexander Pope with a hangover, a Rabelais whom you could introduce to your sister." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p4 O 14 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

NAST, ELSA RUTH. A woods story; il. by Masha. [40p] $1.50 Harper

45-5275

Mr Biff, Lucinda's cocker spaniel puppy refused to wear doll clothes. This put Lucinda in a huff and she went to the woods to find another pet, vowing never to play with Mr Biff again. The woods creatures all preferred to stay in the woods and when Lucinda was finally found by her brother and Biff she was happy to return to the best pet and playmate anyone ever had.

"I have seen this book surrounded by little girls lovingly examining its softly colored, touchingly child-like pictures, and I agree with them that this is Masha's best so far." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 10 '45 310w

Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Theatre book of the year, 1944-1945; a record and an interpretation. 342p $3 Knopf

792 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism (43-51298)

The third volume in Mr Nathan's series of collections of reviews of current drama and stage fare in New York. Covers the period from May 18, 1944 to May 2, 1945.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock

Book Week p30 N 11 '45 310w

Booklist 42:72 N 1 '45

"This volume while not being the factual record which is the tremendous value of the Burns Mantle Best Plays, is a remarkably amusing book. There is probably no one writing about the theater who has so lively and entertaining a style as George Jean Nathan's. Some statistics are included but these are not sufficiently full for reference purposes. Nonetheless this book is one which will be extremely attractive to the average theater reader. Recommended for large public libraries and, of course, all theater collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 70:978 O 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Stark Young

New Repub 113:846 D 17 '45 600w

"It is characteristic of Nathan's criticism that when he is on your side about a play he seems wonderful, and when he is attacking a favorite of yours he is obviously a contemptible cad. It is equally clear that if you happen to agree with him in all of his assaults, you know that you should be ashamed of yourself for cowardice. The point, it seems to me, is that, whatever you may think about his manners, he is the most important voice to be heard about a highly important medium of American expression in a vital world period, and that in his latest volume he is in fine form." Richard Watts

+ N Y Times p8 N 25 '45 600w

"As one who marvels at what Mr. Nathan is able to do, I still keep wishing he would write the book which is in him; that he would mislay his scissors-and-paste; that he would trouble to sustain a whole essay. I wish, too, that he would become as interested in the performance he is reviewing as he is in his own performance. Above all, I wish that, though rightfully proud of his head, he would not continue always to be so ashamed of his heart." J. M. Brown

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:24 N 17 '45 2000w

Theatre Arts 30:62 Ja '46 260w

"On the whole his display is a good one, and since we long ago came to recognize the sound judgment which lies behind his critical displays, we can once again accept his year book as a picture of the season as a whole, the good and the bad. And when the fun of reading his reviews has passed, we can mournfully reflect that either the American stage is deficient in talent, or else that the present crop of producers, by and large, do not know their business. We should like to hear Mr. Nathan discuss this very point." W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p15 D 16 '45 450w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Darkening meadows. 35p $1.50 Knopf

811 45-5159

Slim volume of poems largely on wartime subjects, including the ballad "Dunkirk."

Booklist 41:337 Jl 15 '45

"The vision is expansive and beyond personal experience. Even the ballad, 'Dunkirk,' makes a deeper impression on this reviewer than it made on its first publication. Mr. Nathan is both lucid and economical in his writing, yet sacrifices none of the magical quality of true poetry." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 30 '45 270w

"Nathan's verse has a certain pleasant, limpid, lyric, quality."
Kirkus 13:154 Ap 1 '45 70w

"Dunkirk is unfortunately in the tradition of patriotic oversimplification started by Miss Millay's The Murder of Lidice. It is just perceptibly above Miss Millay's monstrosity, but it has the same faults: jingling meter, commonplace or tritely 'poetic' imagery, the substitution of a call upon our emotions during wartime for the poet's obligation to recreate character and situation. Now that the war and its difficult temptations are over, I hope that Nathan will return to the quiet unpretentiousness he still shows himself the master of in the two good poems in The Darkening Meadows." H. C. Webster
— Poetry 67:170 D '45 360w

"Sensitive, tender and strong, these poems are evidence once more of the human spirit at its most eloquent best, and we are grateful." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4 Je 11 '45 280w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p16 S 23 '45 180w

NATIONAL encyclopedia, editor in chief, Henry Suzzalo; editorial director, William W. Beardsley. 10v il pl maps tan fabrikoid $59; red fabrikoid $64 c1932-44 Collier

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 44-21637

"Examination of the 1944 edition of the National Encyclopedia indicates that the review in Subscription Books Bulletin for October 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939] is still applicable in most respects. The population figures for 1940 have been added, as have dates of death for biographees who have died since 1932, but except for these revision is negligible. World War II is covered only by a few lines added to articles about each of the larger nations involved. Wendell L. Willkie, Thomas E. Dewey and Harry S. Truman, are among the many important names omitted. Bibliographies appended to articles on the first 100 pages in volume 1 show no later date than 1931. Henry Suzzalo's name still appears on the title page as editor-in-chief although he died in 1933." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"Although the National Encyclopedia was given a limited recommendation in the 1939 review, much of the information is now so out of date as to be misleading. For this reason the 1944 edition is not recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 16:8 Ja '45 320w

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL. Committee on a textbook of military psychology. Psychology for the armed services; prepared with the collaboration of many specialists; ed. by Edwin G. Boring. 533p il $3 Infantry journal

150.13355 Psychology, Applied. War—Psychological aspects. Psychological warfare 45-6821

"Not until 1943 was any book written which endeavored to outline in ordinary language what the whole body of psychological knowledge held for the military man. This book was Psychology for the Fighting Man, of which several hundred thousand copies have been used in the Armed Services. . . The present book arose from the first book, which contained the minimum of technical explanation. Psychology for the Armed Services is intended as a textbook written on the college level, but also as a book in which the military and naval applications of psychological principles and the basic principles themselves are more fully developed than in the earlier work. It was believed that a single book might be equally useful as a textbook and handbook of psychology for general use by members of the Armed Services, not simply for instruction but also for individual reading and reference." Pref

---

"The book is a valuable text for wartime and peacetime use. It constitutes a direct application of the laws of psychology to the problems of training for war. Yet much of it applies equally to peace time, in gauging the efforts made to blind the public to the results of war or to plans for war. The content is important to all who seek to be intelligent and discriminating in their evaluation of news and trends." Harold Fields
+ Sat R of Lit 28:21 S 15 '45 1250w

"This book will undoubtedly have an appeal because it was prepared by a group of men who are recognized in the field, it has a timely title, and it makes applications to a number of problems usually omitted in a general textbook. The teacher, however, of a first course in psychology is unlikely to find his needs met by the materials in this book. There is little room for disagreement with the editor on the facts selected to support his point of view. The average reader, however, is likely to encounter considerable difficulty in whipping up sufficient interest to give the sustained effort required to reach the end of the book." C. D. Flory
+ — School R 53:560 N '45 950w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 S '45 120w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:47 D '45 240w

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL. Committee on chemical utilization of coal. Chemistry of coal utilization; prepared by the Committee, H. H. Lowry, chairman. 2v il $20 Wiley

662.6 Coal. Coal tar products 45-5498

"A collection of forty papers prepared by thirty-five specialists in the field, several of whom are on the staffs of Koppers Company, Mellon Institute, U. S. Bureau of Mines, and the Carnegie Institute of Technology. The material, based on a review of the literature of the subject through 1939, except for a few references to 1942 and 1943 publications, deals with the origin, classification, and physical properties of coals, and the chemistry of coal carbonization, combustion, gasification and hydrogenation. In addition to separate author and subject indexes, each volume contains a list of the works and monographs referred to in the text." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"The need for a good reference text on coal technology had been apparent for many years, and this book satisfies that need to a large extent. . . The quality of the 39 chapters of the book varies greatly. Thus some chapters are deficient in critical discussion, being little more than a good bibliography and compilation of existing data. Some chapters are of excellent critical quality but too condensed and meager in presentation of detailed data. A few chapters are poorly written and indicate that the author had not digested the material presented. Despite these deficiencies, which are inherent in a compilation written by many authors, this book will serve as an inspiring source of ideas, and as an excellent factual reference book for scientists and engineers interested in coal technology." H. H. Storch
+ — Chem & Eng N 23:1475 Ag 25 '45 400w

"The price is so reasonable that the work can be included in a personal library, and this is the place where a book is of the greatest value." George Riethof
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:263 D '45 270w
Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 10w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:22 Ap '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:54 S '45 500w

NEARING, SCOTT. Democracy is not enough. 153p $2; pa $1 Island workshop

321.8 Democracy 45-2478

"Relatively simple explanation of the struggle between privileged groups and democracy, historically and currently, and a brief for extending democracy into economic relationships

NEARING, SCOTT—Continued
and to the world community. Essentially idealistic, even in the outline of individual conduct termed democratic discipline." Booklist

"'Democracy Is Not Enough' is a curious book, in places filled with spleen, in others visionary; but sound in many of its central arguments." Sterling North
+ — Book Week p2 F 11 '45 550w
Booklist 41:248 My 1 '45

NEHRU, KRISHNA. See Hutheesing, K. N.

NEILL, THOMAS PATRICK. Weapons for peace. 234p $2.50 Bruce pub.

261 Peace. Church and state. World politics 45-5565

"A young Catholic professor of history here expounds the fundamental Catholic principles upon which he believes world peace can be achieved and maintained. He insists, furthermore, that the Catholic citizen, by tradition, should be above race and class, and should have a special contribution to make in establishing permanent peace. The more important pronouncements of Pope Pius XI and Pope Pius XII on domestic and international peace are quoted and commented upon throughout the book, and are thus made easily available to the general reader." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The organization of material throughout the book is satisfactory. Condensation is effected without loss of essentials. The language is always lucid. As to content, the continuous flow of Catholic social thought proves most refreshing. . . Perhaps the highest praise we can offer the author is our regret that the scope of his book is not more extensive." James Travis
+ Cath World 161:516 S '45 450w

"The warping of history, and by one who is not an ignorant man, in an effort to capitalize men's fear of losing the hoped for peace and freedom for the aggrandizement of the Roman Catholic Church is nothing but narrow sectarianism. War profiteering for sectarian advantage, whether by Catholic or Protestant, is as despicable as any other kind."
— Christian Century 62:1064 S 19 '45 280w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:14 S '45 120w

NELSON, GEORGE, and WRIGHT, HENRY NICCOLLS. Tomorrow's house; how to plan your post-war home now. 214p il $3 Simon & Schuster

728 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 45-9107

How to plan a new home, or remodel an old one to conform with modern ideas of living and to take advantage of new materials, equipment, and appliances. Partial contents: How to plan a living-room; Where shall we eat?; Heating; Bathrooms are out of date; Sleeping; Organized storage; Sound conditioning; Windows; Solar heating. Many illustrations including both photographs and plans and diagrams.

Book Week p8 D 23 '45 140w
Booklist 42:144 Ja 1 '46
Kirkus 13:329 Ag 1 '45 150w

"Excellent guide to home building."
+ Library J 70:1091 N 15 '45 70w

"'Tomorrow's House' is a good deal more than a work of design criticism, happy though it may be in that department. It is not a 'Complete Guide for the Home Builder,' however, as the jacket says, suggesting one of those anthologies of Dream Houses or an almanac of products and prices. Rather, this book introduces publicly a new kind of thinking about houses." Alfred Butterfield
+ N Y Times p7 N 4 '45 750w

"What tomorrow's house will cost and what it will look like are two different matters. The authors frankly admit that if you aren't fairly well heeled you'd better make the most of what is available and not sit down and dash off a hasty note to Frank Lloyd Wright or his disciples. And the looks of tomorrow's house will make a number of modern living converts swallow hard. Apparently in the authors' tomorrow if you aren't Wright you'll be wrong. And besides that there is something vaguely unnatural and sterile about the beautiful functional rooms the photographs show." R. F. H.
Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 600w

NELSON, MELVIN FREDERICK. Korea and the old orders in eastern Asia. 326p $3.75 La. state univ. press

327.519 Korea—Foreign relations. East (Far East) 45-5102

"A thorough study of Korea's international status since the country's earliest recorded history elucidates the Chinese system of a family of nations, later copied by the Japanese, that baffled Western nations and led to a misinterpretation of Korea's position. Documented, scholarly; valuable for understanding the background of Far Eastern affairs." Booklist

"Mr. Nelson breaks new ground admirably in this well-documented comprehensive study of Korea's international position in the 'old orders in Eastern Asia.' The book, which is based upon the author's dissertation submitted at Duke University in 1939, contains an excellent bibliography of Western sources and of translations of pertinent Chinese sources used by the author." G. M. McCune
+ Am Hist R 51:122 O '45 800w

"A classic which must become part of the equipment of all students of Far Eastern history, and, indeed, of all who would comprehend the fundamentals of world relationships, present and future." H. F. MacNair
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:832 Ag '45 420w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore
Ann Am Acad 242:171 N '45 400w
Booklist 41:317 Jl 1 '45

"This is a remarkable book. It is the first recent American study to put Korea where it belongs in its importance to the Far Eastern scheme of things." W. F. Sands
+ Commonweal 43:340 Ja 11 '46 800w

"A very useful contribution to Far Eastern diplomatic history." W. E. Diez
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 15 '45 310w

"Lieutenant Nelson presents his facts with authoritative clearness, leaving it to history and the reader to add the proper deductions. However, he does serve the very useful role of tutor in leading the layman through the obscurity of Korea's position, first vis-a-vis China, and then vis-a-vis the world." John Goette
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 S 8 '45 1350w
Social Studies 36:284 O '45 30w

NELSON, RALPH WALDO. Soldier, you're it! 132p $1.50; pa $1 Assn. press

940.53182 World war, 1939-1945—Religious aspects 45-6509

A series of chapters on social and religious problems, addressed to the young American soldier. The author is Professor of Philosophy and the Philosophy of Jesus, Phillips university, Enid, Oklahoma.

Christian Century 62:910 Ag 8 '45 70w

Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss
Churchman 159:16 S 15 '45 120w

NEUMANN, ALFRED. Six of them; tr. from the German by Anatol Murad. 327p $2.75 Macmillan

45-6201

Based on the student riots against the Nazi regime in Munich in 1943. In story form it describes the lives and trials of four "Aryan" students, their professor and his wife, who were all responsible in some way for the printing and passing of so-called subversive pamphlets.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p7 Ag 12 '45 600w

Booklist 42:20 S '45

Kirkus 13:228 Je 1 '45 230w

"Excellently written, for the mature reader. Highly recommended." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 80w

"As a novel it has many defects, but as a piece of earnest and exceedingly well-informed writing it holds the attention throughout by its comprehension and delineation of the human beings involved." J. D. Beresford
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 23 '45 240w

"Despite rhetoric and sentimentality, this is an honest and moving book." H. C. Hatfield
+ — New Repub 113:356 S 17 '45 420w

"Somewhat topheavy with moral ultimates—the book is about one part action to two parts of explanation—'Six of Them' is nevertheless filled with a fresh clairvoyance of real people facing seemingly endless terror." Kenneth Fearing
N Y Times p24 Jl 29 '45 500w

"Mr. Neumann writes competently and sometimes movingly, but his book, one of a long line of works by refugee writers stressing the idealism of the true German (as opposed to Nazi) character, raises the question of whether a novelist who has lived in California for years is qualified to report on virtue among his compatriots. Reliability aside, isn't the whole theme getting worn rather threadbare as a subject for fiction?"
— New Yorker 21:58 Jl 21 '45 150w

"A craftsman of great experience and skill, Mr. Neumann masterfully combines economy in the use of his artistic means with richness of imagination and narrative power. . . Many passages of this sincere and passionate novel will long be remembered by its readers, especially the weird picture of the voluntary stupor of Christopher Sauer; the fine character sketch of the 'destroyed destroyer of life,' member of the People's Court, Baron Freyberg; and the moving story of the married love of Karl von Hennings and Dora." F. C. Weiskopf
+ Sat R of Lit 28:19 Jl 28 '45 600w

"The whole book is clever, very clever indeed, but truth is still stranger than fiction; at the present moment it is facts which we need from the various war-time underground movements in Europe, rather than the well-intentioned but distorted reflections of fiction." John Hampson
Spec 175:472 N 16 '45 270w

"It is to the story of Christopher Sauer that Mr Neumann brings originality and a touch of sheer daring. The unusual figure of Christopher carries a veil of suspicion throughout the book until his loyalties are revealed in the final telling pages. This is done in a manner so penetrating that the character remains unforgetable after the book is closed." Margaret Cobb
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 5 '45 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p557 N 24 '45 240w

"The six lives are both credible and intensely moving. Bright shafts of reason in the Nazi night, they show up the grotesque crooks and cranks and fools around them. If this book, 'Six of Them,' could be filmed for Germany it might help to melt the frozen youth and quicken the hearts that a century of militarism has stilled." Virgilia Sapieha
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 29 '45 950w

NEUMANN, DAISY. Now that April's there. 244p $2.50 Lippincott
45-1225

Two English children, whose father was an Oxford don, spent three years in America, in the family of a Harvard professor. When they went home Wincy, fifteen, and Angus, nine, were bewildered and lost, and their parents were no less so. Gradually as time went on the children and their parents found a common meeting ground, and England welcomed some American changes.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p4 Ap 22 '45 390w

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45

"The line between character and caricature is occasionally only a matter of syllables for Miss Neumann and England, as we remember it, had compensations for the restrictions which she sets down as only irritating foibles. It's a deftly told story for all that and the puzzle fits together very neatly with no extra pieces." E. W. W.
+ — Boston Globe p17 Ap 25 '45 170w

"It is a heart-warming little book, though it cannot make great claims as literature. Some of its details are irritating. The American notion of applying psychology, which the children heard discussed by their Harvard professor foster-father, to careless childhood habits, as the author presents it, will probably meet with an impatient 'Nonsense!' from British readers. On the whole, however, the exchange of ideas was beneficial, and the children's new and healthy disregard for outworn, impractical customs and traditions wrought a remarkable change in their father, who was an Oxford don, and their gentle, unadventurous mother." Pearl Strachan
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 12 '45 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

Kirkus 13:42 F 1 '45 150w

"Told with humor and humanness. Author has written juveniles but this will be popular with the grown-ups. Recommended." E. H. Crowell
+ Library J 70:306 Ap 1 '45 70w

"'Now That April's There' does a fair and very amusing job of ticking off the idiosyncrasies of both English and Americans." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 15 '45 270w

"Let's hope that this pallid little novel will not discourage an author with a sharper wit than Miss Neumann's from reporting on the same subject."
— New Yorker 21:82 Ap 28 '45 130w

School & Society 61:239 Ap 14 '45 30w

Reviewed by E. Y. Mohler
Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 480w

Reviewed by Diana Forbes-Robertson
Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 29 '45 350w

Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

NEUMANN, FRANZ LEOPOLD. Behemoth; the structure and practice of national socialism, 1933-1944. new enl ed 649p $5 Oxford

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Politics and government 44-53441

"The first edition of this important book was published in 1942 [Book Review Digest, 1942]. . . Owing to war conditions, the second edition consists of a reprint of the first and a new Appendix (pp. 519-634), in which the author tries to bring his exposé up to date and to fill certain omissions of the first edition." Am Pol Sci R

"The author speaks from intimate knowledge of pre-Hitlerite Germany, is by profession a lawyer, and his whole book is exclusively based on National Socialist official sources, materials, and literature. His book holds, therefore, an eminent place in the mass literature on this subject; the facts he gives not only present the most detailed analysis of National Socialism, but are undistorted, true, complete, and reliable. But his interpretation of these facts is open to the most serious doubt and criticism. It is not only that he says little about the reasons why National Socialism rose to power—and this is indispensable to a full understanding—but he suffers from a double prejudice: an over-rationalistic and a Marxist prejudice." J. L. Kunz
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:375 Ap '45 950w

Booklist 41:155 Ja 15 '45

NEUMANN, JOHN VON. See Von Neumann, J.

NEUMANN, ROBERT. The inquest. 255p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Hutchinson]
45-4304

A young Continental refugee is found dead in a cheap London lodging house, after an evening spent with an aging, once-famous English writer. Has the girl died a natural death, or committed suicide? The writer attempts to find out, and in so doing unearths the secrets of the girl's tragic, passionate past.

Reviewed by Taylor Caldwell
Book Week p12 Je 10 '45 270w

Kirkus 13:143 Ap 1 '45 170w

"Not for the squeamish, even if they could make head or tail of the ejaculatory, turgid style." M. H. McElfresh
— Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 70w

"The Inquest is its Austrian author's first novel to be written in English. Vocabulary is remarkable; the style, which sometimes apes James Joyce, takes risks in proposing to be light, and the narrator, supposedly English, is veritably Continental. . . This is the refugee's book of lamentations, but it isn't a plain nor an edifying tale." Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 O 27 '44 100w

Reviewed by George Mayberry
New Repub 112:878 Je 25 '45 420w

"A harsh and excellent book, a study of the effects of political fanaticism on passionate private lives. . . This is an ugly and witty book but it is also salutary. . . I gather this is Mr. Neumann's second novel in English. Would it be impertinent to remind so skilful a writer that even the English sentence, that lithest of literary instruments, will crack under a cartload of adjectives? Or that though it is indeed effective to omit all commas, it gives a certain flexibility to use one now or then?" James Pope-Hennessy
New Statesman & Nation 28:306 N 4 '44 600w

"Mr. Neumann's story would be hard enough to grasp as a straight narrative. The novelist has told it in second-hand flashbacks, in an elliptical, tortured prose that only confuses the reader further, even as it adds to the surrounding gloom. Occasionally, to be sure, the page is suffused with an evil iridescence all its own. At such moments the style and subject-matter blend significantly to produce an effect that even Joyce could envy. For the most part, Mr. Neumann seems to be shadow-boxing with fate, throwing his punches from the floor—and throwing them wild." William Du Bois
N Y Times p20 Je 17 '45 480w

"Here is what at first appears to be a very superior mystery story, but little by little there emerges, from under a tight web of the most expert construction, the whole horror of Nazism, caught like a hideous insect for our inspection. The novel reveals no more than what intelligent people already know about the contemporary international tangle, but Mr. Neumann presents the spectacle with such originality and insight that the effect is both exciting and profoundly disturbing. The newly acquired English of this brilliant Austrian author has an individuality that gives his prose an added sharpness."
+ New Yorker 21:69 Je 16 '45 160w

"Mr. Neumann's extraordinary skill in exploring odd corners of the human heart and soul, his masterful talent for impersonation of strange characters, and his artistic perfection in all matters of literary technique come to full play in his new novel which he so significantly calls 'The Inquest.' " F. C. Weiskopf
+ Sat R of Lit 28:41 Je 23 '45 550w

"Mr Neumann has written this novel brilliantly, for it is highly exciting not because of incident, but because of idea. He has an idiom which gives the pressed and fear-driven minds of his character. He has invented a style for expressing chaos that the academics of Joyce and the experiments of Gertrude Stein merely foreshadow. Not only has he invented this last form, but he has found a use for it, suitable to it, in the revolt, the crisis, and the despair of a contemporary European who hopes to better the lot of people through the agencies of government." Lee Varley
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 500w

"An Austrian writer, most of whose work before the war had appeared here in translation, Robert Neumann now makes a second and larger offering of a novel written in English. His colloquial ease is quite remarkable in the circumstances, even if it still betrays a hint of insecurity now and then. And the theme he has chosen on this occasion, after the uncertain voyage of English discovery in the earlier volume, has at least the merit of an intelligible importance, since the frustrations of exile, after all, represent a fair share of the world's experience in our time. Whether, however, Mr. Neumann was wise to adopt so restless, oracular, and ejaculatory a style of narrative, which is always a little inclined towards cheap cynicism, is very doubtful. The plain truth is that it is an extremely exhausting style and an uninteresting one."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p497 O 14 '44 450w

Reviewed by Iris Barry
Weekly Book Review p3 Je 10 '45 650w

NEVINSON, HENRY WOODD. Visions and memories; collected and arranged by Evelyn Sharp. 199p $3 (10s 6d) Oxford
828 A45-4897

"By collecting and arranging these odds and ends of her husband's prose and verse the editor of this book has contrived to present a very lively and comprehensive portrait of a remarkable personality; and in two pages of introduction his old friend Professor Gilbert Murray sets out sharply, yet justly, the many opposed or, indeed, contradictory qualities that made up the romantic realist, the war-haunting pacifist, the deeply religious rationalist, the privilege-hating aristocrat, Henry Nevinson. Possibly the fundamental contradiction was that between the mind of the Victorian Oxford man, a scholar and philosopher, and the burning zeal of the sworn knight." Times [London] Lit Sup

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 10 '45 360w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
New Statesman & Nation 29:96 F 10 '45 600w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p16 D 9 '45 230w

"Those who knew Nevinson's work before will welcome this last contact with a generous, companionable mind: those to whom he was a stranger may, seeing how rewarding it is to do so, receive fresh inspiration to follow courage and wisdom, all intellectual and physical adventure, and to become bolder the older they grow." Bonamy Dobrée
+ Spec 174:37 Ja 12 '45 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 17 '45 600w

"Though the majority of the uncollected or unpublished pieces gathered in this volume were written during the last ten years, some go back to the first decade of the century. There is no perceptible difference in Nevinson's writing over the span of thirty years. He was a man who knew what he thought and said it forthrightly at all periods of his life. His poems are crystalline in their clearness and sharp definition. A fragment of verse begun just before his last illness ends with the line 'Already weighted with the autumn's yield.' It was so that Nevinson left the world at the age of eighty-five. This book contains the last gleanings from an abundant harvest." G. F. Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 21 '45 750w

NEW standard encyclopedia of universal knowledge; prepared under the editorial direction of Frank H. Vizetelly. newly rev regular edition: v 1, 10c (mailing cost); v2-25, 89c each (plus 11c per volume handling cost) deluxe edition: v 1, 10c (mailing cost); v2-25, $1.39 each (plus 11c per volume handling cost) Unicorn press, 33 W 42d St, N.Y.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"The 1944 edition of the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia bears the same foreword as the original 1931 edition [Book Review Digest, 1934] with the omission of one paragraph and the addition of the statement that the most recent editorial revisions have been done under the direction of William Hendelson. . . The present publishers distribute volumes in this set at the rate of one each week. According to their advertisements, the 'work of revising the Funk & Wagnalls therefore can, and DOES go on all year around, every year, keeping exact pace with each volume as it goes to press!' In preparing this review the Committee did not have access to the 1935 edition for comparison. However, the 1944 edition has been checked for revision against the 1931 and the 1942-43 editions. . . In checking for revision, it was found that since the 1931 edition was published, approximately 270 new pages have been inserted. . . In the biographical entries, death dates are entered fairly consistently through 1942, with a few later." Subscription Bks Bul

"Bibliographies seem to be rather unevenly revised. . . Cross references are plentiful, especially those referring from personal names, botanical terms, others of the natural sciences and variations in spelling and in terminology. Guide words, used at the top of each page, are in some cases inaccurate. Those used for pages devoted to the article on women in industry may be cited as an example. . . The print and paper are good with comparatively few indistinct pages. . . The Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia of Universal Knowledge, 1944 edition, is recommended for the purpose for which it is intended, that is, as a brief reference set, especially for home use."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:5 Ja '45 1150w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Art in progress; a survey prepared for the fifteenth anniversary of the Museum. 255p il 4col pl $3.75 Museum of modern art

708.147 Art—Exhibitions 44-6408

This volume celebrates the fifteenth anniversary of the Museum of modern art. It is an illustrated "survey of all the Museum's activities, nationwide as well as metropolitan, in the field of films, dance and theatre, photography, industrial design, prints and posters, as well as architecture, painting and sculpture. Divided into separate sections for each of the Museum departments prefaced by brief forewords." (Publisher's note) Index of artists.

Booklist 41:166 F 1 '45

Reviewed by G. H. Hamilton

Yale R n s 34:351 winter '45 1700w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Georges Rouault; paintings and prints, [edited] by James Thrall Soby. 132p $3 Museum of modern art

759.4 Rouault. Georges. Paintings, French 45-4032

"A large collection of prints and paintings arranged to show the development of this French artist who is best known for his religious art. Short introductory chapter on his work, an essay on the technique of his prints by Carl O. Schniewind, and a few notes written by the artist. A catalog of the exhibition at the Museum of modern art, and bibliographies, are appended. Illustrations are black and white, with three full-page color prints." Booklist

Booklist 42:9 S '45

"Mr. Soby's introduction to the catalogue is remarkably perceptive, and his description of Rouault as 'an artist with a limited vision of unlimited ferocity' is just."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p428 S 8 '45 360w

"The skillful explanation of Rouault's development by Mr. Soby, who organized the exhibition, provides the best available key in English to understanding the work of an artist who has proved that the great tradition of religious art is still alive."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:2 Je '45 280w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Power in the Pacific; comp. by Edward Steichen. 144p $2; pa $1 U.S. camera

940.542 World war, 1939—Pacific ocean. World war, 1939—Pictorial works 45-5824

"A pictorial record of navy combat operations on land, sea and in the sky. Official U.S. navy, Marine corps and Coast guard photographs exhibited at the Museum of modern art, New York." Subtitle

Booklist 41:338 Jl 15 '45

"The pictures in this collection are the same ones which were exhibited earlier this year at the Museum of Modern Art. They are a service to a public which is striving to comprehend the Pacific war. The one regret is that the names of the men who took these pictures could not be included. Many gave their lives in assembling the great store from which these outstanding examples were culled." Barrett McGurn

+ N Y Times p4 Je 24 '45 550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:2 S '45 160w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 29 '45 220w

NEW YORK TIMES. The newspaper, its making and its meaning; by members of the staff of the New York times; with an introd. by Dr. John E. Wade [ed. by Robert E. Garst]. 207p $2 Scribner

070.4 Journalism. New York Times 45-9398

"The story of the organization and publication of The Times, recounted by members of its staff. They tell you how the news is gathered and how it is presented; and, finally, the president and publisher, Mr. Arthur Hays Sulzberger, discourses upon 'The newspaper's role in the community.' These chapters were prepared as lectures, and were delivered in the spring months of this year at Times Hall, in New York City, to a group of teachers, who then were organized into discussion 'workshops.'" N Y Times

"The book under review is a good book because its subject is a newspaper itself so good that it can sturdily stand up under examination." Sir Willmott Lewis

+ N Y Times p5 O 21 '45 1250w

"Mr. Sulzberger's boys and girls know their business, and while they speak their pieces simply, they're never elementary."

+ New Yorker 21:107 N 3 '45 80w

"Considering the assembled lectures and the discussion report as a book now available to anybody, it is an authentic contribution to public knowledge about newspapering with the limitations of narrow focusing." W. W. Waymack

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 25 '45 1000w

NEWCOMB, COVELLE (MRS ADDISON BURBANK). Larger than the sky; a story of James Cardinal Gibbons; il. by Addison Burbank. 216p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Gibbons, James, cardinal—Juvenile literature 45-10378

Fictionized account of the life of James Gibbons, the first American to be elevated to the office of cardinal. For non-Catholics as well as Catholics. Junior and senior high school.

Booklist 42:152 Ja 1 '46

"Covelle Newcomb is doing a fine job in making great Catholic figures come alive for young Catholics of today. She has the peculiar gift of selecting and arranging facts in so entertaining and apparently effortless a manner that the painstaking research which underlies the writing never intrudes upon the story." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 162:377 Ja '46 300w

"Beloved, honored and respected, this great American cleric and liberal is here well portrayed and sympathetically motivated. The problems of his day,—post-Civil War reconstruction, free vs. parochial education, Catholic participation in Labor Unionism, class schisms within the hierarchy of the Church [are] all skillfully woven into his background without the limitations of partisanship."

NEWCOMB, COVELLE—Continued

+ Kirkus 13:425 S 15 '45 140w

NEWCOMB, ELLSWORTH. Brave nurse; true stories of heroism. 176p il $2 Appleton-Century

940.5475 World war, 1939-1945—Medical and sanitary affairs. Nurses and nursing—Juvenile literature 45-6227

True stories of bravery displayed by American nurses under shell fire and in other types of danger in World war II, and in caring for the handicapped after the war. There is one chapter on Heroic nurses of other lands. A vocational book for older girls. Illustrated with photographs.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p15 S 16 '45 220w

Booklist 42:23 S '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"Older girls endowed with courage, endurance, a warm heart and a sense of humor might be inspired by such a book to enter a profession offering such tremendous opportunities for service to human beings. A dozen good photographs show nurses at work in their varied duties, at sea and ashore." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:355 S '45 100w

Kirkus 13:225 My 15 '45 110w

"A career book of the highest type." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 70:753 S 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p21 Ag 19 '45 130w

"Real names are given here and the Silver Star, or some other decoration that the heroine received, is always noted. But, like the old epics, it is the need rather than the individual that stands out. People and incidents impress themselves more strongly on the reader when he reaches the section called 'Nurses of Other Lands.' " B. W. Shaffer

Sat R of Lit 28:33 S 8 '45 320w

Weekly Book Review p31 S 23 '45 230w

NEWMAN, BERNARD. Balkan background. 354p il maps $2.50 Macmillan [15s Hale, R]

914.96 Balkan states. Eastern question (Balkan) 44-47890

"Walking, bicycling through the Balkans have given [the author] intimate acquaintance with the peasants, largest share of Balkan population. Faces facts squarely, states problems clearly, gives historical background to explain qualities of peoples of different countries. Treats each country separately, in clear, readable style, then discusses possibility of federation (following complete German defeat) and shows need of British, Russian and American agreement and collaboration, with public statement of practical principles for Balkans akin to Wilson's Fourteen Points. Concludes with his own Balkan Charter, offered as basis for discussion." Library J

"Any acceptable volume on this topic is welcome, and Newman's book is a readable addition to the rapidly growing library in this field. Yet, as a contribution the publication is interesting but undistinguished. It is lacking in thoroughness and wanting in that judicious quality so essential to a correct presentation of issues involved." J. S. Roucek

— + Ann Am Acad 238:209 Mr '45 500w

"Although 'Balkan Background' was written before the Balkans were liberated, it is one of the most timely books to come off the presses. From it you will get a sound understanding of the present Greek 'trouble' and a knowledge of why politicians are so distrusted throughout the peninsula. . . To aid in the understanding of this basic problem Newman set out to provide 'the minimum of what we ought to know about the Balkans if we are to form an opinion.' He has done an excellent job. Good maps and an index add to the value of the book." Ernest von Hartz

+ Book Week p3 Ja 21 '45 650w

Booklist 41:151 Ja 15 '45

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 161:87 Ap '45 300w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 62:336 Mr 14 '45 850w

"In a pleasant style, intermixed with many a personal anecdote, the author unfolds the history of the various Balkan nations with particular emphasis on the years since 1912. He does a neat job of disentangling the welter of political, racial, and social problems." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 3 '45 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

" 'Balkan Background' is primarily a study motivated by the love of oppressed peoples and strongly advocating 'equal opportunity for nations,' particularly for the long-exploited Balkan nations. Mr. Newman's primary contribution here is that he has posed the Balkan problem with such human sympathy. Economics does not seem to be his forte, nor does agronomy. But he is good at posing political problems. His specialty has been to get around and see the people who live in territories which are the source of sharp dispute between two or more nations. That was what made his recent book about the boundary problems of the peace so good. And that is why his current volume includes so much pertinent information which cannot be found in other and more theoretical books."

+ Commonweal 41:377 Ja 26 '45 1000w

"Let me say first that the fact that Bernard Newman is an English lecturer is so visible in his new book that at times one is tempted to let the veneer hide the basic information that he is conveying and decide that it is a simple travelogue. When he mentions the characteristics of people and their modes of livelihood he becomes the lecturer, and almost every page is studied with exclamation marks to emphasize his statements, so that the reader does not have to exert himself to catch the salient points, but instead may be irritated by the recurrence. Aside from this, however, Balkan Background is a very definite contribution to the study of essential current affairs." Roy Hillbrook

+ — Current Hist 8:151 F '45 1500w

Foreign Affairs 23:519 Ap '45 20w

Kirkus 12:476 O 15 '44 120w

"Author has highly qualified background. . . Carefully selected reading list and maps increase usefulness of book." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 69:999 N 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 160:254 Mr 3 '45 490w

"Mr. Newman's book is packed with solid information and, highly important in a work of this nature, he has no axe to grind. Here the reader will find as full a description of the life and people of half a dozen key countries as it is possible to give on a limited canvas. It is a minor defect of the book that its writing shows signs of haste. Mr. Newman often repeats himself sometimes on the same page. Apart from this, 'Balkan Background' is a highly commendable book." Emil Lengyel

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 18 '45 600w

"Mr. Newman knows his subject and writes literate prose, but those who have taken the trouble to give the Balkans the attention they deserve will probably find his book fairly elementary."

New Yorker 20:80 Ja 13 '45 90w

"Mr. Newman's ideas may seem to be rather unrealistic, and his interest in any solution 'too British,' but neither the professional nor the superficially interested student of world politics can afford to overlook this timely and well-written book." H. B. Kranz

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:28 Ja 27 '45 950w

Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p493 O 14 '44 1050w

"This volume shows Mr. Newman to be a realistic idealist. If enough people here and in Britain read his book, there is a chance that public opinion may force on the peacemakers some of the down-to-earth solutions which he knows are essential, if peace is ever to return to the Balkans, to Europe, to the world." Robert St. John

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 21 '45 1200w

NEWMAN, QUINCY BOGARDUS. Marine electric power. 3d ed 244p $2.50 Simmons-Boardman

623.87 Ship propulsion. Electric engineering 45-5024

"A brief and simplified explanation of the basic principles of electrical machines, particularly as applied to those used on board ship. Written in an informal style and intended for the reader not acquainted with advanced mathematics, it includes material on magnetic current, generators, induction motors, multiple poles, switches, voltage reaction, and construction of electrical machinery. In this edition the chapter on care and repair has been enlarged." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index. For earlier editions see Book Review Digest, 1937, 1943.

"Informal style and well adapted to home study."

+ Library J 70:638 Jl '45 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:23 Ap '45

NEWMAN, ROBERT HOWARD. Identity unknown. 92p $1 Ziff-Davis 45-4852

"A wounded American soldier regains consciousness in an Army hospital in Italy without being able to remember his name (his identification tag has been shot off) or anything of his past. Four dog tags were found at the scene of the engagement in which he was wounded, and when he is returned to the United States, he makes a pilgrimage to the families of the soldiers whose names are on these tags, in the hope that one of the men will turn out to be himself." New Yorker

"This potentially moving theme of a man searching for his past has been made into a sticky little confection which Hollywood has already claimed as its own."

— New Yorker 21:68 Ag 4 '45 130w

"Anyone who recently saw a movie entitled 'Identity Unknown' starring Richard Arlene and Cheryl Walker, has no need to read the novel version of this scenario. For those who missed the movie, the experience can wait. There is a war being fought, involving real men. While Mr Newman has a worthy idea to set forth, his symbolism is vacuous in a world of flesh and blood." Margaret Cobb

— + Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 180w

"Johnny's strange pilgrimage frequently is effectively described by Mr. Newman, but somehow the book fails to fulfill the promise of the author's original idea. One or two of Johnny's adventures seem a little too contrived to ring true and at the end one is likely to feel disappointment—not because 'Identity Unknown' isn't a good story, but because it wasn't a better one." Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 15 '45 400w

NEWSWEEK (periodical). Generals and the admirals. See Generals and the admirals

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Where are we in religion? spiritual studies. 82p $1.50 Macmillan

204 Christianity 45-2158

"Dr. Newton discusses the central questions about religion—what it is, why we need it, what it can do for us, and how the resources of Christianity become available for the salvation of men and the betterment of the world. In spite of all adverse evidence in the present troubled time, he has the optimism of an abiding faith." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 62:436 Ap 4 '45 70w

"Dr. Newton carries on the tradition of the unforgettable Robert Norwood, the ministry of the prophet-poet. He writes with beauty and power against the background of wide literary familiarity. . . This little manual is a rare treat for lovers both of religion and literature." S. L. Riddle

+ Churchman 159:14 Mr 15 '45 150w

Kirkus 13:62 F 1 '45 120w

"Dr. Newton is not scornful of maps—there is sound theology in his book. But religion, as the immediate life of the spirit, is his theme. Here is the soul of man at work in relation with God and his fellowmen. Here is what happens when the Christian faith is understood and practiced. Dr. Newton's mind is rich with poetry, his heart sensitive to life and its needs. He sees clearly that in this tragic and terrible age we need a renewal of spiritual vision, and he does much to disclose and illumine such vision in these pages." J. H. Holmes

+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 23 '45 90w

NEWTON-WHITE, E. Canadian restoration. 227p $3 Humphries

338.91 Reconstruction (1939-)—Canada. Natural resources—Canada [44-5513]

"This volume is concerned chiefly with forest conservation and attempts to discuss its significance to unemployment, under-population, mislocated population, farming poverty, community decay, and mismanagement of natural resources. Soil deterioration, fire, destruction of forests and wild life, and lack of control over water are to be met by an emphasis on engineering works, reforestation under various heads, fire protection, wild-life restoration, and recreation. Finally, the author is concerned with community rehabilitation and devices for restoring a sense of community based on private enterprise." Ann Am Acad

"In the main, it can be said that the discussion is too vague and general." H. A. Innis

Ann Am Acad 238:212 Mr '45 130w

Canadian Forum 24:65 Je '44 90w

NEYHART, LOUISE A. Henry's Lincoln; Charles Banks Wilson—illustrator. 49p $1.50 Holiday

Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature

Story of the great Lincoln-Douglas debate of August 27, 1858, as seen by a young farm boy, who drove to Freeport alone for the occasion. For grades four to six.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 Jl 1 '45 310w

Booklist 41:344 Jl 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

"Through the eyes of a farm boy, riding to town on his own for the first time in his life, the children of today may here share warmly in that historic event, seeing people and places, hearing the brilliant speeches with Henry Oaks, feeling with him the excitement of the day in August, 1858. Well-drawn pictures faithfully recall the life and spirit of the period." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:274 Jl '45 110w

"A vivid, intimate, personal story, well told, and presented in an attractive book, with lively illustrations in line by Charles Banks Wilson."

+ Kirkus 13:271 Je 15 '45 150w

"Boys and girls from nine to eleven years of age will particularly enjoy it. It will be good reading aloud for younger children." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 70w

NEYHART, L. A.—Continued
"One of the loveliest stories in a quiet way." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 70:956 O 15 '45 70w

"A sincere and human book for boys and girls from 8 to 11." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p21 Jl 29 '45 100w
New Yorker 21:130 D 8 '45 60w
Weekly Book Review p8 My 20 '45 400w

NICHOL, FRANCIS DAVID. The midnight cry; a defense of William Miller and the Millerites. 560p il $3.50 Review & H.
B or 92 Miller, William. Seventh-day Adventists 44-41821

" 'A defense of the character and conduct of William Miller and the Millerites, who mistakenly believed that the second coming of Christ would take place in the year 1844.' " School & Society

---

"Notwithstanding its propaganda purpose, the book probably gives a fairly accurate account of the movement." N. L. Sims
+ — Am Soc R 10:804 D '45 800w

"This 'defense' of the Millerites will be greeted with enthusiasm by those within the Adventist churches who have long suffered from the repetition of baseless rumors about their origins, and will receive a sympathetic welcome from people outside those churches who have an interest in historical accuracy. But, from the point of view of the latter at least, it is unfortunate that the author did not work on the assumption that the best 'defense' might be a straightforward factual account of the movement resting firmly on the abundant documentary material that his researches uncovered (see the fine bibliography). As it is, the real light that the book has to shed on many of the problems involved is in danger of being concealed under bushels of 'defensive' remarks that verge sometimes on the puerile. Readers interested in the subject, if they have the patience to overlook this, will be amply rewarded." S. E. Mead
+ — Christian Century 62:304 Mr 7 '45 750w

"The most interesting section is that devoted to exploding the tradition that Miller's disciples garbed themselves in 'ascension robes.'. . The book is a valuable corrective to Clara E. Sears's popular account, Days of Delusion, derived chiefly from second and third-hand family gossip. Nevertheless the work is weak in various respects. It not only defends the Millerites against the more absurd and extreme allegations; it also assumes that Adventist theology is eminently rational, accepting a literalist view of Scripture which is repugnant to enlightened minds, and exhibiting an unrealistic and escapist attitude regarding the present world. The style is diffuse and repetitious, and the organization could profitably be streamlined. Treatment of the social and intellectual roots and historical context of the movement is hopelessly inadequate. In short, a definitive history of Millerism is yet to be written." I. V. Brown
+ — New Eng Q 18:422 S '45 750w
School & Society 61:304 My 5 '45 30w

"Mr. Nichol has done a remarkably clear, fine and important book, and it stands virtually alone in its field. Though I admire the book and found it of intense interest, I regret it must largely dissipate the more lurid of the folktales about the Millerites, wondrous stories cherished for years. However, I do not go so far as Mr. Nichol, for his book failed to shake my belief in a number of Millerite incidents, reported mostly at second-hand as must be admitted, in Clara Endicott Sears' 'Days of Delusion'; they ring too true, too close to evangel orgies I have seen with my own eyes. But any one who reads Mr. Nichol's book must consider Miller and Himes and their movement, not necessarily with respect, but certainly with new understanding and admiration for their forth-right ability and unquestioned honesty. They were no mountebanks, but true fanatics." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p26 Ag 26 '45 1100w

NICHOLS, EDWARD JAY. Hunky Johnny. 246p $2.50 Houghton 45-6995

Story of Chicago University and the Slovak district of Gary, Indiana, in the prohibition era. Hunky Johnny Opalko, Ph.D. from Chicago is back in his typical Slovak home, out of college and out of a job, and with a lot on his mind. He cannot decide what to do about his love for aristocratic Jean Howland, a "white" girl from Cleveland's Shaker Heights. During a hectic week when Johnny tries to return to his "Hunky" life, he makes his life's decision.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p4 Ag 5 '45 600w
Kirkus 13:186 My 1 '45 110w

" 'Hunky Johnny' has the stamp of honest endeavor, and it faces an important problem clearly, but its author is a better social observer than story-teller. As a picture of life in a sleazy Chicago suburb in the twilight of the bootleg kings, this novel has more than one rewarding moment. The author, we are told, lived close to this world in his youth, and he describes it with a fine eye for its garish colors, a fine ear for its raucous cadences. His touch is always understanding and true. . . But these vivid moments never fuse into a story line capable of rousing the reader's emotion to the needed pitch." William Du Bois
+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 19 '45 500w

"Mr. Nichols has written a live, moving book about being young in Chicago in a hot, gone, Chicago summertime. Obviously, Mr. Nichols knows the Slovaks of the suburban steel city, the pattern of the syndicate which organized the bootleg world, and the tight world of the University of Chicago as well. . . His concern is with people in the foreign and yet almost wholly American community of the foreign born. They come alive as children, as gnarled old men, as huge breasted, puffing, old women, as lovely girls and as athletes, steelworkers, bootleg salesmen, and collectors. They are vivid and alive and his writing of life among them moves with the speed and ease of the gaudy Cadillac of Johnny's brother Mike, the syndicate collector." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ag 18 '45 420w

"As a novel, 'Hunky Johnny' lacks pace. It moves along in a series of minor climaxes without getting any nearer to a solution of its central theme of conflict. Nor is there any finality at the end. Johnny gets what he wants, but, to this reviewer, his satisfaction can be only temporary—the problems are still unsolved, the two ways of life are no closer together." Harry Daum
Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 450w

"Mr. Nichols has done a thorough job by Johnny Opalko and his anomalous world. He builds up expertly and engrossingly the whole islanded life of the immigrant who sticks by the old culture until death while his young people, missing the security of a background integrated in any effective way with the rest of American culture, perforce go their own precarious way. The novelist, confidently at home with his material, lifts the world of Hunky South Gary and lays it, quiveringly alive, before you on the printed page. And along with it he gives you, part and parcel of the total convincing effect, an authentic vulgarity of idiom that first startles and offends and ultimately convinces you that Mr. Nichols knows exactly what he is doing and exactly how to do it." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 5 '45 650w

NICHOLS, MRS MARGARET (GORMAN). Always with me. 244p $2 Macrae Smith co. 45-1421

The problem of war marriage is the background for this book. A serious and right-minded girl marries the man she loves after a short acquaintance, and after he goes abroad bears his child. Difficulties arise, but Rich was as serious as his young wife, and on his first long furlough their difficulties were ironed out.

Kirkus 13:2 Ja 1 '45 170w

"The author carries her point without pushing it too far; the story is entertaining and makes sense." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p15 F 4 '45 110w

Wis Lib Bul 41:48 Ap '45

NICHOLSON, EMRICH. Contemporary shops in the United States; with a foreword by George Nelson. 192p il $10 Architectural bk.

725.213 Mercantile buildings. Architecture—U.S. 45-7561

"Interior and exterior plans of 93 shops, large and small, handling many kinds of merchandise, designed by 58 designers and architects. Floor plans, displays, fittings, shop windows showing commercial art at its best. For the architect and designer." Library J

Booklist 42:10 S '45

Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 50w

NICHOLSON, MARGARET. Manual of copyright practice for writers, publishers, and agents. 255p $3 Oxford

655.6 Copyright 45-35199

"This is a book for the author, editor, agent, permissions department, publisher and his secretary—for anyone in the literary world who wants to know what to do in a specific situation involving copyright. It is not for copyright lawyers or even for law students who plan to specialize in copyright law." (To the reader) Index.

"This book is well arranged, clear and specific, and extraordinarily complete, and will have very real usefulness." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 N 18 '45 70w

Booklist 42:71 N 1 '45

Kirkus 13:196 My 1 '45 60w

"Recommended."

+ Library J 70:638 Jl '45 90w

NICHOLSON, NORMAN. Five rivers. 96p $2 Dutton [6s Faber]

821 45-6864

Collection of poems by a young English author. The five rivers of the title refer to five small rivers of Cumberland which flow from the western part of the English Lake District into the Irish Sea.

Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45

"The English Lakeland has inspired another major poet. The 'sheer poetry' of 'Five Rivers' is an exciting event in literature. After Wordsworth, a timorous poet would hardly venture to write about Duddon Valley or the Cumberland fells. For one as fresh and original as Norman Nicholson, however, there is no exhausted locale. He is convincing proof of the fact that, while the world may hold nothing absolutely new, there can be a new way of telling about it." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 25 '45 400w

"Pleasant, rather charming poems. . . A slightly Tennysonic gift of words and melody is somewhat sicklied over by the pale cast of modern thought and feeling, dictated by the destruction—both material and spiritual—of the war, and by certain vague, brooding intimations of the end of the world, or at least of England. The sense of 'place' is the best quality of this poetry. Lovers of England and of pleasant, not too intellectual verse, will enjoy this volume for transient reading on a summer's day."

+ — Kirkus 13:306 Jl 15 '45 130w

"He writes with the greatest ease, too easily at times. But he crowds his canvas with detail, finely seen and felt, and there is a wealth of good homespun in the rhythmic texture of his verse." H. I.'A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 26 '44 60w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 28:155 S 2 '44 250w

Reviewed by Harry Roskolenko

N Y Times p31 O 7 '45 130w

"Nicholson's tone is deceptively quiet and his subjects deceptively simple. Actually, he is a technician of a high order. He brings off difficult effects with such ease that nothing remarkable seems to be going on, his eye is completely fresh (and how we need fresh eyes!), and he operates from a religious base (he seems to be a practicing Christian), so there are moments of mystical insight." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 21:98 N 3 '45 140w

"A remarkable book, rich and full-blooded. I have hardly revealed a tithe of those riches." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 17 '45 310w

"Most of these poems are about the Cumberland coast and the borders of Wales, and they form, I think, the main body of his work so far. There are also poems on religious subjects, which with exceptions, I find less successful." Sheila Shannon

+ — Spec 173:320 O 6 '44 200w

"Love of place is evident in these poems, which are quiet, restrained, dignified in manner and mood. One is moved by the depth and strength of these verses without being conscious of this as he reads. Much of Mr Nicholson's volume is quotable, a fact which attests its value as excellent writing." C. M. Sauer

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 350w

"Mr. Nicholson's verse shows a remarkable exuberance, verbal and descriptive. Never for a moment does the stream of it halt or waver to find the way round some obstruction. It is always in the rapids, even when, as in his opening poem, he is describing the different characters of five rivers, or, as in 'To the River Duddon,' travelling back in time to rediscover another stream with Wordsworth himself. His dashing style is refreshing and in the poems in which he writes of fell and sea and woods and particularly of his native Cumberland detail is never lost in movement. If it is sometimes blurred it is because there is too much wealth of detail, too little selection."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p404 Ag 19 '44 450w

"While he writes with an intimate, exact and perceptive knowledge of the English countryside, Mr. Nicholson has a most pedestrian ear; his strict iambics fall with metronomic regularity, and his details sometimes have the effect of a rhymed guidebook. It is difficult to follow many of the poems to their conclusion. And, having done so, you are left with the feeling that the emotional impetus falls flat, and that, after all nothing very important has been said." Ruth Lechlitner

Weekly Book Review p16 O 14 '45 130w

Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

NICKERSON, HOFFMAN. Arms and policy, 1939-1944. 356p maps $3.50 Putnam

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. Military art and science 45-10095

"A detailed summary, by a well-known military theorist, of the military strategy employed in the important theatres of the second World War. Major Nickerson, an ardent artillery man, is against the area-bombing tactics of the Allies, an attitude that is becoming increasingly noticeable among writers about the war as the fog of 'security' rolls away." (New Yorker) The book is divided into three parts. The first deals with the background of World war II; in the second the author reviews the six years of the war; and in the last he discusses the lessons of the war. Index.

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Book Week p6 D 23 '45 450w

— Kirkus 13:412 S 15 '45 280w

"Had the publishers of 'Arms and Policy' seen fit to edit it with close attention, it might have been received with the respect which it deserves but probably will not get. The objectionable material consists largely of gratuitous asides and passing comments, apparently representing Mr. Nickerson's political and social beliefs, which could have easily

NICKERSON, HOFFMAN—Continued
been omitted, since for the most part they have nothing to do with the main arguments of the book. Some reviewers will be so taken up with denouncing Mr. Nickerson as a reactionary that, it is to be feared, they will overlook or dismiss his very real merit as a student of military problems. For he is something quite rare in this country—a military theorist of the first rank.." H. S. Ford
— + Nation 162:22 Ja 5 '46 480w

"Major Nickerson discusses modern warfare from an attitude that differs considerably from that of any other commentator. His attitude is a mixture of cynicism and Christian sorrow, with more than a touch of Miniver Cheevy's longing for the days of old. . . [His] arguments about present and future warfare are sometimes incisive and often startling. . . What Major Nickerson has to say about air power contains a good deal that is to the point." J. I. Greene
N Y Times p6 D 23 '45 1300w
New Yorker 21:133 D 1 '45 170w

NICOLAY, HELEN. Born to command; the story of General Eisenhower. 192p il $2.50 Appleton-Century
B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David 45-2706

Biography of General Eisenhower for junior and senior high schools. Only a small portion of the book is devoted to his boyhood and early military service; the greater part being devoted to the period from his departure for London as commander-in-chief in the European area, down to the present.

"The author has not used to advantage the colorful and inspirational life history of this great general. The book reads as though it had been written for a bygone generation; it is dull, overfactual, anecdotal." F. N. Litten
Book Week p14 Je 3 '45 230w
Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

"It is current history as well as a story of great leadership. Many anecdotes of 'General Ike' illustrate his patience, his friendliness, his lack of self-consciousness and his generous spirit. Every American may read this story proudly."
+ Horn Bk 21:199 My '45 100w

"The last half of this is so good that it is rather heart-breaking that the first half is so slow and colorless. . . From his arrival in London the book comes alive, a fascinating, well-written, quick-moving story, full of color and anecdote."
+ — Kirkus 13:36 Ja 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
+ Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 50w
Sat R of Lit 28:78 N 10 '45 30w

"The book gives a readily remembered idea of the part taken in this war by a general whose most endearing personal quality is an utter lack of selfconsciousness." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 27 '45 270w

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. The children of light and the children of darkness. 190p $2 Scribner
321.8 Democracy 44-9689
For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by J. H. Hallowell
Am Pol Sci R 39:579 Je '45 800w

Reviewed by Harvey Pinney
Ann Am Acad 240:170 Jl '45 390w

"A book abounding with pronouncements would have to say something now and then both true and important. And an author of marked ability and wide experience could hardly cover so vast a territory without here and there enlarging the vision of his readers. Besides, subjects are emphasized which are vital to democracy as a social arrangement, such as the problem of achieving richness of individuality in harmony with communal maturity. Nevertheless, it is my considered judgment that anyone, Christian or non-Christian who reads these two hundred pages seeking light on the profound questions now troubling democratically inclined men and women will be disappointed just to the extent that he wants to understand rather than to feel." M. C. Otto
— + Crozer Q 22:165 Ap '45 1300w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey
J Religion 25:287 O '45 700w

"Anything Professor Niebuhr writes is bound to be of interest, for the simple reason that he himself has an inherently interesting mind. But I doubt whether the present volume is among the more arresting of his works." H. J. Laski
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 25 '45 250w

"Dr. Niebuhr is in our time one of the ablest spokesmen among the theologians. And he brings to his chosen task rare gifts and wide-ranging interests. Face to face with social and political problems, his attitude is as undogmatic, as experimental, as that of the best social scientists. Yet he finds it difficult, if not impossible, to come at them full face. For he is always pulling round to look at the cosmic shadows falling across his shoulders. An experimental attitude might be enough for him if he believed that the experience of the natural world were enough. But he doesn't. So he finds his solution in a deux ex machina, making the human comedy less painful if also less credible." Jerome Nathanson
New Repub 112:267 F 19 '45 900w

Reviewed by John Macmurray
New Statesman & Nation 29:375 Je 9 '45 1000w

"With respect to the ardent following which Dr. Niebuhr has, I confess in all humility that this book does not find me in the church of the true believers. Dr. Niebuhr, as I understand it, has been one of those to call back Protestant theology from its forty years in the sociological wilderness and to restore to it some of the intellectual vigor which it possessed in the days of Calvin, of Luther and of 'painful' Perkins. I also strongly suspect that this admirable campaign is the chief source of a certain haziness that shimmers over the pages of the present volume." H. M. Jones
N Y Times p4 Mr 11 '45 900w

"It has been evident for some time that Dr. Niebuhr has something important to say, but many admiring readers of his earlier works have been perplexed when they have asked themselves what precisely it was. The very copiousness of his exposition and of his vocabulary has been a source of confusion to some minds. Here he has succeeded in giving a clear and impressive statement of his views on fundamental political and social problems." W. R. Matthews
+ Spec 174:388 Ap 27 '45 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Ap 7 '45 1750w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:16 Mr '45 200w
Wis Lib Bul 41:51 My '45

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD, ed. This ministry; the contribution of Henry Sloane Coffin. 134p $1.50 Scribner
B or 92 Coffin, Henry Sloane 46-917

"Essays in appreciation of the many-sided work of Dr. Coffin, by ten of his colleagues, on the occasion of his retirement from the presidency of Union Theological Seminary." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:734 Je 20 '45 40w

"These essays are uniformly well written, with deep affection for their subject." S. L. Riddle
+ Churchman 159:15 Ag '45 180w

NIEUWLAND, JULIUS ARTHUR, and VOGT, RICHARD ROCKHILL. Chemistry of acetylene. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 219p $4 Reinhold
547.23 Acetylene 45-4254

"This monograph . . . carries on the unfinished work of the late Father Nieuwland. Covers acetylene compounds with detailed discussion on physical properties, preparation and purification of acetylene, metallo-derivatives of acetylene, substitution of nonmetal atoms or radicals for the hydrogen of acetylene, hydrogenation, polymerization of acetylene and its condensation with carbon compounds. Includes information on the chemistry, properties and uses of Neoprene. 1725 literature references." Library J

Reviewed by C. D. Hurd
Am Chem Soc J 67:1234 Jl '45 320w

"It is unfortunate that this book was not brought up to date; it contains only the work up through 1938. Therefore, it does not contain any information on important work on the partial reduction of acetylene linkages and many other advances that have been made in this field. The material is well organized, easy to follow, and its setup is ideal for a book of this type. It is a worth-while addition to the library of anyone who is working in the field of acetylene, but all of the statements in it cannot be taken as workable, because they have not been critically evaluated." W. E. Hanford
+ — Chem & Eng N 23:1207 Jl 10 '45 250w

"The reviewer was especially impressed with the chapter on the polymerization of acetylene and condensation with carbon compounds. . . It is believed that the bibliography and the wide scope of subjects discussed will make this book a welcome addition to all those interested in this subject." W. P. Moeller
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:290 N '45 150w
Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:19 Ap '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:55 S '45 160w

NIGGLI, JOSEPHINA. Mexican village; designs by Marion Fitz-Simons. 491p $3 Univ. of N.C. press
45-35184

Ten stories of life in the village of Hidalgo, in the valley of the Sabinas in northern Mexico. It is a colorful picture of daily living, religious festivals, work in the quarry, folktales, customs and the people themselves.

"I confess that for my taste this book is somewhat excessively romantic—its plot a bit improbable, some of its characters rather artificial; and that the essential substance of the book seems to me to lose value thereby. But the stories are well told, the book as a whole entertaining; and within its rather pretentious framework many of the characters and incidents are warm with human reality." J. T. Frederick
+ — Book Week p2 S 30 '45 180w
Booklist 42:56 O 15 '45

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 162:279 D '45 400w

"No doubt the picture is romanticized, yet there is good reason to think that it catches the essential qualities of its subject and is an excellent likeness, especially in regard to the way that a three-hundred-year-old caste system operates in a society leavened by the Revolution. The fine shadings of social conduct and the intense pride of race, whether of Hispanic aristocrats, mestizos, or Inditos, become more comprehensible." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 3 '45 480w

"The 'plots' of the ten tales in 'Mexican Village' arise so inevitably from the characters portrayed that we have a sense of classic drama or comedy in spite of the tendency to be over-idyllic." Norah Piper
+ — Commonweal 43:241 D 14 '45 180w
— + Kirkus 13:418 S 15 '45 130w

"These tales of a Nuevo Leon village have pace and charm. Josephina Niggli, born in Mexico, is a story-teller in the fine tradition. In her pages people come alive. . . Many things make this volume memorable in the modern spate of tales about Mexico. Not the least is the fact that it has no axe to grind, it demands no ideological bias on the part of the reader." Mildred Adams
+ N Y Times p16 D 16 '45 400w

Reviewed by Carleton Beals
Sat R of Lit 28:46 O 13 '45 500w

"Despite the author's tendency to under-rate the reader's powers of inference, 'Mexican Village' is good reading. The style is sensitive to the tempo of life in the valley. Classification of a book, one is aware, is a small thing; in this instance, it is all but impossible. There is, however, one nagging stricture which will not down. The continuity of the Castillo family theme is so strong that one reads it for sustained story. For that reason, it is something of a shock to see Alejandro die in the eighth story, only to encounter the suggestion in the ninth story that he is still a living character. The book has too much the structure of a novel to sustain this contradiction." Q. G. Burris
+ — Survey G 34:454 N '45 360w

" 'Mexican Village' belongs as fiction in the tradition of the pure story-tellers; it is not, to be frank about it, important on this ground alone, although the author's sure sense of drama raises it to a fairly high level as yarn-spinning. But considered as a document it is, as far as I know, without a peer in its field. The American reader will understand this particular Mexico of the northern hills better, after he has read 'Mexican Village,' than ever before; in many ways, indeed, he will understand all of Mexico better. That a single book can accomplish this is an achievement worth marking." J. H. Jackson
+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 7 '45 900w

"Miss Niggli is steeped in Mexican atmosphere. She knows how her people eat and work and dress, how they pray and play and gamble and make love, and how they talk. . . And best of all, Miss Niggli is a strong advocate of the old-fashioned story-telling virtues. She likes suspense, action, drama, surprise endings, and even sentiment and pathos. She handles them all well, with humor and understanding and affection. The result is an utterly engaging book by a richly gifted writer." Orville Prescott
+ Yale R n s 35:384 winter '46 550w

NIGGLI, JOSEPHINA. Pointers on playwriting. 114p $2 Writer
808.2 Drama—Technique 45-8694

A volume of practical instruction designed for the beginner in writing plays. Contents: Story and plot; Some tricks of the trade; Your characters; Your dialogue; The matter of business; Revision; The manuscript; You and the theatre.

Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45

"Here, in brief chapters that go straight to the heart of the matter, is pure gold for anyone interested in the mysteries of dramaturgy. Miss Niggli, who has made her mark in the amateur theatre, knows whereof she speaks; and, while her refreshingly slender volume seems intended for workers in that field, it is completely professional in its approach." C. V. Terry
+ N Y Times p24 N 4 '45 360w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 280w
Theatre Arts 30:62 Ja '46 40w

NILES, BLAIR (RICE) (MRS ROBERT NILES, Jr). The James; from Iron Gate to the sea; il. by Edward Shenton. (Rivers of America) [enl ed] 335p $2.50 Farrar
917.55 James river, Virginia. Virginia—History 45-3637

"This volume is presented as a revision and enlargement of Mrs. Niles's original contribution to the 'Rivers of America' series, published in 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939], but in truth it is an entirely different book. . . The first version left the impression that there is nothing to the James River, geographically, but the tidewater stretch, that is, from Richmond to Hampton Roads. This one starts at Iron Gate, beyond the Blue Ridge in the Valley of Virginia, where the Cowpasture and the Jackson unite to form the James. This means the inclusion of a great deal of new material dealing with the western country." Weekly Book Review

NILES, BLAIR—Continued

---

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan
Book Week p3 My 6 '45 550w

Booklist 41:304 Je 15 '45

"A new edition, pleasantly illustrated with drawings by Edward Shenton. Mrs. Niles has cut out some old chapters and added some new. The result is an improved book, but still a book which stops far short of doing for the James what Wilson did for the Wabash or Gray did for the Illinois. Mrs. Niles's touch is light and sometimes graceful. She moves quickly from one subject to another. Her book is anecdotal, descriptive, sentimental, unfortunately sometimes trivial." Horace Reynolds
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 My 22 '45 600w

Reviewed by Frances Gaither
N Y Times p8 Je 17 '45 500w

"The abundant historical and other factual material has been successfully compressed, and the account of the people and the river has a distinct regional color and flavor."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:31 S '45 240w

"Mrs. Niles's book in its new version is charming; but even now it doesn't tell the whole story of the James." G. W. Johnson
+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 6 '45 400w

NIN, ANAIS (MRS IAN HUGO). This hunger . . . with 5 woodblocks by Ian Hugo. ltd ed 183p $3 Gemor press, 17 E. 13th st, N.Y. 3
45-9829

"There are three stories in This Hunger: [The first concerns] an Arabian girl; [the second] a Polish actress who becomes a Hollywood star, and [the third, two] mature American women—and yet the four women and the three stories in which they occur are all fundamentally the same. One basic pattern emerges from them: the woman, hampered in the expression of her sexuality by her fear of the male—which fear is the anxiety that he will not allow her to achieve her proper expression, or that he will fail to fulfill his own role—a fear, that is to say, of his strength and his weakness—turns aggressive and tries to wrest his dominance from him." New Repub

---

"One must insist that fiction live. The reason that Anais Nin's fiction dies in the writing is not only that she fails to transmit her literary feeling directly and dramatically, but—a curious thing—that she is a thorough-going mechanist, for all the apparent intuitiveness of the subject matter with which she deals." Isaac Rosenfeld
New Repub 113:844 D 17 '45 1050w

"Interesting though 'This Hunger. . . .' is and charming though the 'Glass Bell' was, I feel sure that Miss Nin has still hardly begun to get out of her intelligence and talent the writing that they ought to produce. This new book, like the one before it, has been published by Miss Nin herself. . . One hopes to see the next installment of this novel brought out by a commercial publisher in the same volume with a reprint of the first, and marketed in the ordinary way. Miss Nin is at present a special cult, when she ought to have a general public." Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 21:97 N 10 '45 1000w

NINETEENTH century Readers' guide to periodical literature, 1890-1899, with supplementary indexing, 1900-1922; ed. by Helen Grant Cushing and Adah V. Morris. 2v price on application Wilson, H.W.
050 Periodicals—Indexes A44-5439

" 'The 19th Century Readers' Guide 1890-1899 was undertaken to supply the demand for an index to periodicals of this time, which, in contrast with Poole's Index, would use a standard list of subject headings and cross references, and especially would include author entries. The two volumes which cover this period form an author, subject and illustrator index to the material in fifty-one periodicals (1003 volumes), an index to the book reviews and a title index to the short stories, novels, plays and poems.'—Preface. The majority of periodicals indexed are literary but about one third are in the fields of history and education, religion, folklore, economics, science, geography and travel. Seven were not indexed by Poole. . . Since Poole's Index deals with five times as many titles as are covered here, the Nineteenth Century Readers' Guide does not supersede the earlier work. . . According to the preface, authors' names have been supplied for thousands of anonymous articles and more than 13,000 poems are arranged by title under that subject." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"This is a modern index of the sort we have come to expect from the Wilson Company, an index which facilitates work with an important group of journals and calls attention to materials which have been available till now only to the most indefatigable worker. It is recommended to any library which concerns itself with affairs of the period covered."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:29 Ap '45 400w

NING LAO T'AI-T'AI. Daughter of Han; the autobiography of a Chinese working woman, by Ida Pruitt, from the story told her by [the author]. 249p il $2.75 Yale univ. press
B or 92 China—Social life and customs
A45-5524

The story of the life of an elderly Chinese woman of the poorer classes, as told to Miss Pruitt. It traces her life pattern from the time of her childhood, thru her marriage, the birth of her two daughters (one of whom was sold) her services in high class families, and on to her quiet but poverty-stricken old age.

"A book like nothing I have read before. . . It is a narrative of staggering frankness and of sustained and compelling interest, and at the same time a powerfully illuminating document of the life of the Chinese masses." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 D 23 '45 230w

Booklist 42:148 Ja 1 '46

"T'ai-T'ai's life is one of hardship, toil, and an endless pursuit of food and shelter; but it is enriched by gaiety and affection and by a sturdy idealism which should make more friends for China. It is a plain tale, unadorned by literary presentation, illustrated by ordinary snapshots; but, for those who really want to live and see life through another's experience and hear of it in—to a remarkable degree—another's language, this is a unique opportunity." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 27 '45 500w

"Simple, authentic, almost stark in the lack of elaboration. . . Of great interest to those who care to know the side of the proletarian rather than the aesthetic, rich side of Chinese life."
+ Kirkus 13:462 O 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 130w

"During her sessions of story-telling Ning Lao T'ai-T'ai was without question animated and dramatic. She must have used her hands with good effect and at times she must have thrown back her head and let out high shrieks of laughter or made her voice slide into falsetto tones as she reached the climax of an incident. . . It is a pity that the clearest indication of this is a photograph of her in which she has been caught in the midst of a gesture, her right hand nothing but a blur. It is a pity because there are times when the language of the book carries almost nothing of this dramatic quality and the succession of simple declarative sentences becomes uncomfortably and monotonously noticeable. Luckily this is not always so. Time and again a statement comes very much alive with quiet wisdom." J. J. Espey
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 D 9 '45 1050w

NOBLE, RUTH (CROSBY) (MRS GLADWYN KINGSLEY NOBLE). Nature of the beast. 224p il $2.75 Doubleday

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Psychology, Comparative 45-2806

"A popular account of animal psychology from the point of view of a naturalist; based largely on the scientific publications, lectures, and notes of the late G. Kingsley Noble, Ph.D., of the American museum of natural history." Subtitle

Reviewed by Leonard Dubkin
Book Week p4 Ap 22 '45 600w

Booklist 41:233 Ap 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"Exploration in new fields, with indications of potentialities of the discoveries and widening knowledge. Scientific-minded young people interested in animals should find this right down their alley."
+ Kirkus 13:67 F 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Anita Moffett
N Y Times p8 Ap 1 '45 360w

"While this is a factual book ranging in subject matter from the world of sensation and instinct to how animals learn, how they exhibit emotion, develop community life, mate and experience parenthood, and often exhibit abnormal behavior, the many individual cases that are cited lend color and interest to every page. All forms of life receive attention, from the lowliest to the most highly developed primates. The experiments of noted scientists are woven into both the broad generalities and the more detailed examples of the dominant subjects. While many sub-headings catch the eye, it is nevertheless an informal and easily read volume."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ap '45 330w

"Ruth Crosby Noble's 'The Nature of the Beast' contains more interesting information—interestingly told—about the whys of animal behavior than any other popular book in print. What Dr. George A. Dorsey's best-selling 'Why We Behave Like Human Beings' did for mankind, 'The Nature of the Beast' does for the world of the animals." E. W. Teale
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 29 '45 1250w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). I can't die here. 251p $2 Messner 45-7610

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:98 Mr 1 '45 50w

"There are far too many characters in this story and their connection with each other is, in some instances, entirely fortuitous. Loose ends are left dangling all over the place." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 Ag 12 '45 180w

"Take Lace with the grain of salt and you have a satisfactory hot-weather item." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p9 S 2 '45 90w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). Patriot in the saddle; il. by George Annand. 239p $2 Messner

Jackson, Andrew—Juvenile literature 45-6200

Story for older boys, about a patriotic American in the making. Kye Devon was found as a tiny baby in the Tennessee woods and brought up by a kindly hermit, Uncle Shep. There was a locket around the baby's neck and a letter, but Uncle Shep could not read. When Kye grew older he was sent down to Nashville, where he was hired by Andrew Jackson, and became a trusted friend. Later the boy served as courier for President Madison. When Kye returned to see Uncle Shep and read the letter which he had kept the mystery of Kye's birth was solved.

Book Week p14 N 11 '45 130w

Booklist 42:23 S '45

"The story is an exciting one with hint of spies and a mystery." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:351 S '45 70w

"A fast-moving, exciting story, full of the color of the period. Jeannette Nolan can always be counted on for pace and characterization and good writing."
+ Kirkus 13:65 F 1 '45 210w

"Recommended for both girls and boys." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w

+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 F 10 '45 750w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 26 '45 230w

Wis Lib Bul 41:114 N '45

NOON, JOHN A. Labor problems of Africa. (African handbooks) 144p pa $1.50 Univ. of Pa. press

331 Labor and laboring classes—Africa 45-2049

"Devoted mainly to the problem of manpower for labor purposes, [this book] presents a series of regional and territorial surveys of employment in relation to economic enterprise and to total manpower. One section of the continent is excluded, i.e., North Africa. . . In two introductory chapters, the author touches on such germane matters as labor efficiency, wages, migrant laborers, unions, and colonial policies. He sketches also the general background of the African laborer. In the face of Western imperialism and racial discrimination, no considerable increase in the very low wage level can be anticipated in the near future." Am Pol Sci R

"The work is admirable as a handbook. It is compact and probably as accurate as is feasible. The introductory statements are well designed to make the situation understandable. The author seems only to assume that the reader will have a little knowledge of economics and perhaps some of the way in which native village life and economy work." E. C. Hughes
+ Am J Soc 51:88 Jl '45 300w

Reviewed by G. L. LaFuze
Am Pol Sci R 39:398 Ap '45 230w

Am Soc R 10:455 Je '45 40w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ja 28 '45 550w

Foreign Affairs 23:520 Ap '45 20w

"Population, manpower, and employment estimates are presented for each of the major political divisions of the continent, and the limitations of the available statistics pointed out. This careful analysis is addressed primarily to administrators; it will be of interest also for its methodology, especially the combination of anthropological and manpower analysis."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:44 Mr '45 240w

NORDHOFF, CHARLES BERNARD, and HALL, JAMES NORMAN. High Barbaree. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 230p $2 Little 45-8450

A novel which is part story, part fantasy. A young navy pilot from Iowa is one of two survivors when his Catalina flying boat is brought down in mid-ocean by the Japs. Before his companion dies Alec tells him the story of his life. Then alone in his own last confused hours Alec wanders thru a maze of dreams in which he meets his favorite uncle and his friend Nancy on an island marked "Existence doubtful" on old maps.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p3 O 7 '45 400w

Booklist 42:77 N 1 '45

"The articulation of this difficult little plot is wellnigh perfect, the foreshadowing of the future in the past, and the boyish and matter-of-fact, yet dreamlike, character of the writing make this one of those small, jewel-like books that are coming out of this war as they have out of others." W. K. R.

NORDHOFF, C. B.—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 15 '45 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"Sensitively and beautifully done—with more substance than The Pool, but with the same rare quality of the reality of things dreamed of."
+ Kirkus 13:343 Ag 15 '45 190w

"Well written, the story is fanciful, tragic, and not for the casual reader." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 70w

"The wondering which every voyager on the immense Pacific has done about whether any islands—perhaps paradise islands—remain still undiscovered after four centuries of exploration is the inspiration for this new novel by the authors of 'The Bounty Trilogy.' This time the collaborators have no such epical material on which to let their imaginations work as they had in the tale of Captain Bligh and his mutinous crew, but, just the same, they have produced some very appealing escapism." Barrett McGurn
+ N Y Times p4 O 14 '45 500w

"An overheated and rather boyish flight into fantasy."
New Yorker 21:98 O 6 '45 120w

"The book provides a very pretty tableau, but one wonders what it might have been like had the authors thrown logic overboard and made the island a real one. . . The authors, surprisingly enough considering their previous record as purveyors of exciting adventures stories, have preferred the haunting 'dreaming-true' vein. And like most dreams, this one is insubstantial." Laird Gregory
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ja 5 '46 400w

Time 46:108 O 29 '45 150w

"For various reasons 'The High Barbaree' falls considerably short of achieving the credibility or carrying the emotional impact of James Norman Hall's 'Lost Island' of last year. Some readers, indeed, even in their 'escape' fare, are going to demand a little more salt and vinegar than is here provided. Others, however, responding to the charm which these two writers always manage to infuse into their South Sea tales, will find in this one a pleasant few hours of release from current problems. . . It is all a little as if 'Alice Through the Looking-Glass,' for example, had been written in such a way that neither Alice nor the reader would be informed until the conclusion of the story that Alice really had stepped through the looking glass and was no longer moving in a world of rational cause and effect. It confuses more often than it stimulates curiosity. To say more would probably be unfair both to the authors and to the prospective reader." Jennings Rice
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 O 7 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:127 D '45

NORLING, MRS JOSEPHINE (STEARNS). Pogo's mining trip; a story of gold [told by Jo Norling; pictures by Ernest Norling]. 40p $1.25 Holt

45-35235

Through the eyes of John and his little dog, Pogo, the story of gold mining is presented. They meet a prospector panning for gold, see men washing pay dirt through sluice boxes, see the same thing done by a big hose with strong pressure, watch a dredge scoop up sand from a creek bed and finally go into a gold mine.

"An amazing amount of information is woven into the little story without bogging it down in the least. Incidentally, it is the sort of information little boys are likely to eat up."
+ Book Week p4 N 11 '45 130w

Booklist 42:113 D 1 '45

"Edifying in a most charming way."
+ Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 20w

Kirkus 13:492 N 1 '45 60w

"Recommended." Olive Brain
+ Library J 70:1138 D 1 '45 70w

N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 90w

Weekly Book Review p30 N 11 '45 310w

NORMANO, JOAO FREDERICO. Spirit of Russian economics; issued in co-operation with the Russian economic institute. 170p $2 Day

330.1 Economics—History. Russia—Economic policy 44-47993

"The thesis developed in this brief history of economic thought in Russia is that the Communist revolution developed naturally if not inevitably out of the background of Russian economic and political experience. Foreign influences of course played their part in the events of 1917, but Bolshevism was in reality a direct continuation of native tradition and the culmination of ideas that had been slowly germinating in the Russian soil for a full century. In the perspective of history, Mr. Normano tells us, what appeared at the time to be so sudden and dramatic a change in economic and social organization stands revealed as a wholly logical and consistent development." (Weekly Book Review) Bibliographical note. Index.

"The book is written in a lively style and reads well. It is stimulating and will cause no damage as long as the reader remains on his guard against the author's predilection for sweeping generalizations." Alexander Gerschenkron
+ — Am Econ R 35:684 S '45 600w

"Normano's analysis is penetrating and illuminating. His ideas are often provocative in essence and paradoxically formulated, but they never fail to shed new light on old problems. No serious student of Soviet Russia can afford to ignore his brilliant study." Eugen Altschul
+ Am Hist R 50:802 Jl '45 800w

"In the absence of an unquestionably good book on Russian economic doctrine, this one will serve as a space-filler. It may be read with some profit in connection with recent studies of productive and administrative development in the Soviet Union." W. E. Moore
Am Soc R 10:447 Je '45 600w

Reviewed by D. F. White
Ann Am Acad 239:208 My '45 550w

"Though not a steady and reliable guide for the uninitiated, the book is readable and stimulating. If it persuades other Russian emigres to recognize the historical legitimacy of the revolution it will do a good service." William Card
+ — Book Week p8 Ja 28 '45 400w

Foreign Affairs 23:698 Jl '45 30w

Reviewed by Heinz Eulau
Nation 160:135 F 3 '45 350w

New Repub 112:270 F 19 '45 220w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 24 '44 60w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:21 Je '45 280w

"There are times when Mr. Normano appears to jump to conclusions which are not fully supported by his own evidence. His book is both challenging and provocative. It brings out much that is little known in the evolutionary growth of Russian economic thought. Yet the revolt against German domination in the realm of ideas is not as fully elaborated as it might be to carry full conviction. . . On many points readers of 'The Spirit of Russian Economics' may find themselves in sharp disagreement with the author. One conclusion, however, appears firmly founded: 'There are not Old and New Russia: it is always Russia.' If Mr. Normano does not fully explain the enigmatic qualities of that great country, he has made a highly useful contribution to our attempts to understand it at a time when such understanding is vital to the future organization of world peace." F. R. Dulles
+ — Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 28 '45 900w

NORRIS, GEORGE WILLIAM. Fighting liberal; the autobiography of George W. Norris. 419p il $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government 45-3790

"The posthumously published autobiography of the late dean of American liberals, with a detailed account of the legislative battles he engaged in." (New Yorker) Index.

"Fighting Liberal is an important book because its author was a great man." R. A. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 241:195 S '45 400w

"This book is about an interesting man in an interesting environment, but it is unsatisfactory in many ways. It is unbalanced—diffuse in some places and curiously reticent in others. For example, there is no mention of Norris's personal attitude toward Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose name does not even appear in the index. There is little record of Norris's intellectual development. We are left in ignorance as to whether he died poor or rich, as to his social and religious affiliations, and as to much else we should like to know. The book is the combined result of dictation by Senator Norris, completed shortly before his death, and of the work of his friend, Mr. J. E. Lawrence, who, Norris says, was called in 'to elaborate upon some parts of the material and to eliminate others in order to create a balanced story within the necessary limits.' It is not easy to be sure where Senator Norris leaves off and Mr. Lawrence begins." A. D. Hill

+ — Atlantic 176:135 Ag '45 550w

Reviewed by Robert Lasch
Book Week p1 My 20 '45 1300w

Booklist 41:285 Je 1 '45

"It is an inspiring book and the description of the early frontier day in the glow of his memory is a narrative of beautiful clarity." L. M. Lyons

+ Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 550w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery
Cath World 161:358 Je '45 450w

Christian Century 62:683 Je 6 '45 170w

"There is an impelling simplicity about Senator George W. Norris's autobiography, Fighting Liberal. In the last months of his life, after his stinging defeat in 1942 at the Nebraska polls, Senator Norris wrote without bitterness—indeed, with a constant sweetness and tolerance—the story of his long and fruitful career. Senator Norris might well avoid bitterness. For, despite his final defeat at the polls, he has left as lofty and shining monuments as any other American public man who did not rise to the office of President." E. D. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 26 '45 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"As an autobiography, 'Fighting Liberal' is very uneven. It is formless, impersonal, more concerned with issues than with people. Once he reaches Washington he makes no further effort to record his personal life. There are times where a word as to what his wife looked like or a note on his Washington home life would have provided welcome relief from accounts of the legislative struggles which obsessed him. Yet even this is characteristic of a man who battled so vehemently against poverty and exploitation. This humanitarian who wrote, 'my religion and my politics are one and the same,' has composed here his own tribute."

Commonweal 42:218 Je 15 '45 600w

Current Hist 9:47 Jl '45 200w

Foreign Affairs 24:164 O '45 30w

"An open, likeable self portrait which is also a political history of progressive action along independent lines. Interesting for the author's belief in the American spirit and his own manifestation of it."

+ Kirkus 12:493 N 1 '44 190w

"Recommended for purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 100w

"Senator Norris's autobiography is awkwardly written and haphazardly organized, but it is very much worth reading nevertheless. His nostalgic story of his childhood and his simple direct expression of his love of nature, of farm lands and of seasons, are very touching. His personality, as it is revealed in his book, has the quality of a 'sweet' spring, and the same self-renewing force. There is no trace of the bitterness either of self-righteousness or of vindictiveness." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 160:675 Je 16 '45 1450w

"Always a valuable servant of the Republic, in his last years Norris had become a valuable servant of world regeneration; and his autobiography is a valuable testament of both services." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p1 My 13 '45 1650w

"Mr. Norris writes as he spoke, plainly and bluntly, and the philosophy he puts forward, a mixture of Populism, Christianity, and the New Deal, is the philosophy he lived by. Few modern American legislators left a more substantial record of achievement behind them, but most of the politics in Mr. Norris's book is beginning to show its age. . . In the earlier part of his story, in which he tells of his youth and young manhood in Nebraska, he has written an authentic American document that belongs on the same shelf as Hamlin Garland and other chroniclers of the middle border."

+ New Yorker 21:92 My 19 '45 150w

"Though this book was started too late and written too hastily to become as thorough as the reader would like, yet he will be glad that it was done at all, and he will be grateful to Mr. Lawrence for prodding the aged statesman to the task." F. A. Shannon

Pol Sci Q 60:461 S '45 1050w

"The book is the tale of a plain and simple man who spent four decades in Congress—ten years in the House and then thirty in the Senate. . . The index is sloppy and omits fully half the names in the book. Yet on the whole this is a text of one of the most remarkable careers in American Congressional history. It is the first—and, unfortunately, the last—comment on his own life by a man who served his country without selfishness and without fear." R. L. Neuberger

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:11 My 19 '45 2000w

"'Fighting Liberal' deserves an honored niche in the toilsome, turbulent annals of the American experiment. Bare alike of literary graces and the nursed rancors which are the chief attractions of many memoirs, this life story holds you by its unconscious revelation of a magnificent human being; strong, incredibly honest, growing and learning until he died at 83." M. H. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 750w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 34:295 Je '45 1500w

Time 45:100 Je 4 '45 850w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:16 S '45 200w

"The late Senator Norris couldn't write, but how that man could and did live! The book in which he tells his own story is rather bare of literary graces but so full of important matters that no one seriously interested in the development of American democracy can afford to overlook it. This applies not only to the events narrated but also to the narrator, for Norris himself is a textbook case in the development of the democratic outlook." G. W. Johnson

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 My 13 '45 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 41:67 Je '45

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Burned fingers. 273p $2 Doubleday 45-2060

Romantic novel of the present in which a beautiful girl nearly ruins her own life and that of the doctor who loves her because of a mistake in her youth.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p6 Mr 4 '45 400w

Boston Globe p13 F 14 '45 90w

"An old, old story, given harmless rendition at the hands of a true and tried craftsman."

Kirkus 12:348 Ag 15 '44 90w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN—Continued

N Y Times p20 F 11 '45 150w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 4 '45 230w

NORTH, STERLING, and BOUTELL, CLARENCE BURLEY, eds. Speak of the devil. 334p $3 Doubleday

808.8 Literature—Collections. Devil in literature 45-7604

Tales of fantasy and horror, with a few other selections—poetry, drama—which deal with the devil. Partial contents: Enoch Soames, by Max Beerbohm; The litanies of Satan, by C. P. Baudelaire; The Devil and the broker, by Bret Harte; The legend of Mont St.-Michel, by Guy de Maupassant; The Devil and the innkeeper, by R. L. Stevenson; St. John's eve, by N. V. Gógol; The Devil and the old man, by John Masefield; Revolt of the angels, by Anatole France; The tragical history of Doctor Faustus, by Christopher Marlowe; Selections from The Screwtape Letters, by C. S. Lewis; The Devil and Tom Walker, by Washington Irving; The Devil in manuscript, by Nathaniel Hawthorne; The Devil and Daniel Webster, by S. V. Benét.

"The United States seems to be doing very well in its set-tos with the behorned and betailed opponent, perhaps because it inherits the wisdom that comes from the traditions of all nations. If the Prince of Darkness is as smart as I think he is he will be buying a copy of this book and taking a night off to read it." Carl Carmer

+ Book Week p4 Jl 15 '45 500w

Booklist 42:34 O 1 '45

Churchman 159:15 D 1 '45 120w

+ Kirkus 13:262 Je 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p6 Jl 15 '45 500w

"The idea of a satanic sampler is a good one and the present collection offers some first-rate specimens of literary preoccupation with man's old friend the Devil. It looks, though, as if the editors, aiming to please all tastes, had slightly overshot their mark. Serious demonologists are almost certain to be disgruntled at the inclusion of such frivolous bits of impology as two charming tales by John Collier, as well as at a light, satiric story by Baudelaire; while a less special class of readers, out for mere entertainment, will probably not be amused by selections from Goethe and Luther."

+ — New Yorker 21:70 Jl 14 '45 160w

"It is an instructive volume, full of wisdom, entertainment, and suspiciously authoritative talk by the editors. It might be wise if you are ever in their presence to turn the third finger of each hand inward and press it tightly against the palm, for if they aren't his men they are his meat." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 28:15 Ag 25 '45 900w

Reviewed by Stewart Holbrook

Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 15 '45 550w

NORTH CAROLINA. UNIVERSITY. Woman's College, Greensboro. Library. The woman's collection; comp. by Minnie Middleton Hussey and Roseanne Hudson. 121p pa $1 The library, Greensboro, N.C.

016.396 Woman—Bibliography A45-642

"A bibliography of material in all matters pertaining to women's interests added to the Woman's college library of the University of North Carolina, 1937-43." (Subtitle) "The bibliography represents accessions to the collection from 1937 to 1943 and supersedes the catalog published in 1940 and its mimeographed supplements of 1940-41 and 1941-42. It is a selected list, however; as Mr. Guy R. Lyle, the librarian, says in the Introduction, 'A great deal of material on the subjects covered by the bibliography, but not included therein, is available to the research worker and general reader who consults the pamphlet and periodical files at the Library.' " (Library Q)

"The bibliography achieves its purpose of making these materials known in a helpful way to students, alumnae, and others interested in women's problems and is a welcome addition at a time when there is an increased interest in the study of woman, her problems, and her place in society." L. L. Johns

+ Library Q 15:179 Ap '45 650w

School & Society 60:144 Ag 26 '44 30w

NORTH SALEM, NEW YORK. CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL. When our town was young; ed. by Frances Eichner and Helen Ferris Tibbets. 170p il $2 Central high school, Purdys, New York

974.727 North Salem, New York 45-18831

"Stories of North Salem's yesterday, collected and written by boys and girls of the Seventh Grade, and illustrated with photographs of North Salem's historic landmarks taken by Fred C. Warner. The proceeds of the sale of the book are to be used to defray the cost of printing and to provide books for the school library." School & Society

"The stories, pictures, maps, letters, have detailed interest, perhaps, only for North Salem, and the book's chief appeal may be for adults who wish to copy it, as a procedure, not necessarily aiming at a published book. But many history-minded young people will enjoy the chapters on the Indians, on post roads and railroads, early farms and industries, the North Salem circus. Teachers and librarians should lure children into it by comparison of the data and pictures with their own localities. They might begin backwards by copying the planned tours at the end, and thus working into the fascination of personal research. . . Famous educators are praising it highly. It is a lucky sign that the material took book form, and true to its unique parentage that the royalties go to build up the school library." L. S. Bechtel

+ Horn Bk 21:356 S '45 180w

+ Kirkus 13:373 Ag 15 '45 180w

"Careful editing by Frances Eichner and the friendly neighbor, Helen Ferris Tibbets, are evidenced in the smooth reading not always found in composite writing. The photographs by Mr. Warren, the principal who often accompanied the children on their pilgrimages, add immeasurably to the clarity of the text. As a contribution to the written history of our country this book plays only a minor role, covering as it does the history of a very small area but as an inspiration to teachers and librarians in other localities it stands out conspicuously as an example of a co-operative project enlisting the genuine interest of children and the entire community." A. L. Le Fevre

+ Library J 71:52 Ja 1 '46 1000w

"It is good to feel the vitality, the enthusiasm that speaks through every page of this little book. With no parading or flag-waving, it is deeply patriotic.. You feel that it is a labor of love for both the children and the editors. It is illustrated with excellent photographs, well selected." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 S 8 '45 360w

School & Society 62:112 Ag 18 '45 70w

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 62:359 D 1 '45 240w

"This small book makes at least three noteworthy contributions. It brings to light a few primary source materials that will be of interest to those engaged in research. The stories will be of interest to junior high school and to some high-school students because of the fine quality of the narratives and because of the fact that the stories were collected and written by North Salem students. This volume should serve as an example of what teachers and students can do with the latent resources in every community. Furthermore, the use of the community resources in such projects as that of North Salem should be a potent influence in improving the relations between school and community." R. G. VanDuyn

+ School R 53:499 O '45 900w

Weekly Book Review p29 S 23 '45 180w

NORTHCOTT, WILLIAM CECIL. Glorious company; one hundred and fifty years life and work of the London missionary society, 1795-1945. 196p $1.50 Pilgrim press [5s Livingstone press]

266 London missionary society [45-6377]

"The London Missionary Society, of which Mr. Northcott is home secretary, spans practically the whole era of modern missions, and his work has profoundly affected great areas in Asia, Africa and the islands of the south Pacific. This record is necessarily much condensed, but it is authentic as to facts, fluent and readable as to style, and thrilling for its picture of the past and its forecast of the future." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 62:630 My 23 '45 70w

"Mr. Northcott gives an attractive account of its early days, showing the evangelical enthusiasm with which it was started, and describing the tireless efforts of the missionaries sent out. But the special object of his book is not to repeat the oft-told story of the great pioneering days but rather to show what has developed from them. He says that the subtitle of his book might well have been 'The Life and Work of an Emerging Church.' "

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Jl 14 '45 240w

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Most secret. 310p $2.50 Morrow [9s 6d Heinemann]

45-8649

Novel telling the story of the blasting of German guard boats on the Brittany coast, by an English ship camouflaged as a sardine boat. Part of the book is taken up with biographical sketches of the men who composed the crew of the English boat.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p14 O 21 '45 400w

Booklist 42:77 N 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 N '45

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 1 '45 450w

Commonweal 43:54 O 26 '45 190w

"Thoroughly good reading, but not as widely appealing a book as Pastoral or Pied Piper, perhaps because, in cross sectioning a group of characters he does not cut quite as deeply into emotional levels as he was able to do in his greater concentration on individuals in these most popular of his books. . . There's a slim thread of romance; there are brief glimpses of tragedy; there's plenty of adventure; there is definitely less emotional impact, less appeal of sentiment. A good yarn, nonetheless."

+ Kirkus 13:344 Ag 15 '45 210w

"Fine character development. Highly recommended for older boys and all adults." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 17 '45 60w

"An absorbing tale of gallant men and stirring action."

+ New Repub 113:813 D 10 '45 60w

"It is a story of wild but always plausible and convincing adventure, told in powerful straightforward narrative. Not once did this reader doubt that what he was reading was anything more or less than the truth." Frederick Graham

+ N Y Times p6 N 4 '45 450w

"Unusual and exceptionally skillful adventure-and-espionage story. . . Probably as good a thing of its kind as you're likely to come across in some time."

+ New Yorker 21:112 O 20 '45 180w

" 'Most Secret' has moments of suspense, and single scenes of power; but as a whole the book falls short of the standard Nevil Shute set in such earlier novels as 'Pied Piper' and 'Pastoral.' The story, told from several different viewpoints, progresses in fits and starts, and the reader must piece the episodes together to make a connected narrative. . . Despite these defects, lovers of adventure will find much to please them in Nevil Shute's new novel. It is an unusual tale of remarkable events." Allen Maxwell

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:15 O 27 '45 700w

"This novel would be a success as an adventure story even if the individuality of the characters were not an essential part of the design. Written as it is Mr. Shute makes a double success." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 175:204 Ag 31 '45 270w

"Shute manages to do more than just tell a good story. Quietly and without pointing, he portrays the dogged, confident British spirit, the fierce hatred of the French for the invader. With the warmth and tenderness that seem a special attribute of English novelists, he tells the simple love story of young Rhodes and Leading Wren Barbara Wright, and the longing of the much-married Colvin for his wife back in Frisco. All in all, 'Most Secret' is a very pleasant reading experience." Harry Daum

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 500w

Time 46:108 O 29 '45 110w

"None of this is in the least improbable, and all of it is the stuff of excitement. But in the telling of the story Mr. Shute devotes something like the first two-thirds of the book to a succession of biographical sketches of the officers of the Geneviève. And these sketches lack something of distinction. . . However, Mr. Shute always has good things to offer, and, in spite of some weaknesses, 'Most Secret' retains much of his power to convey the springs of heroic conduct in the lightest and least assuming of tones."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Ag 18 '45 550w

"Of all the narratives of war operations this reviewer has read the present work is far and away the ablest and most thrilling. For one thing, Nevil Shute always tells a fine story: he possesses the key to all good writing, simple narrative power. But the tale unfolded in 'Most Secret' is an absolutely compelling one on the score of the war as a whole—the terrible struggle between peoples, the feeling of the British toward the Germans, of the Bretons toward the Germans, the arrogance and cruelty on the one side and the deep, unforgiving hatred on the other. It is a grim story, barbarous and inhuman from every angle; and, of course, it is a splendid sea story, too, which gives it color and romance beyond anything that could happen on land." Lincoln Colcord

+ Weekly Book Review p2 O 21 '45 1450w

NORWOOD, RICHARD. Journal; with introductions by Wesley Frank Craven and Walter B. Hayward; pub. for the Bermuda historical monuments trust. 163p il $3.50 Scholars

972.99 Bermuda—History—Sources 45-6574

"Richard Norwood is a dominating personality in the early history of colonization in Bermuda. In his youth he had sailed with Sir Henry Mainwaring, but withdrew when that redoubtable adventurer turned to piracy. As a navigator and applied mathematician he has to his credit a remarkably accurate determination of the length of the degree of longitude, and a practical demonstration of the principle of the diving-bell. Having been invited to Bermuda to adapt the latter invention to the service of non-existent pearl fisheries, he remained to carry out surveys of the islands which are the basis of all subsequent work, and lived to become the grand old man of the colony." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Although this book is a work of scholarship and of special interest to historians, the general reader will find it rewarding. The two long introductions are lucidly written and supply an ample background for an understanding of the text." W. E. Wilson

+ N Y Times p28 S 16 '45 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p480 O 6 '45 120w

NOTLEY, JOHN FRANKE. Murder has an echo. 288p $2 Arcadia

45-827

Detective story.

NOTLEY, J. F.—Continued

"Except for the clever ending, the story has little to recommend it." Isaac Anderson
— + N Y Times p22 F 11 '45 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 14 '45 90w

NOURSE, EDWIN GRISWOLD. Price making in a democracy. 541p $3.50 Brookings

338.52 Prices. Economic policy 44-4594

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by M. A. Heilperin
Am Pol Sci R 39:191 F '45 700w

"Mr. Nourse's argument is well made and clearly and forcefully presented." W. G. Welk
+ Ann Am Acad 241:185 S '45 600w

"Nourse has written a book which cannot be ignored and which should have more than perfunctory reading. . . It is an open-minded, courteous, and tolerant book, even where the author adversely criticizes the shortcomings of business, cost accountants, and statisticians. The spirit throughout is admirable. While there are difficult fundamental problems which, in the reviewer's opinion, have not been successfully disposed of, this book is beyond doubt one of the 'musts' of the present decade." + — J Pol Econ 53:73 Mr '45 5700w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 110:669 My 15 '44 1600w

Reviewed by F. W. Coker
Pol Sci Q 60:283 Je '45 1100w

NOVIKOFF, ALEX BENJAMIN. Climbing our family tree; il. by John English. 96p $1.85 Int. pubs.

560 Paleontology—Juvenile literature. Evolution—Juvenile literature 45-35234

An introduction to evolution, written by an instructor in biology at Brooklyn college. Copiously illustrated. For grades six to junior high school.

Booklist 42:113 D 1 '45

"A good idea which doesn't quite come off, in spite of attractive presentation. The concept of evolution is certainly of vital interest, and the language is skillfully simplified without being written down. But unfortunately the author has not thought through the subject with sufficient clarity to make a logical, consecutive structure for the 9 to 12 year olds who might first be interested. So it is better to direct it to [an] older group."
+ — Kirkus 13:494 N 1 '45 150w

"Written by an instructor in biology at Brooklyn College, the approach is interesting and scientific, and the many illustrations, comparative and chronological charts add to the text. Topics are handled in short sections. Recommended for boys and girls twelve to sixteen years of age." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 70w

"A good foundation on which to base further knowledge." J. M. L.
+ N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 90w

"It is so written that one follows every step in that evolution with great interest, believing every word that is said and going on with an almost breathless impatience for the next step. There are two hundred clever and informing illustrations, some in color. . . Time is treated with careless ease. The strictly impersonal quality in the writing and the dramatic manner of presenting the facts of life make it an excellent medium for the explanation of the differences in men of the white, the black, and the yellow races and of breeding, conception, and birth." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:81 N 10 '45 230w

"Here at last is a book of science for youthful readers that really rings the bell. It will be a 'best-seller' for youngsters of Junior High School age and will find a host of grateful readers among the many adults who have never had any systematic scientific training. Written in attractive, straightforward style, its charmingly simple text neither 'talks down' to its audience nor leaves it befuddled by an overdose of complicated technicalities."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 N '45 270w

NUNBERG, RALPH. Fighting Jew; with an introd. by Curt Riess. 295p $2.50 Creative age

296 Jews as soldiers. Jews—History, Military 45-6579

History of the Jew in war from the time of the Roman Empire to the present. Index.

"In this quiet and thoughtful book, Ralph Nunberg takes up where Pierre van Paassen left off in 'The Forgotten Ally.' He, too, puts the lie to the prejudice-muddled notion that Jews refuse to fight and are innately pacifist by going back over 20 centuries of history to prove otherwise." Ralph Peterson
+ Book Week p8 Jl 29 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:311 Jl 15 '45 130w

"Here is the accurate and persuasive story of the fighting Jew." H. B. Kranz
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 S 8 '45 450w

NYE, NELSON CORAL. Wild Horse Shorty. 203p $1.75 Macmillan [5s Foulsham] 44-7098

Western story.

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45

"If Mr Nye is taking, as one suspects, a sly poke at the modern West, he would have got away with it had he taken a bit more care. However, the army doesn't give one much time for that, so this once all is forgiven. At that you might like it." B. I.
Springf'd Republican p4d S 3 '44 180w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1945; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell, assisted by Muriel Fuller. 301p $2.50 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections (21-9372)

Contents: The wind and the snow of winter, by W. V. Clark; Gunners' passage, by Irwin Shaw; Old Bill bent to drink, by B. H. Lampman; Flesh and blood, by Laurence Critchell; Bury your own dead, by Bessie Breuer; Long shadow on the lawn, by Mary Deasy; Burial in the desert, by Edward Fenton; Understand what I mean, by Bill Gerry; War front: Louisiana, by E. E. Gordon; The people on the roller coaster, by Elizabeth Hardwick; The new kid, by Murray Heyert; Monday at six, by Catherine Hubbell; The sand castle, by Mary Lavin; The thousand-yard stare, by Hansford Martin; A piece of bread, by F. G. Patton; Call a solemn assembly, by Ruth Portugal; The trouble, by J. F. Powers; The conqueror, by Allan Seager; Subway system, by Katharine Shattuck; The hour of knowing, by L. R. Smith; Lead her like a pigeon, by Jessamyn West; Come away home, by Michael Wilson. Biographical notes. Appendix.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 S 30 '45 650w

Booklist 42:37 O 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 5 '46 210w

"Some regional, some racial material for a collection which is aware in its social implications rather than outstanding in performance."
+ Kirkus 13:320 Ag 1 '45 170w

"The hopeful pilgrim in search of escape will find no stories of sheer entertainment in this volume. Some citizens will feel that this characteristic impairs the documentary value of the total collection as a record of a literary period. Surely there have been published, between June, 1944, and April, 1945, at least one or two stories—not pregnant with edification of one sort or another, but designed only to please and beguile—which even the discriminating could applaud." Kenneth Littauer

N Y Times p7 S 16 '45 1300w

"Plenty of new names, a wide variety of subject, and some pleasing talents show up, but only the first two prize stories are in any way memorable."

New Yorker 21:85 S 22 '45 80w

"The 'Prize Stories of 1945' is a collection of exceptionally high standard. Perhaps war, which finds its first literary expression in the short story, has stirred minds and emotions so as to produce a body of fresh and penetrating writing. Perhaps the predominant objectivity of these stories gives them an impact beyond the satisfaction that comes from technical excellence and the vicarious excitement that comes from a mirroring of the protagonist's own feelings. Whatever the reason, this collection is distinguished all the way through." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 28:50 O 13 '45 650w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 360w

"While an effort was undoubtedly made to vary the collection and include as many types of stories as possible, a large proportion concern themselves primarily with the confusion and frustrations and bitternesses of contemporary life. Taken individually, these stories might attain the dignity of tragedies, but where the thwarted mood is repeated over and over a slow hostility is aroused in the reader. This may have something to do with the fact that the sunniest story in the book [Lampman's: Old Bill Bent to Drink] seemed to me the best." Marion Sturges-Jones

Weekly Book Review p6 S 9 '45 650w

OBERFIRST, ROBERT. Technique sells the short-short. 115p $2 Humphries

808.3 Short story. Short stories—Collections 45-2180

A collection of short-short stories, taken from the pages of representative American magazines, Liberty, Collier's, Esquire, the New Yorker, etc. Each story is analyzed in detail with the purpose of showing what qualities it possessed to make it saleable.

Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

"Anyone who is willing to work his head off and rub his nose thoroughly into 'Technique Sells the Short-Short' may, in five or six years, get the hang of the medium. Anyone else, who reads a quick one in Collier's at the dentist's one afternoon and says, 'Shucks, that's easy. Guess I'll quit work and write them,' is crazy, unless he's Chekhov, Katherine Mansfield, or me. Even if he's me, come to think of it." Robert Fontaine

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 16 '45 300w

OBOLER, ARCH. Oboler omnibus; radio plays and personalities. 309p $2.50 Duell

792 Radio plays 45-8007

Fourteen radio plays with some introductory comments by the author about radio and radio personalities. Plays included are: Strange morning; The immortal gentleman; The ugliest man in the world; The word; Ivory tower; This lonely heart; This precious freedom; Letter at midnight; Hate; The visitor from Hades; The special day; I have no prayer; Surrender; Holiday 194x.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock

Book Week p11 Ag 26 '45 360w

Booklist 42:53 O 15 '45

Kirkus 13:235 Je 1 '45 150w

Library J 70:636 Jl '45 30w

"The printed word is not so kind to Mr. Oboler as it is to Mr. Corwin and certain other practitioners of the ethereal art. For he is not essentially a literary artist. He is a slugger. On the air there is no denying the impact of his passionate seriousness, enhanced as it is by his skill as a director who has a way with sound effects and can evoke good performances even from Hollywood 'names.' But with the cooling-off process between performance and publication, the clichés emerge, as from a campaign speech revisited." James Fuller

N Y Times p12 Ag 26 '45 450w

Reviewed by J. E. English

Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 120w

Theatre Arts 30:63 Ja '46 40w

"Most of these plays, written specifically 'for the radio medium' shrink considerably when allowed to cool in print. And like the movies with their final 'clinch,' they move invariably toward a resounding final cliché. Mr. Oboler remains a hard-hitting radio writer, and, incidentally, throws some of his best air-time punches in the clichés." Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p14 N 4 '45 240w

ODELL, GEORGE CLINTON DENSMORE. Annals of the New York stage; v 14 (1888-1891). 935p pl $8.75 Columbia univ. press

792 Theater—New York (city)—History. New York (city)—Social life and customs (27-5965)

"Volume XIV brings the great, encyclopedic work down to 1891, or, within shouting distance of 1900, its announced goal. Now Professor Odell is writing of plays and actors he remembers well and so combines a first-nighter's with a critic's reaction. This magnificent labor of love deals with the fountainhead of the American theater in its New York metropolitan area." (Library J) For volume 13 see Book Review Digest, 1942.

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 29 '45 900w

"Every drama collection, all colleges with departments of drama, will consider his series as a cornerstone. Each volume is a separate entity, profusely illustrated, voluminously indexed. Cannot be too highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 110w

"Much of the material in Mr. Odell's pages seems hardly worth the trouble to dig it up, but here it is, from 'A la Cascade' to 'Z'widerwurzen,' in a sound and lively segment of the town's social history."

+ — New Yorker 21:72 Je 16 '45 90w

"At this point in his theatre travels which began, in this series, in 1865, the patient historian can say: 'I remember,' or 'I was at the first night' and thereby make a painstaking record take on a livelier pace."

Theatre Arts 29:495 Ag '45 320w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p27 Ag 26 '45 360w

ODIC, CHARLES JEAN. Stepchildren of France; tr. from the French by Henry Noble Hall. 181p $2.50 Roy pubs.

940.54056 World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. France—History—German occupation, 1940-1945. World war, 1939-1945—Children 45-8254

"A Paris physician, moved by the story of Nazi cruelty in prisons, hospitals and concentration camps told him by a truck driver who worked for them, volunteered to work in these places to learn the truth. In this book he gives but a sampling of the horrors the Jews of France suffered at the hands of the Nazis and the French collaborationists." Library J

Reviewed by Ann Hunter

Book Week p6 S 23 '45 450w

Booklist 42:54 O 15 '45

"Can we expect any good to come from this acquainting the public with the excesses of brutality perpetrated by hundreds of thousands and condoned by millions of members of a heretofore civilized nation? To this reviewer, it seems that the answer to the question must be an unqualified yes. If we are correct at all in believing in the educational power of books—and a large portion of our education in ethics is based on just this assumption—then there is no reason why we should exempt the so-called 'atrocity literature' from the general rule." E. S. P.

ODIC, C. J.—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 31 '45 600w

"The sincerity and suffering of the author impress themselves on the reader, and, although the style of writing makes slow reading, book is one which should be read by all those interested in a better world. Recommended." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 70:684 Ag '45 90w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle
Nation 161:368 O 13 '45 1200w

"This is an angry and impassioned book, full of 'improvident eloquence'—extravagantly rhetorical, indifferently translated, but quite clearly (as the jacket says) a 'deeply felt cry of pain at man's inhumanity to man.' It is recommended reading for the trial judges who will sit at Nuremberg. Not pretty—but neither were the pictures of Dachau." Richard Match
N Y Times p8 S 16 '45 500w

Reviewed by Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 28:34 S 22 '45 700w

"Strung together loosely, as a series of episodes and observations, this book is often painful and somewhat confusing reading, but the force of its emotion is unmistakable. We shall be a long time realizing, as we must, that these things have been, and understanding, as we also must, the demoralization they have left in their wake. Dr. Odic's testimony will help." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 9 '45 800w

ODLUM, JEROME. Mirabilis diamond. 232p $2 Scribner
45-9228

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p35 N 11 '45 80w
Kirkus 13:381 S 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 O 14 '45 150w
Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 240w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p26 S 30 '45 180w

OELLRICHS, INEZ. And die she did; a Matt Winters story. 208p $2 Doubleday 45-2691

Detective story.

"Fair."
Christian Science Monitor p15 F 28 '45 50w
Kirkus 12:554 D 15 '44 50w

"The story's chief fault is that it is too loosely hung together." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Mr 4 '45 130w
Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 240w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 4 '45 90w

OESTREICHER, JOHN CAHILL. The world is their beat. 254p $2.50 Essential bks.
920.5 Journalists 45-37873

"The difficulties and satisfactions of international newspaper reporting, especially during wartime, are represented here as a challenge to the newsman's ingenuity, endurance, and sense of humor by the foreign director of International news service. Citing personalities and human interest incidents to illustrate his point, the author shows the many obstacles which often must be hurdled to bring to the reader the most taken-for-granted story. Communications, censorship, orientation to new surroundings and languages, and finances are only a few of these." Booklist

"In this book Oestreicher, the able foreign news editor of I.N.S., does his best to prove that I.N.S. need tip its hat to neither of its bigger colleagues. . . [He] cannot be blamed, of course, for making capital of the opposition's mistakes but his book would present a considerably fairer picture if it didn't hold up I.N.S. correspondents as the ne plus ultra in initiative, daring, resourcefulness and dependability. As an old I.N.S. man myself, I happen to know they aren't. . . His book is filled with many stories about foreign correspondents, both in war and in peace, and it paints an accurate picture of censorship troubles, wartime restrictions, transmission difficulties, expense accounts and all the other details of the life of the news gatherer abroad." F. C. Marquardt
+ — Book Week p2 D 30 '45 330w
Booklist 42:141 Ja 1 '46
Kirkus 13:504 N 15 '45 150w

"Mr. Oestreicher's volume of anecdotes about foreign correspondents and foreign correspondence is a must for those intelligent readers who feel it is necessary to understand every type of American journalism. . . The stories are strung together rather loosely. Many undoubtedly are true, some are legendary, a few apocryphal." Saul Carson
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:14 D 29 '45 600w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH. Storm tide. 350p $2.75 Crowell
45-8184

Continuation of the author's High Tide At Noon (Book Review Digest, 1944). Joanna Bennett, recently married to the staunch Nils, goes back to the Island with many plans about making it important. But even Nils could be pushed too far, and Joanna had to climb down from her high horse in order to keep her husband and her island.

Reviewed by Martha MacGregor
Book Week p3 S 23 '45 470w
Booklist 42:37 O 1 '45
Kirkus 13:277 Jl 1 '45 130w

"The self-reliant ways and philosophy of the fisherman and their families are described with warmth and understanding. Popular in tone and treatment." M. H. McElfresh
+ Library J 70:685 Ag '45 60w

"The melting love scenes are stiff and unconvincing. The best of the book is the part which deals with tearing storms, the details of lobster fishing, or snug kitchen scenes. There is a rivalry with a bigger neighboring island to give the spice of danger, and finally the coming of war, bringing the Atlantic Coast submarine menace. The book is complete in itself, but it is easy to see that the door is left wide open for more about the Bennett islanders." Barbara Bond
+ — N Y Times p34 S 16 '45 360w

Reviewed by Harry Daum
Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 500w

" 'Storm Tide' is a bit conventional at times in the writing, touched here and there with verbal and emotional clichés. Its psychology is not so conventional, however, as the retelling makes it seem. And its bones are good." F. H. Bullock
+ — Weekly Book Review p4 S 16 '45 600w
Wis Lib Bul 41:113 N '45

O'HARA, JOHN. Pipe night; with a pref. by Wolcott Gibbs. 205p $2.50 Duell 45-3002

Collection of short stories by the author of Appointment in Samarra and Butterfield 8. Many of them first appeared in the New Yorker.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 175:125 Je '45 90w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p3 Ap 1 '45 550w
Booklist 41:256 My 1 '45
Boston Globe p21 Mr 21 '45 20w

"In many ways this is the most disappointing of John O'Hara's work. For, unconsciously, it is a confessional work. By that I mean that though there is here revealed in the stories all the wondrous talent, there is also uncovered all the limitations of Mr. O'Hara and of the kind of writing he has chosen to do. . . Many of his people are unhappy, victims of the little tragedies of life. No one makes us more aware of the little perfidies, the small treacheries of little life than he. But he has no pity and evokes none from you. I hope I am not being precious but it seems that some increase of spirit should come from reading, and from O'Hara none comes. It is as if his soul had tasted the gall of spiritual apathy, but technique triumphed nonetheless." Francis Downing

Commonweal 42:97 My 11 '45 480w

Kirkus 13:69 F 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:368 Mr 31 '45 150w

"Toughness and sentimentality go together in these stories, for a very good reason. While the style is presumably keyed to fast life, ruthlessness and the hard-boiled truth, and the writer's basic assumption would appear to be that men are nasty, selfish and unsparing, the tradition demands pathos, the contrary touch of deep-down softness or indecision. But the tradition is ruined by what it demands, and is doomed to moderateness. And thus the outstanding impression you are likely to get from these stories, if it is not their monotonous resemblance to one another, is the moderateness of every point they try to make." Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub. 112:681 My 14 '45 700w

"John O'Hara occupies a unique position in our contemporary literature. He stands alone not by reason of his literary skill, although that is considerable, but by reason of his subject—he is at present the only American writer to whom America presents itself as a social scene in the way it once presented itself to Howells or Edith Wharton. . . He is not always at his best. Of the thirty-one stories of 'Pipe Night,' the new collection, a few fall into the pit of easy and all too well known sentiment. A larger group takes what value it has —considerable but not finally impressive— from its anthropological accuracy. . . But no less than seven of the new stories, and that makes a fair proportion, are first-rate." Lionel Trilling

+ — N Y Times p1 Mr 18 '45 1850w

New Yorker 21:95 Mr 17 '45 80w

"There is not much humor in the thirty-one stories and sketches collected in 'Pipe Night.' It isn't funny business. On the other hand it isn't tragedy; the people concerned have not the stature for it. Mostly it is pathetic, or wistful, or frightening. There is a sickening lurch at the end of some of the tales, as if the train on which everyone was riding, including the reader, had suddenly left the track." Thomas Sugrue

Sat R of Lit 28:14 Ap 28 '45 700w

Time 45:100 Mr 26 '45 500w

"There are some dull storyettes in this collection, but not many. The percentage of those that seem to read themselves through, almost of their own accord, is extraordinarily high." Kenneth Fearing

+ — Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 25 '45 700w

OLDS, ELIZABETH. Big fire; il. by [the author]. [32p] $2 Houghton

614.843 Fire extinction—Juvenile literature 45-9049

A history of fire-fighting from colonial times to the present. Today's methods are followed from the clang of the alarm until the fire is out and the third mascot of Firehouse 3 is comfortably installed.

Booklist 42:80 N 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 43:123 N 16 '45 40w

"Flaming red and full of action are the large pictures for The Big Fire. Elizabeth Olds has written the text for her daring pictures, and she omits nothing a boy of aspiring fireman age would like to know about fire fighting." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 21:446 N '45 70w

Kirkus 13:473 O 15 '45 110w

Library J 70:949 O 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 70:1092 N 15 '45 40w

"This effective and accurate picture book is just right for the 8 to 10 years olds. . . Stirring double-pages in brilliant colors convey the feeling of awed excitement that engine and hook-and-ladder give us as with sirens shrieking, they sweep along the street." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p26 O 21 '45 100w

"The story is factual and interesting, the color-printing admirable. It is a book worthy to put beside Virginia Lee Burton's 'Little House,' although it lacks her humor and imagination." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:50 N 10 '45 130w

"A stirring book for children that will be welcomed by many of their elders as characteristic of the artist's colorful and spirited work in her individual modernism."

+ Springf'd Republican p4c O 28 '45 90w

Weekly Book Review p34 N 11 '45 200w

OLDS, MRS HELEN (DIEHL). Jill, movie maker; il. by Dorothy Wagstaff. 255p $2 Messner

44-7950

Describes the trials and tribulations of a Long Island high school club when its members decide to spend a summer producing a historical movie. There is a touch of mystery added.

"Light reading, but good reading by a writer who speaks the language of the young people for whom she writes." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p10 Ap 1 '45 160w

"Not a career story, but light fiction with some atmosphere. . . For large collections." Maude Adams

Library J 69:938 N 1 '44 70w

OLMSTED, JAMES MONTROSE DUNCAN. François Magendie; pioneer in experimental physiology and scientific medicine in XIX century France; with a pref. by John F. Fulton. 290p il $5 Schuman's

B or 92 Magendie, François SG45-204

"Professor Olmsted, of the University of California, has written what will be regarded as the standard account of Magendie (1783-1855), father of French physiology, pupil of Bichat and master of Claude Bernard." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Ag 25 '45 300w

"Under the author's skillful delineation, a dimensional portrait of Magendie emerges. Opinions of his character and attainments are reported, as given by contemporary professional associates at various levels. The faults and mistakes of the man are as open to our view as his virtues and successes. The famous Anglo-French controversy between Sir Charles Bell and Magendie, with its recurrent outcroppings, is given in full detail."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:17 S '45 280w

OLSCHKI, LEONARDO. Machiavelli the scientist. 58p $1.50 Gillick press

B or 92 Machiavelli, Niccolò 45-3849

"Dr. Olschki, an Italian refugee historian who is well known abroad for his studies of the Renaissance and in this country for an outstanding life of Columbus, gives this essay a title that may unintentionally mislead. Machiavelli was not a scientist in the experimental sense, In his much discussed 'Prince'

OLSCHKI, LEONARDO—Continued
which is supposed to have served as a textbook for kings and dictators for several centuries, he approached statecraft and history just as Galileo approached problems in mechanics. It is with this approach that Dr. Olschki deals." Sat R of Lit

"Professor Olschki's basic thesis of Machiavelli as a 'scientist' seems to require further illustration and more detailed substantiation in order to be accepted. But notwithstanding this criticism, the study in its present form contains very stimulating and original observations on two of Machiavelli's most fundamental concepts, those of Fortuna and Virtù." T. E. Mommsen

+ — Am Hist R 51:150 O '45 240w

Reviewed by J. H. Hallowell
Am Pol Sci R 39:839 Ag '45 370w

Reviewed by T. C. Chubb
N Y Times p12 Je 3 '45 140w

"The great Florentine emerges from these pages as a remarkably astute pragmatist whose method reveals the abstract quality of his thinking and his power of generalization. Though this carefully documented little book is obviously intended for scholars, anyone who is interested in the deep social forces that made the Renaissance what it was can read it with profit. For this is the story of a man who made a pioneer attempt at elaborating history into a science of man." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 Ag 4 '45 600w

OLSEN, D. B., pseud. See Hitchens, D. B.

OLSEN, EDWARD GUSTAVE, and others. School and community. 422p $3.75 Prentice-Hall

371.3 Schools. Community life 45-3955

"The philosophy, procedures, and problems of community study and service through schools and colleges." (Subtitle) "The volume serves to meet a widespread demand for valid 'know-how' in the area of community education at all school levels from kindergarten through adult education, and in all teaching fields from art to zoology." (Pref) Index.

"Both teachers and laymen will find many helpful suggestions for such planning in a volume which describes the plans and purposes of the institution often referred to as the community school. . . In connection with the discussion of many phases of the community-school programs, examples of procedures tested in actual school situations are presented. While the limitations of various proposals are noted and consideration is given to the need for guarding against undue encroachment on the academic function of the school, more guidance might have been provided with respect to appropriate methods of effecting the transition from the familiar pattern of school and community relationships to the innovating procedures so strongly motivated by this exposition of the community-school idea." N. B. Henry

El School J 45:598 Je '45 1200w

"Without question this book will prove to be a most valuable aid to the teacher or administrator who wants to cut through the maze of academic abstraction and set up a practical program which will provide the life experiences available as resources in any community." Orden Smucker

+ Social Educ 10:47 Ja '46 700w

O'NEILL, JOHN JOSEPH. Almighty atom; the real story of atomic energy. 94p pa $1 Washburn

541.2 Atomic power 45-9912

"John J. O'Neill, science editor of the Herald Tribune was the first newspaper man to understand the implications of atomic power when it was first revealed in esoteric experiments at Berlin and at Columbia University in January, 1940. . . He scooped the world by publishing what he considered the greatest story of his career under the title 'Enter Atomic Power' in 'Harper's Magazine' for May, 1940. . . He has ever since then been at work on 'Almighty Atom.' The first half of the book makes no mention of atomic bombs, but is a careful step-by-step account of the researches which led up to the splitting of the atom and the release of its energy. . . Then follow four chapters with all that can be told of wartime developments. . . In the final section of his book, Mr. O'Neill gives his imagination free rein [on non-military developments]." Weekly Book Review

"Among the amazing array of books and pamphlets that have hit the newsstands since mid-August, this one is outstanding for a number of reasons. Its author, who won a Pulitzer prize for his popular writings on scientific subjects, was one of the first to predict the practical possibilities in atomic fission. . . But some of us who have held such high hopes for this book have been keenly disappointed. It has the form and appearance of the cheapest war production. It shows unmistakable evidence of hasty writing—careless errors of arithmetic as well as faulty organization and tiresome repetition. But the much more serious criticism is that the concluding chapters on the possible applications of atomic energy are so badly distorted as to give the laymen a most misleading picture of the future of this whole development. . . All this is most unfortunate, not only because of the author's fine reputation, but also because the first half of his book is exceedingly interesting and informative." S. D. Kirkpatrick

+ — Chem & Met Eng 52:285 N '45 300w

Library J 70:1091 N 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow
Nation 161:465 N 3 '45 40w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p18 D 9 '45 240w

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt
+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 28 '45 1350w

ORCUTT, REGINALD. Merchant of alphabets. 300p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Voyages and travels. Mergenthaler linotype company 45-35090

Personal reminiscences of over twenty years spent traveling all over the world as representative of the Mergenthaler Linotype company.

"Orcutt tells his story of the world with a meticulous emphasis on detail and truth that makes it lively reading. The power of the Linotype machine thundering behind the conflicting propagandas of our times becomes clear under his insistent touch." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p8 Je 24 '45 360w

Booklist 41:300 Je 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 23 '45 420w

"Reginald Orcutt writes with a great deal of charm and he is possessed not only of a keen sense of humor but of real feeling for people. Hence his account of his travels 'Merchant of Alphabets,' is as pleasant a book as you would like to read on a hot summer's evening."

+ Commonweal 42:194 Je 8 '45 390w

"As a business man's autobiography of some 20 years, this has something of the Carl Crow audience."

+ Kirkus 13:101 Mr 1 '45 170w

"With such material at his command Mr. Orcutt was in a position to write an informative account of the stuff of which wars are made. But, instead, 'Merchants of Alphabets' is a rambling and largely personal report of one salesman's peregrinations. . . In fairness it must be conceded that Mr. Orcutt has not set out to write more than a business man's account of his travels. . . As such his book has some amusing incidents and some interesting sidelights on the business behavior of other nations." J. D.

N Y Times p11 Je 3 '45 310w

"Reg Orcutt is the most listenable man I know. Listenable in a geographic, historic and social sense—in private conversation, at the dinner table, and also when he makes a speech. He seldom repeats himself and never is a bore. His travels, and his business experiences abroad, make fascinating listening. They make fascinating reading too, as he has set them down in his 'Merchant of Alphabets.'" P. A. Bennett

+ Publishers' Weekly 148:52 Jl 7 '45 2150w

Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 8 '45 220w

Wis Lib Bul 41:83 Jl '45

ORCUTT, WILLIAM DANA. From my library walls. 246p $3 Longmans

818 45-8914

"From the prints, pictures and autographed letters that hang on his library walls, the author, typophile and bibliophile, has written 'a kaleidoscope of memories' ranging from Petrarch to Oppenheim." Library J

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 O 14 '45 400w

Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45

Cath World 162:381 Ja '46 230w

"This is a book of delightful reminiscences, each linked to some picture or memento that hangs on his library walls. Mr. Orcutt was born in New England and the eyes of his mind have always been turned to the east. Except for brief references to Mark Twain and George W. Cable, it is not clear whether he ever discovered that minor portion of America which lies west of the Hoosac tunnel."

Christian Century 63:19 Ja 2 '46 210w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 10 '45 600w

"Old line reminiscences of cloistered appeal, happy, gentlemanly memories of hobbies expanding through a profession."

+ Kirkus 13:291 Jl 1 '45 90w

"These sketches are in Mr. Orcutt's best manner, reminiscent of the imaginative quality of his historical novels. Pleasant addition to any library but not necessary." K. T. Willis

+ — Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 70w

"An engaging, retrospective medley. But, when it comes to the famous people he's known, Mr. Orcutt hasn't the gift of standing aside and letting the reader get an unobstructed view. And in that respect the book is disappointing." H. I. Brock

+ — N Y Times p22 N 18 '45 450w

"Mr Orcutt's leisurely tour of his library with its attendant narratives makes absorbing and entertaining reading." C. K. Bausman

+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 15 '45 360w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

Weekly Book Review p18 O 21 '45 550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

ORD, LEWIS C. Secrets of industry. 255p $3 Emerson [8s 6d Allen, G]

338 Industry—Organization, control, etc. Great Britain—Industries and resources 45-7819

Criticism of British industry's organization and methods, in comparison with American ways.

Reviewed by I. H. Flamm

Book Week p6 S 9 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:305 Jl 15 '45 150w

Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 60w

" 'Secrets of Industry' is a particularly timely book, coming just at the moment of political upheaval in England and labor's rise to power there." Lee Cooper

N Y Times p32 S 16 '45 750w

"Mr. Ord conducts a slashing attack on British business efficiency from the very kindest of motives. . . If British business circles write off Mr. Ord's book as not worth taking seriously, it will be a very great pity. For often when he is most irritating he has something to say which is well worth studying." F. C. Hooper

Spec 174:226 Mr 9 '45 700w

"The great merit of Mr. Ord's book is that it directs attention to an aspect of our affairs all too little emphasized by those concerned with our economic planning for the future. . . Mr. Ord is an industrial consultant of many years' experience in this country, in Canada, Australia and the United States. To him the relative productive efficiency of different industries, or of the same industries in different countries, is not a matter for vague argument coloured by national prejudice or wishful thinking, but one determinable by exact scientific measurement when certain tests are applied."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p50 F 3 '45 850w

O'ROURKE, FRANK. "E" company; drawings by Glen Rounds. 166p $2 Simon & Schuster 45-6826

Story of a group of men, officers, non-coms, and privates of E company during the months of training and their first battles in Africa.

"This is O'Rourke's first book. There will be thousands of appreciative and respectful readers eagerly awaiting his next one." Wendell Johnson

+ Book Week p6 Ag 19 '45 400w

Booklist 42:77 N 1 '45

Kirkus 13:187 My 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Herbert Lyons

New Repub 113:323 S 10 '45 180w

"This narrative is a well-meant tribute to the teamwork and spirit which Army methods engender among our fighting men. As a means of telling the Army story, it falls short by many a paragraph of everyday news correspondence. . . There is no natural-sounding dialogue in this book, no vivid passage of narration, no moment of terror or pity and perhaps, worst of all, no indication that things that happen in the infantry are sometimes funny." Alfred Butterfield

— N Y Times p27 Ag 5 '45 460w

"A sentimental chronicle, mostly on the sunny side. . . Although it wrings the heart to speak ill of a work of such earnest patriotism, this is, unfortunately, a foolish little book."

— New Yorker 21:67 Ag 18 '45 50w

"Mr. O'Rourke's report on the conversion of civilian raw material into effective military power is well worth reading. It helps to explain why the young men of this country were invincible against the armies of the dictators." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 28:16 S 1 '45 450w

" 'E' Company's history offers a good cross-section of men at war, a veracious picture of individuals blending themselves into a fighting unit." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 19 '45 650w

ORTEGA Y GASSET, JOSE. Mission of the university; tr. with an introd. by Howard Lee Nostrand. 103p $2 Princeton univ. press [10s Oxford]

378.01 Education—Philosophy. Education, Higher A45-685

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by R. M. Hutchins

Ann Am Acad 239:217 My '45 1850w

Reviewed by W. T. Gouch

Cath World 161:441 Ag '45 300w

"Some educators will disagree with Ortega's views, but he gives some sharp suggestions on the tailoring of curriculi to fit the capabilities of the student—what the university should be to fit the ordinary student to be a cultured person and a good member of a profession. The translation is a clear, smooth one, adding to the excellence of the book." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 8:153 F '45 110w

J Philos 42:332 Je 7 '45 700w

"The author of 'The Revolt of the Masses' still deserves to be carefully studied as an historical figure. But we whose eyes have seen Europe convulsed to its roots can find little

ORTEGA Y GASSET, JOSE—Continued
guidance in a spirit essentially limited by the complacencies of the yet comparatively safe and solid period of the nineteen-twenties." Michael Polanyi

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 1 '45 240w

"Although he is fundamentally of a conservative turn of mind, Ortega y Gasset's theories of education square remarkably well with those of more liberal and even radical thinkers. The consonance is illuminating. It is fully in evidence in the lengthy, eulogistic and largely uncritical preface by Howard Lee Nostrand to this series of lectures and notes by the author of The Revolt of the Masses on the reform of the university. For the problems of higher education are invariably treated by Ortega, his prefatory admirer, and those to whom his reforms appeal, within the limits of an attitude that conceals a host of unanalyzed and crucial assumptions." William Poster

New Repub 112:850 Je 18 '45 700w

"Señor Ortega says a great deal more in this closely packed little book, admirably translated by Mr. Howard Lee Nostrand, who adds an excellently illuminating introduction. The sciences will perhaps take hardly what is said about them; yet for the sake of the very high place which Señor Ortega assigns them, it would seem that they must reconsider what they are doing, and separate themselves from professional issues. This, however, is an aspect with which I am not competent to deal: to the mere layman it would appear that here, too, Señor Ortega is right; science is discovery, and it is 'a monstrous Utopian pretension' to suppose that the average professional student is a discoverer." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 174:528 Je 8 '45 850w

"A rousing and courageous book, with much to contribute to the solution of our educational problems." W. A. Neilson

+ Survey G 34:137 Ap '45 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p315 Jl 7 '45 900w

Reviewed by Marjorie Nicolson

Weekly Book Review p4 F 11 '45 1250w

ORTHMANN, AUGUST CARL. Tanning processes. 414p $12.50 Jacobsen pub.

675 Leather. Tanning 45-6140

"This book is a compilation of practical tanning formulas and factual data on the principal leather-making materials. It makes no attempt to present theoretical discussions; it records and describes tanning processes for 'the types of leather with which the author has had personal experience.'" Chem & Eng N

"From the absence of bibliography and paucity of acknowledgments it is evident that the book depended almost exclusively on Mr. Orthmann's broad practical background for its material. This permitted a nearly complete coverage of the various fields of tanning but introduced a disproportionate emphasis on some of these fields. . . Typographical errors occur with considerable frequency but are seldom serious. Consistency is lacking in the employment of either the simplified form of spelling or the older form." A. H. Winheim

+ — Chem & Eng N 23:2028 N 10 '45 450w

Library J 70:638 Jl '45 30w

ORTON, MRS HELEN (FULLER). Mystery of the secret drawer; drawings by Sandra James. 105p $1.50 Lippincott

45-6319

Mystery story for boys and girls.

Booklist 42:40 O 1 '45

Kirkus 13:337 Ag 1 '45 150w

"An easy-reading mystery story for boys and girls from eight to ten." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 50w

"It is a mild mystery, but it will satisfy its readers." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 S 8 '45 230w

ORTON, WILLIAM AYLOTT. Liberal tradition; a study of the social and spiritual conditions of freedom. 317p $3.50 Yale univ. press

323.44 Liberalism. Political science A45-5409

"'A study of the social and spiritual conditions of freedom' 'The method chosen involves, first, a fairly full account of the foundations; second, a survey of the historical obstacles and opposed positions; finally a rough sketch of some leading contemporary applications.' A professor's book with many quotes and some personal opinions reported as God's truth. Timely as to theme and references, opposed to excess nationalism." (Library J) Index of names.

"This is a serious book, in spite of the constant play of wit—sometimes quiet, sometimes fiery—which enlivens all its pages. It is a learned book, in that rare sense of a used and vital learning which makes the reading an enriching and exciting intellectual experience even apart from its main ideas." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 N 25 '45 270w

"This book is not for specialists, but for the general educated reader. In an era that speaks so glibly and so hopelessly of the inevitability of collectivization, Professor Orton casts a favorite-son vote for freedom." H. T. Maguire

+ Commonweal 43:267 D 21 '45 700w

"One might feel that any book on liberalism should be tolerant, or at least equally critical of all influences which have either promoted or balked the principle. Professor Orton (Smith) makes statements which are opinions only, and in such a fashion as to assure readers of a desire to contradict. He gives the impression of opposition to rule by the masses and lack of faith in their ability to govern. The book is more likely to promote intolerance between races and religions and sects, than to further the cause of liberalism."

— Current Hist 9:549 D '45 100w

Kirkus 13:389 S 1 '45 170w

"Large and college libraries. For the serious and discriminating reader." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 100w

"This scholarly analysis of the history of the liberal tradition aroused in one reader at least a tremendous initial enthusiasm which was gradually dissipated as concluding chapters failed to maintain the profundity of insight promised in the earlier chapters. Professor Orton begins by distinguishing between the conservative and liberal political traditions. In the former there is reverence for the past, appreciation of organic forms, communal unity, and constitutional continuity; in the latter the emphasis is upon liberty and progress. One feels that he is not completely committed to the liberal tradition and that he is prepared to show that American liberalism might well borrow some of the virtues of true conservatism." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Nation 161:553 N 24 '45 950w

Reviewed by T. K. Finletter

N Y Times p6 Ja 20 '46 1500w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead

Sat R of Lit 29:12 Ja 12 '46 650w

"For the serious student of political science, this volume is a veritable gold mine. For the general reader, interested in the social, political, and economic problems of the day, it will prove to be stimulating as well as enlightening literature—truly a call to adventure."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 N '45 270w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 20 '46 420w

OSBORN, ALBERT SHERMAN. Questioned document problems; the discovery and proof of the facts; rev and ed. by Albert D. Osborn; introd. by Roscoe Pound. 486p il $6 The author, 3201 Woolworth bldg., 233 Broadway, N.Y.

343 Forgery. Trials (forgery)

"This book, intended to be especially helpful to the beginning practitioner of the law, covers a field preliminary to those dealt with in Mr.

Albert S. Osborn's famous works on Questioned Documents and The Problem of Proof. Much of its contents consists of previously published papers and addresses." Harvard Law R

Booklist 41:119 D 15 '44

Reviewed by O. W. Underwood
Columbia Law R 45:672 Jl '45 550w

"With adequate editing, the bulk of the volume might have been greatly reduced and its merit made more nearly uniform. Evidently the editorial job was handled hastily, as witness interpolation between pp. 420 and 421 of twelve additional pages and an illustration, part numbered 235-245 and the rest unnumbered. An adverse verdict must not, however, be hastily reached. The volume contains a substantial amount of useful and interesting material, including an introduction by Dean Pound and a set of exercises in the identification of handwriting which are as good fun as a picture puzzle and probably much more instructive." J. M. M.
+ — Harvard Law R 58:475 F '45 150w

OSBORN, PAUL. Bell for Adano; a dramatization of the novel by John Hersey. 111p il $2 Knopf

812 World war, 1939—Drama 45-3184

Script of the dramatization of John Hersey's novel of the same name. The action all takes place in Major Joppolo's office, but the main episodes of the book are included.

Booklist 41:251 My 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45
Kirkus 13:80 F 15 '45 30w

"One of Broadway's reigning hits, this play is recommended to all amateur groups—and of course to the drama collections of all libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 70:489 My 15 '45 50w

"Examined away from the footlights, this adaptation of Mr. Hersey's novel seems a competent carpenter's job, with little else added. Its fascisti and anti-fascisti are neatly arrayed and well sandpapered. Its set speeches are equipped to soar, just as neatly, to the gallery seats." C. V. Terry
N Y Times p8 My 6 '45 180w

"Paul Osborn has done a fine job in his dramatization of John Hersey's book, 'A Bell for Adano.'" C. K. Bausman
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 420w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p17 Je 17 '45 80w

OSBORNE, DAVID RANKIN. Salesmen for tomorrow; how to select and train them; foreword by K. B. Elliott. 225p il $3 Harper

658.8 Salesmen 45-35173

"Author, experienced in training salesmen with Studebaker Corporation, urges sales executives to change their policies to meet postwar conditions and to modernize practices for selecting, compensating and building the morale of their sales force. He analyzes methods and sales techniques." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:33 O 1 '45
Kirkus 13:289 Jl 1 '45 130w
Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 40w

OSBORNE, LETITIA PRESTON (MRS G. H. LAISER). They change their skies. 239p $2.50 Lippincott 45-3708

A story of a mixed group of people, the boarders in a pension in the capital city of Honduras. Among them are several Jewish refugees, an American girl employed at the Embassy, a retired Englishman, a family of aristocratic Hondurans, servants, etc. The main thread of the story concerns the love affair of the American girl, but the doings of the servants, the ways of life in Honduras, and the tragic fate of one of the Jewish refugees also receive due attention.

Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 My '45

"There is an almost automatic fascination about the Grand Hotel type of story because it ties so many varied people to a central theme and brings rather arbitrarily the light to bear on one person's relationship to another. Mrs. Osborne has avoided the obvious pitfalls, though there is a faintly cardboard tendency to her typical colonial Englishman." E. W. Watts
+ — Boston Globe p17 My 9 '45 300w

"Possibly over-manipulated, but with the appreciative picture of Honduran life, the assembly of distinctive characters, it is pleasant without being saccharine reading."
+ — Kirkus 13:93 Mr 1 '45 170w

"'They Change Their Skies' is thin, summer-weight fiction, suitable for readers stricken by the heat. In her first novel Letitia Preston Osborne has written about the people, native and alien, who live in a pension in Tegucigalpa, Honduras. Her pace is leisurely, her touch is loose and light, and her story takes no more attention than you'd be likely to give it on a scorching afternoon." Nancy Flagg
N Y Times p16 Je 3 '45 550w

"The originality of the incidents that make up the slight story will not startle you, but the atmosphere is vivid and the characters have a certain humorous freshness that helps compensate for the vacuous ending."
+ — New Yorker 21:85 My 5 '45 60w

"Miss Osborne's volume is one of those novels that are all too rare, a pleasant, lively love story, with well-realized characters, credible situations, and sprightly dialogue. Though its happenings and personalities are of the moment, it is in an older tradition of American literature, with not a little of the fidelity to detail in portraying the simple incident of daily life, and something of his technique in the assembling of the cast of characters, which constituted the art of William Dean Howells." Amy Loveman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:8 My 5 '45 850w

"The book has a fine Latin flavor without dropping into the mother tongue for whole paragraphs or even sentences (with the exception of an occasional 'buenas tardes' or 'amigo mio'). Those who are still struggling with a Spanish primer will be grateful." Rhea Morgan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 350w

"'They Change Their Skies' is not at all a profound book. But it is an extremely pleasant one." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 6 '45 600w

OSGOOD, HARRIETT ELLEN (KEENEY) (MRS C. B. OSGOOD). Presents from Pam Pam; pictures by Lilian Neuner. [30p] $1 Oxford

Into this story of a small child's activities are woven suggestions for making simple gifts for Christmas.

"This is the sort of picture book to make a child want to do things herself."
+ Book Week p6 N 11 '45 180w
Kirkus 13:421 S 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Ruth Bostwick
Library J 70:981 O 15 '45 60w

O'SHAUGHNESSY, MICHAEL JAMES. Economic democracy and private enterprise; a study of the relation of economic groups to the federal government. 117p $2 Harper

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Unemployment 45-5477

"Urging full employment and adequate standard of living for all after the war, author says: 'Competition must be superseded in the postwar world by co-operation.' Advocates an economic council, a contribution of labor, consumer and government working with employees for more democratic controls, which he calls 'Supreme Council of Industry and Professions of the United States under Congress.' " Library J

O'SHAUGHNESSY, M. J.—Continued

Reviewed by L. L. Pelletier
Am Pol Sci R 39:1053 O '45 250w

Reviewed by E. H. Hahne
Ann Am Acad 242:193 N '45 450w

"Mr. O'Shaughnessy is a wonderful man. A real, honest-to-goodness businessman, he has for years been spending his energy, brains and courage in a personal crusade for the reform of capitalism along lines more in harmony with Christian principle. His latest effort is 'Economic Democracy and Private Enterprise,' and it is full of passionate good sense and constructive proposals." J. C. Cort
+ Commonweal 42:458 Ag 24 '45 360w
Library J 70:638 Jl '45 70w

OSLAND, BIRGER. Long pull from Stavanger; the reminiscences of a Norwegian immigrant. 263p $2.50 Norwegian-Am. hist. assn.

B or 92 Norwegians in Chicago 45-4827

Reminiscences of a Norwegian, who came to the United States in 1888 as a youth of eighteen, and settling in Chicago, climbed steadily to success. "This is more than the story of an individual immigrant; it is an account of the growth and development of a great American city, and of the gradual integration into its life of the varied foreign-born elements that came to make up a large part of its citizenry, and to absorb its spirit as their own." (U S Quarterly Bkl)

Social Studies 36:284 O '45 10w

"These reminiscences shed interesting light on the economic, political, social and cultural conditions through which those foreign-born citizens passed in the process of Americanization. With special reference to Norwegian-Americans, some useful chapters deal with the social and debating clubs, charitable institutions, and other organizations they founded, and by means of which they kept themselves oriented while striking roots in their new environment."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:17 S '45 240w

OSWALD, MARIANNE. One small voice. (Whittlesey house publication) 293p $2.75 McGraw

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-9595

The author of this autobiography is a famous French diseuse who has lived in America since 1940. The greater part of this book tells of childhood days in Lorraine, of unhappy school days in second-class boarding schools after she became an orphan, and finally of her struggle to overcome a seemingly insurmountable obstacle before she reached success in the theater.

Reviewed by George Davis
Book Week p4 N 18 '45 750w
Booklist 42:109 D 1 '45

"An artlessly appealing self portrait."
+ Kirkus 13:331 Ag 1 '45 170w

"The readers of such an autobiography as Marianne Oswald's ask themselves, if they are honest, 'Would I find the story interesting if it were not by and about a famous person?' The answer for this book is—no doubt about it—yes, you would, any reader would." Dorothy Canfield
+ Nation 161:503 N 10 '45 550w

"Unhappily, neither fame nor great events have come to the aid of Mlle. Oswald in the writing of 'One Small Voice.' For all of its childish simplicity and gentleness, it is not a successful autobiography. And it is not good, simple story-telling. . . The author falters between the understanding and significance which would interest a mature reader and the authentic wonder which would make her tales of value to children." Lawrence Lee
— N Y Times p10 N 18 '45 550w

"A charming story, especially when it overcomes its occasional artiness."
+ — New Yorker 21:107 N 10 '45 120w

"Had this book been published at any other time than now, in the wake of the extraordinary personal adventures which have been flooding the book market during the war, it might have seemed as dramatic to her readers as it does to Miss Oswald herself. But among the contemporary tragedies now being voiced with the full orchestration of historical significance, this tale of a young misfit has the far-off tinkle of a music box. Nevertheless, it is not without genuine charm." Virgilia Sapieha
Weekly Book Review p2 N 4 '45 900w

OVERSTREET, BONARO W. See Wilkinson, B.

OVERTON, MRS GRACE SLOAN. Marriage in war and peace; a book for parents and counselors of youth. 190p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

392.5 Marriage. Veterans 45-5289

" 'A book for parents and counselors of youth,' says the author, and perhaps it is for these rather than for the young people themselves. It discusses the readjustment of returning soldiers to civilian life, and the problems of young men and women, especially in relation to each other, in wartime and after." Christian Century

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Jl 22 '45 410w
Booklist 42:5 S '45
Christian Century 62:862 Jl 25 '45 40w

"This book 'for parents and counselors of youth', ought to be in the hands of youth itself. Too long have the elders imagined that young men and young women ought to be kept 'in the dark' about the fundamental of fundamentals—this man-woman matter. Here is a straight-forward treatise on the relationship that ought to exist between wholesome young people." T. F. Opie
+ Churchman 159:17 O 1 '45 210w
Kirkus 13:292 Jl 1 '45 70w
Wis Lib Bul 41:97 O '45

OWEN, FRANK. Morris, the midget moose [il. by the author]. 47p $1 Putnam

45-7647

"A humorous tale in both text and illustrations of a moose with full-sized antlers but a midget body. Morris suffers many indignities from the moose tribe and longs to prove his strength. A happy combination is reached when a huge moose with no antlers offers to carry Morris on his back. Together they appear as one normal moose and become champions of the tribe." Library J

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p17 O 21 '45 180w

"Nonsense tale—and the three and four year olds will find certain levels of interest, as will every age. Not tops—but fun. And the pictures —in line and color—are amusing."
Kirkus 13:313 Jl 15 '45 150w

"Morris is due to become another well-loved animal character." Olive Brain
+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w

"Here is sure-fire humor for small children, pictures in cartoon style, and no zoological scruples to impede a story. . . The pictures are many, wild and lively; many young nephews will get this book because they are Uncle's excuse for buying something he likes." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 26 '45 230w

OWENS, HARRY JAMES. Scandalous adventures of Reynard, the fox; a modern American version; il. by Keith Ward. 115p $3 Knopf

398.22 45-5277

A new version of an old classic, first translated into English by Caxton in 1481. Illustrated with 34 water colors by Keith Ward.

Kirkus 13:105 Mr 1 '45 130w

"Mr. Owens has tried to disembarrass the entertaining stranger of the more old-fashioned of his trappings and present him in a streamlined, twentieth-century adaptation as modern as tomorrow afternoon. The deed, it must be confessed, is a tour de force; yet Mr. Owens has carried it off rather well. Following closely the structure and language of Goethe's graceful re-creation of a fifteenth-century low-German translation of Hinrek van Alckmer's Flemish version of an earlier Flemish abridgment and adaptation of the twelfth-century French Roman de Renart, he has smoothed the rugged old story into an easily running, popular-magazine style of prose, deleted a couple of particularly scurrilous episodes as well as many lines of conversation, then salted the whole with a shock of American slang. The result is fairly comparable to one of those medieval castles in Westchester County. For all of its slap-happy gusto, the book lacks the quality of life. Yet it is a sturdy, workmanlike production." Joseph Campbell

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 24 '45 1050w

New Yorker 21:71 Je 16 '45 90w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 29 '45 240w

Time 45:102 Je 11 '45 550w

"Mr. Owens's new version, despite its contemporary but not particularly colloquial idiom, retains much of the medieval European flavor of the source upon which Caxton drew. The animals behave in a kind of travesty of court life. Their adventures and conversations betray an intense hostility to the rich, the powerful, to the law and to the church, and generally echo the groans of the common man laboring under feudal institutions. This satirical flavor must have been greatly to the taste of the little knots of peasants and poor townsfolk who listened to them hundreds of years ago. To a modern ear they sound strangely brutal with their insistence on bloodshed, buffets, eyes and ears torn out, theft, hypocrisy and physical humiliation." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 24 '45 550w

OXFORD. UNIVERSITY. Agricultural economics research institute. Country planning: a study of rural problems. 288p il maps $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

630.1 Sociology, Rural. Regional planning. Agriculture—Great Britain [A45-2773]

"A study of economic and social conditions in a rural district of the Midlands, taken at random as a sample of much that is typical of the English countryside. The survey includes a consideration of the structure of farms and farming as well as the circumstances of the countryman's life: his housing and health services; his education and opportunities; his recreation and social activities; and 'the problems which any effective scheme of reconstruction has got to solve.'" School & Society

---

"American students of rural life will be richly repaid for a careful reading of it." Lowry Nelson

+ Am Soc R 10:568 Ag '45 400w

Reviewed by C. C. Taylor

Ann Am Acad 241:191 S '45 450w

School & Society 61:286 Ap 28 '45 90w

"Whether or not one agrees with all Dr. Orwin's proposals, his book is a valuable addition to the existing literature on the subject and should be read by every member and candidate for a rural constituency."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Ag 28 '45 330w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. Labor and tomorrow's world. 153p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

261 Church and labor. Labor and laboring classes 45-4445

The author, who is the Methodist Bishop of New York and president of the Federal Council of Churches, here reviews various aspects of the labor question and the labor movements both in this country and abroad. One chapter is devoted to an interpretation of the demands and policies of the trade unionist, another to the programs of the Socialist, and a third to Communism in Russia and elsewhere.

Christian Century 62:654 My 30 '45 100w

"This is a thoughtful book, sympathetic to the aspirations of the plain people of this country, which should especially appeal to the younger churchman of America who 'want to do something' about this confused, contradictory and altogether cantankerous thing we call the labor movement." McAlister Coleman

+ Churchman 159:15 N 1 '45 550w

P

PACIFIC islands handbook, 1944, by R. W. Robson. North American ed 371p maps $4 Macmillan

919 Oceania—Yearbooks (45-35060)

"An inclusive handbook of information covering in brief form geography, resources, industry, ethnography, and government of the vast Pacific area. Published originally as an annual in Australia from 1932 through 1942, when war conditions forced its discontinuance, this first North American edition, revised and rearranged, is divided into six sections, the first of which is a general introductory description. The following five parts follow geographic considerations in their arrangement: Polynesian, Micronesian, Melanesian, Indonesian, and the non-tropical islands. Detailed information on hundreds of small islands and a chronology of the Pacific war will find extensive reference use." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 41:253 My 1 '45

Current Hist 9:48 Jl '45 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:702 Jl '45 30w

"One of the two or three 'must' books in the sea bag of every Pacific war correspondent, 'The Pacific Islands Year Book,' now has been brought out in an American edition under a slightly different title but with nearly all of the material that made that Australian-printed book so valuable a guide to the history, ethnography, and economics of the world's least known sea and land area. . . There is a chronology of the Pacific War which, because it apparently was made up on the basis of delayed newspaper dispatches, often is several days off on its dates. It lists the attack on Guadalcanal-Tulagi, for instance, as having taken place on Aug. 10, instead of Aug. 8 (East longitude time). It will, however, give American readers a new conception of how desperate and on what a giant scale the war has been fought in the Pacific." Foster Hailey

+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 29 '45 500w

"At a time when interest in the Pacific has been greatly stimulated, the publication of the fifth edition of the Pacific Islands Year Book is very welcome. The Year Book covers the island territories of the Pacific from the Aleutians to the Auckland Islands. For obvious reasons arising out of the war, statistics of population, production, trade, finance, and the like usually stop at the years 1938 or 1939, but the volume as a whole gives the latest available information in convenient form on a surprisingly wide variety of topics." Horace Belshaw

+ Pacific Affairs 17:510 D '44 180w (Review of Australian edition)

Springf'd Republican p6 My 10 '45 300w

PACKARD, VIRGINIA. Jerry the giraffe [il. by the author]. [24p] 75c Crowell 45-4467

Starting with two lines to indicate Jerry's long neck this little book for children builds up a complete picture of Jerry the giraffe, with a few words of text to explain each step in Jerry's growth.

"This is a novel way to introduce unfamiliar animals to young children and could easily be followed by a whole series of such books. . . Virginia Packard's drawings are engaging and the idea excellent."
+ Book Week p21 Je 3 '45 110w

"It has little or no dramatic interest, but the very small child will take pleasure in a sense of participating in the animal's growth."
Kirkus 13:220 My 15 '45 80w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick
+ Library J 70:588 Je 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p18 Jl 8 '45 90w

"Jerry's effect on children at the recent Spring Festival Show was constantly repeated. They reached for a bit of paper and began to draw, building up a Jerry of their own. This will keep the book in use much longer than you might think from its few pages; it starts something." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 1 '45 180w

PAFLIN, ROBERTA, il. See Mother Goose. Mother Goose tells time

PAGANO, GRACE. Contemporary American painting. See Encyclopaedia britannica

PAINE, THOMAS. Complete writings; collected and edited by Philip S. Foner; with a biographical essay, and notes and introductions presenting the historical background of Paine's writings. 2v v 1 $2.50; v2 $3; set $5 Citadel 320 (45-2289)

"Thomas Paine's best-known works fill the first volume of this two-volume edition of his writing. . . These works consist of 'Common Sense' . . . the 'Crisis' papers which saw Washington and his army through 13 distinct crises in a never-certain battle against George III and Lord North; 'The Rights of Man' which won Paine a deathless place among rationalists, and 'The Age of Reason.' . . Less well known are the 200-odd occasional papers which are here reprinted in volume II—many for the first time in any collection." (Book Week) Index.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 D 23 '45 800w

"The introduction and notes which Dr. Foner supplies are as valuable as his new materials. He presents a scholarly estimate of Paine, avoiding rash and tendentious generalizations; and he furnishes adequate and interesting information on all the events and persons treated in Paine's writings. In short, the two volumes are at once the fullest, the most inexpensive, and the most usable edition of Paine that has yet been published." Allen Nevins
+ N Y Times p1 D 23 '45 700w

PAINE, THOMAS. Selected work; ed. by Howard Fast. 338p $3.50 Duell
320 45-2364

"Two years ago, one of the foremost American writers of historical novels wrote in fiction form a study of Paine, called 'Citizen Tom Paine.' Howard Fast wrote his book in a desire to set Paine right after more than a century and a half of misunderstanding and vilification. . . Mr. Fast has now followed his novel-biography with The Selected Work of Tom Paine, interpreted by a running commentary on the circumstances under which each piece was written and the effect each produced in Paine's own time." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p1 F 18 '45 1600w

"Paine was the messenger of new forces to men of his own time. Men of all time may profit by reading his words about the true nature of democratic government." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 2 '45 480w

Current Hist 8:443 My '45 50w

Kirkus 13:24 Ja 15 '45 180w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 160:340 Mr 24 '45 180w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
N Y Times p1 D 23 '45 700w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Studies 36:327 N '45 420w

PALENCIA, ISABEL DE. Smouldering freedom; the story of the Spanish republicans in exile. 264p $3 Longmans 946.08 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939. Spain—Politics and government. Refugees, Political 45-7664

"A history of the Spanish Republicans who have been in exile since the great exodus of January, 1939, deprived their country of most of its best brains and talent. Madame Palencia, a diplomat in the days of Republican Spain, describes the activities of the many artists, scientists, writers, and politicians who have been working to free the country from its dictator and adds a guarded chapter or two on the underground now operating in Generalissimo Franco's own territory." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p4 S 9 '45 600w

Booklist 42:13 S '45

Christian Century 62:1289 N 21 '45 210w

"Señora de Palencia is easily one of Spain's most distinguished women. And she has written a distinguished book." Homer Metz
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 8 '45 750w

"The author's claim to impartiality is not always successfully maintained. And in the political sections of her work, such as her judgment on the Spanish Civil War, a little more self-criticism would have been desirable, since not everything in the conduct of the supporters of the Republic was praiseworthy during the war, neither were their terrible acts of violence against helpless people in every case 'in response to provocations' as the author repeatedly contends." Alfredo Mendizabal
+ — Commonweal 43:27 O 19 '45 850w

"Singularly lacking in bitterness, this is—at times—provocative and challenging. One could wish the level of interest had been more evenly sustained—at times the organization is haphazard, ragged. But the book did help clarify for me the varying points of view that have emerged of recent weeks in San Francisco."
+ — Kirkus 13:236 Je 1 '45 280w

"Recommended." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 70:634 Jl '45 120w

"Her book is largely raw material, much of it extremely interesting. There is a brief, lucid account of the civil war, its background and chief protagonists, and of subsequent political developments among the Spanish Republicans in exile. Of special interest are the simple, homely accounts of people Mme de Palencia knows—or knew, for many have been killed. There are also the terribly moving last letters of executed Republicans, which have a typically Spanish dignity, humanity, and lack of heroics." Virginia Mishnun
+ Nation 161:318 S 29 '45 310w

"Rarely does one come across a book which so exactly expresses the personality of its author. The influence which Isabel de Palencia, one of the most impressive leaders of contemporary Spanish socialism, has always exercised over opinion has been due to the integrity of her mind and to the deep sincerity of her moral convictions. . . A close student of the Spanish problem will perhaps find little new material in Smouldering Freedom, yet it is not a book he can afford to neglect." Ralph Bates
+ New Repub 113:477 O 8 '45 480w

"This book is a highly personal series of warm vignettes, showing people of great courage making the best of exile. For the very reason that it is highly personal it makes real the living substance which can be turned to the destruction of all the festering decay that Franco represents—if only the Allied Governments have the wisdom and the skill to use it." Mildred Adams
+ N Y Times p6 S 23 '45 550w
New Yorker 21:86 S 8 '45 120w

"Americans inspired by the valiant, brave people of the Spanish Republic will find Isabel de Palencia's book disturbing and painful reading, for the forces that defeated the Republic of Spain are, after six years of a worldwide war, still able to carry on in Spain. . . The reader will deplore the absence of a fuller record of Isabel de Palencia's own personal experiences and reactions in 'Smouldering Freedom,' even while paying her a tribute of admiration for laying aside personal feelings in order to give a clear picture of the struggle for Spanish freedom against the forces that set out to destroy man's liberty throughout the world." Ione Robinson
+ Sat R of Lit 28:15 S 22 '45 850w

"One of the amazing and touching things about this notable book is that the author, no less than the tragic farewell letters she cites from Spaniards about to die before firing squads, expresses no rancor against those who should have understood the true meaning of what was happening in Spain. This generosity merely makes more compelling our responsibility for getting rid of Franco, for restoring the liberty of the Spaniards to choose their own government." E. M. Herrick
+ Survey G 34:450 N '45 650w
Time 46:104 S 10 '45 550w

"Isabel de Palencia is eminently fitted to interpret Spain and its present-day problems to the world. Born in Malaga, she is half-Scottish, half-Spanish by birth, she is married to a Spanish painter, she has taken an active part in the cultural and political life of her country. Her latest book, 'Smouldering Freedom,' is designed to tell the story of the Spanish Republicans in exile. But it is more than that and less than that; more in the sense that it again relates the story of the conflict between the Republicans and Franco's forces; less, in that the story of exile deals, mainly, with a documentation of names of prominent men and women who fled their country." Rose Feld
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 S 9 '45 750w
Wis Lib Bul 41:111 N '45

PALINURUS, pseud. See Connolly, C.

PALMA, RICARDO. Knights of the cape, and thirty-seven other selections from the Tradiciones peruanas; sel, tr. from the Spanish, and with an introd. by Harriet de Onís; foreword by José Rollin de la Torre-Bueno y Thorne. 246p $2.50 Knopf

985 Peru—History. Legends—Peru 45-6692

Short stories, legends and anecdotes, dealing with life and manners in Peru from the days of the Conquest to the nineteenth century. The author, Ricardo Palma (1833-1919) was a native of Lima, who during the latter part of the nineteenth century wrote down many of these legends and tales that had gathered around the history of his city and published them in a series of volumes, Tradiciones Peruanas.

Reviewed by Angel Flores
Book Week p9 Jl 22 '45 420w
Booklist 42:73 N 1 '45
Kirkus 13:207 My 15 '45 130w

"The tradición as a prose form has no exact equivalent in our own literature. It is both story and study; a neat blend of fancy with fact; a sharp, witty narrative which twists in and out of history and folk-tale, with occasional abrupt stops for shrewd comment. It is always brief—the pieces in 'The Knights of the Cape' run from two to eighteen pages—but its substance is often a whole lifetime. It mixes the dry and bookish tone of history with the racy inventiveness of slap-dash fiction. . . It is, perhaps, the literary form which naturally develops when an ironic yet sympathetic and richly informed mind runs over the diverse past, with a special concern for the exposure of small human touches." Richard Sullivan
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 22 '45 650w

"Palma, who wrote in the latter part of the nineteenth century, possessed a robust, mocking style, but his material is a shade too special to interest non-Hispanic readers greatly."
New Yorker 21:59 Jl 21 '45 120w

"Ricardo Palma was the scribe for his people. His literary function was to record the old wives' tales before they were completely lost in the shuffle of twentieth-century progress. He brought to his task his love of a good anecdote, his knowledge of history, his devotion to Lima, a gentle tongue-in-the cheek, and a flair for storytelling. There is enough of the universal in these traits and talents to permit almost anyone to get some pleasure out of the samplings before us now. There may be too much local color, however, for the conditioned tastes of the North-American reader." W. S. Lynch
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:27 Jl 14 '45 600w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 120w
Time 46:106 Jl 23 '45 600w

"The style, like the subject matter, is a subtle mixture of ancient literary skill and modern expression: the wit and satire and classic purity of Quevedo and Cervantes, the rationality and skepticism of the eighteenth century, the romantic sentiment of the nineteenth, along with humorous colloquialism peculiarly Palma's own, which catches the flavor and malice and gayety of good Lima gossip. Harriet de Onis, always a skillful translator, has outdone herself in rendering this subtle, elegant, humorous, homely style into a remarkably equivalent English." B. D. Wolfe
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 5 '45 1050w

PALMER, WILLIAM GEORGE. Valency, classical and modern. 242p $2.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Cambridge]

541.39 Valence (theoretical chemistry) 44-51592

"Advanced as well as elementary accounts of the classical and modern conceptions of valency, concluding with current developments and theories still in their early stages." Chem & Eng N

"The early chapters are so well designed to arouse curiosity that few will want to lay down the book unfinished, or to refrain from the study of periodical literature. The final arguments are at once clear, scholarly and open-minded. The style is elegant, and the author adheres to correct terminology in such words as tervalent, quinquevalent, septivalent. Beginners and advanced chemists alike can use this book with profit, and what is more, with enjoyment." G. S. Forbes
+ Am Chem Soc J 66:2132 D '44 260w
Chem & Eng N 22:2049 N 25 '44 20w

"The author's presentation is excellent; his style is clear and easily read. Fact is clearly distinguishable from fancy. No typographical errors of consequence were noted. The reviewer was pleased with the full use made of structural data. As might be expected, there are a few controversial points where the reviewer does not agree with the view presented. Nevertheless he does not hesitate to recommend the book heartily." K. S. Pitzer
+ J Phys Chem 49:166 Mr '45 300w

Reviewed by J. A. Kitchener
+ J Phys Chem 49:409 Jl '45 600w

PALMER, W. G.—Continued

"The author has set himself a difficult task in attempting to steer a middle course between a historical and a purely logical development of his subject. In the opinion of the reviewer he has succeeded rather well." R. N. Pease

+ R of Scientific Instruments 16:89 Ap '45 850w

PAN, STEPHEN CHAO-YING. China fights on; an inside story of China's long struggle against our common enemies. 188p il $2.50 Revell

951.0425 China—History. Japan—Foreign relations. World war, 1939—China. Reconstruction (1939-)—China 45-4779

"A survey and interpretation of China's struggle against Japanese aggression and of her relations with the Western powers from the Manchurian incident of 1931 to Dumbarton Oaks. The author, who has been a journalist in China and a student and teacher of political science and diplomatic history at various institutions in the United States, including the Catholic University of America, was a technical adviser to the Chinese delegation at Dumbarton Oaks and is now vice-director of the Institute of Chinese Culture at Washington." Christian Century

Reviewed by G. N. Steiger
Am Pol Sci R 39:1227 D '45 400w

Reviewed by H. F. MacNair
Ann Am Acad 242:170 N '45 600w

"This is an important book both for reading and for reference."

+ Christian Century 62:606 My 16 '45 70w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 42:194 Je 8 '45 600w

Foreign Affairs 24:170 O '45 30w

Reviewed by D. A. MacLennan
Pacific Affairs 18:390 D '45 440w

Reviewed by P. H. Clyde
Pol Sci Q 60:477 S '45 600w

Reviewed by Floyd Taylor
Weekly Book Review p16 S 16 '45 400w

PANIKKAR, KAVALAM MADHAVA. India and the Indian ocean; an essay on the influence of sea power on Indian history. 109p il $1.75 Macmillan [6s Allen G]

954 India—History, Naval [45-7466]

"Mr. Panikkar now approaches the thesis put forward in his earlier book, 'The Future of South East Asia' [Book Review Digest, 1943, 1944], from another angle, that of India's past. Rightly observing that most Indian historical writing has been inspired by northern writers, whose outlook was distinctively central Asian, he argues that from the earliest times, and not merely from the point of entry of the western maritime Powers, control of the Indian Ocean has been the determining factor in India's fate." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by B. S. Rao
Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '45 300w

"As this useful little book may reach a second edition, some errors and omissions should be noted. Nothing is said about the Dutch East Indies. . . In Chapter IV no mention is made of Captain Downton's defeat of the Portuguese Armada off Swally Hole in 1615 or the capture of Ormuz in 1621. . . Bad proofreading is doubtless responsible for [some] slips. . . A bibliography and an index are obviously needed." H. G. Rawlinson

+ — Spec 174:580 Je 22 '45 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Ag 25 '45 300w

"Panikkar has not written the final word on the subject, in fact, his essay is too sketchy for serious thought, but he is pointing toward a topic which sooner or later must be dealt with by statesmen." P. J. Searles

+ — Weekly Book Review p24 O 21 '45 550w

PANZER, MARTIN. Get a kick out of living. (Whittlesey house publication) 211p $2 McGraw

150.13 Psychology, Applied 45-35064

Advice and suggestions on how to get more enjoyment out of everyday living, not by drastic changes but by eliminating some of the minor irritations, building up minor virtues and achievements, etc. Partial contents: Don't be a stuffed shirt; Have something pending; Experiments won't bite you; Don't make a project of it; Give some away; Be good to yourself; Faith, hope, and clarity.

Booklist 41:264 My 15 '45

Kirkus 13:101 Mr 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by R. S. Morgan
Springf'd Republican p6 S 17 '45 360w

Weekly Book Review p14 My 6 '45 110w

PAPASHVILY, GEORGE, and PAPASHVILY, HELEN (WAITE). Anything can happen. 202p $2 Harper

B or 92 Russians in the U.S. 44-41894

Twenty episodes in the life of a Russian immigrant, from the province of Georgia, describing his efforts to understand America and become a part of it. His joyous philosophy of life, added to the author's own idiom, set down by his American-born wife, make this an unusual little book.

"George's wife, Helen, set down this book as George told it. She has done a superb job. A tremendous, joyous, buoyant energy and a great old-world charm pervade the pages. Whether you are reading about how George gave a feast for a band of Navajo, how he became a scab and then a friend of the strikers, how he won his way to local fame and small fortune in the box-lunch business, or the strange and wild manner in which he and his friends cured a scientist of despond, the hopeful, happy and lovably ludicrous note is maintained at a constantly high level." A. C. Spectorsky

+ Book Week p6 Ja 7 '45 380w

Booklist 41:151 Ja 15 '45

Bookmark 6:17 Ja '45

"The book is delectable and hilarious, but with the solid substance that always forms the core of any sincere account of the experiences by which an immigrant becomes a citizen. George is now a machinist and a sculptor, and Helen runs a bookshop. Charming people, both of them."

+ Christian Century 62:82 Ja 17 '45 110w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 8 '45 700w

Reviewed by W. H. Melish
Churchman 159:15 Mr 15 '45 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '45

Commonweal 41:401 F 2 '45 420w

"Somewhat idealized propaganda for this 'melting pot' of the world, but a story simply and sympathetically told—with a certain naivete of style in the quite evidently foreign sentence structure throughout. An appealing tale."

+ Kirkus 12:485 N 1 '44 170w

"Foreign idiom is not always consistent and author sometimes takes advantage of it to accentuate his points. Russian, and completely impractical. Many of the chapters appeared in Directions and Common Ground. Recommended." Margaret Owen

+ — Library J 69:1103 D 15 '44 90w

"When [the author] and Mrs. Papashvily, 'who set down the story as he told it,' are not being too charming and humorous, their book is quite charming and humorous." George Mayberry

+ — New Repub 112:89 Ja 15 '45 150w

"Throughout the story George handles the English language with clumsy reverence, carefully constructing poetic images out of his own odd assortment of words, sternly abjuring the flights of fancy which might take him into the realm of badly broken English. The result is full of charm and devoid of synthetic drollery. You can enjoy this book from any of several angles. . . For our money, when we want the four freedoms of America poignantly outlined by a poet and philosopher, we'll let George do it." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p5 D 31 '44 700w

"Mrs. Papashvily, who helped her husband write his book, wisely did nothing to tame his habit of mangling the English language. Fresh, breezy, and amusing."

+ New Yorker 20:79 Ja 13 '45 70w

"Mr. Papashvily's book is an interesting, psychological case-study in the adjustment of the alien, written in terms of personal experiences—each one of which is viewed, in retrospect, with the rich enjoyment and humor that the author felt. His humor proves contagious: it communicates itself to the reader and leaves him smiling at the happy ending to this tale of tribulation and bewilderment." Harold Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ja 13 '45 900w

" 'Anything Can Happen' with its charming violence to English and its ridiculous adventures can be read for sheer entertainment. None better can be found nowadays. But it is also a deeply satisfying American document which can teach while it delights us."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 31 '44 750w

Time 45:86 Ja 8 '45 450w

"It is a charming, unpretentious, naive and joyous little narrative. . . What gives this book its special appeal is the piquancy of George's approach to life, his individual translation of human events and relationships." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 7 '45 800w

Wis Lib Bul 41:29 F '45

PARKER, HARRY EWING. Simplified design of structural steel. 226p $2.75 Wiley

691.7 Steel construction. Steel, Structural. Strength of materials 45-4890

"[This] is the fourth of a series of elementary books dealing with the design of structural members used in the construction of buildings. The first volume, 'Simplified Engineering for Architects and Builders,' discussed rather briefly the design of structural members of timber, steel and reinforced concrete. . . The present volume treats of the design of the most common structural steel members that occur in building construction. The solution of many structural problems is difficult and involved but it is surprising, on investigation, how readily many of the seemingly difficult problems may be solved. The author has endeavored to show how the application of the basic principles of mechanics simplifies the problems and leads directly to a solution." Pref

Booklist 42:7 S '45

Eng N 135:127 Jl 12 '45 80w

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:30 Ap '45

PARKER, KARL THEODORE. Drawings of Hans Holbein in the collection of his majesty the king at Windsor castle. 62p $5.50 Oxford [25s Allen, G.]

741.91 Holbein, Hans, the younger 45-6337

Full-page reproductions of the eighty-one authentic heads of members of the court of Henry VIII, with four done by another artist, but following Holbein's manner. A catalog gives notes on the sitters, and technical details. The introduction describes the discovery and history of the drawings.

Booklist 42:58 O 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p17 O 6 '45 130w

"The drawings themselves are, of course, second only in intrinsic interest to the collection of Leonardo drawings at Windsor. In historical interest they surpass them. Some, including the set connected with the lost painting of Sir Thomas More and his family, date from Holbein's first visit to England; the majority were done during his second visit. Taken together they present a wonderfully complete picture of the chief personalities of Henry VIII's court, though the King himself is not included among them. It is a pity that one, at least, of the heads could not have been reproduced in colour, for Holbein's skilful mixture of black, red, brown, and white chalk, reinforced with pen lines on pink primed paper, is far more colourful and subtle than the halftone reproductions suggest." Eric Newton

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 29 '45 420w

Reviewed by Benedict Nicolson

New Statesman & Nation 30:29 Jl 14 '45 550w

"The plates are finely reproduced in black and white, and the book, with its exhaustive Table of References, is one that is both indispensable to students and librarians and a source of admiration and delight to artists and amateurs."

+ Spec 175:70 Jl 20 '45 180w

"A new volume of the Phaidon press monographs on great artists and great works of art sustains the well-earned reputation of the series for scholarly presentation, thoroughness and mechanical excellence."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 180w

"A very agreeable picture book, which has the added advantage of containing Dr. Parker's admirable and scholarly introduction and catalogue."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p237 My 19 '45 480w

PARKHILL, FORBES. Troopers west; il. by Ross Santee. 249p $2.75 Farrar

45-269

"A story of Indian warfare on the Wyoming frontier during the period immediately following the Custer massacre. The leading character, Lieutenant Starr MacArthur is a young doctor who has joined the Army in order to get experience and to test out a new type of bone clamp he has invented for the treatment of fractures." Weekly Book Review

"Parkhill, a native of Denver, writes with verve and understanding, with a sure sense of the dramatic and, equally important, when one is writing about the relationship between Indians and whites, with a sense of justice as well. He has a good deal of that quality of pace and balance which characterizes Stanley Vestal when he concerns himself with his favorite West." J. A. Brandt

+ Book Week p3 F 25 '45 550w

Booklist 41:197 Mr 1 '45

"Good action, plotting and characters."

+ Kirkus 12:523 N 15 '44 170w

"Recommended for all except very small libraries with limited book funds." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 70:69 Ja 15 '45 70w

"The most serious shortcoming of this historical tale—if you like your Westerns blood-and-thunder style—arises from Mr. Parkhill's desire to be fair minded: in presenting all sides, he has made the early part of his book read somewhat like an article from the National Geographic." Murray Schumach

N Y Times p24 Mr 11 '45 160w

"The story mounts rapidly to a thundering climax, with ironic overtones. The book for once justifies the standard publisher's blurb that one had better not start the novel in the evening unless he expects to keep late hours." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Mr 31 '45 550w

"Mr. Parkhill is at his best with his Indian characters. A native of the West, he knows the Indian and his background, and he presents him with realism mixed with sympathy. He is aware of his frequent laziness, dishonesty and filthy habits, but he is aware, too, that he has received anything but a fair deal." Jennings Rice

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 F 25 '45 450w

PARKINSON, LESLIE RENDALL. Aerodynamics. 112p il $2.25 Macmillan

629.1323 Aerodynamics 44-9930

"A brief outline of the basic principles of aerodynamics, intended for beginning airplane designers. It deals with the physical properties of the atmosphere, lift and drag, airfoils, lift-increasing devices, stability, and propellers. There is also a chapter on the design and use of wind tunnels. Useful tables and formulas are incorporated in the text." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Excellent text."

+ Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:55 O '44

PARRISH, ANNE (MRS JOSIAH TITZELL). Poor child. 273p $2.50 Harper

45-2053

Pitiful story of a small boy, rescued temporarily from poverty by a beautiful, selfish woman. Left to himself after Mrs Rendon's departure from her estate the boy falls into a condition worse than poverty, but the book closes on a note of hope for him.

"Miss Parrish's boy hero is a fresh and convincing personality, and she handles him, step by step, with notable skill. But because of her passion for tenderness and her cold disdain for the counterfeit of it, she shreds to bits rather too delightedly the too soft and hollow character of her Mrs. de Rendon, the while she brings Martin, despite his snobbishness, his cruelties and his nasty little deceptions, through whole and sound." F. H. Bullock

+ — Book Week p3 F 18 '45 550w

Booklist 41:209 Mr 15 '45

"A novel which is beautifully written but distressing. . . Miss Parrish not only understands her Martins, she knows many types of people. Her sketches of self-centered Mrs. De Rendon, the imaginative little son, new and old servants and the social worker are not to be forgotten. The reader is thankful for the one hopeful note on which the book ends."

+ Cath World 161:91 Ap '45 200w

"Perhaps excessive, this is nonetheless effective and a caustic contrast in evil."

Kirkus 12:484 N 1 '44 170w

"Whether or not this portrayal of a slum boy lost in luxury is wholly accurate, it is a heartfelt, compassionate study of a child suffering too many pressures. Martin's struggle to hold his security, leading inevitably to horror and disgrace, is believable. But the violence of physical degradation offered him finally is too neat a balance to the early violence from which he escaped. Mrs. Parrish has pointed up an ugly social problem and added another unforgettable portrait to the gallery of memory. But if she has indeed exchanged her stiletto for a sword, there is still some forging to be done in an element more potent than starlight." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p5 F 18 '45 500w

"Miss Parrish's talent is never a robust one, but there is considerable charm in this tender, genre work."

+ New Yorker 21:78 F 17 '45 80w

"A harrowing and dreadful story of the betrayal of a child, and it is written with deep insight and perception. . . 'Poor Child' is written with tenderness and sympathy and deep psychological insight. It will haunt the reader not so much for the tragic story it tells but for the subtlety of characterization, its merciless portrayal of an irresponsible vanity whose generosity and charm were merely the means for its own gratification and which discarded everything that no longer flattered or interested it, whether it were a dress or a friend or a child's heart." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 F 24 '45 650w

Time 45:100 Mr 5 '45 30w

"Miss Parrish has pity and tenderness for this confused and frightened boy who, in his efforts to retain a grip on life, destroys life. His distortion of human values she puts squarely on the shoulders of an irresponsible segment of society. 'Poor Child' commands attention for the message it carries but little for the manner of its transmission." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p6 F 18 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

PARSONS, MRS ELSIE WORTHINGTON (CLEWS). Peguche, canton of Otavalo, province of Imbabura, Ecuador; a study of Andean Indians. 225p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press [18s Cambridge]

980.3 Peguche, Ecuador. Kechua Indians A45-4599

A study of the Indians of the village of Peguche in Ecuador, in the high Andes, where the author, an American ethnologist, lived during part of 1940 and 1941. She writes of their culture, family and personal life, religion, calendar, ritual, their folklore, and their houses. Bibliography. Index.

"She tells of these people and their life with the objectiveness and orderliness of the scientist. . . But throughout this factual account . . . there runs a steady feeling for the place and the people that lifts this book from the realm of the merely scientific and makes it good reading for the untrained person. I don't mean that Mrs. Parsons sentimentalizes or overdramatizes her material in the slightest degree. It is simply that she likes these people, cares about them, and so is able to perceive values and meanings beyond those which can be scientifically named and measured; and she shares this perception with her reader." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 S 30 '45 410w

Current Hist 9:548 D '45 80w

PARSONS, ESTHER JANE. In the doctor's office; the art of the medical assistant. 295p il $2 Lippincott

610.69 Secretaries, Medical. Nurses and nursing SG45-26

Advice for the girl who aspires to be a doctor's assistant. Covers such things as personal health, dress, personality, bookkeeping, telephone conduct, and sterilizing instruments. Bibliography. Index.

"The general instructions could well be applied to any stenographic or secretarial position, and the technical advice is sound enough to recommend the book for a nursing school library."

+ Book Week p6 D 16 '45 80w

Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45

"Medical secretaries who want to brush up on their equipment, secretaries or nurses who want to be medical assistants and any one who wants to learn the extent and nature of what those white clad paragons know will find absorbing reading in these sensible, chock-full pages."

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 25 '45 250w

PARSONS, PERYL WADE. My love is young. 256p $2 Macrae Smith co.

45-2692

The love story of a beautiful society girl, who fell hard for a college music professor. For a long time their differences of background and social position held them apart, but the end was inevitable.

Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45

"Very young, very light campus complications."

Kirkus 13:40 F 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 8 '45 80w

PARSONS, ROBERT PERCIVAL. Mob 3; a naval hospital in a South Sea jungle. 248p $3.50 Bobbs

940.547673 U.S. Navy. Mobile base hospital no. 3. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-2852

Personal narrative of a Navy medical officer's experiences in command of a naval mobile hospital in the South Pacific.

"A fine account of a mobile naval hospital extemporized on a South Pacific island, and of its development into a fully equipped resource. Captain Parsons tells the story with a rare combination of wit and learning, and his curiosity leads him everywhere." C. W. Morton

+ Atlantic 175:132 My '45 300w

Reviewed by W. H. Fetridge

Book Week p8 Ap 8 '45 310w

Booklist 41:222 Ap 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45

Foreign Affairs 24:163 O '45 30w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p6 Mr 25 '45 230w

"Captain Parsons went to one of the few places yet unbombed in charge of a Navy hospital unit and has written a charming and personal travel book about it. . . A good book and a thoroughly interesting one." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 Mr 31 '45 410w

"Much of Dr. Parsons's book deals with the natives on 'Elysia,' their customs, houses, schools, Mormon churches, etc. This is, he says, because the natives are of absorbing interest to the American boys. While these chapters are fascinating they are robbed of much of their interest by whatever censorship prevented identification of 'Elysia.' Many readers will enjoy Dr. Parsons's descriptions per se, but many more would like to read the book knowing that their sons, brothers or fathers had visited that island en route to or from some battle zone and found excellent medical treatment there." Beach Conger

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 11 '45 750w

PARTCH, VIRGIL FRANKLIN (VIP, pseud). Water on the brain. 127p il $2 McBride

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Humor, Pictorial 45-10271

Collection of cartoons. "VIP's people, most of whom look like missing links, are practically indescribable, and his humor has to be seen to be appreciated. Included in this collection is the famous one of the little woman bringing in a steaming boot on a platter while her smiling husband says, 'What's the special occasion?'" (Springf'd Republican)

"Full page and strip-series, these, because of outlandish characters are not everyone's idea of humor.' But the ideas are there for some good laughs."

+ — Kirkus 13:466 O 15 '45 90w

Springf'd Republican p6 O 20 '45 240w

"They are funny if you enjoy remembering your nightmares." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p5 D 2 '45 50w

PARTON, ETHEL. Year without a summer; a story of 1816; with il. by Margaret Platt. 288p $2 Viking

45-8599

Story for grades five to eight about that strange summer of 1816, when there was snow and frost in New England, and many people moved away. But Parny Yoell and her friends stayed and even solved a mystery which threatened to bring unhappiness to some of the townspeople.

"Despite the lively community doings and a mystery concerning a missing heiress, the story drags; the solution of the mystery becomes involved and the characterizations are too numerous and detailed."

Booklist 42:61 O 15 '45

"The Year Without a Summer is another of Ethel Parton's period books, in which the spicy flavor of strongly individual characters is preserved with quiet assurance and kindly humor." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:461 N '45 120w

"It is good short reading in its successive, succinct incidents, but for reading through, it does drag. Girls will find it more to their taste than boys."

+ — Kirkus 13:339 Ag 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner

Library J 70:953 O 15 '45 30w

"Pleasant story for girls with good characterization, wholesome atmosphere, authentic background and written with much humor. Recommended for grades six to eight." B. A. Groves

+ Library J 70:1027 N 1 '45 90w

"Ethel Parton's stories of America's past, with their authentic background, their humor, sanity and fun, should be a part of the reading experience of every American boy and girl." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p26 S 23 '45 160w

New Yorker 21:133 D 8 '45 60w

"A good story about people who are a joy to know."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:62 N 10 '45 50w

PARTON, MARGARET. Laughter on the hill. (Whittlesey house publication) 245p il $2.75 McGraw

818 San Francisco—Social life and customs 45-4469

"A lively recollection of life on San Francisco's Telegraph Hill by a writer who went to live there in 1940." New Yorker

"This is a bit of personal history that will entertain you from every aspect—unusual setting, witty writing and frank, often hilarious, incident. It immediately establishes Margaret Parton as a humorist and suggests delightful possibilities for her as a novelist, for if she can write about people as charmingly and understandingly as this, her niche is waiting among the novelists." Edith Roberts

+ Book Week p3 Je 3 '45 450w

Booklist 41:337 Jl 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

Kirkus 13:80 F 15 '45 170w

"The book is well-knit, with amazing people, unusual events and the romance of the city woven together skillfully. The author is not only a good reporter, selecting telling details to characterize persons and places, but she appeals to the imagination with her sharp, whimsical imagery." Lucy Greenbaum

+ N Y Times p14 Je 3 '45 400w

"Miss Parton occasionally sounds like a young woman who has mistaken Telegraph Hill for a merger of Tortilla Flat, Montmartre, and Cannery Row, but she apparently had a lot of fun living there. She has put some of that fun into her book, but her exploits as a girl reporter, which seem to have left her breathless, are as quaintly old-fashioned as 'The Front Page.' "

New Yorker 21:83 My 26 '45 80w

"The whole is a modern ragout with not too much meat but with enough bizarre herbs to make a piquant dish. For nourishment there is Lemuel Parton's excellent advice, herewith recommended to all cub reporters, on how to hold a beginner's job on a newspaper. For spice there are 'barflies and lotus-eaters,' some 'ancient in light-hearted depravity.' " Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:25 Ag 25 '45 400w

" 'Laughter on the Hill' is a document of time and place, an exercise in reporting on youth and Bohemia in the 40s of this century and is one more title on the ever-loving list of books about San Francisco." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 20 '45 800w

PARTRIDGE, BELLAMY. January thaw. (Whittlesey house publication) 329p $2.75 McGraw

45-7501

A New York couple purchased a rundown Connecticut house, even tho the town clerk warned them the title "ain't quiet." On the very night that they had planned a party in their renovated house, the former owner and his aged wife came driving back, and took up residence. There was nothing the lawyers could do. So the two families sat it out, until a flaw was discovered in the flawed title.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 S 9 '45 500w
Booklist 42:111 D 1 '45
Bookmark 6:16 N '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 6 '45 850w

"The arrows of Mr. Partridge's wit are so carefully blunted that he might almost be writing 'How We Made Over the Olde House' for the serial readers. Mr. Partridge had a good idea that he might have developed into a short story of the type of Kipling's famous 'An Error in the Fourth Dimension' with a caustic contrast of two different social economies. Instead he has padded his idea into the outward form of a novel. . . It seems a pity that Mr. Partridge didn't tell his tale from the standpoint of 'Country Lawyer,' that thoroughly delightful book of filial reminiscences. As a novelist his characters are stereotyped and his humor much less pithy. Indeed, it must reluctantly be confessed that 'January Thaw' is sloppy weather." E. V. R. Wyatt
— Commonweal 42:556 S 21 '45 500w
Kirkus 13:278 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Humorous, pleasant, much of it good to read aloud. Recommended for young and old borrowers of all libraries." E. F. Kelly
+ Library J 70:750 S 1 '45 60w

"As the saga of two generations warring for supremacy under one roof with no holds barred, it is guaranteed to leave almost any reader weak with laughter—the kind of relaxing laughter that only the best-managed farce (with real social comment under its slapstick) can produce." William Du Bois
+ N Y Times p4 S 9 '45 850w
New Yorker 21:86 S 15 '45 70w

"For good early reconversion in the novel we ought to award an E for excellence to Bellamy Partridge. It's back to normalcy with a bang, and with a loud guffaw too. . . The whole thing is bathed in light and humor and the fragrance of a good earth that will sustain and tolerate us all. It's a warm and lovely book, the first healing touch of non-war fiction." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 S 22 '45 400w

"Mr Partridge has written a rambling tale, in a jocose, crackerbarrel manner, crowding battles with food rationing and oil shortages in together with wheezes about inside and outside plumbing. There is plenty of homespun philosophy of the 'quaint' variety, and noisy situations, tailor-made for a screwball movie, but it isn't quite as funny as it's supposed to be because actually all the characters have such bad manners the reader can't sympathize with the troubles of either side. In his earlier writings, Mr. Partridge has been able to transpose the full flavor of 'gone are the days' into paper, but in this fictional account of the tribulations of making over an old house and trying to eject rightful co-owners, he isn't quite so successful." L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 600w

"Mr. Partridge has a lavish hand for caricature and satire. All along the line the city slicker whom civilization has made soft is outwitted by the countryman who despises makeshift living. How the two come to terms makes a surprise ending. It's an amusing book if you can take several hours of this kind of humor and portraiture. For this reader's taste, it's a little long-winded. The dice are loaded against Herbert, and Jonathan, who despises quaintness, emerges as a very quaint character." Rose Feld
Weekly Book Review p6 S 9 '45 550w

PASCHKIS, VICTOR A. Industrial electric furnaces and appliances. 2v v 1 232p il $4.90 Interscience

621.396 Electric furnaces (45-3601)

"Electric furnace construction and operation written for the designer and user of industrial heating equipment. Part one, which is largely theory, deals with the selection of electric furnaces, their advantages and disadvantages as compared with other types, and the fundamentals of furnace calculations. Part two describes the actual construction and practical features of electric furnaces with emphasis on those used for steel melting. Diagrams and photographs of furnace types are included." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. D. Van Nordstrand
Chem & Eng N 23:1786 O 10 '45 280w

"The level of presentation and quality of pedagogy is such as to make the book an excellent college text; but there is enough new and constructive thinking in evidence to indicate that its most appreciative readers will be found in industry."
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:272 O '45 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45
Library J 70:119 F 1 '45 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:22 Ap '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:51 Je '45 240w

PASHKO, STANLEY. American boy's omnibus; il. by Abraham Hersh. 384p $2.50 Greenberg

790 Amusements. Games. Sports 45-9217

Information on outdoor life and activities, signaling and codes, how to be handy about the house, games, stunts, sports, athletics, pets, etc., all plainly explained for teen aged boys. No index, but table of contents is arranged by subject.

Reviewed by E. A. Groves
Library J 70:1140 D 1 '45 80w

"It is an ambitious volume, but it will give any boy his money's worth." Meyer Berger
+ N Y Times p22 N 11 '45 180w

PATCHEN, KENNETH. Memoirs of a shy pornographer; an amusement. 242p $3 New directions

45-8438

Novel in the experimental form. It purports to be the experiences of a shy young man who rises to fame thru the publication of a book in which so many words are replaced by asterisks, that it becomes a pornographic sensation.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p15 S 23 '45 360w

"I found this a very funny point of departure for a satire, and indeed, throughout his book, Mr. Patchen gives proof of marked satiric gifts: he is exceedingly knowing, he has a very fertile imagination, and he would seem to be at ease in the world. And yet 'The Memoirs of a Shy Pornographer' never does fulfil the promise of its opening. Both Mr. Patchen's intellect and his fantasy are put at the service of a playful destructiveness; they are the instruments of neither an understanding nor an ordering of Mr. Patchen's world. . That is, whatever his apparent ease, Mr. Patchen is far too disconcerted by the complicated society which has educated him, and to which he has access at so many points, to be able to face up to its literary challenge. Even as a satirist he cannot be effectual because he is himself overwhelmed by society's effects." Diana Trilling
— + Nation 161:292 S 22 '45 240w

"When the journey to the end of the plot is purely fictional, as it is at the start, there are brilliant examples to spare of the jest in dead earnest. . . But when the character of Mr. Patchen himself displaces his contrivance, Budd, there is a tendency toward tongue swallowing and subsequent gagging. Such a deal of semi-obscenities, madnesses and hysteria piles up that neither good-will nor the cadence of the King James Version can save the book. By and large, the intrusion of the author as moralist and poet destroys his labors as a satirist." B. V. Winebaum

— N Y Times p32 O 7 '45 300w

"This book may be disappointing to those who have been hoping that Kenneth Patchen would pull himself together. It is something like his other prose work, 'The Journal of Albion Moonlight,' but more humorous, less poetic, and even less successful."
— New Yorker 21:94 O 27 '45 90w

Reviewed by Jeremy Ingalls
Sat R of Lit 28:26 D 22 '45 850w

PATRICK, JOHN, pseud. See Goggan, J. P.

PATTERSON, GILES J. Journal of a southern student, 1846-48; with letters of a later period; biographical note by Henry Nelson Snyder; ed. with an introd. by Richmond Croom Beatty. 105p $1.75 Vanderbilt univ. press
B or 92 44-53426

"To their neighbors in the Lowlands the people of the Carolina Up-Country seemed in the generations which grew up before the Civil War a priggish lot. . . The famous John C. Calhoun was an eminent sample of the Up-Country stock. . . The writer of this recently discovered diary was born nearly half a century later than Mr. Calhoun. . . But Giles Patterson is an equally authentic sample of the type. As a youth, just turning twenty years, at South Carolina College, between 1846 and 1848, he keeps a solemn record which reminds the reader strongly of characteristic passages in Mr. Calhoun's letters written from Yale in the first years of the century. . . The second half of the book is made up of letters written by Patterson to a nephew at school and at Wofford College. The dates are from 1883 to 1890." N Y Times

Reviewed by Frank Freidel
Am Hist R 50:853 Jl '45 280w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p18 D 31 '44 700w

PATTON, KENNETH L. Hello, man. 114p $1 Automatic ptg. co, 1713 Cuming st, Omaha, Neb.
811

"This little book of poems, which can be read through in an evening, is wholly modernist in form and content. There is but one short piece of rhymed verse; the rest is free verse, with considerable sections printed as prose. . . The author is a humanist, and celebrates man as the crowning product of creation. Indeed his book gives an illuminating illustration of the point of view of the religious humanist who rejects the theist's interpretation of the universe." Crozer Q

Christian Century 62:1011 S 5 '45 170w

"Not a book of great importance, but interesting as an expression of the emotional and prophetic aspects of naturalistic and humanistic religious thought." H. W. Foote
Crozer Q 23:109 Ja '46 250w

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD (BRETT RUTLEDGE, pseud). I'll hate myself in the morning; and, Summer in December. 315p $2.50 Random house 45-577

Two mystery novels: I'll Hate Myself in the Morning; and Summer in December.

Reviewed by C. W. Morton
Atlantic 175:137 Ap '45 500w

Booklist 41:185 F 15 '45

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p13 Ja 17 '45 70w
Kirkus 12:524 N 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:164 F 10 '45 180w

Reviewed by William Du Bois
N Y Times p5 Ja 14 '45 440w

"Unless your tastes are austere, one or the other of these ought to suit you fine."
New Yorker 20:72 Ja 27 '45 90w

"Worth your while."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:20 F 3 '45 40w

"As ever, Mr. Paul rings all the changes on his favorite jest, many of them good for ribald laughter. (The title is the key to the joke.) He provides additional irony and satire of higher voltage, notably in a Boston sequence that should have fanciers of regional comedy in stitches. Nobody can say that Mr. Paul doesn't work like a cross between a Trojan and a beaver in this funny phantasmagoria." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 14 '45 350w

PAUL, LESLIE ALLEN. The annihilation of man; a study of the crisis in the West. 214p $2.50 Harcourt [8s 6d Faber]
901 Civilization—History. History—Philosophy. Economic conditions. Totalitarianism 45-4885

"This is a diagnosis of the sickness of our time, especially of the rise of Nazism and of the strange inability of the modern mind to recognize evil when it appears. . . Mr. Paul finds that our science makes us experts on the subject of means while we are ignorant or careless of ends. . . Mr. Paul discusses the partial failure of the Christian Churches to fulfil their trust, and he finishes with a personal exhortation to sacrifice and service." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman
Ann Am Acad 240:149 Jl '45 480w

"This English soldier sees as the root fact in our modern crisis the destruction of individual significance—'the annihilation of man.' Of course, he is not the first to arrive at that conclusion. But he does it with a species of analysis that is remarkable for its range of interest, unforgettable for its clarity, and has a peculiar importance as coming from a member of the generation that has fought the war and will have to live the peace. Nor is he content with analysis. The implications of the facts he lays bare are followed through with an implacable integrity of mind." Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 62:679 Je 6 '45 950w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 27 '45 700w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 42:485 Ag 31 '45 260w
Foreign Affairs 23:687 Jl '45 50w
Kirkus 13:192 My 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 110w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 9 '44 240w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 161:17 Jl 7 '45 350w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
N Y Times p5 Jl 8 '45 650w

"Mr. Paul will make his reader conscious of the most grievous problem facing us, the reconciliation of material progress and that vital but nebulous thing called the spirit. He will not be the first, of course, and we certainly hope not the last to wrestle in print with this age-old dualism. Perhaps he exaggerates some of the evils he sees. Perhaps, too, some of his interpretations are a little too pressed. But they are closely reasoned and forcefully stated. They probably will be attacked by Marxist and positivist. If so, his attackers had better be ready with convincing moral equivalents. For Mr. Paul cannot be dismissed as certain novelists have been recently with the sneer words, 'Hollywood Buddhism'." W. S. Lynch
Sat R of Lit 28:26 Jl 21 '45 850w
Social Studies 36:284 O '45 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Woodward
Spec 173:132 Ag 11 '44 850w

PAUL, LESLIE ALLEN—Continued

"Mr. Paul's analysis of the defects of Western civilization is so penetrating that the reader would wish he had been able to give in detail his positive reasons for believing that only a return to Christianity can save the West. Perhaps the interest with which this book will certainly be received will lead him to do so in a later volume."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Jl 29 '44 3300w

PAULI, HERTHA ERNESTINE. St. Nicholas' travels; a miraculous biography, pictured by Susanne Suba. 105p $2 Houghton

B or 92 Nicholas, Saint, bp of Myra—Juvenile literature. Christmas 45-10168

Traces the beginning of the St Nicholas legend back to Bishop Nicholas of Myra, and carries the story thru the middle ages, and down to the coming of St Nicholas to America. For ages eight to twelve.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p62 D 2 '45 230w

Booklist 42:133 D 15 '45

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 43:125 N 16 '45 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:450 N '45 80w

Kirkus 13:396 S 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isabel McLaughlin
Library J 71:59 Ja 1 '46 70w

"With its fanciful atmospheric pictures in color, the book would be an excellent addition to home or public libraries, where its interest would not be altogether seasonal." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 16 '45 220w

PAXTON, ANNABEL. See Betts, A. P.

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Forever China [Eng title: Chungking diary]. 573p $3.50 Dodd [12s 6d Heinemann]

951.0425 World war, 1939-1945—China. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. China—Civilization 45-8659

Philosophical diary of a young English author who served for a time as correspondent for the London Times in China. The time covered is from December 1941 to April 1944. He is more interested in the people themselves than in politics, and is more absorbed in their philosophy than in more concrete matters. In his diary he presents a picture of China and the Chinese.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Book Week p4 O 7 '45 90w

Booklist 42:74 N 1 '45

"Forever China will do much in interpreting this ancient and yet new country to the Western world. The book will not be read at one sitting—there is too much meat in it—but it will be read and re-read with profit and pleasure." J. P. Ryan

+ Cath World 162:374 Ja '46 500w

"Mr. Payne has the eye of a painter and the hand of a writer, and he uses both to excellent effect." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 18 '45 650w

"Poets are not always too careful with facts. At times it is faintly disturbing to find Mr. Payne seeing silk rippling on the wing of a DC-3, which happens to be of all-metal construction, or speaking of a friend as having lived in Peking's Forbidden City, evidently confused with the Imperial or Tartar Cities. But on the fundamental truths Mr. Payne is deeply right. He has seen things most of us could not perceive. China's eternal qualities are here portrayed with a knowledge only the artist could gain." Randall Gould

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 O 12 '45 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

"His book is a series of vignettes, shadow-drawings, personal characterizations of men and instantaneous but lasting, deeply cut memory-impressions of things. Out of it comes a coherent picture, a deeply convincing one and intelligible, of the explosively creative forces of China against the millennial greatness of China which this new Chinese age is trying so hard to discount and forget." W. F. Sands

+ Commonweal 43:25 O 19 '45 550w

"A partially successful attempt to convey the 'feel' of China—the haunting beauty of its people and its landscape, the horrors of the war, the spiritual significance of its ancient culture, and the modern spirit which, if given peace, will recreate a great and noble China. Book, however, is too long, unorganized, repetitious, and too often merely rhetorical when it means to be profound. Only those exceptionally interested in China will be courageous enough to read it all. Recommended for large libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ — Library J 70:820 S 15 '45 90w

"It would be the greatest pity if the title of this book led readers to put it aside thinking it is but one more war book by one more war correspondent. In a sense, perhaps, this is true, for the author was for a period correspondent for the 'Times' and reported the bloody battle of Changsha. But in every sense that matters nothing could be more misleading. 'Chungking Diary' is a work of art which owes nothing to politics or war." J. M. D. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 6 '45 420w

"An inspired recorder of the 'majesty of cloudland and riverland,' the shadowy colors on the grass, the blacks and whites of dimly discerned figures on a road at night, Mr. Payne has touched and caught in clear, interwoven detail the remarkable stories of the people who throng the capitals and universities of China." Adrienne Koch

+ N Y Times p28 O 28 '45 550w

"His story, which is done in the form of a diary, is much too long and much too diffuse, but his range of interests is so varied, and his quiet enthusiasm for China so contagious, that the book, in the end, turns out to be something of a literary achievement."

+ — New Yorker 21:98 O 6 '45 120w

"[The author] has written his whole long book in a gentle dream of light and shade, of color and grey nothingness, though here and there we are stirred to poignant waking moments by some apt translation of an ancient poem or a short, swift incident, or perhaps merely a two-sentence painting of some friend encountered in his questioning voyage. Here is a talent so mature that I am uneasy, feeling that perhaps I alone in the reading world have so far missed it. Anyone who cares for words and pictures will care very much for Mr. Payne. Do not be misled, though, by that blurb. This is not a book it is impossible to put down." Emily Hahn

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 O 13 '45 950w

"Readers who turn to this book for information about Chungking as the wartime capital of China, to learn about military and administrative affairs or about plans for post-war reconstruction, will be disappointed. There is little about such matters and what there is is vague. Expectation of episodic description of travel, or of daily life in unfamiliar surroundings, will also be disappointed. Description there is in plenty, scenic, psychological and cultural, and some of it is extremely good. Not a little of it, however, is of the kind which used to be termed 'precious.' The word is applicable, indeed, to the author's treatment of his subject as a whole. . . By no means all will agree that China has produced the greatest artists. Nor will all agree that 'surely, in the whole of God's earth there is nothing so beautiful as a young Chinese smiling.' . . The same may be said of the statement that 'there are Elizabethan love-songs which have so Chinese a flavour that it is almost impossible not to believe that they are translations.' Still, there is a great deal in this book that deserves our thanks." E. M. Gull

+ — Spec 175:66 Jl 20 '45 700w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 1 '45 330w

Reviewed by L. K. Rosinger
Survey G 34:450 N '45 450w

"Journalists' books about Chnia are inevitable. A poet's book is rare and unexpected. Robert Payne, a versatile, thirtyish Englishman who is a professor of literature, a lecturer in naval architecture, a playwright and also a journalist, has done the unexpected book. The result is exciting and evocative."
+ Time 46:106 N 26 '45 550w

"Mr. Payne sees his world and writes about it primarily as a painter, for whom the years pile up a succession of intensely subjective images. The last of these is seen with almost as much eagerness and excitement and freshness as the first, but the whole is greater than the component parts. This may be because Mr. Payne, unlike the majority of diarists, has a theme. It is the greatness of China, at the moment enshrined in her exiled scholars and universities. . . It is a rich book, and there is hardly a page in it that is not worth reading. But perhaps the reader, who must digest in the space of weeks what has taken Mr. Payne two years, will find its five hundred odd pages rather too crammed with plums."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p314 Jl 7 '45 1100w

"The book is a long one, written in lovely, sensitive prose. It can be read without regard to sequence, but all of it is compelling, and there are parts which reveal something of Robert Payne, who is a writer to remember." Thomas Sugrue
+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 7 '45 1100w

PEARSON, HAYDN SANBORN. Country flavor. (Whittlesey house publication) 112p il $2.75 McGraw

630.1 Country life Agr45-362

Collection of brief essays on country living, from milking and Saturday night, to woodsheds and apple butter. The articles first appeared in the New York Times, the Rural New Yorker, or some New England newspapers. Illustrated with photographs of New England scenes.

"Pearson does not write from the viewpoint of an urbanite picnicking in the woods but as a 'countryman,' a term he employs frequently. . . He is more akin to Whitman than Thoreau. One will find a smattering of philosophy in his work, but it celebrates far more the reactions of the senses than the intellect." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p5 O 28 '45 310w
Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 3 '45 90w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"Restful re-echoing and relaxation for urban tension."
+ Kirkus 13:308 Jl 15 '45 90w

"A delightful book, realizing to the full the memories and expectations prompted by its simple title."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 220w

"There is about everything in the book the charm of something rare and right, that may not be here forever. But the scenery that makes these pictures memorable and the spirit that gives this country its flavor, these have the flavor of forever."
+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 16 '45 210w

PEASLEE, AMOS JENKINS. United nations government; pub. by Justice house. 183p $2 Putnam

341.1 United nations, 1942- 45-8608

"An account of the San Francisco conference and the United Nations charter, and an argument for something more than a loose confederation of sovereign powers. There should be, the author declares, a real international government, based upon a written constitution guaranteeing the rights of the nations which are admitted to it and having its executive, legislative and judicial departments." Christian Century

---

Book Week p15 O 14 '45 150w
Christian Century 62:1217 O 31 '45 70w
Reviewed by George Jaffin
Columbia Law R 46:162 Ja '46 130w

PEAT, MRS LOUISA (WATSON). Canada: new world power. 293p $3 McBride

917.1 Canada 45-6122

An informal, personalized, picture of Canada and the Canadians as they were in war-times looking forward to peace times.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p6 Jl 8 '45 270w
Booklist 42:35 O 1 '45

"As a travelogue, covering a general if superficial inquiry, it is interesting and diverting."
Current Hist 9:129 Ag '45 70w

"Chatty, discursive, homey in style—one has to read through the surface to get at the foundations. In appraising the book one realizes that she has given in brief space a feel of Canada's history, of her people, of her variety of interests, resources, occupations—and her vast achievements in transportation (rail and air), in industry and manufacture. But she glosses over Canada's shortcomings in actual application of social legislation; she scarcely even hints at Big Business controls; she slides over matters of constructive plans for peace."
+ — Kirkus 13:171 Ap 15 '45 140w

"In Canada the book seems likely to have a good reception. The zest and affection of the treatment could scarcely fail to please people who are themselves its subject." Alzada Comstock
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 700w
Weekly Book Review p14 N 18 '45 210w

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS. Immortal village; woodblock illustrations by Paul Landacre. 201p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

944.94 Vence, France A45-4042

Brief history of the beautiful Provençal town of Vence near which the author lived for a time in the 1920's. The book is based on an earlier book called Vence, privately printed in a small edition, which was not published in the United States. The author begins with the dark ages and brings the story of Vence thru its wars and struggles down to the revolution and the empire, with a postscript on the present. It is the author's contention that this small town serves as a microcosm for the Europe which will not die.

"In all this is a stirring account of a sunny village where Pan and the flower festivals still survive—written by a man who believes in mankind and France." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 Ag 19 '45 900w
Booklist 42:13 S '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 13 '45 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45
Reviewed by C. G. Paulding
Commonweal 42:458 Ag 24 '45 480w
Current Hist 9:327 O '45 60w
+ Kirkus 13:467 O 15 '45 260w
Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 70:634 Jl '45 120w

"Whatever its significance, Vence's story is rich and warm. As history, its charm is that of an intimate home movie as compared with a commercial newsreel." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p3 S 2 '45 400w

"All the facts are slightly colored with his literary personality, his tolerance, and his gently hopeful outlook for mankind. No one who likes the sound and savor of words can fail to enjoy Mr. Peattie's introduction. . . Mr. Peattie's book appears at an opportune time. A careful reading of it will make it clear to almost anyone that 'history' has got to be improved upon, not by shiftless easy stages, but radically and thoroughly." Elliot Paul
+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 Ag 11 '45 850w
Reviewed by C. K. Bausman
Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 420w

"Mr. Peattie's charming little book is, no doubt, ostensibly no more than the history, by a man without scholarly pretensions of 'a gray old wrinkled town,' which, now hardly more than a village, rises on the hillsides that lie inland from the Riviera, the town of Vence. But, as the author makes evident in a biographical introduction he has added for its present publication, it was written, at Vence itself, under impulsions that were bound to make of it a literary success of wide human interest and appeal."

PEATTIE, D. C.—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p429 S 8 '45 650w

"Already noted for his interpretation of Nature, Mr. Peattie here takes rank with the disciples of Jules Michelet's school. His hero is the people. His book is modest in size and subject, but the flavor, the format, the woodblock illustrations by Paul Landacre all lend it distinction. Despite the author's apologies for lack of formal historical training, he seldom falls into error." Geoffrey Bruun
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 12 '45 500w

PECKHAM, MRS BETTY (CLOCK). Women in aviation. 164p il $2.50 Nelson
396.5 Women in aeronautics 45-8090

"A survey of the field of jobs for women in aviation, both achievements of American women in aviation during the war and opportunities in the postwar years. Covers military services, civil aviation, aircraft production, and teaching, giving brief information, not always complete, on qualifications, training, duties, salaries, and actual personalities in the jobs mentioned. Will be of some interest to seventh and eighth grades but is intended for use with high school and college." Booklist

"Girls who are seeking a place in the aviation industry will find this book an invaluable guide both in deciding what branch of a widely diversified business most interests them and in planning to fit themselves for such work." G. A. Scheuer
+ Book Week p12 S 16 '45 310w
Booklist 42:61 O 15 '45

"An excellent survey from the vocational standpoint. . . Information as to training, duties, salary and qualifications is specific and well arranged. Photographs, a bibliography and a good index add to the book's usefulness." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:467 N '45 90w
+ Kirkus 13:402 S 1 '45 70w
Reviewed by Eleanor Kidder
Library J 70:1094 N 15 '45 70w
Reviewed by Frederick Graham
N Y Times p20 N 11 '45 180w

PEECH, S. D. Children's children. 362p $3.50 Bittner, H.

"The story follows the progress of an average German family from the time of the Napoleonic wars, through the abortive revolution of 1848, the development of the monarchy with its absorption of the great Protestant tradition, the disillusioned aftermath of World War I with its moral degeneration, and the confusion which made Hitlerism possible." Book Week

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Book Week p17 S 23 '45 100w

"The best section of the book deals with Jarni's childhood and youth. The later chapters on her political development are hastily and inadequately motivated and somehow lack sincerity." Martha Dodd
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:66 O 13 '45 600w

PEEPLES, EDWIN AUGUSTUS. Swing low. 293p $2.50 Houghton
45-2936

Story of a Negro, Willy Mack, and his wife, Amy. Willy Mack, country bred and country loving, is persuaded by Amy to move to Atlanta. Though Willy finds some friends and help there, ultimately he is defeated by prejudice, intolerance and injustice and forced to return to the country.

"The story preaches no sermons, it lets the violence of the narrative point out the bad spots. The soft slurred speech of the Negroes is beautifully conveyed. It's a first novel that augurs very well indeed."
+ Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45
Kirkus 13:18 Ja 15 '45 130w

"When he is telling the simple story of Willy Mack . . . Mr. Peeples is a gifted novelist writing of human beings with great tenderness. It is when he writes of the Negro as a mass in, I am sure, an unintentionally patronizing manner, that one is acutely conscious that this is a white man creating his own impression of Negro life in the South." Bucklin Moon
+ — New Repub 112:649 My 7 '45 650w

"A competent and interesting novel. . . Mr. Peeples grapples honestly and conscientiously with a difficult problem and writes of the Negro neither as a simple-minded oaf incapable of serious feeling nor as an oppressed and sinless child of nature, but, kindly and movingly, as a human being." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 25 '45 500w

"The realest and most pitiful portrait that has come out of the South in a long time."
+ New Yorker 21:83 Mr 31 '45 110w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Peeples has added nothing new to an old and sad chronicle. . . With all due respect to Mr. Peeples, who has written a moving story around this ancient theme, it still is unfortunate there exists in the book no hint of a remedy of any sort. Of diagnoses we have a plethora, of therapy none at all." Paul Flowers
— + Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ag 11 '45 450w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 420w

"The novel is pitched in a minor key, and the author's conception of the life of the Negro farmer seems somewhat idealized. But emerging from the whole is a powerful image of an honest man whose natural integrity cannot be corrupted, even by the supreme indignity of slum life in a Southern city."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:5 Je '45 240w

" 'Swing Low' is a story of domestic life not only on the primitive level but with the sordid appurtenances that the perversion of the civilized adds to it. The fights, the quarrels, the liquorings-up, the love-makings are all on the lowest possible human level—but they remain human and, as portrayed by Mr. Peeples, sympathetically understandable." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 25 '45 850w

PEFFER, NATHANIEL. America's place in the world. 236p $2.75 Viking
327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations 45-35174

"Study of our international relations. . . Mr. Peffer, who writes like a man talking and not like an orator shouting, quietly points out that we have three alternatives in the world of the future. We can become an international lone wolf, building up our national might and launching upon a program of imperial expansion; we can make a power alliance with a nation or group of nations that have similar ambitions; or we can be a member of the family of nations and, as a member of that family, work toward international law, justice, and security." (New Yorker) Index.

"On the whole, the book is an able attempt to solve a problem which may be too difficult for completely logical treatment. Its perusal will amply repay the reader; for it deals with the most fundamental political alternatives of our times." B. H. Williams
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1213 D '45 550w
Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p9 Ag 26 '45 550w
Booklist 42:32 O 1 '45
Bookmark 6:5 N '45

"Altogether this book is the best summation of the choices now open to America and the most able argument for an all-out American commitment to a peace policy this reviewer has seen." H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 62:1351 D 5 '45 1000w

"'America's Place in the World' is more than a plea for American membership in an orderly community of nations. It is an education in world citizenship, in the live-and-let-live spirit which has characterized so much of the best of American life." Carlyle Morgan
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 24 '45 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
Commonweal 42:580 S 28 '45 650w

Kirkus 13:288 Jl 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard
Nation 161:260 S 15 '45 900w

Reviewed by Herbert Lyons
New Repub 113:322 S 10 '45 90w

"This is an excellent book. People do not like a scolding, but that does not necessarily mean that we do not all need a little scolding, and Mr. Peffer has given us one with far more logic than exhortation. To a surprising extent, on a subject on which he clearly feels deeply, he has avoided the habit of telling us we 'must' do this and that and there is no alternative. He gives the reader an alternative to 'the way of prevention' but indicates the cost of the alternative, which is fair enough. Only at one point does he seem to slip away from this principle, and this is on his conclusion about the international organization and the 'irreducible minimum.' If the new league is not able to punish one of the Big Five, he says, 'then nothing has been accomplished.'" J. B. Reston
+ — N Y Times p1 Ag 26 '45 2150w

"Judicious and levelheaded study. . . An ideal gift for anybody's congressman."
+ New Yorker 21:63 Ag 25 '45 120w

"This book was written before the dawn of that atomic age into which the world is now so fearfully peering. Its reasoning is incisive and convincing—for Mr. Peffer writes with clarity and cogency—even against the background of what now seems to be that relatively innocent era before whole cities were so literally at the mercy of a single enemy bomb." F. R. Dulles
+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 S 1 '45 1100w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 26 '45 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 41:109 N '45

PEGIS, ANTON CHARLES, ed. See Thomas Aquinas, Saint. Basic writings

PEIRCE, WALDO, il. Children's hour. (Hyperion bk) 71p $2 Duell

821.08 Children's poetry—Collections 44-9741

Collection of fifty-five famous and mostly well-known poems for children, illustrated in color and in black and white.

"There is the beauty that children crave in this choice collection of the best in American and English literature. We would choose it for our own children to grow up with."
+ Cath World 160:280 D '44 40w

"An effective looking book and a good piece of bookmaking—but, personally, I don't like the Waldo Peirce type of modernism for a text drawn from the heritage of the past."
+ — Kirkus 12:449 O 1 '44 90w

"The freedom of fancy and the wild sweet gaiety of childhood which they embody are truly and sensitively portrayed by Waldo Peirce. Some of his black and white drawings may be a trifle sketchy for young eyes to appreciate, but the colors, the imagination and the verve of the majority make this an exciting introduction to poetry." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p25 F 11 '45 130w

Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 110w

"All things considered, this is now my favorite collection of poetry for children. This is not altogether for the lively colored pictures dancing over its large pages, though these give unexpected sidelights on the poems; nor because the poems are many, for there are but fifty-five; nor that they were written especially for children, as most of these were not. It is because in all these lovely pages is not one poem that is not pure beauty. A child who owns this book and reads, or has it read to him, often enough to get it tucked into his subconscious, will be richer when the time comes later in life when he needs enrichment."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 12 '44 220w

PELLOWE, WILLIAM CHARLES SMITHSON. Mark Twain; pilgrim from Hannibal. 301p $2 il Hobson bk press

B or 92 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud) 45-7724

"A fresh and breezy study of the great humorist's life and personality. Some new material is introduced, and the old is used with good judgment, especially in discussing Mark's growing bitterness and disillusionment." (Christian Century) Bibliography.

+ Christian Century 62:935 Ag 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 26 '45 600w

PELZER, KARL JOSEF. Pioneer settlement in the Asiatic tropics; studies in land utilization and agricultural colonization in southeastern Asia. (Institute of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 290p il maps $5 Am. geographical soc.

333.7 Land utilization. Agricultural colonies. Agriculture—Asia, Southeast 45-9146

"Before the outbreak of the Japanese war momentous population movements were in progress in Asia. . . Mr. Pelzer describes in minute detail the migrations which, since the beginning of this century, are slowly changing the ethnological aspects of the Philippine and Indonesian communities. . . In his book, which is abundantly provided with charts, maps, statistics and illustrations, Mr. Pelzer describes the gradual evolution of tropic land utilization from the 'hunting and gathering' stage to that of highly developed agriculture on irrigated fields. He shows how the different forms of native and western agriculture practiced on the tropical islands may affect the soil and thus create population problems even in relatively thinly settled areas. From this introduction he proceeds to description of the principal colonization attempts in the Philippines and the Netherlands Indies and then discusses the respective merits of these government-sponsored enterprises." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Pelzer writes with competence about the problems of land and of agricultural colonization in the two countries. Colonization in the tropics presents problems quite different from that of land settlements in the temperate zone; Dr. Pelzer discusses these problems with thoroughness and insight." Amry Vandenbosch
+ Ann Am Acad 242:173 N '45 400w

Foreign Affairs 24:171 O '45 40w

"Mr. Pelzer's book is of the greatest importance to all students of the southeastern Asiatic countries. In some cases, when drawing his conclusions, the author seems carried away by his predilection for one and his antipathy against another form of government in tropical countries." B. H. M. Vlekke
+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 26 '45 900w

PENDAR, KENNETH WHITTEMORE. Adventure in diplomacy; our French dilemma. 280p $3 Dodd

940.532273 World war, 1939-1945—Africa, North. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-10409

From June, 1941 until July, 1943 the author was one of a group of special control officers sent to North Africa to observe American dealings with Vichy, de Gaulle, and the French

PENDAR, K. W.—Continued
generally. His account of his experiences is spiced with many anecdotes of Roosevelt and Churchill and other high ranking officials. Index.

"Mr. Pendar's sincerity is beyond question. His views are worthy of consideration as opinion, but they should not be accepted as fact without considerably more supporting evidence than he is able to muster in this volume. In any case, history and not an individual observer must write the final judgment on Charles de Gaulle." Homer Metz

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 22 '45 800w

"This eyewitness account both defends and condemns American diplomacy in North Africa and is tremendously valuable as a guide to our immediate and future relations with France. More exciting than fiction. Highly recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 140w

"As a gossipy account of high life and low intrigue Pendar's book makes pleasant reading. Unwittingly, moreover, it contributes to a solution of the mystery of our war-time policies toward France. For despite its trivialities and many factual inaccuracies, the book reveals with naive frankness what Bob Murphy's boys really were up to." Percy Winner

Nation 162:52 Ja 12 '46 800w

"A book that is considerably more than just an exciting adventure story. Mr. Pendar's defense of American diplomacy in the early stages of the North African exploit, and his carefully reasoned condemnation of it after the landings, seem the most convincing that have yet appeared in print in this country. His almost passionate arraignment of the de Gaulle movement and its leader . . . may be something else again, but he presents a good deal of evidence (along with all the gossip) which deserves an airing."

+ New Yorker 21:83 D 22 '45 120w

"Of its kind it is a good book—honest, unpretentious, and deeply sincere. Yet it is neither 'objective' nor, at times, entirely fair. Because its author was himself one of the executants of our French policy, it hardly could be." Varian Fry

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:7 D 15 '45 2000w

"There are interesting, and often revealing, footnotes to history. But Mr. Pendar is ambitious to write some of the main text. At least a third of his book, including the last three chapters, is a straightforward and not very penetrating attack on De Gaulle and Gaullism. We have heard all of it before. . . The Gaullists, to Mr. Pendar, were an evil collection of conspirators, fanatics, and time-servers. They used Gestapo methods, and worse, to push aside the sound patriots who wanted to follow Giraud. . . Even two years, certainly six months, ago this did not sound plausible. Now, after the October elections in France, it sounds merely stupid. Most good observers of things French, though they will admit that many of the facts Mr. Pendar brings up are true enough . . . would hold that his broad generalization is basically untrue. . . Mr. Pendar says he likes the French people. One suspects, from this uneven book, that he really likes them only when they are nice children, and behave themselves, according to his ideas." Crane Brinton

— Weekly Book Review p2 D 16 '45 1350w

PENDRAY, EDWARD. Coming age of rocket power. 244p il $3.50 Harper

629.13338 Rockets (aeronautics) 45-4420

"This book is the story of rocket power; what it is, how it works, how it comes to be and what it promises for the future. So far as [the author knows], it is the first attempt in any language to show the relation of the various kinds of rocket power now at work, and provide a simple explanation for the new kind of engine which rocket power represents." p. 2

"One of the organizers of the American Rocket Society and builder of experimental rockets, Pendray writes with authority. His scientific standards are high, but this in no way detracts from the entertainment value of his book. 'The Coming Age of Rocket Power' sets a new high in the reporting of this promising tool of man." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p10 Je 3 '45 270w

Booklist 41:335 Jl 15 '45

Bookmark 6:7 N '45

Reviewed by D. H. Killeffer

Chem & Eng N 23:1377 Ag 10 '45 400w

Library J 70:638 Jl '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:29 Ap '45

"This is a most readable book that will appeal to those whose interest has been stirred by the fragmentary accounts in the war news of the rocket as a weapon and as a means of propulsion." M. T. Martin

+ N Y Times p14 Je 24 '45 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:65 D '45 260w

"For one who wants to be prepared for these developments, by knowing what rockets have done in the past, and what they are capable of doing, Mr. Pendray's book is an authoritative and fascinating source of information." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ag 19 '45 260w

PERKINS, MARY. Speaking of how to pray. 276p $2.75 Sheed

264.1 Prayer 44-40282

"In the first part we are given a simple outline of Catholic teaching on God, the Creation, the Fall, the Incarnation, the Redemption, and the Church as the Mystical Body of Christ. In the second part we are shown how to unite ourselves to Christ in prayer, through the sacraments, the Mass, the Blessed Eucharist, the Divine Office, the sacramentals, and the liturgical year." Cath World

---

"The book is a mine of goodly advice on the science of prayer." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 160:376 Ja '45 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

Commonweal 42:172 Je 1 '45 280w

Reviewed by T. S. Hanrahan

Springf'd Republican p4 F 26 '45 420w

PERRAULT, CHARLES. French fairy tales; retold, with foreword, by Louis Untermeyer; il. by Gustave Doré. [48p] $1.75 Didier pubs.

398.2 Fairy tales 46-25020

"Puss in Boots is here, and Sleeping Beauty, Little Red Riding Hood and Hop-o'-My-Thumb and The Fairy, in a neat book designed by Paul McPharlin, in which the tales are introduced to American children by Louis Untermeyer." Weekly Book Review

---

Cath World 162:379 Ja '46 150w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 43:294 D 28 '45 40w

Kirkus 13:492 N 1 '45 70w

"The stories are the real Perrault, the Wolf actually gobbles up both the Grandmother and Little Red Riding Hood and never gives up either one. Here is one reader who grieves for the omission of Bluebeard, but otherwise has no feeling but joy in the book." Eudora Welty

+ N Y Times p7 N 11 '45 180w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 100w

"Here are immortal little romances by which Perrault enriched the children's literature of France. . . What makes it an event to more than children is the reappearance of the long-gone but unforgotten illustrations of Gustave Doré."

+ Weekly Book Review p7 N 11 '45 230w

PERRY, ENOS J., ed. Artificial insemination of farm animals, by Enos J. Perry, John W. Bartlett [and others]. 265p il $3.50 Rutgers univ. press

636.0824 Impregnation, Artificial. Domestic animals Agr45-146

"Seven authors are here brought together in a single volume to present knowledge of the methods, together with their advantages and disadvantages, of artificial insemination in cattle, sheep, horses and jackstock, poultry, and swine, with particular emphasis on dairy cattle in the United States. The core of the book consists of the five chapters in which the above mentioned animals are discussed individually. Detailed information is offered on techniques, equipment, and those aspects of the reproductive tract and its physiology essential to the practical breeder." U S Quarterly Bkl

Booklist 41:317 Jl 1 '45

"The book is written primarily for the breeder, and maintains a practical tone throughout. Although the quality of presentation varies with the different authors, and the attempt to condense genetics and livestock improvement in a short space is not entirely satisfactory, the book serves its purpose in giving to the breeder sufficiently detailed information for his needs; at the same time, it gives to other readers a comprehensive survey of the field."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:41 S '45 200w

PERRY, JOSEPHINE. Electrical industry. (America at work) 128p il $1.75 Longmans

621.3 Electric engineering—Juvenile literature 45-5073

A non-technical, brief description of the industry which develops and manufactures machinery, apparatus and supplies for use directly in the generation, transmission, storage and utilization of electric energy.

Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45

"Technicalities are at a minimum; explanations are as clear and accurate as possible, the material having been gotten mostly from the industry itself. Of particular interest to students of science or classes in vocational guidance in junior high school." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 70:640 Jl '45 80w

"Chapters on 'Electricity in Modern Transportation' and 'Electricity in Industry' offer much timely information and there are also discussions of electronics and new electrical developments. The text, illustrated with many photographs, is clear, up to date and interesting." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p21 Jl 29 '45 100w
Social Studies 36:284 O '45 10w
Reviewed by E. A. Lissfelt
Social Studies 37:43 Ja '46 180w
Springf'd Republican p4d S 9 '45 60w
Wis Lib Bul 41:114 N '45

PERRY, JOSEPHINE. Glass industry. (America at work) 128p il $1.75 Longmans

666.1 Glass manufacture and trade—Juvenile literature 45-5074

"This book on one of the oldest of all industries is written to give boys and girls a composite picture of the skills and vision, the expert workmanship and the co-operation among scientists that have brought the art of glassmaking to its present status." School & Society

Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45
Reviewed by M. M. Smith
Library J 70:640 Jl '45 70w

"It is all written in nontechnical language and illustrated with excellent photographs." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p21 Jl 29 '45 160w
School & Society 61:351 My 26 '45 50w
Social Studies 36:284 O '45 10w
Reviewed by E. A. Lissfelt
Social Studies 37:44 Ja '46 180w
Wis Lib Bul 41:114 N '45

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. The hope for immortality. 28p $1 Vanguard

237.2 Immortality 45-3776

A brief essay, reprinted from the Hibbert Journal, in which the author discusses the meaning of life and death, and the justification of a belief in immortality.

Booklist 41:315 Jl 1 '45

"This slender volume by Harvard's Professor Perry is a clarion of hope, a call to courage for those who fear death. It is as meticulously devised, as clearly outlined as any of the larger works of this great American scholar, and each sentence is a tribute to the verbal economy of a disciplined mind."
+ Kirkus 13:132 Mr 15 '45 250w
Reviewed by G. O. Kelley
Library J 70:218 Mr 1 '45 110w

"This brief essay on man's age-long inquiry into his future reveals the practised artistry of a literary lifetime. It deserves to rank with those little masterpieces which indicate that books like prayers can be great when short." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 15 '45 320w

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. One world in the making. 275p $3 Current bks.

321.041 International cooperation 45-9416

"This book is the outgrowth of a series of public lectures delivered before the Lowell Institute in Boston in March 1945." (Pref) "Two words run all through Dr. Perry's book, two words which it is nice to think are growing fashionable again, morality and conscience. Inherent in the statements that run all through his chapters is the sense of today's most bewildering paradox. While the world becomes smaller through technology and otherwise, the individual's geographic responsibilities grow larger and larger until they truly reach the limits of the earth. No longer is there any escape through remoteness and unawareness. The 'unity of dwelling place' has been achieved. There remains the much more difficult task of learning to live there in peace and abundance. Professor Perry, a man of no mean ambition, sets forth 'the principles and methods by which men can hope to live safely and well in this greater world.' " (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p5 N 18 '45 360w
Booklist 42:123 D 15 '45

"It is not a cumbersome volume. Neither is it a book to be quickly or even easily read. The college professor seems sometimes not to realize that what is so simple, or fundamental, to him, demands elucidation to those not of the elect. But as an explorer, perhaps also as an architect, Professor Perry envisions a desired, and perhaps you will feel when you have finished his book, a stupendous or unobtainable objective." F. L. Perrin
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 28 '45 550w
Kirkus 13:447 O 1 '45 110w

"If statesmen on the verge of disagreeing, if publicists indignant at opposition, if ordinary puzzled people would read Professor Perry carefully our policies would gain in confidence and wisdom." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p4 N 4 '45 700w
New Yorker 21:66 D 29 '45 160w

"There is about this analysis of world problems a quality rarely found in books of its type today. It is completely devoid of the cultism that characterizes so many studies of current affairs and absolutely unmarred by the queasy frenzy which too many of our authors regard as a substitute for honest consideration. Reading Dr. Perry's lectures, one has the sense of sitting at the feet of a sage—a word which will no doubt annoy the author, but which does carry the feeling of easy erudition, calm analysis, and clear expression which distinguish his words." W. S. Lynch

PERRY, RALPH BARTON—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 O 27 '45 800w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 34:447 N '45 1550w

"For his task Mr. Perry is exceptionally well equipped. Thoroughly grounded in technical philosophy, to which he has made notable contributions, editor of the writings and chief authority on the thought of William James, he emerged from his academic environment with the outbreak of the war. (He had been a major in the first world war.) For the last five years he has been a leader of university opinion on the subject of war, and has been remarkably effective in stimulating scholarly study of its problems and of the planning of the peace. This book is the fruit of wide and deep reading and thought. It is the work of a sound scholar who has found time and energy to be a good citizen." W. A. Neilson
+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 21 '45 1300w

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. Puritanism and democracy. 688p $5 Vanguard
917.3 U.S.—Civilization. Puritans. Democracy 44-41893

"Author, well-known professor of philosophy at Harvard, believes that puritanism and democracy are the two ideals which have contributed most to America's heritage, and are its chief source of spiritual vitality today and for the future. He analyzes at great length the contributions of both to America's spiritual growth. Both have their weaknesses which must be rejected, but both have great qualities which must be reaffirmed and renewed to become a dynamic faith, the only hope of mankind." Library J

"No one is likely to complain about the extent or the depth of the author's reading. But in his portrayal of Puritanism he tends, in this reviewer's opinion, to group the Puritans too broadly under the banner of Calvinism . . . to distinguish too little between New England and English Puritan tenets, and, perhaps, to distinguish too greatly between Puritan and Anglican influences. . . But these are minor concerns, even debatable points, in proportion to the overall excellence of Professor Perry's study. As a weighty contribution to the intelligent appreciation and understanding of Americanism and the traditional bases thereof, this book deserves a high priority rating." R. P. Stearns
+ — Am Hist R 51:129 O '45 800w

"The examination of liberty that Professor Perry offers deserves the sober and thoughtful attention of all who are serious in their belief in democracy. Moreover, we are indebted to the author for showing in so forceful a way that political theory must be concerned with theology, for theology and its attendant philosophical statements lead directly to the issue of what man is really like, his moral nature and his place in the life of reason." F. G. Wilson
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1199 D '45 750w

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p3 Ja 28 '45 900w
Booklist 41:169 F 1 '45
Bookmark 6:5 Ja '45
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 11 '45 500w
Kirkus 12:394 S 1 '44 210w

"Very important contribution to the literature of American culture—one that compares with Parrington and Beard. However, it is most difficult reading and will appeal only to superior readers." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 69:1103 D 15 '44 110w

"Professor Perry's book is important, challenging, and uneven. No one will be satisfied with all of it. But it has something for everybody. It is both a thesaurus of democratic thought and an arsenal of democratic defense. It shows not only a love of ideas but a recognition that they count in history. But it does not adequately explain why they count and how." Sidney Hook
+ — Nation 160:603 My 26 '45 2200w

Reviewed by A. H. Pekelis
New Repub 112:520 Ap 16 '45 1500w

"The subject to which Professor Perry has addressed himself has received too little consideration and we are profoundly in his debt for having opened new vistas on the treasures of our past. When that theme is fully explored it may be found that the glaring errors of Puritanism may have tempted us to sacrifice its profundities to our disadvantage in an even larger measure than Professor Perry's study suggests." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 7 '45 1250w

"[His] is not a very easy thesis and, since Mr. Perry takes plenty of time to argue it (six hundred and eighty-eight pages, with notes and index) it doesn't make for a very easy-to-read book. I can't, however, think of any recent volume on the subject more worth going through or fuller of good sense; this is the best thing of its kind, so far as I know, since George Santayana's 'Character and Opinion in the United States.' Mr. Perry, having ground a rather wide lens for himself, uses it to good advantage. He never lets his book get out of focus, and sticks to his subject like a cocklebur, and by the time he has finished he has touched upon almost every aspect of American life and history." Hamilton Basso
+ New Yorker 20:74 Ja 13 '45 750w

"Mr. Perry has in recent years established himself as not only a philosophic thinker, but an expositor of the practical significance of democracy for our nation and the world. He has plunged into the hot arena of public affairs to assert the faith that is in him. The country owes him no small debt for the eloquence and pertinacity with which, in years of confusion, he has demonstrated the impossibility of vindicating democracy at home without helping to vindicate and defend it abroad. . . Mr. Perry is entitled to a special hearing when he devotes his first major work in nearly ten years to a historical examination of the roots of the American spirit, and an appraisal of the problems and duties of democracy today." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 28:7 Ja 13 '45 1750w
Time 45:94 Ja 22 '45 700w

"The author is a careful scholar, and his arguments will be best appreciated by scholars. But he writes with earnest conviction in this instance on a theme of importance to all thoughtful men faced with personal decisions on the ideas which he analyzes."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:11 Je '45 260w

"[In spite of] all its tendency to abstractness, this is an important and a valuable book, characterized by profound insights and brilliant writing. In reminding us again—for it is something we have forgotten rather than something we never knew—how much we owe to Puritanism, Mr. Perry has given new strength to our democratic tradition. In formulating an accommodation—even a partial one—between Puritanism and democracy, he has illuminated our understanding of the origins and nature of democracy. In emphasizing those elements of Puritanism that are still valid he has given us a new weapon in our fight against evil. In insisting upon the philosophical, the rational, the logical, validity of democracy he has strengthened our convictions and justified our practices. What we need now is an exhaustive annotation of Mr. Perry's work which will substantiate theories and speculations and logic by history and bridge the gap between philosophy and experience." H. S. Commager
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 7 '45 1800w
Wis Lib Bul 41:37 Mr '45

"Professor Perry's work is one of the most systematic treatments of American democracy ever to appear. It is also one of the most comprehensive and penetrating. This is because Professor Perry pitches his discussion at a level which avoids the rhetorical banalities of the professional politician on the one hand and the purely descriptive generalization of the professional political theorist on the other. In a fundamental sense, his approach is philosophic and moral." D. F. Bowers
+ Yale R ns 34:749 summer '45 850w

PESOTTA, ROSE. Bread upon the waters; ed. by John Nicholas Beffel. 435p $3 Dodd

331.88 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Trade unions—U.S. International ladies' garment workers' union 44-47532

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by Eugene Forsey
Canadian Hist R 26:199 Je '45 450w

"No economic professor, in a dozen surveys from the outside, could have told the story of exploited labor with such revealing detail and example. The book has no literary style. It does not need it. The naïve insertion of personal reactions, and geographical and historical data here and there, in the journeys from coast to coast, on various assignments, slows the book down a bit. But not enough to halt the interested reader." P. P. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 24 '45 450w

New Repub 112:366 Mr 12 '45 180w

"This is a personal record which emphasizes the human side of labor organization." Russell Porter
+ N Y Times p16 Mr 25 '45 440w

"This is a good book. It is a book filled with humor and pathos, and it should take its place on the shelf along with Louis Adamic's 'Dynamite' and McAllister Coleman's 'Men and Coal,' a book which helps you understand the psychology of workers and the economics of their union." Theresa Wolfson
+ Survey 81:94 Mr '45 450w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 Mr '45 160w
Wis Lib Bul 41:32 F '45

PETERSEN, HERMAN. Country chronicle. 202p $2.50 Duell

818 Country life 45-3243

"Twenty years ago, a man who made his living by writing mystery stories for the pulp magazines yielded to the wishes of his wife and bought a small farm in upper New York State. He had no intention of being a farmer of any kind. . . All Herman Petersen asked was to be left alone to do his daily stint of writing. . . After several years of holding aloof from the village in order to concentrate on his work, he found that something called a Depression was interfering with his market. An additional source of income seemed imperative and he ended by being the village postmaster and everybody's friend." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Rosemary Taylor
Book Week p6 Mr 25 '45 280w
Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45

"Country life as Mr. Petersen has seen it, first with almost alien eyes, later with the curiosity of a genuine hillman, furnishes the material of a racy, down-to-earth book. His character studies of the neighbors are amusing, yet appreciative. . . Besides presenting a choice gallery of characters, Mr. Petersen tells many honest facts about farm economics in the present century. . . This is the serious side of a book that is pungent and humorous, and dashed with a certain amount of innocent indecorum." R. K. W.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 31 '45 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45
+ Kirkus 13:31 Ja 15 '45 170w

"It is an honest and an interesting account, full of humor, sharp characterization, and solid information." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 1 '45 450w

"The author wavers between an introspective account of a writer's adjustment to hill life and a frank and amusing country chronicle. When he forgets himself and lets his pen wander to the affairs of his neighbors he writes with gusto and a salty humor." Page Cooper
Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 25 '45 850w

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER), and PETERSHAM, MISKA. Rooster crows. 64p il $2 Macmillan

"[This book] has for its subtitle 'a Book of American Rhymes and Jingles.' It is an attractive presentation in colored pictures and big print. . . There are counting out rhymes and finger games and familiar jingles like 'Yankee Doodle Went to Town.'" Library J

Kirkus 13:421 S 15 '45 130w

"The illustrations are full of fun. I am sure it is going to be a book everyone will enjoy." M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p26 D 9 '45 180w
New Yorker 21:122 D 8 '45 60w
Weekly Book Review p7 N 11 '45 230w

PETERSHAM, MAUD, and PETERSHAM, MISKA, il. See Bible. New Testament. Gospels. Story of Jesus

PETERSON, FLORENCE. American labor unions; what they are and how they work. 338p $3 Harper

331.88 Trade unions—U.S. 45-8574

"This volume, following a brief historical summary of the development of labor organizations in the United States, describes the structural characteristics of labor unions and their federated bodies, their rules and qualifications for membership, and their internal government and finances. The procedural arrangements of the various unions for dealing with employers and methods used to settle employer-employee disputes are discussed. The growing importance of the labor press and union educational activities are indicated. In Part V is a glossary of 260 labor terms now in common use, as well as a list of the various unions having membership in each important industry." Pref

Booklist 42:52 O 15 '45

"This comprehensive handbook is written in as popular a style as a serious discussion of the subject would allow; it is highly informative."
+ Commonweal 42:628 O 12 '45 90w
Kirkus 13:267 Je 15 '45 170w

"The author has written of the external formal aspects of unionism, with little inquiry into the background. Her book sticks to the record, makes no prophecies, no recommendations." N. K. B.
N Y Times p22 N 4 '45 140w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 26 '45 240w

"Florence Peterson's book is an excellent compilation of facts about the structure of the labor movement—some of them too little known. As director of the Industrial Relations Division of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, Miss Peterson has had a wealth of material at her disposal. She has presented this in the dispassionate manner and with the skill of an experienced, careful research technician. It is disappointing, however, to find so few evidences of a critical appraisal of the facts so painstakingly assembled." Elinore Herrick
+ — Weekly Book Review p14 S 23 '45 1150w

PETERSON, HOUSTON, and LYNCH, WILLIAM STANG, eds. Poet to poet; a treasury of golden criticism. 368p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

808.81 Poetry—Collections. Poets 45-4980

A collection of selections from the poetry of all nations and times, in which poets have written in praise of fellow poets. The arrangement is chronological by the poet written about, beginning with a poem in praise of David by an eighteenth century poet, Christopher Smart, and ending with a poem on William Butler Yeats by W. H. Auden. Indexes of subjects, authors, titles and first lines.

Booklist 41:298 Je 15 '45

PETERSON, HOUSTON—Continued

"A collection largely English, classical rather than catholic, and limited by the specific stricture of selection."

Kirkus 13:122 Mr 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by J. G. Fletcher

Poetry 66:345 S '45 1100w

"A book for the special shelf of any poetry lover." W. R. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 Je 16 '45 360w

"One remembers gratefully the labor of love done in this field so well by John Holmes, who edited 'The Poet's Work.' But as a fragrant and only slightly over-sweet garland to place upon literary graves, 'Poet to Poet' is eminently satisfactory." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 4 '45 300w

PETTY, MARY (MRS ALAN DUNN). This Petty pace; a book of drawings; with a preface by James Thurber. [99p] $3.50 Knopf

741.5 Humor, Pictorial. Caricatures and cartoons 45-9677

A collection of drawings culled from the New Yorker's files of more than twenty years. Eight of the drawings, originally published as cover designs, are reproduced in color.

Kirkus 13:416 S 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Dawn Powell

Nation 162:20 Ja 5 '46 1150w

"If you happen to be interested in sheer perfection, you might like to rifle through 'This Petty Pace,' a selection of Mary Petty's New Yorker drawings. The book's jacket blurb brackets Miss Petty with Hogarth and Daumier, and the jacket blurb (for perhaps the first time in the history of publishing) is absolutely right." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p5 N 11 '45 700w

New Yorker 21:107 N 10 '45 50w

"Marvelous in detail and sheer craftsmanship, the drawings in 'This Petty Pace' create a magic realm of wit, somewhere between Beardsley and Beerbohm. They are executed with infinite care, and yet the effect is utterly relaxed. The captions are feminine, feline and unforgettable. The artist's men resemble desiccated locusts of aristocratic fragility, and her women are uncomfortably akin to the praying mantis, who bites the head off her mate when she becomes biologically bored by his ardor." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 2 '45 310w

PEZAS, MIKIA. Price of liberty. 261p $3 Washburn

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Greek. World war, 1939—Greece 45-2665

Personal narrative of a young Greek who fought against the Italians and Germans in defense of his native land, then escaped to North Africa. His book is a combination of accounts of his own experiences and the stories told him by men and women he encountered.

"By attempting to be 'literary' he has taken all the life out of his narrative. His people are only shadows; their conversation is stilted and unnatural. The most horrifying incidents somehow strike us as being 'arty' and leave us cold. This is not saying that there are not some interesting passages in the book, but on the whole the volume is disappointing. One would expect a more significant document from the pen of a man who has gone through such an experience." Ralph Korngold

— + Book Week p2 Mr 25 '45 310w

Booklist 41:235 Ap 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

Foreign Affairs 23:699 Jl '45 30w

"Written in smooth idiomatic English with great human appeal, this is the perfect companion piece for Lord Dunsany's Guerrilla, and one of the best adventure stories of the war."

+ Horn Bk 21:209 My '45 140w

"A modest, warmhearted first person narrative of the Greek struggle, by an Athenian lawyer who has been part of it, and who escaped after some months of his country's occupation."

+ Kirkus 13:27 Ja 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by J. C. Shipman

Library J 70:163 F 15 '45 110w

"Pezas describes what happened to him simply and vividly, but always in personal terms. What interests him are the people he meets, and the stories of their lives. The book is full of these stories, obviously heightened, romanticized, pastoralized and filled with coincidences. One remembers from The Price of Liberty not the coming of the Germans to Athens, but rather the leper in the cave, Ganymede's love affair and the death of the author's pet blackbird." R. G. Davis

+ New Repub 112:526 Ap 16 '45 150w

"A discursive book which lags now and then. But on the whole the picture of Greece that emerges is worth the slow going—a picture that makes all the more tragic the recent blood-letting on the shores of the Aegean." John Desmond

+ — N Y Times p27 Mr 25 '45 330w

New Yorker 21:84 Mr 31 '45 140w

"So easily does Mr Pezas write that one imagines his background to be both varied and interesting, and it is. The son of a Greek diplomat, he has lived in seven countries, and speaks five different languages. For three years he lived in Chicago where he attended grade school but he obtained his high school and college education at Athens. . . 'The Price of Liberty' is not only the tale of sorrow, hardship, fighting and death found in all war stories published today but also a warm, human chronicle of the first years of war among a people and a nation whose only wish was for happiness and peace." H. L. Mitchell

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 23 '45 380w

"Mr. Pezas is a lawyer and a mine operator. He is also a man who has a warm interest in human-kind, in listening to stories and folk tales, in drawing out the life histories of the people he meets. For this reason, perhaps, his book fails in reaching a distillation of his major theme. Instead of a clear picture of what the title promises, it is a bubbling and a fermentation made up of many ingredients." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 18 '45 360w

PHELAN, JAMES LEO. Banshee harvest [Eng title: And blackthorns]. 205p $2.50 Viking [8s 6d Nicholson]

45-1814

A story of conflict in Ireland between landowners and peasants. The time is the present and though characters and places are fictitious, the author asserts his story is truly representative of actual conditions.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p6 Mr 11 '45 600w

Booklist 41:322 Jl 1 '45

"Jim Phelan will, if possible, get a hearing for a story that is harsh and wild and far from being delicately phrased, yet with beauty spots in it and the evidence of being fiercely felt by the man who wrote it." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 10 '45 700w

"'Banshee Harvest' is no volume for the squeamish; it succeeds in conveying effectively how grinding poverty can bestialize and inflame a proud and virile people."

Commonweal 41:545 Mr 16 '45 550w

"Phelan writes with the warmth and charm of his race, but one questions the possibility of his catching public sympathy with so tenuous an appeal to better understanding."

+ — Kirkus 12:551 D 15 '44 180w

"Colorful, gripping but horrifying throughout. This is not for weak stomachs nor for those who would have a gentle tale about the Irish." M. H. Zipprich

Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 70w

"As a novel it suffers severely because of sketchy characterization and a schematized plot. It is almost lacking in the rich inner life that its passionate subject matter demands, but it is still several cuts above most of this year's fiction."

+ — New Repub 112:309 F 26 '45 90w

"So well does Jim Phelan know of what he writes, and so cunningly does he use words, that the situation is exposed entire; the details fall naturally into the reader's mind, filling out the lean paragraphs and the swift sentences." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p5 F 25 '45 750w

"Phelan isn't afraid of a melodramatic situation, and it's a pleasure to see how he handles dialogue. Now and again, to be sure, he runs into situations that the movies have done often, and done better, but for the most part his tale has an authoritative briskness that would have aroused envy in the late John Buchan." Russell Maloney

+ — New Yorker 21:72 F 24 '45 500w

Reviewed by H. O. Austin

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 550w

"There is no doubt about the quality of the swiftly moving drama, of the background with its skilfully drawn scenery and the tortuous and secretive working of the peasant mind, and the dark and gnomic peasant speech."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p629 D 30 '44 300w

"Jim Phelan writes with power and sureness about the people he knows so well and the struggle with which his heart is obviously bound up. His peasants are neither foolish nor noble, but deadly in their realism and tragic in their frustration. Their plight is a major theme in modern Ireland, and a major novel could well be written about it. Many good books have used the situation for plot, motif and metier, but the great book about it has not come along." David Tilden

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 15 '45 550w

PHELPS, FRANCES BROWN. Let's get to know God; il. by Marie-Anne Phelps and Doreen Penson. 129p $1.50 Morehouse

268 Religious education—Textbooks 44-10226

"A basic book about the Christian religion designed to be read to or by children of from four to twelve years. On only a few of its pages are there teachings which are specifically those of the Episcopal Church." Christian Century

---

Christian Century 61:1170 O 11 '44 40w

"Written for the age-group, four to twelve, by one who knows how to talk to children and how to write vividly and concretely, this book should be stimulating to every conscientious but busy parent." E. C. Thompson

+ Churchman 159:16 Mr 1 '45 80w

PHILLIPS, HARRY IRVING. Private Purkey's private peace; il. by Leonard Sansone. 134p $2 Putnam

817 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 45-3696

The opening paper shows Private Purkey in 1952, with a flock of the latest gadgets in his prefabricated home. He awakens from this dream, still in 1945, when two of his buddies rush in with disturbing news of a professional peace conference. The boys draw up a G.I. blueprint for peace. They get pushed out of the conference, but their plan goes big over the radio.

"Here was material for fine rapier work by a competent satirist, plus a golden opportunity to contrast effectively the muddleheadedness of stuffed shirts in high places with the natural good sense of the man in the street. Instead, the gold was transmuted into lead by farce. Perhaps Phillips tried too hard to be funny. One wonders whether anyone could make comical any plain citizen's devoted attempts to put deeply felt beliefs before the public and to get them acted on." W. F. Morse

— Book Week p9 My 27 '45 270w

Booklist 41:319 Jl 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

Kirkus 13:120 Mr 15 '45 170w

"Mr. Phillips is serious at every moment, but his vehicle is the color, the 'socko,' the humor and the sense of proportion of the American soldier—an idealized treatment, to be sure, but wonderfully sound in its approach." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 15 '45 360w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

Sat R of Lit 28:18 Je 16 '45 400w

Reviewed by J. E. English

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 330w

"There is humor in this book, but there is more than that. Through Private Purkey, H. I. Phillips speaks his 'peace.'"

+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 27 '45 180w

PHILLIPS, HENRY ALBERT. Brazil: bulwark of inter-American relations. 228p $2.50 Hastings house

918.1 Brazil 45-8324

A study of the past, present and future of Brazil, with some of its important cultural facts. Index.

"If you want to learn about Brazil, better shop elsewhere. The author wasted a lot of his and my time on this one." Walter Briggs

— Book Week p17 O 28 '45 310w

"An informative, absorbing book. . . Read with cautious eye to his mildly totalitarian bias."

Kirkus 13:418 S 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Stephen Naft

Sat R of Lit 28:35 O 20 '45 550w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. They were seven. 371p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Hutchinson]

45-6198

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p9 S 9 '45 180w

"Protracted puzzlement—for very quiet tastes."

+ Kirkus 13:210 My 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Jl 15 '45 60w

"Long, leisurely, irritating—but uncannily effective. Great deal of good writing and characterization and an amazing delayed solution."

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:30 Jl 21 '45 40w

"This is a more than full-length opus, loaded with treats for the judicious. Accept no substitute." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 15 '45 180w

PHILTINE, MRS ELLEN (CATT). They walk in darkness. 388p $2.50 Liveright

45-5600

A story of a young doctor and his wife and the impact on their lives of conditions in a State hospital for the insane.

"Shocking, though not sensational, this is a holding novel."

+ Kirkus 13:91 Mr 1 '45 150w

"[The book has] a fast-moving, though not over-convincing, plot. The interest lies chiefly in the author's devastating picture of the institution versus the individual: one can only hope that the dog-fights among the medical staff and their wives, the cynical indifference of most of the doctors to all else save the next promotion, are not typical. There are some sharply done characterizations, and all atmospheric detail has the flavor of authenticity." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p10 My 13 '45 140w

"The author might have done well to postpone her exposé of the asylum until an interest in her chief protagonists had been more firmly established. Nevertheless, with her

PHILTINE, E. C.—Continued
sincerity of purpose, her gift for creating real persons and situations, her skill in managing dialogue and in weaving the two divergent interests of the tale into an arresting pattern, she has produced a powerful novel, a novel indeed with the potentialities of dynamite." Grace Frank
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:15 Ag 11 '45 700w

"Perhaps the writing of such a book helped drain off some of the author's personal conflicts, and so served a good purpose; but to this reviewer its publication does not seem to further any wholesome or constructive ends." A. H. Ruggles
— Survey 81:246 S '45 300w
Time 45:104 Ap 9 '45 50w

PICKARD, MADGE EVELYN, and BULEY, ROSCOE CARLYLE. Midwest pioneer, his ills, cures, and doctors. ltd ed 339p il $5 R. E. Banta, Crawfordsville, Ind.

610.9 Medicine—U.S. SG45-165

"Drs. Pickard and Buley have written a history of medicine on the Mid-Western frontier, a history so complete that it occasionally becomes pedantic. They set themselves the job of describing the characteristic ills of this frontier, the home treatments and remedies, the state of scientific medicine, quackery, medical education and journalism, and development of all these as the region came out of the frontier stage." Weekly Book Review

"This attractively produced volume, the byproduct of a more extensive work on the history of the Middle West, tells most interestingly something of the story of early Middle Western medicine." M. F. Ashley-Montagu
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 18 '45 450w

"Drs. Pickard and Buley have done so handsomely by us that it seems ungracious to reproach them for ignoring certain matters. Nevertheless, as a student of frontier history, I could wish that they had gone a little farther afield. What about intoxicants, not only alcoholic, but vegetable as well?. . . And, though the authors have summarized the agues and various treatments used for them, they have, in common with all other historians and all modern medical writers, side-stepped one basic issue. We do not know exactly what the agues were, what relation they had to malaria." Bernard De Voto
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 12 '45 1100w

PIERCE, ANNE LEWIS. Quick freezing; a digest of authoritative information on quick freezing of foods for the home. 84p il spir pa $1 Barrows

664.8 Food, Frozen. Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery 44-47048

"This book on home freezing is a popular digest of technical information, taken largely from the results of the work in state agricultural experiment stations. . . The author discusses factors affecting successful freezing and recommended methods, starting with the selection of foods and ending with the cooking and serving of the frozen product." J Home Econ

Bookmark 5:8 N '44

"The directions are clear and comprehensive. Homemakers who follow them should have no difficulty in obtaining successful frozen products. Unfortunately, however, the author states that satisfactory freezing of vegetables can be accomplished without scalding. Food processing authorities universally agree scalding is essential for palatable products." L. E. Sater
+ — J Home Econ 37:362 Je '45 180w

PIERCE, LORNE ALBERT. A Canadian people. 84p $1.50 Humphries [6s 6d Hatchard]

971 Canada—Politics and government [A45-3538]

This book is the result of the author's "attempt to gather up [his] ideas and prejudices about Canada, more especially the Canadian people." He looks with alarm on the cleavage between English speaking and French speaking Canadians and urges Canada's writers and intellectuals, particularly, to work to heal the ever growing breach which has so far prevented Canada from being a "united nation."

"Canadians should read his book for its lesson to them, British for the light it throws upon a situation of which they are still little aware."
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 13 '45 180w

"There can be no doubt either of Dr. Pierce's sincerity or of the reasonableness of his arguments."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p411 S 1 '45 180w

PIERRE-GOSSET, RENEE. See Gosset, R. Pierre-

PILLER, E. A. Time bomb. 194p il $2 Arco

973.917 Fascism—U.S. Toleration. U.S.—Politics and government 45-6869

"Hitler may be dead, but hitlerism, even in America, is dangerously alive. Hitler's ideas—his race dogmas, his bigotry, his crackpot anthropology, his medieval witchcraft—and all his inflammatory techniques are echoed and copied here by scores of would-be Fuehrers who see his defeat as an unfortunate mistake but hardly an object lesson. These ideas and these hitlerites collectively are the 'Time Bomb' that E. A. Piller, identified by his publishers as 'formerly book editor and literary reviewer of Liberty Magazine, and before that an editor and book publisher,' warns against in this book." N Y Times

" 'Time Bomb' serves one good purpose. It again exposes the sordid anti-Semitic groups; it again calls attention to some of the shopworn rabble rousers; and it once more 'puts the finger' on some of the subversive elements. But its failure to evaluate, its mistakes and the hysteria with which it was done makes it an unreliable guide." M. P. Akers
— + Book Week p5 Ag 12 '45 400w
Booklist 42:74 N 1 '45

"Conscientious liberals who keep up with Friends of Democracy releases will not find too much new material in this factual exposé of American fascists and their organizations, but the material is all here, logically and completely."
+ New Repub 113:326 S 10 '45 180w

Reviewed by Daniel Schwarz
N Y Times p8 Ag 5 '45 500w

"The author's literary style is deplorable. He expresses himself as flamboyantly and at times as ungrammatically as the worst rabble-rousers whose effusions he quotes. This is a pity, for he does have an important story to tell even though it is not exactly new. His most valuable contribution is a linking of the various organizations and personalities, showing how they aid one another even though their professed objectives may differ."
— + Weekly Book Review p21 O 7 '45 270w

PINCHON, EDGCUMB. Dan Sickles, hero of Gettysburg and "Yankee king of Spain." 280p il $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Sickles, Daniel Edgar 45-5696

Biography of the Hero of Gettysburg, showing all the days of his turbulent career as Tammany politician, as first secretary of the American legation in London, back in America as member of congress, and as popular Civil war general. The more personal aspects of his life are also fully described, especially his shooting of his first wife's paramour, and his years as lover of the exiled Queen Isabella of Spain. Bibliography. Index.

"Here is a book which would be fine fiction, if it were not factual, but being factual is stranger than fiction. If the story is almost unbelievable in spots, it is so because its hero was an unbelievable character, and if it has a movie-plot ending, it is because it ended so in real life. . . The book is beautifully written, however, and is so full of drama, comedy and tragedy that one is inclined to close one's eyes to its undeniable shortcomings." Otto Eisenschiml

+ — Book Week p7 Jl 1 '45 310w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

"Exclamatory account, passionate, sensational stuff, revealing a storm center of drama, vitality and undisciplined passion, dominated by ambition and patriotism."

Kirkus 13:54 F 1 '45 260w

"The work is properly lacking in substantiation for many of its most important statements, and, like most keyhole biographies, tells us what the characters are thinking at critical moments and gives us the spiciest portions of unrecorded conversations. Two decades ago Mencken's 'Mercury' would have ballyhooed this book: today we find little to recommend it." Carl Bridenbaugh

— N Y Times p3 Jl 8 '45 950w

"Mr. Pinchon writes biography as if he were writing fiction, but, considering the flamboyant nature of his subject, this is probably all to the good."

+ New Yorker 21:71 Je 16 '45 140w

Time 45:92 Je 18 '45 1650w

"Writing in the over-heated style of a Hollywood melodramatist, the author achieves pace and vividness whenever he has a story to tell. . . But when the author attempts to carry over this perfervid style into the long stretches of history between his hero's exciting performances, he drives the reader to bawling for more matter and less art." Lloyd Lewis

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Je 10 '45 1050w

PINCKNEY, JOSEPHINE. Three o'clock dinner. 296p $2.50 Viking

45-8451

A picture of life in Charleston, with the conflict between two families as starting point. The Redcliffs are aristocratic; the Hessenwinkles had money but no breeding; and the struggle was between the widowed Judith Redcliff and the buxom Lorena Hessenwinkle. The climax came at a formal family dinner, when the shocked Redcliffs made the announcement of the marriage of a Redcliff heir to Lorena.

"'Three O'Clock Dinner' is a delight; it is charming, witty and written with a sensitivity that is only on occasion pretentious. If it is brittle, it is at the same time brilliant. But above all it is readable, in a way that all too few novels are readable." Bucklin Moon

+ Book Week p3 S 30 '45 450w

Booklist 42:57 O 15 '45

"The novel has the merit of being sensitively written, but Miss Pinckney merely fits together moods, people, and situations with great literary skill but without a semblance of truth. . . It is mere chance that the ineligible family is Catholic—we have to take that on the author's say-so, for there is no other evidence except that the members go to Mass and talk about getting out of things through the confessional. It is unfortunate that a novel of literary beauty should be bogged down by a shallow, unreal view of life."

+ — Cath World 162:187 N '45 180w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 42:604 O 5 '45 600w

"Somehow, the stress on psychological—almost pathological implications is greater than the outline of plot, the validity of setting, the vitality of characterization."

Kirkus 13:281 Jl 1 '45 230w

"An exceptionally fine novel." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 70:820 S 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 161:347 O 6 '45 30w

"A thoroughly satisfying novel. . . Miss Pinckney's success with an old formula shows us how good old formulas can be when they are processed by a knowing hand. . . All in all, it is a complete tour of Charleston, and a beautifully planned tour de force as well." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p5 S 23 '45 1050w

"Miss Pinckney arranges all this with quiet competence. I got a certain pleasure out of watching her tactics, and admired the way she moved her major pieces at times, but she never convinced me that she was doing anything more than playing a game." Hamilton Basso

+ — New Yorker 21:79 S 29 '45 550w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 28:34 O 13 '45 1000w

"Peopled with intensely real and vital characters, the story runs the whole gamut of emotions without ever getting out of hand—drama without melodrama." R. E. Morgan

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 550w

Time 46:104 O 15 '45 110w

"Miss Pinckney's novel is characterized by finesse in its writing perhaps more than by vigor—but her style is plenty vigorous enough. Everything she touches is lighted by her fine wit sensitively at work on the ways of the world she knows well with material uniquely her own and a method of handling it that, though occasionally on the brittle side, is often brilliant. Her conversations are sometimes a bit artificial; her impressions definitely are not, and she deploys them with endearing skill. 'Three O'Clock Dinner' is a delight." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p1 S 23 '45 1250w

"Three O'Clock Dinner is craftsmanlike work and thoroughly entertaining, too. Yet it is also somewhat disappointing. It does not quite live up to the high expectations it engenders; it doesn't stick in the memory." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 35:383 winter '46 470w

PINKERTON, KATHRENE SUTHERLAND (GEDNEY) (MRS R. E. PINKERTON). Windigo. 223p $2 Harcourt

45-35156

Continues the story of the Jackman family and their fox farm in the North woods. Ann comes home from school for the Christmas holidays, bringing a school friend, and is joined by Jerry Sloane. A story that their Ojibwa friend Wen-dah-ban has turned into a windigo frightens the other Indians, and sends the young people out to solve the mystery. It was a strange Christmas, but their quest was successful. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 42:23 S '45

Churchman 159:8 N 15 '45 50w

"A good yarn, with competent characterization in Indian and whites; natural background colorful and exciting; good feeling for the Indians and the problems of the American administrators."

+ Kirkus 13:298 Jl 1 '45 150w

"The mild mystery is interesting but much more fascinating is the description of Indian custom and superstition and the authentic picture of life in a Canadian fur trading post. Should appeal to younger boys and girls interested in outdoors." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 80w

+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 S 8 '45 400w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 120w

"Algernon Blackwood's classic tale of terror, 'The Windigo,' put this elemental spirit of the Canadian North Woods into English literature; in the latest of an excellent succession of adventure stories for young people—the Fox Island books by the author of 'Wilderness Wife' —it forms the central interest in a way that makes the book the best of the series." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 23 '45 360w

Wis Lib Bul 41:114 N '45

PINNER, MAX. Pulmonary tuberculosis in the adult; its fundamental aspects. 579p il $7.50 Thomas, C.C.

616.246 Tuberculosis SG45-19

"The subject matter of this book is restricted to consideration of pulmonary tuberculosis in adults. Childhood tuberculosis is discussed only in relation to the adult reinfection type, and comparatively little reference is made to extrapulmonary tuberculosis. There are exceptionally good discussions of various aspects of the limited subject, particularly on the underlying pathology of clinical tuberculosis. There are also good chapters on Classification of Pulmonary Tuberculosis—a much needed explanation, long overdue; on Diagnostic Principles; on Physiological and Pathological Principles of Pulmonary Collapse; and on Collapse Therapy." U S Quarterly Bkl

"A 'must' book for tuberculosis workers. . . This work maintains the high standard set by Rich in his Pathogenesis of Tuberculosis, and supplements it by proving valuable clinical material and judgment. It resembles Rich's book in quoting extensively from the European literature and in its critical attitude toward many conclusions and dogmas. Illustrating the spirit of the volume, the author refers to one problem as 'open to sterile speculation and probably fertile research.'" J. H. Korns

+ Am J Pub Health 35:1233 N '45 700w

"The work as a whole represents in concise form some of the best modern thinking regarding the field of tuberculosis. The book is intended for the specialist in tuberculosis and the practitioner of internal medicine. It does not explain details of technique, nor does it attempt elucidation of certain basic principles concerned with the phenomena of tuberculous infection. One of the most useful features of the book is a bibliography at the end of each chapter, in which the author gives an abstract of each article listed."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:58 D '45 200w

PIPER, CLARENCE SHERWOOD. Soil and plant analysis; a laboratory manual of methods for the examination of soils and the determination of the inorganic constituents of plants. 368p il $4.50 Interscience [15s Univ. of Adelaide]

631.42 Soils—Analysis. Plants—Chemical analysis 44-21934

"Many agricultural chemists have become familiar with this useful manual in the original Australian edition. It is now available as an authorized American reprint by the photo-offset process. The first portion of the book is devoted to methods for the examination of the physical and chemical properties of soils. A partial list of topics includes chapters on the collection and preparation of soil samples; hydrogen-ion concentration, conductivity, and water-soluble salts; mechanical analysis; single value soil constants; exchangeable ions and exchange capacity; nitrogen; nitrates, nitrites and ammonia; organic matter; and the separation and analysis of the clay fraction. The second portion is concerned with the collection, preparation, and analysis of plant samples. Procedures are given for the determination of the more common inorganic constituents as well as of the trace elements." Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by E. J. Rubins

Chem & Eng N 23:758 Ap 25 '45 220w

"The treatise is well organized and clearly and concisely written. The methods described are standard in the main and are as applicable in the United States as in Australia and New Zealand. The inclusion of procedures of calculations strengthens the book for student use. . . This book constitutes a ready reference which soil scientists and chemists will be glad to have close at hand." C. O. Rost

+ J Phys Chem 49:45 Ja '45 150w

PISTORIUS, ANNA. What bird is it? il. by [the author]. [24p] $1 Wilcox & Follett

598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature

Describes and pictures twenty-three birds. If you cannot guess from these a list of the birds described is given on the inside of the back cover.

"An information book that is really fun. . . A good book to have on hand when teacher sets everyone to bringing in information about birds."

+ Book Week p18 N 11 '45 50w

"Amusing and accurate text with description of each bird's song. Colors are attractive if not strictly accurate in every case." Gertrude Andrus

+ — Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 70w

"A provocative nature book that parents, teachers and children will welcome."

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '46 70w

PLOWITZ, KURT. Mr Finny, a fish tale for tiny tots [il. by the author]. [36p] $1.50 Washburn

Nonsense story for the very young describing the little people who found a strange fish on their little island. The fish was gasping for his native element, and the little people tried most earnestly, but mistakenly, to discover what it was he wanted.

Kirkus 13:491 N 1 '45 70w

"Will appeal to little children who have a sense of humor." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 80w

"Make a note of this little book for the very young; it has most ingenious impromptu pictures that tell the most with the least effort." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 18 '45 230w

PLUM, MARY. State department cat. 208p $2 Doubleday

45-2495

A combination spy and mystery story.

"If you start out by accepting this obviously fantastic tale as credible you'll have a good time; if you don't you won't. I did." Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p11 Mr 18 '45 110w

Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

"Has zip."

Boston Globe p15 F 28 '45 70w

"A light-handed, fast-footed tale of anti-axis activities."

+ Kirkus 12:540 D 1 '44 60w

"Nice sidelights on protocol, likable characters and a very good first hundred pages make this worth your while." E. H.

+ New Repub 112:342 Mr 5 '45 90w

"Unusually interesting spy story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 F 18 '45 180w

"A helter-skelter story, but the background is very good."

+ — New Yorker 21:79 F 24 '45 80w

"Spy-stuff of the better sort."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 F 17 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 F 18 '45 120w

PLUMMER, CARLYLE J. Ship handling in narrow channels. 107p il $2 Cornell maritime

656 Navigation 45-4566

"Explanations with diagrams of various piloting procedures which call for exceptional control such as getting away from a bank in spite of suction, meeting and passing other ships, and floating a grounded vessel. Other chapters discuss mooring, trimming a loaded ship for maneuvering, using tugs, and dropping anchor to make a turn or break a sheer." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:532 Je 1 '45 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:27 Ap '45

PLUMRIDGE, TOM C., and others. Machine tool guide. 630p il loose-leaf $7.50 Am. tech. soc.

621.9 Machine tools 45-35216

"Subtitled: 'Engineering Data Covering the Principal Machine Tools Especially Prepared for Tool Engineers, Millwrights, and Tool Equipment Salesmen.' Only publication of its kind shows drawings, dimensions, specifications and factual data on machine tools and machines as automatics, boring, broaching, contour grinding, tapping and milling machines, duplicators, gear cutters, lathes, planers, presses, shapers and slotters. Completed with the cooperation of 61 important manufacturers of this country. Illustrated. Tables. Looseleaf." Library J

Booklist 42:91 N 15 '45

Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 80w

POE, EDGAR ALLAN. Edgar Allan Poe; selected and edited with an introduction and notes by Philip Van Doren Stern. (Viking portable lib) 664p $2 Viking

45-8508

A collection which includes twenty-four tales,—of fantasy, horror and mystery,—some letters, critical articles, and poems.

Booklist 42:58 O 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 10 '45 120w

Kirkus 13:393 S 1 '45 70w

"I miss 'The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym,' which is Poe's longest story and which, though hastily written, ends with the finest passage in all his works. I also miss, but not so keenly, 'The System of Doctor Tarr and Professor Fether,' which is the best example of his grotesque humor, and 'The Colloquy of Monos and Una,' greatly admired by Baudelaire. If Mr. Stern had been more familiar with the European history of Poe's influence, he would have been more impressed by the force and originality of his critical opinions. But for all these minor faults, The Viking Portable Poe is the best one-volume selection of his work that anyone has made." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 113:607 N 5 '45 2750w

"Altogether there are over 700 pages in this nevertheless unusually compact portable 'Poe.' A book should be praised if it reasonably achieves what it set out to accomplish. This volume succeeds in both format and content. It is one of the most compact and judiciously inclusive compendiums of Poe that I know of. It fits the hand, the shelf and the pocket, and it pleases the eye. It can be, and I have no doubt will be, much carried about. But, even better than that, it will be worth while to do so. The editor has here been a distinct help in bringing about this desirable result." Hervey Allen

+ N Y Times p7 S 30 '45 1100w

POHL, FREDERICK JULIUS. Amerigo Vespucci, pilot major. 249p il maps $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

B or 92 Vespucci, Amerigo A44-5612

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by L. J. Burpee
Canadian Hist R 26:190 Je '45 1250w

"Who discovered America? The answer to that question has vexed students of American exploration for many years. Those who believe that Columbus has the better of the battle as matters stand will not be nearly so certain if they will read this latest and perhaps best biography of Amerigo Vespucci. The arguments presented in behalf of Vespucci are quite convincing to this reviewer, even though he is a member of the Knights of Columbus." Paul Kiniery

+ Cath World 161:86 Ap '45 700w

"Mr. Pohl has done a piece of thorough and constructive research. To this reader, his argument and its supporting documentation carry complete conviction. For his discovery of America (in the sense indicated), for his clear intelligence in a superstitious age, and for his unselfish devotion to a great scientific task, Amerigo Vespucci deserves his place on the map and the refurbished reputation which Mr. Pohl has given him." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:301 Mr 7 '45 1100w

Current Hist 8:250 Mr '45 110w

"This enthusiastic and readable book, whether or not it is to be accepted as the last word—or nearly so—on Vespucci, well deserves a place alongside Samuel Eliot Morison's 'Admiral of the Ocean Sea: A Life of Christopher Columbus' on the shelves of those fortunate enough to possess the latter."

+ Geog R 35:340 Ap '45 850w

Manchester Guardian p3 My 23 '45 240w

"It was high time that someone made available to the general public what is known of the admirable explorer after whom the land masses of the Western Hemisphere are named. In doing so, Frederick Pohl has performed a service to letters and scholarship. One could wish that he had done no more. But a biographer is under a terrible temptation to see his subject a little larger than life." Garrett Mattingly

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:10 F 10 '45 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p296 Je 23 '45 950w

"This biography gives a readable, vivid, well-balanced account of Vespucci, reviewing practically all the available evidence. . . Some persons may question whether Vespucci's priority in recognizing the New World as a separate continent is quite so absolute as the author believes, or if it was necessary to draw up almost a legal brief in justification of the naming of the new continent. These are, however, rather matters of emphasis than of fact. The book is an excellent English contribution to the subject for the general reader and also for the historian."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 Mr '45 200w

POLING, DANIEL ALFRED, ed. Treasury of great sermons; with biographical notes and comments. 198p $1.50 Greenberg

252 Sermons 44-51172

"Twenty-five memorable sermons selected by a leading contemporary figure in the Protestant world. The first five are taken from the Bible and the others from the works of personalities ranging widely in time and temperament but all approaching their problems with a common humility and need for divine guidance. St. Francis of Assisi, John Calvin, the Venerable Bede, Dwight L. Moody, and Martin Niemoller are among those whose sermons are included. Type is in double columns giving a scripture-like appearance." Booklist

Booklist 41:219 Ap 1 '45

N Y Times p26 F 18 '45 360w

POLK, RALPH WEISS. Practice of printing. 300p il $2.75 Manual arts

655 Printing, Practical 45-9425

"Third edition of a standard textbook for schools. Useful to printers. History of printing, type, setting type, spacing material, composition, proofing, proofreading, composing machines, printing inks, color in printing, layouts, letterheads, linoleum block-printing and photo-offset-lithography. Some chapter references for collateral reading. Glossary of terms." Library J

Booklist 42:168 Ja 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 80w

POLLACK, PHILIP. Careers in science; in collaboration with Vocational guidance research, Evelyn Steele, director; introd. by H. C. Madsen. 222p il $2.75 Dutton

507.2 Scientists. Profession, Choice of. Research 45-4430

Discusses qualifications for jobs in the fields of chemistry, physics, biology, and geology for both men and women. Theoretical and practical research is also considered. For young people in need of vocational guidance. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 41:296 Je 15 '45

Reviewed by E. M. Billings
Chem & Eng N 24:101 Ja 10 '46 400w

Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:26 Ap '45

"Perhaps because it is intended to be read by the returning veteran, Mr. Pollack's contribution to the literature of success is not quite so calendar-bright as the bulk of its kind. It is very cautious, for example, in its promise of pecuniary rewards. Again, it has a favorable regard for employment by Government bureaus. It is amusing to observe Mr. Pollack straining to dramatize the job of Federal forest guard, top $4,600 per annum, as joyfully as the post of petroleum engineer, say with Shell, at a top of $15,000." E. B. Garside
N Y Times p19 Jl 1 '45 260w

"The result is not just an uplift book, full of pep talk, but a practical guide. The reader finishes Pollack's book impressed by analyses of scores of industries and their requirements and impressed, too, by the warning not to enter an industry with the idea of making a fortune but with the idea of making a good living." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ Sat R of Lit 28:47 S 15 '45 310w

Wis Lib Bul 41:109 N '45

POLLOCK, MRS KATHERINE (GANTZ). Sir Toby and the Murrays; il. by Sari. 201p $1.75 Scribner

45-9824

"Sir Toby is an entrancing donkey and the Murrays are the minister, his wife, the twins and Bitsy. A gay, funny story of how Bitsy and the twins earned the money for the new boat." Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 42:133 D 15 '45

"A delightfully human family story."
+ Kirkus 13:436 O 1 '45 90w

"Children who sail will love every word; those who don't, are sure to enjoy Bitsy and her ventriloquism. The Murrays are a lively family, very real and amusing." Ruth McEvoy
+ Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 70w

"The style tends to breathlessness at times—but a sense of gusty enjoyment and a perceptive handling of family relationships make this a very engaging story for 8 to 12 year olds."
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '46 60w

Sat R of Lit 28:62 N 10 '45 40w

POLNER, TIKHON IVANOVICH. Tolstoy and his wife; tr. by Nicholas Wreden. 222p $2.75 Norton

B or 92 Tolstoĭ, Lev Nikolaevich, graf 45-5651

"This analytical account of Tolstoy's mature years catches the spirit of a rebellious personality and of the circle in which he lived. It places emphasis on his philosophical growth and the part his close associates played in that development. His letters, novels, diaries and those of his family and friends are used to document the evolution of his ideas." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons
Atlantic 176:152 O '45 270w

Reviewed by B. G. Guerney
Book Week p6 Jl 22 '45 380w

Booklist 41:339 Jl 15 '45

Christian Century 62:981 Ag 29 '45 90w

"Without attempting an exhaustive critical analysis of Tolstoy's voluminous writings, Polner skillfully correlates various characters and episodes in his leading novels with Tolstoy's life experiences, showing wherein he agreed and differed from the model. All of which serves to make his book a revealing and readable picture of one of the literary giants and great humanitarians of modern times." Edmund Stevens
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 25 '45 750w

"What is particularly winning about Mr. Polner's book (published in the late 1920's and now excellently translated by Nicholas Wreden) is its extraordinary humility. For the author knew the Tolstoy household and writes to a large extent from his own reminiscences, yet if you had not been told that this was the case you would never guess it from reading his book."
+ Commonweal 42:507 S 7 '45 130w

Kirkus 13:102 Mr 1 '45 130w

"Sufficient action and color to make this a human, warm story." Frieda Bogin
+ Library J 70:586 Je 15 '45 90w

"Probably the best biographical study of the great Russian novelist now available in English." Philip Rahv
+ Nation 161:89 Jl 28 '45 420w

"Polner's study is a relatively short one, and withal, one is decidedly impressed by the amount of data he has been able to pack into these 222 pages. The very compactness of the book is, in itself, attractive. The picture it presents of Tolstoy and his wife is clear, human, understandable." J. T. Farrell
+ New Repub 113:290 S 3 '45 2150w

"Obviously Tikhon Polner was aware of the unconscious motivation behind many of Tolstoy's beliefs and acts, but he lets the reader do his own interpretation, having most deftly fed him the significant material. The book is a masterpiece of humane compression." Signe Toksvig
+ N Y Times p1 Jl 1 '45 1700w

"The relations between Tolstoy and his wife were so stormy and tormented, particularly during the latter part of their lives, that Mr. Polner's book, were it concerned with nothing else, would be almost too painful to read. However, this section of the story of Tolstoy, although it occupies the foreground of Mr. Polner's book, is made an integral part of the whole story of Tolstoy, and in tracing his transition from a hard-riding, hard-gambling, hard-living Army officer to a moral philosopher preaching and practicing the tenets of primitive Christianity, the author has written as good a biography of the Russian master as there is in the English language."
+ New Yorker 21:66 Jl 7 '45 160w

"This brief, charmingly written, and well translated outline of Tolstoy's life and his relations with his wife is a very valuable addition to the existing chronicles on the subject. It is not really a new interpretation of the conflicting currents in the closing years of the great realist and his attractive wife. For that it is still too soon, in view of the fact that some of the participants in the tragedy are still alive. This narrative is merely an unbiased statement of the facts." Manya Gordon
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Je 30 '45 800w

"Leo (or Lev) Tolstoy is not a neglected subject. Few people have ever read all the books or articles already written about him and available in English. Another book is certainly not 'needed.' But Tolstoy might sit for a hundred portraits not one of which would of necessity be either uninteresting or merely repetitious. . . According to the translator, the present book first appeared, in Russian, during the late 1920's. The author, a pre-revolutionary liberal, is said to have been a friend of Tolstoy as well as of Tolstoy's wife and the portrait he draws is, therefore, in part at least at first hand. It is actually a sketch of Tolstoy's career, not merely the story of his family life. . . No attempt is made at any real interpretation or evaluation of his literary work and much of the writing is easily anecdotal. But it is not trivial and the result is a vivid as well as a dramatic account of a dazzling personality." J. W. Krutch

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Jl 8 '45 1050w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons

Yale R n s 35:156 autumn '45 350w

POLYA, GYORGY. How to solve it; a new aspect of mathematical method. 204p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

510 Mathematics A45-3112

"Written simply and concisely, this study of methods of solving problems pays special attention to the requirements of students and teachers of mathematics, but it should interest those concerned with the ways and means of invention and discovery. It deals with 'the procedures of the mind in searching for solutions of problems—procedures that are naturally followed by the common man in his moments of concentration and are continually practiced by men of talent.'" Eng N

"The book, which endeavors to understand the process of solving problems, will probably be of considerable interest to mathematicians and problem solvers, of some interest to engineers, and of small interest to those without mathematical training or instincts."

+ Chem & Met Eng 52:231 Jl '45 100w

Current Hist 9:327 O '45 70w

Eng N 135:127 Jl 12 '45 80w

Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 50w

"This little book is a modest attempt to revive the art of heuristic, which by definition is a branch of logic and philosophy devoted to the study of methods and rules of discovery and invention. . . The text of his thesis is deceivingly simple. On the surface it seems no more than a helpful parallel work in mathematics, particularly geometry. A careful reading of it, however, reveals a method of reasoning similar to the magically simple systems employed by the classical philosophers and logicians. The average man would be greatly aided in his everyday life by the adoption of such a system." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 Jl 14 '45 360w

POOR, HENRY VARNUM. An artist sees Alaska; il. by the author. 279p $3.50 Viking

917.98 Alaska—Description and travel 45-9853

From March thru August, 1943, the author-artist was a member of the War art program in Alaska. This is a diary of his journey, including a record of his voyage on a little boat, the Ada, which put in at many of the Eskimo villages on Bering sea, under the leadership of a man who was training the Eskimos for guerrilla warfare.

Reviewed by David Karno

Book Week p18 N 18 '45 550w

Booklist 42:107 D 1 '45

Kirkus 13:449 O 1 '45 170w

"It is a philosophically humorous, delightfully objective book of travel and will be a treat for middle-aged readers. Mr. Poor writes convincingly of the men and women in the Services as he understands them thoroughly. His sketches are simple, his writing is direct. Recommended." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer

N Y Times p6 D 30 '45 230w

New Yorker 21:136 D 1 '45 80w

"Henry Varnum Poor is a painter, and he writes like a painter. He sees things from the inside out. His people walk with real joints, they have flesh that you can feel underneath their clothing, they talk with the words of living people, not like characters dreamed up. He writes like a painter, and his words are drawings, some washed with color, some cut so keen and sparing and profound that you sit up with a start, shocked at their truth. . . From his book, with its frank contempt for Army bureaucrats, and its joy in the Eskimos, there emerges a simple canvas of a lovable enchanting unspoiled race. . . Don't trust any of the spellings of the names either. Poor can spell more names wrong with ease and charming indifference than any writer I have read in a long time. But after all, Poor is an artist not a court stenographer." Ruth Gruber

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 11 '45 900w

POPE, ARTHUR UPHAM. Masterpieces of Persian art; with contributions by Phyllis Ackerman and Eric Schroeder. 204p pl $10 Dryden

709.55 Art, Persian

"Examples of Persian art in the form of pottery, silver and bronzes, books, and textiles illustrated in more than 150 excellent photographs and nine color plates. This volume records the Exhibition of Persian art held in New York in 1940, with some additional items, but it is not just a catalog. The text, by three authors, places the art in relation to the culture of the time, and explains the special features of the art works illustrated. This is the first of a series entitled Masterpieces of oriental art to be produced by the American school for Asiatic studies of the Iranian institute, and planned to present the major arts of Asia in 20 volumes." (Booklist) No index.

Booklist 42:145 Ja 1 '46

"This is one of the more rewarding of the illustrated art books published during the past season." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 19 '46 300w

POPHAM, ARTHUR EWART, ed. See Leonardo da Vinci. Drawings

POPKIN, MRS ZELDA. Journey home. 224p $2.50 Lippincott

45-6108

Thru the eyes of a young lieutenant of the Air forces, just home from Europe on a twenty-one day furlough, the novel shows a slice of American life. The action takes place on a crack train from Florida, bringing back its load of civilians from vacations, with a sprinkling of service men and some service men's wives and children. The train is wrecked and that brings about some changes in personal relations, especially for the young lieutenant.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts

Book Week p4 Jl 29 '45 550w

Booklist 42:20 S '45

Kirkus 13:208 My 15 '45 200w

"The civilians' efforts to communicate with the soldier across the gap of experience are bitterly, humorously, sometimes embarrassingly presented. Zelda Popkin has been very successful in telling just how a soldier comes home: He is alone. That is the really good, honest portion of her first novel. Having previously published six successful mysteries, however, the author has been tempted by her past writing experience; she wants something to happen. Suddenly, excitingly to the uncritical reader, the last quarter of her book is transformed by violence. The Palm Queen is wrecked. The scene's grisly facts are expertly set down. But violent death intrudes too much: Somehow it wins The Girl, who naturally had requested persuasion, over to love." Paul Griffith

+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 29 '45 440w

"I do not wish to say that Miss Popkin set out to do an insincere job. Her writing is keen, lively, colorful, and I enjoy it. But she has kept her practitioner's eye upon the novel as a neat, shapely package with everything tied up just right, all passes completed. There is more than a touch of conscious contrivance in the assembly of characters on this train, their characteristic utterances, their crossing and recrossing in neat combinations, and the climactic wreck to cut the knot." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 28:30 Jl 28 '45 400w

POPKIN, ZELDA—Continued
"Mrs. Popkin writes with the fine economy of phrase we already knew to be hers, but this time she does not hesitate to dip her pen in corrosive acid when necessary. It is, indeed, when she is at her most wrathful that 'The Journey Home' is at its best. . . When Mrs. Popkin allows her rage to subside, however, her novel loses its force. A train wreck is introduced rather unconvincingly into the story, changing the course of many lives and providing an ill-advised and Hollywoodish ending. But the book has so much truth about it that this final false note can be ignored and only its honest anger remembered." Marion Sturges-Jones
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 29 '45 700w

POPPLE, CHARLES STERLING. Development of two bank groups in the central Northwest; a study in bank policy and organization. (Studies in business history) 418p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press [19s Oxford]

332.1 Banks and banking—U.S. A44-2265

"Traces the development of group banking in the region centering in the Twin Cities [St Paul and Minneapolis] during the last 25 years, in relation to the whole history of banking in the Central Northwest." Book Week

"For his material Mr. Popple has ranged over a vast quantity of printed sources. But his chief claim to attention springs from the fact that for some years he worked in the offices of one of the groups; that he has had access to the private records of both groups; that he has had countless conversations with the bank senior executives, and that some of them have read his manuscript. Consequently, while he insists that his work is not an 'official history,' it is in large measure an 'officials' history.' . . The strongest criticism I have been able to garner from competent Twin Cities readers of the book is that its author has shown reserve and delicacy in handling some warm issues, and has sanded and varnished an occasional rough spot. To them Mr. Popple would doubtless reply that at least the groups have been successful in a field of almost despairing struggle, and have provided the safety and stability long needed in the region. And he would be right, provided he did not claim all the credit for them." Herbert Heaton
+ Am Econ R 35:190 Mr '45 1200w

Reviewed by A. R. Upgren
Am Hist R 50:819 Jl '45 500w

"Admirably organized and clearly written, this book is especially commendable in its consistent emphasis upon the relation between the special subject of banking and the general economic background of the place and time." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Jl 30 '44 90w

Reviewed by L. W. Mints
J Pol Econ 53:383 D '45 1100w

PORTER, MRS MARTHA BYRD (SPRUILL). Straight down a crooked lane. 234p il $3 Dietz

B or 92 45-5757

"Mrs. Porter, as a girl, was one of the Byrds of Virginia, living comfortably in a mellow Southern home with a houseful of Negro servants. She records her childhood experiences, followed by those at an exclusive school for girls in the early years of the century. Her marriage to Dr. Porter takes her to Richmond, Washington, and elsewhere, with trips to North Africa and Europe after World War One. Her final adventures include the difficult process of moving the Porter ancestral home all the way to the edge of Richmond." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 42:55 O 15 '45

"The book is well written in a chatty, conversational style, full of amusing anecdotes and experiences, and gay with fresh descriptions and humorous phrases. . . This reviewer did not find the story of the college deans and the mint juleps as funny as it was supposed to be, nor other stories of drinking, but this part is comparatively brief and does not spoil an otherwise entertaining and delightful book. M. J. T.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 14 '45 480w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 159:19 Jl '45 90w

PORTEUS, STANLEY DAVID. Calabashes and kings; an introduction to Hawaii. 245p il maps $3.50 Pacific books, box 558, Palo Alto, Calif.

919.69 Hawaiian Islands—Description and travel. Hawaiian Islands—History 45-9635

This "introduction to Hawaii" is in two parts. The first gives an informal resumé of the islands' history from the days of Captain Cook to the present. In the second part the author describes the islands geographically taking up in turn Hawaii, Oahu, Kauai, and Maui in separate chapters.

"A very delightful as well as a very informing book."
+ Christian Century 62:1259 N 14 '45 110w

"This is 'an introduction to Hawaii,' written in a genial, informal style by a man of science whose deep erudition and highly specialized knowledge are mellowed and enriched by broad humanism and good fellowship. Dr. Porteus has been director of the psychologic and psychopathic clinic in the University of Hawaii since 1922 and has traveled widely in the course of his research concerning primitive intelligence. In this latest of his writings, he reveals his deep affection for his island home."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 O '45 360w

POSTWAR world, by Hastings Eells [and others]. 207p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-) 45-1174

This volume, containing the Ohio Wesleyan Merrick lectures for 1944, constitutes a symposium on different aspects of the postwar world. Contents: The difficulties of making peace, by Hastings Eells; Power politics and the postwar world, by R. S. Lynd; The problem of Germany, by J. L. Hromádka; The treatment of a defeated Japan, by T. A. Bisson; Rebuilding a war-torn world, by F. B. Sayre; China, America's Pacific ally, by Y. C. Yang; Problems of the small states in the postwar world, by V. M. Dean; A postwar world organization for peace, by H. A. Atkinson; Soviet Russia and the postwar world, by J. L. Childs; Economic welfare and world peace, by H. G. Hayes; Competition and monopoly in the postwar world, by Clair Wilcox; International organization after the war, by M. O. Hudson; American attitudes and leadership, by H. H. Burton. Biographical notes of contributors. No index.

Booklist 41:195 Mr 1 '45
Bookmark 6:10 N '45

"A review of such varied materials, written from so many points of view, would need to be almost as long as the book. Readers are referred to the book itself, with the assurance that it will well repay a careful reading."
Christian Century 62:305 Mr 7 '45 130w

"Though there is variance in points of view, they all proceed on the assumption that the U.S.A. is to take a prominent part in making the peace and in organizing the world to keep the peace. Limited market."
Kirkus 13:126 Mr 15 '45 80w
New Repub 112:853 Je 18 '45 210w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p9 Jl 15 '45 550w

POTTER, DAVID MORRIS, ed. See Geiger, V. and Bryarly, W. Trail to California

POTTER, MAURICE DAVID. Fiber to fabric; a textbook on textiles for the consumer; line drawings by Alfred Roffman. 314p $2 Gregg

677 Textile fabrics 45-2088

"A simplified and interesting presentation of the basic facts of fiber properties, manufacturing processes, qualities of materials, and care of fabrics. The book will be of practical interest to consumers and sales-people desiring essential technical information for intelligent buying and selling. There are questions for discussion and suggested readings at the end of each chapter; glossaries of cotton, linen, wool, silk and rayon fabrics in their appropriate sections; and a bibliography of some fifty books, journals and pamphlets." N Y New Tech Bks

"Fiber to Fabric should be a useful high school textbook, or it might be used as a reference book in department store training classes." Hazel Manning

+ J Home Econ 37:301 My '45 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:31 Ap '45

POUND, ARTHUR. Lake Ontario. (Am. lakes ser) 384p il $3.50 Bobbs

971.35 Ontario, Lake 45-35079

This history and description of the smallest of the Great Lakes, is in three parts. The first two: Vortex of empire, and Wars and reconstruction, deal with early history from the time when it was "red man's country" down to the building of the Erie Canal, and in Canada the days of political turmoil preceding federation. The final third of the book, Shore journey, takes the reader on a trip around the lake visiting its cities and surveying its industries and commerce.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p3 Je 3 '45 600w

Booklist 41:285 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:10 N '45

Reviewed by C. H. J. Snider
Canadian Hist R 26:323 S '45 300w

Reviewed by Carl Bridenbaugh
N Y Times p8 Je 17 '45 420w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
Sat R of Lit 28:51 O 13 '45 180w

"Mr Pound, exercising his ability as writer and historian, does an excellent job." G. W. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 6 '45 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:33 D '45 260w

" 'Lake Ontario' is a combined guidebook and historical reference work, serviceably indexed and with sizable bibliography. The research specialist in virtually any field related to the region can find here a substantial quantity of useful and little known facts." J. C. Long

Weekly Book Review p5 My 27 '45 1000w

POWELL, ADAM CLAYTON. Riots and ruins. 171p $2 Smith, Richard R.

325.26 Negroes. Riots 45-5935

"Here is a father of his people speaking to his people. . . Here is Moses leading his people out of bondage—admonishing them, encouraging them, hurling his anger at the wayward ones for their abominations, hurling his bitterness at the pursuing hosts. The Reverend A. Clayton Powell, Sr., Pastor Emeritus of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem, New York, is a distinguished figure among the Negroes of the nation. Well on toward his eighties, his life has spanned the years of the rise of the Negro out of slavery to such measure of partial freedom as he now possesses." Sat R of Lit

"This book adds nothing of importance to the vast literature on the American Negro problem. It is, however, an interesting and startling personal document of a Negro leader who has been personally outraged, has had the unique experience of getting more than an ordinary insight into both Negro and white feelings, and has reported his fear of what he sees in a highly emotional manner. White Americans would profit by reading it, for seldom has a more frank and honest appraisal of a leader's feelings been written. His confusion and inconsistencies, which are many, are the confusions and inconsistencies of America. His hate and his fear and guilt, because of this hate which he can neither contain nor resolve, are the inevitable reactions of a sensitive, intelligent person to the American race system." H. R. Cayton

Book Week p10 Jl 29 '45 600w

Canadian Forum 25:170 O '45 200w

"The abundant material is not as well presented and organized as it could have been, and the author could have drawn his conclusions more clearly. Nevertheless, all those who read Strange Fruit and Black Boy will welcome this additional piece of introspection into the dilemma, not only of George Washington Carver's kin, but also of the children of Lincoln and William Lloyd Garrison." Alfred Werner

+ — Christian Century 62:1010 S 5 '45 850w

Reviewed by E. F. Frazier
Nation 161:135 Ag 11 '45 350w

N Y Times p20 Ag 19 '45 90w

"There is passion in this book. It is a document which shows that the Negro is no longer content to take it lying down. Yet it is not merely a book of anger. It is full of wise and anxious counsel to the Negro people, as they make their slow but determined way out of bondage into democratic freedom." H. A. Overstreet

+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Jl 28 '45 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:39 S '45 240w

POWELL, JAMES D. Junior model planes; designed and il. by James D. Powell; ed. by Ed Clarke. [96p] il $1.50 Crowell

629.13334 Airplane models 45-7519

"This is not a cut-out to be pasted into models, but a set of simple directions, pleasantly told and illustrated with 186 drawings for making four model planes from an easy all-balsa glider through stick models, one with propeller and the other with ribbed wings, to a neat little cabin sport plane. As construction goes on, a nine year-old is shown the principles involved, as if he were working on a real airplane." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p17 O 21 '45 130w

Booklist 42:23 S '45

"Clear and explicit text and diagrams. . . For the ingenious, resourceful, skilfull American boy."

+ Kirkus 13:340 Ag 1 '45 70w

"Excellent book on model plane building." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 70w

Sat R of Lit 28:82 N 10 '45 20w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 12 '45 90w

POWELL, JOHN BENJAMIN. My twenty-five years in China. 436p $3.50 Macmillan

951.04 China—Politics and government. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-9203

The author of these personal reminiscences is an American journalist who had lived in China for many years before war broke out. He recounts some of his own adventures—his capture by bandits in the early 20s, his imprisonment by the Japanese in the 40s,—but large sections of his work deal with his observations of Far Eastern politics during two crucial decades. Index.

"Powell's many friends of China years will read this book avidly. To others interested in China I recommend it highly. It is the work of a scholar written in the words of a layman. For, above all, Powell in his 25 years in the East was a student." Walter Briggs

+ Book Week p3 N 18 '45 500w

Booklist 42:126 D 15 '45

POWELL, JOHN B.—Continued

"It is a plain tale told by a Missouri farmer who went to China in 1917 and developed into an old Chinese hand but never lost his native shrewdness and simplicity. He is transparently truthful, and confines himself strictly to unembroidered facts which his readers may piece together whatever way they like. . . Mr. Powell was not only in China but also in Russia, Japan and the Philippines; and his comments on these countries are as sound as his comments on China." Francis McCullagh

+ Cath World 162:278 D '45 500w

"Although the story has been told more briefly before, Mr. Powell gives in satisfyingly complete form the narrative of his personal experiences after Pearl Harbor, when he was arrested by the Japanese gendarmerie and held at the extemporized prison in Bridge House. There is no heat or malice in his account. It is the more powerfully convincing for that reason. His sufferings were extreme, but they are described with moderation. . . Mr. Powell concludes with brief, but pointed findings." Randall Gould

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 7 '45 550w

"Possibly, his observations are even more interesting to Catholic missions in their expanding activities in the Near East than to students of diplomacy and research workers in current history of the Pacific Basin. Whatever facet of his adventurous life he presents, however, in this book, is interesting and his story is well told." W. F. Sands

+ Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 210w

"Not popularized history; not dramatic nor exciting reading; but a sober contribution and a rewarding book."

+ Kirkus 13:351 Ag 15 '45 340w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle

Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 90w

"Americans will honor Mr. Powell for his stand against the Japanese. But when it comes to internal Chinese affairs, history has bypassed him." Agnes Smedley

— + New Repub 113:717 N 26 '45 1400w

"The writing was a magnificent feat; a magnificent book would be too much to expect. Curiously enough, his account loses vividness as it comes up to date. Glimpses of Shanghai in the early days, seen through the naive eyes of an instructor in journalism from the University of Missouri, are candid and fresh. . . His reminiscences flow smoothly until they strike a famous name or event. Then Powell back tracks and inserts a thumb-nail up-dating. This mixture of the conversational and historical is sometimes informal and compact." Annalee Jacoby

+ — N Y Times p7 D 16 '45 1350w

New Yorker 21:114 N 24 '45 80w

"[This] is a strangely detached, dispassionate work, an historical outline rather than a chronicle of personal life." Mark Gayn

Sat R of Lit 28:21 N 10 '45 900w

"Even the style of 'My Twenty-Five Years in China' is a decline from what we have come to expect of the editor of the China Weekly Review and of the foreign correspondent for American and British papers. He is pedantic when he should be informative; redundant when he should be emphatic; inaccurate in small details when he should analyze major milestones. In brief, J. B. may be showing the effects of imprisonment and long convalescence; it is not J. B. at his best or his brightest." Frederick Reinstein

Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 650w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore

Weekly Book Review p2 N 11 '45 1350w

POWELL, RICHARD PITTS. Lay that pistol down. 210p $2 Simon & Schuster

45-5093

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p15 Je 10 '45 130w

Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45

"Energetic, amusing Washington tallyho."

+ Kirkus 13:146 Ap 1 '45 80w

"Andy, forced willy-nilly into a series of violent actions, is at his sardonic best, and Arab and a redhaired menace named Kit do some nice verbal sparring, but the story suffers from the haywire plot. It's time Mr. Powell decided whether he's going to go in for murder or madness." E. H.

New Repub 112:854 Je 18 '45 90w

"There are no murders in this story, but there are several uncomfortably close tries." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 10 '45 120w

New Yorker 21:80 Je 9 '45 90w

Sat R of Lit 28:42 Je 23 '45 40w

"Andy and Arab (Arabella) Blake are probably the most active young married pair in fiction. They are fun to watch as they go tearing around Washington, D. C., and nearby points after a secret having to do with a weapon described as a late eighteenth century double-barreled English coach pistol. . . Breezy may be the word, though it's hardly strong enough for this new tale by an author who does the light touch successfully and provides plenty of mystery thrills as well." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Je 10 '45 130w

POWER, THOMAS FRANCIS. Jules Ferry and the renaissance of French imperialism. 222p pa $2.75 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Ferry, Jules François Camille. France—Colonies A44-2194

"The role of Jules Ferry as the political force in the new era of France overseas is [here] presented in scholarly manner. . . After describing the situation in France at the time Ferry became premier in 1880, the author follows with chapters on Tunisia, Oceania, West Africa, Equatorial Africa, Egypt, and Indo-China." (Am Hist R) Bibliography. Index.

"This well-documented study is a welcome addition to the books in English on nineteenth century France. . . The reviewer is delighted to see this book appear without a cloth cover, as the French have done for years, a practice which reduces costs at least one third. Let us hope that other important studies follow the same inexpensive format." T. E. Ennis

+ Am Hist R 50:326 Ja '45 550w

"This is not a tract based upon some simple ideology. It is a study—appropriately assisted by a group of Columbia University savants. Its contents cannot remain outside the lecture notes of teachers of French government or of colonial government and administration. In short, the study is a contribution." J. G. Heinberg

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:204 F '45 300w

"The carefully balanced appraisal of Ferry's relation to Bismarck, who supported Ferry's colonial program, and of the French premier's role at the Berlin Conference deserves special attention. It is probably unavoidable that studies which investigate the contributions of one person and which restrict themselves to narrow time limits frequently lack the broad framework necessary for a comprehensive evaluation of the problems. . . Any evaluation of this period of colonial expansion which restricts itself largely to official diplomacy and ignores the many nonofficial political considerations is likely to miss an important aspect of imperialistic policy. These few critical observations cannot detract from the scholarly character of the work." H. A. Wieschhoff

+ — Ann Am Acad 239:195 My '45 500w

"A historian is sometimes defined as a man whom society pays to remember events that most people ignore. The creation of the modern French empire is one of those events. Yet the story of creating that empire is too instructive to be the property of historians alone. From the work before us, readers may learn a great deal about the multiple mechanics of empire-building as well as something about its implications and causes. . . In reading this book we learn more of the diplomacy of imperialism than of Ferry's personality, and sometimes the idea of a renaissance is obscured by detail. This meticulous, highly objective, sharply focused account is the stuff from which books on public affairs are made. It merits careful reading." Garland Downum

+ Christian Century 62:791 Jl 4 '45 850w

Reviewed by D. V. McKay

Geog R 35:508 Jl '45 750w

POWERS, TOM. Virgin with butterflies; il. by Roger Duvoisin. 188p $2.50 Bobbs

45-4300

She sold cigarettes in a Chicago cafe, and the butterflies were the symptoms of terror which afflicted her at times. When this beautiful and not so dumb country girl helped an Indian prince who was set upon by underworld characters, the way was paved for a trip to India, with way stations thrown in. The girl herself is the narrator.

Reviewed by Rosemary Taylor

Book Week p6 My 20 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:208 My 15 '45 160w

"The author of this comic little romance makes his wonderful young woman tell her own story, in language so colloquial that often it must be read aloud to be at all lucid. She admits that what she has to tell is 'more like them cheap sensational movies than what they are theirselves.'. . Tom Powers, who writes these pleasantries, is the actor whom Broadway has seen in many important productions. Against him the charge may be made that there is no one like his blonde in all the world. The answer to that is easy: So much the worse for the world." Nancy Flagg

N Y Times p10 My 13 '45 300w

"Mr. Powers's novel is diverting if not very convincing. We might add that the butterflies referred to in the title are metaphorical." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p8 Je 24 '45 130w

POYNTER, NELSON PAUL, and POYNTER, HENRIETTA, eds. Post-war jobs. 212p $2.50; pa $1 Am. council on public affairs

330.973 Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S.

45-8299

"The material in this postwar economic guide was compiled by Press Research, a publishers' information service. Its title is somewhat misleading: the chapters deal with full employment, reconversion, taxation, surplus-property disposal, social security, public works, housing and foreign trade. They present all the basic data, together with brief statements which indicate the attitudes of government officials. A paragraph called 'Where Does Congress Stand?' concludes each section and is a valuable guide to legislative opinion." New Repub

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Book Week p19 S 23 '45 230w

Booklist 42:124 D 15 '45

"The viewpoint of the editors is liberal. For one who wants the facts, this book will prove extremely useful."

+ New Repub 113:445 O 1 '45 120w

POZNANSKI, CZESLAW. Rights of nations. [rev ed] 192p $2.50 Roy pubs. [5s Routledge]

940.5 Europe—Politics. States, Small. Reconstruction (1939-) 45-5742

"Denounces plans recommending spheres of influence dominated by the large nations in postwar world. Pleads for a federation of European nations that lie between Aegean and Baltic. The will to live together more important than any number of economic factors. Author feels that truly democratic world must offer an equal voice to all nations, large or small. German 'hegemony' of Europe should not be replaced by a Russia-dominated central Europe or French-British- or German-dominated central Europe." Library J

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 21 '45 700w

"Recommended for large libraries interested in material on postwar planning. One of many views concerned with complex problem of world peace." J. H. Berthel

Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 100w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 19 '45 1000w

PRALL, CHARLES EDWARD, and CUSHMAN, CHARLES LESLIE. Teacher education in service; prepared for the Commission on teacher education. 503p $3 Am. council on educ.

371.12 Teachers, Training of 44-6892

" 'In-Service Training through Cooperative Study' would be a better title for this book. In-service education through cooperative effort was the theme of the investigation, the results of which are described in the report. Fourteen school systems took part in the study. There was no attempt to secure uniformity. Each system worked at its own problems and developed its own techniques and program. The experience of each group is described in some detail, with special attention to the role of school policies councils, school system workshops, personnel study, and curriculum development resulting from cooperative effort." Social Educ

"This report contains such a wealth of material that it may well be used as a source book by all interested in the demonstrated merits of co-operative group efforts in promoting the continuous growth of an educational staff. However, it should be pointed out that this is a rather voluminous book requiring careful study and much reflective thinking. In addition, the lack of an index is, in the opinion of the reviewers, a serious omission; for it prevents one who is interested in developing an in-service program from referring quickly to the pages which would be helpful in meeting specific problems and issues." E. D. Schroeder & H. C. Olsen

+ — El School J 45:417 Mr '45 900w

"How widely the book will be used is open to question. It is neither easy nor stimulating reading. One will need plenty of professional interest and patience to read every chapter." B. W. Phillips

Social Educ 9:186 Ap '45 450w

PRATT, EDWIN JOHN. Collected poems. 269p $3 Knopf

811 45-3432

The collected works of a Canadian poet, not very well known in the United States. "In his most characteristic work, his bold and imaginative long poems, Mr. Pratt's poetry is quite unlike anything being written in the United States. With skill and obvious relish in the manipulation of polysyllables, he employs a rhymed tetrameter in narratives of sustained power. The earliest of these, 'The Cachalot' (1926), a sort of 'Moby Dick' in brief, established at once, in some 800 lines, the originality of his talents; it remains one of his most memorable poems." (N Y Times) He is at present professor of English in Victoria college, University of Toronto.

Booklist 41:337 Jl 15 '45

Reviewed by M. F. Ward

Cath World 162:282 D '45 350w

"Although excelling in the freer range of the larger canvas, there are also many shorter poems in diversified form. The whole is indicative of a virile, robust poetic talent."

+ Kirkus 13:100 Mr 1 '45 110w

"The Canadian poet E. J. Pratt has been little known in the United States; the impact of his collected poems should therefore be all the greater. . . In vigor and subtlety, in the extent and originality of his poetic achievement, he is the first of contemporary Canadian poets and one of the ablest poets writing in English today. . . Mr. Pratt's 'Collected Poems' contain many short poems and lyrics—some, such as 'Silences' and 'Come Away, Death,' of much power—but it is in his long poems that his abilities are most fully realized. In his most recent long poem, 'Dunkirk,' he brings his poetic resources, with rewarding results, to a contemporary theme." Coleman Rosenberger

PRATT, E. J.—Continued
+ N Y Times p5 My 20 '45 430w

Discussion by J. D. Adams
N Y Times p2 Jl 22 '45 440w

Reviewed by W. T. Scott
Poetry 66:329 S '45 1300w

"E. J. Pratt is a poet to be welcomed at once. There are three long narratives, all of them highly successful. . . Pratt is a poet highly sensitive to time as the controlling element in human affairs. Although he possesses religious conviction, we feel that he is content to leave the map of eternity to other cartographers; he gets his main effects from the enormous background of geologic time and tide against which is set the exact flash of the passing moment of human inspiration, content, or agony." Robert Hillyer
+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Ap 28 '45 1100w

"The work of E. J. Pratt was praised by the late Edwin Arlington Robinson and the late Laurence Binyon and has rejoiced John Masefield and William Rose Benet, who writes an enthusiastic introduction to the present volume. Although I had seen scattered pieces here and there that made me wish to acquaint myself further with Mr. Pratt's verse, I find, on examining this stout book, that I cannot share the pleasure of the poets mentioned above." Babette Deutsch
— + Weekly Book Review p18 Jl 29 '45 900w

PRATT, THEODORE (TIMOTHY BRACE, pseud). Miss Dilly says no. 214p $2.50 Duell 45-2361

"Miss Dilly is the meek secretary of a pompous producer, suddenly catapulted into fame when the studios begin bidding frantically for screen rights to her 'Hollywood Diary.' She discovers that what she dreamed of all these years is not what she wants, and what she has never dreamed of is what it's nice to have." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p7 F 18 '45 450w

Reviewed by L. L. Marchand
Boston Globe p7 F 21 '45 400w

"Recommended for a pleasant few hours of relaxation."
+ Cath World 161:283 Je '45 140w

"A gentle farce on Hollywood foibles that aims to put the cinema circus in its place."
+ Kirkus 13:4 Ja 1 '45 190w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:284 Mr 10 '45 30w

"Mr. Pratt at his best is very funny indeed. At least two of his top scenes (luncheon in Mr. Sweet's office and Miss Dilly's Cinderella-dinner with her banker sweetheart beside a cobalt swimming pool) are worth the price of admission alone. Both of them, incidentally, will fit into a shooting script with practically no rewriting." C. V. Terry
+ N Y Times p4 F 18 '45 360w

"It is hard to think that even the pro-whimsy group won't feel queasy over this coy story."
— New Yorker 21:79 F 17 '45 80w

"Being a target of conspicuous size and gaudy coloration, Hollywood can be hit at some point by any novelist with an eye for satire. . . But since the objective is unmistakably screwy to start with, it does not follow that the way to hit the bull's eye is by burlesquing the obvious. Theodore Pratt has been content to do that, and the result is not as funny as could have been wished." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p19 F 18 '45 200w

PRESGRAVE, RALPH. Dynamics of time study. 2d ed 238p $2.50 McGraw
658.5421 Time study 45-8831

"This book analyzes the essential principles to which sound time study technique must conform and describes practical methods for applying these principles. To some extent it is a philosophical approach, relating time study to the fundamental physical capacities of human individuals when performing manual work. From it time-study technicians and executives will get a groundwork of principles upon which their methods may be analyzed and improved and a reasoned rather than an empirical approach to new problems being developed." (Publisher's note) Index.

Library J 70:1091 N 15 '45 60w

"Here is a compact evaluation of the techniques and functions of time study. This is a valuable book for the person experienced in time study who is able to appreciate the author's keen comments and analyses of various steps in time study techniques. It is essentially a practical book which will assist time study departments in refining and improving their work." D. D. Lescohier
+ Management R 33:467 D '44 100w

PRICE, LUCIEN. Litany for All souls. 92p $1 Beacon press
242 All souls' day 45-3605

"This brief book is a gathered re-printing of editorials from the Boston Globe over the last quarter of a century, each for an All Souls' Day, written by Lucien Price. The earliest, that in 1919, a tribute to a painter-soldier, Sgt Fred A. Demmler, who was wounded just at the end of the first World War, and died in an evacuation hospital in Belgium on All Souls' Day, 1918." Boston Globe

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 175:123 Je '45 550w

Reviewed by W. L. Sperry
Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 700w

PRICE, OLIVE M. Donkey for the King; decorated by Valenti Angelo. (Whittlesey house publication) 73p $1.75 McGraw 45-3925

The story of the donkey "whereon never man sat" upon which Christ rode on his triumphal entry into Jerusalem. Afterwards he was bought by a rich follower of Christ, and presented to his young son, but the donkey liked best the little lame servant boy, who waited on the rich man's son. For readers eight to ten.

"Olive Price has written a charming and sensitive story in 'A Donkey for the King,' and Valenti Angelo has added his own inimitable touch in the illustrations."
+ Book Week p17 Je 3 '45 180w

Booklist 41:306 Je 15 '45

"A sensitive and charming story of the donkey who carried the King on his triumphal entry into Jerusalem. . . Valenti Angelo's lovely pictures are rightly in the old Italian manner."
+ Horn Bk 21:198 My '45 80w

"While the story has a tender quality and some charm, it seems for the most part, rather studied and artificial. And frankly, Valenti Angelo's pen drawings, with color overlay, reflect too much the orthodox stained glass window conception of Gospel stories to appeal to the average child."
— + Kirkus 13:135 Mr 15 '45 190w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 70:492 My 15 '45 50w

"Though the story has not been quite fully developed so far as the characters are concerned, it has a tender, reverent quality which is reflected in Valenti Angelo's fine illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 My 6 '45 180w

"The narrative and the illustrations in the style of early Italian wood engravings are of a piece in their simplicity and reverence."
+ New Yorker 21:136 D 8 '45 50w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 90w

"Tales for older children have dealt more vividly with 'The Donkey of God,' as Louis Untermeyer's Italianate tale called him, but this simple story is for young listeners." M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 My 13 '45 150w

PRICE, WILLARD DE MILLE. Japan and the Son of Heaven [Eng title: Son of Heaven]. 231p $2.75 Duell [10s 6d Heinemann]

915.2 Japan—Civilization. Hirohito, emperor of Japan 45-8930

"A trained newspaper man, long resident in Japan, writes out of intimate knowledge of historical facts and contemporary development of the emperor hoax; he tears down every phase of it and hammers constantly on one theme—the emperor must go. He shows how emperor worship permeates every phase of life, makes education a travesty, the army a symptom of mass hypnotism, the public victims of hysteria. War lords and industrialists use the emperor as they please. Price documents his thesis at every point, makes it good reading; he does not overlook the arguments in defense of retaining the emperor—but exposes their fallacies. And he charts a program for Japanese re-education, control, and direction towards a democracy in the future." (Kirkus) Index.

"A compact, informative, readable book on the little fellow with the mustache and not much chin who is worshipped as a living god by 75,000,000 Japanese." F. S. Marquardt

+ Book Week p4 O 14 '45 600w

Booklist 42:74 N 1 '45

Reviewed by Randall Gould

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 20 '45 600w

"A clear, timely case for the complete abolition of the mikado myth, the root of Japanese aggression. . . Mr. Price makes a strong case for his point." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 160:16 Ja 15 '46 240w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands

Commonweal 43:48 O 26 '45 1200w

"It should be required reading for everyone who wants a factual background on the problem of the emperor of Japan."

+ Kirkus 13:389 S 1 '45 150w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '45 180w

Reviewed by Andrew Roth

Nation 161:505 N 10 '45 210

"Mr. Price's book is nicely calculated to appeal to the popular Western prejudices of the moment, and it is no doubt sincere, since he shares them; but it does not make sufficient allowance for the effect on the Japanese of the shock of defeat, or for the necessity of compromise in helping them to recover from it." William Plomer

New Statesman & Nation 30:201 S 22 '45 700w

"On troubled waters Mr. Price pours a somewhat inflammable brand of oil. On the one hand he assembles conveniently, in one small book, a great many reasons for strengthening the natural American conviction that the whole Emperor business in Japan is as dirty as pitch and that we can't play around with it without getting tarred. On the other hand, especially in the historical sections, he does such a lusty job of debunking that many will simply refuse to believe that any people which was taken in wholesale by such utter nonsense will ever be competent to direct its own affairs under a democratic system." Owen Lattimore

N Y Times p3 O 14 '45 700w

New Yorker 21:107 O 13 '45 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p459 S 29 '45 700w

"It is an informal, highly readable, and, in some respects, a rather elementary account of the emperor's life, the origins of the myths surrounding the emperor institution and the present-day—or very recent—cult of emperor worship as Mr. Price himself observed it during several years' residence in Japan. . . In his concentration upon the dangerous influence of the god-emperor concept, Mr. Price has nevertheless made a very worthwhile contribution to popular understanding of the issues at stake in Japan. With its easy style, picturesque incident, and intimate personal record, 'Japan and the Son of Heaven' may not be as searching or profound as some of the recent books on Japan, but the general reader should find it both highly interesting and informing." F. R. Dulles

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 O 14 '45 800w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Three men in new suits. 217p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Heinemann]

45-7058

"The problem of the returned soldier as it looks in England is the theme. . . It is stated in the terms of three good companions, demobilized together, who come home dressed in government-issue civilian clothes. They find the situation on the home front as badly cut as their new suits. With the war virtually over, many people are falling back into their old ways of greed, pleasure-seeking, or the struggle for power. . . Herbert and Eddie, seeking advice from Alan, arrive just in time to prevent his leaving with Betty. In a long conversation, they agree that they must say good-by to the past, and join with other men of good will to build a world on a basis of co-operation rather than competition." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ag 26 '45 380w

Booklist 42:20 S '45

Cath World 162:93 O '45 200w

"Mr. Priestley is always on the side of the angels, and in this book he has made a strong plea for social and economic as well as political justice. He is enough of an artist not to outline a definite solution to the problem he propounds. He states the problem and suggests the basis for a just solution. But he is not artist enough to raise his story above the level of special pleading to that of universal significance. . . But, for the most part, the characters are types, whose task is to convey the author's message. The dialogue contains a good deal of profanity, and some vulgarity. The incidents are a little too pat, and the talk, especially in the final round-up, suggests the soap box." L. A. Sloper

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 15 '45 550w

"No polemic, this, but a human tale, with a lesson we should all take to heart. And a vivid picture of England today."

+ Kirkus 13:256 Je 15 '45 340w

Reviewed by R. E. Kingery

Library J 70:685 Ag '45 90w

"Mr. J. B. Priestley has, of course, made a living story of this material. No other living English novelist has a clearer understanding of character or a more pungent graphic technique. And there can be no question that with the three very different temperaments he has selected for his purpose he has made out a very convincing case." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 1 '45 300w

"Mr. Priestley runs on, in his agreeable, pseudo-thoughtful style, about the problems confronting these disoriented men, giving very readable and often amusing vignettes of their unsatisfactory home lives but all the time working up to an inevitably noble and sunny conclusion in which there is enough sweetness and inspiration to sour almost any reader."

+ — New Yorker 21:61 Ag 25 '45 120w

Reviewed by Philip Toynbee

New Statesman & Nation 29:426 Je 30 '45 480w

"I have a nostalgia for the Priestley who wrote 'The Town Major of Miroucourt,' . . . the Priestley of ink and paper that existed before the paper shortage and before the ink was watered, before authors grew great, perfunctory and wary of working for the income tax collectors. 'Three Men in New Suits' is infinitely too heavy for its size." Gerald Kersh

— N Y Times p6 Ag 19 '45 650w

PRIESTLEY, J. B.—Continued

"J. B. Priestley is so skilful a novelist and so shrewd an observer of the common people of Great Britain that his characters are as familiar to an American as if they were old neighbors. His latest book, 'Three Men in New Suits' is half novel, half socialist Sunday School tract, but it is vital and warmhearted nevertheless." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:15 Ag 18 '45 950w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 174:508 Je 1 '45 360w

"In 'Three Men in New Suits,' Mr. Priestley again shows a deep understanding of England and her people, and a belief in her future—not the sentimental kind embodied in 'There will always be an England,' but the solid sort, taking into consideration her grave handicaps of tradition and enormous potentialities. . . It is a serious, stimulating and hopeful book." C. K. Bausman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 2 '45 480w

"There are some acute and entertaining passages in the course of this wrestling—Uncle Rodney's sense of the end of a world worth living in is particularly pointed—but Mr. Priestley tends to be a little too expository and falls back upon a forced and sentimental climax in the search for the dramatic."

Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Je 2 '45 550w

"'Three Men in New Suits' offers no specific formula for making a better society. Due to its brevity, it is also necessarily somewhat arbitrary in dealing with attitudes and social classes. But it does face the facts of postwar readjustment honestly and fearlessly, and it issues a warning to those who think the returning soldier is going to let himself be bluffed into accepting quietly less than he has been led to expect. It is a warm, compact, highly readable book rich in atmosphere and human sympathy." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 19 '45 700w

Wis Lib Bul 41:101 O '45

PROCTOR, EVERITT, pseud. See Montgomery, R. G.

PROKOSCH, FREDERIC. Age of thunder. 311p $2.50 Harper

45-2642

A strange, fantastic tale told in poetic prose. The chief character is a young man who has been sent into the border country between France and Switzerland to find out which among the maquisards are traitors to the cause.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Mr 18 '45 650w

Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45

"Less significant than his earlier books, this is the rather nebulous tale of a young soldier in the south of France. . . The philosophic dialogues of war, death etc, plus the poetic overcast characteristic of the Prokosch novels, will appeal to his special audience, but the average reader will find it produces an aura of cloudiness rather than atmosphere."

Kirkus 13:19 Ja 15 '45 170w

"Admirers of author's distinctive and very individual talent will not be disappointed in new novel; beauty of style, dreamlike atmosphere and tormented characters remind reader of The Skies of Europe or The Seven Who Fled. Erotic element also strong. Although based on personal experiences of members of the French Underground as told to the author, story unlike any other published account of the Maquis. For mature readers and connoisseurs of the unusual in fiction." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 70:219 Mr 1 '45 90w

"In the novel of a poet we expect to find a distinction not merely of form and word, but of imaginative inwardness and sensuous awareness. In his latest novel, as in its predecessors, Mr. Frederic Prokosch does not disappoint us." H. I'A Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 7 '45 270w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 160:368 Mr 31 '45 480w

Reviewed by R. G. Davis

N Y Times p6 Mr 18 '45 900w

"As a whole, the book is high-grade phony." Edmund Wilson

— New Yorker 21:81 Mr 31 '45 550w

Reviewed by Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 28:9 Mr 31 '45 1000w

"The Age of Thunder is a mystery without a full solution, and some devotees of the spy-story will justly feel a little cheated of their sport. But the book that Mr. Prokosch has written is something in a finer class of writing altogether. This is adventure seen from a strange angle, watched through a glass which shows the shadows brighter than the substance. It is a picture reflected in the faint distortion of water—a dream memory that a man might keep after days and nights of terrible experience. It is at once stranger and nearer to truth than any conventional mystery. It is powerful in description, incisive in character sketch, memorable in language." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 175:550 D 7 '45 400w

"'Age of Thunder' is a memorable excursion into radiant prose poetry." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 330w

Time 45:104 Mr 26 '45 60w

"The poetic phrases with which the record of Jean-Nicolas Martin's wanderings is strewn leave an impression, unfortunately, of empty poeticizing. Character and incident in the novel fall flat so consistently, indeed, that Mr. Prokosch's poetic commentary was bound to seem to consist of mere verbal rhetoric. He exhibits, incidentally, the American sentimentality towards France which so often accompanies the American feeling of isolation from the affairs of Europe."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p593 D 15 '45 380w

"They are remarkable for their range, their beauty, and their wisdom. Age of Thunder is an impressive study of the soul of Europe today."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:5 Je '45 200w

"The author's antennae-like nerves catch the least tremor of a bush, one least flicker on a face, the swiftest exchange of glance or whispered word, and freight them with meaning. A master of suggestion, he can bewitch the senses with his subtleties. But life and death in underground France are not such stuff as dreams can be made of, and 'Age of Thunder,' for all its acknowledged magic, does not bring bitter actuality to life." Virgilia Sapieha

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 18 '45 850w

PROSSER, DAVID GANN. Journey underground. 347p $2.75 Dutton

940.5344 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—France 45-8824

Personal narrative of a young American flier who had to bail out of his plane over France and spent the next three months dodging Nazis. With the assistance of the French underground he kept out of the enemy's clutches and finally escaped across the Pyrenees into Spain.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p8 N 4 '45 310w

"Mr. Prosser is a fluent writer with an unusual memory for details. He lacks, however, the artist's faculty of distinguishing between trivia and essential elements. As a result, his book has a definitive documentary value, but only in a few chapters does it rise above the level of a personal account of limited interest." E. S. P.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 D 1 '45 360w

Kirkus 13:449 O 1 '45 190w

Nation 161:602 D 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by H. F. Pringle
N Y Times p29 N 25 '45 180w

"'Journey Underground' is much too long considering the lack of novelty of the basic story the author has to tell. But as he tells it so nobly it remains gratifying to have met a writer of promise beyond the hero he proved to be." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:9 N 3 '45 320w

"If this book lacks the novelty that it would have had a year or two ago, it more than makes up for this by the presence of several sounder and more lasting qualities. The author had wanted 'to write' before the war broke out. If this book is a true indication of his ability, much will be heard from him in the coming years. His book is marked by excellent characterization and description, and by real insight into the ways of thought and action of the people with whom he was in contact." R. A. Brown
+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 6 '45 300w

"Except for the description of the last lap of the journey out of France, when the sharp doubt of survival moves even Mr. Prosser's sluggish pen to a sweeping intensity, this account of what was in fact a great adventure is singularly flat." Virgilia Sapieha
— + Weekly Book Review p26 D 2 '45 450w

PRUITT, IDA. Daughter of Han. See Ning Lao T'ai-t'ai

PRUTTON, CARL FREDERIC, and MARON, SAMUEL HERBERT. Fundamental principles of physical chemistry. 780p il $4.50 Macmillan

541.3 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 45-601

"A textbook designed for students of chemistry and chemical engineering. The presentation is advanced, with use made of calculus and thermodynamics. Such phases of the subject as equilibrium, electrolysis, atomic structure, radioactivity, and molecular structure, are included. References are given at the end of each chapter." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"This book will make a good text for a thorough course in physical chemistry for students in chemistry and chemical engineering." R. C. Bacon
+ Chem & Eng N 23:668 Ap 10 '45 200w

"A book well written which will be equally well received by the audience." F. C. Nachod
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:222 Ap '45 180w

"Calculus and the elements of thermodynamics are used as an integral part of the book and a full coverage of the principles of electrochemistry. Over four hundred problems. Illustrated with many drawings and pictures."
Library J 70:119 F 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:57 O '44

"In spite of the large number of excellent texts in physical chemistry, the appearance of a new one is of interest to teachers of the subject. There is always the hope that the difficult parts will be more clearly presented and that a new point of view will be stimulating to the student. In some ways Professors Prutton and Maron have succeeded in both of these objectives. . . Since the book as a whole is so satisfactory, it may be useful to point out some shortcomings which, in the opinion of the reviewer, might be easily removed. The statement about colligative properties of solutions at the beginning of Chapter VI is somewhat misleading. . . In the thermodynamics of solutions no emphasis is laid on partial molal quantities. . . Some of the above criticisms may appear trivial but to the reviewer they seemed of sufficient importance to be pointed out. They would not have been made if the book as a whole was not so excellent." J. L. Crenshaw
+ — R of Scientific Instruments 16:281 O '45 700w

PURDY, MRS CLAIRE LEE (STEWART). Victor Herbert, American music-master; il. by Everett Shinn; music drawings by Rudolf W. Kohl. 271p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Herbert, Victor—Juvenile literature
45-1075

Biography of the Irish musician who became one of the best-loved composers of comic opera in America. The book is written for teen-age readers. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p10 Ap 1 '45 230w

Booklist 41:198 Mr 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:114 Mr '45 140w

"Packed with details of the many musical compositions of the facile artist, Victor Herbert, this book may prove too much for the average young reader of biography who, no doubt, would prefer less of the music and more of the warm-hearted musician. Mrs. Purdy does succeed in picturing Herbert as a well-versed musician who saw the need and possibility of lighter music. For larger libraries." F. W. Butler
Library J 70:165 F 15 '45 70w

"The book will appeal to young people with a special interest in operetta and musical comedy rather than to the general reader." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 Ap 1 '45 120w

"It is a slight improvement on earlier anecdotal works about a man who was a leader in a broad musical field for almost a generation. And yet it adds no sound musical appraisal and is chiefly a rehash. Most of the anecdotes concerning Herbert's musical life appear again and again in the same form, even the same words, as new biographers appear. . . Though Claire Purdy has not written an important book, she has presented an amusing story of a rich and profitable life with its many friendships and many byways."
+ — Theatre Arts 29:382 Je '45 200w

"The author shares the general conviction that in Victor Herbert's day New York musical society was socially vivacious and that he himself will be living and lovable to New Yorkers of that time as long as one of them survives. But the man and his period are under a heap of details, and speaking as one who had a slight acquaintance with both, I don't find either of them breathing freely. The popularity of the subject will have to carry the book, and undoubtedly will." M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 21 '45 320w

Wis Lib Bul 41:56 My '45

PUSEY, MERLO JOHN. Big government: can we control it? foreword by Charles A. Beard. 240p $2.50 Harper

342.733 U.S.—Politics and government
45-3457

"This book traces the trends toward dangerous and unwieldy bigness in our Federal Government, assesses the significance of these trends, and advocates a number of practical reforms." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Chamberlain
Am Pol Sci R 39:793 Ag '45 1000w

Reviewed by Charles McKinley
Ann Am Acad 241:194 S '45 650w

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 22 '45 1050w

Booklist 41:248 My 1 '45

Foreign Affairs 24:164 O '45 30w

"His criticism, recommendations and warnings give this book more even temper than most of the explorations of bureaucracy."
+ Kirkus 13:51 F 1 '45 170w

Management R 34:158 Ap '45 30w

"The author advances a complete program of government reorganization that is sound, realizable and certainly very necessary. Mr. Pusey is an editorial writer for the Washington Post. His approach to the problem is therefore that of the journalist. . . The source for virtually all of his critical material, is the workings of the federal government during the recent years of the present emergency. The implication is inescapable that the 'disorder' and excesses of this period stem from organic weaknesses in the structure of the government itself. Any such conclusion, however, is unwarranted. . . This unconscious 'slanting' by the author does not, however, vitiate the general excellence and timeliness of his book. It deserves to be widely read." H. J. Bresler

PUSEY, M. J.—Continued
+ — New Repub 112:796 Je 4 '45 480w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
N Y Times p24 Jl 22 '45 1450w

"Mr Pusey has a message that is worth some thought; but the case he presents is not strengthened by his veiled but nonetheless unconcealed animosity toward Franklin D. Roosevelt and almost everything connected with the Roosevelt administrations." R. S. Ullery
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 19 '45 600w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:34 S '45 280w

"Mr. Pusey's program is far more limited in scope than many of the others that have been presented in recent books on the American government and its future. But it is all the more practical, for that. One may quarrel with some of the conclusions which he draws, with interpretation of some of the events he cites. Charles A. Beard, for example, expresses in his foreword to the book some reservations about the manner in which Mr. Pusey has treated the relationship of the Supreme Court to the general problems of government and liberty. But Mr. Beard concludes, quite justly, that Mr. Pusey's book is 'full of warning and instruction for theorists and practitioners now inclined to an extreme specialization that is dangerous to truthfinding as well as to effective practice in the art of self-government, with all that implies in terms of liberty, manners and morals.' " H. W. Baehr
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 3 '45 700w
Wis Lib Bul 41:81 Jl '45

PUTNAM, CARLETON. High journey; a decade in the pilgrimage of an air line pioneer. 308p $2.75 Scribner

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial 45-3759

"Carleton Putnam is president of Chicago & Southern Air Lines, but before his executive days he was an enthusiastic amateur pilot. This volume is one-half a ruminative personal diary of Mr. Putnam's mile-high meanderings above America and one-half a record of the rise of Chicago & Southern from struggling obscurity—an old-fashioned American success story with an ultra-modern twist." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"Viewing the book as a chronicle of transport aviation, there is a sureness, a sort of basic integrity, that impresses. Much more could have been said, however, in the way of dramatic detail. No venture in our nation's history is comparable with aviation in color and romance. Perhaps the author was too close to the forest." F. N. Litten
+ — Book Week p3 Ap 29 '45 550w
Booklist 41:295 Je 15 '45
Kirkus 13:83 F 15 '45 230w

" 'High Journey'—most of it—is not quite 'literature,' but it is distinctly an airman's book, a fresh, airy sort of book that at its occasional best does 'slip the surly bonds of earth.' " Richard Match
+ Weekly Book Review p18 My 6 '45 450w
Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

PYENSON, LOUIS. Pest control in the home garden. 190p il $2 Macmillan

632 Agricultural pests Agr44-213

"Directed to the layman, 'who can give at most only one or two daylight hours to the garden,' this useful manual by an instructor in plant protection and a backyard gardener himself, contains the latest and most effective methods of pest control as well as older methods. Chapters explain the technics of spraying and dusting, the differences in pest-control chemicals, how to disinfect seed, how to protect the garden against animal pests, general pests, tree fruit, small fruit and vegetable pests and how to recognize and encourage plant friends. What to do about poison ivy and other garden health hazards is taken up in a final chapter. Numerous instructive photographs and line drawings in black and white. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 41:12 S '44
Bookmark 6:8 Ja '45

PYESHKOFF, ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH. See Gorky, M. pseud.

Q

Q, pseud. See Quiller-Couch, A. T.

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. The murderer is a fox. 231p $2 Little 45-4451

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p15 Je 10 '45 180w
Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45
Bookmark 6:16 My '45

"Somewhat out of the Ellery Queen groove—but interesting."
+ Kirkus 13:117 Mr 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 S 7 '45 20w

"The solution is questionable, to say the least of it; but a rich mixture and supercharged style are supposed to cover the defects in the argument." Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 30:217 S 29 '45 70w

"A remarkable story dealing with two interlocking problems." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 My 27 '45 230w

"All very neat but somewhat lacking in suspense."
New Yorker 21:83 My 26 '45 100w

"The new Ellery Queen is an improvement on his last, for there is less wise-cracking and more hard work in The Murderer is a Fox, though many of his addicts are going to be upset by the anti-climax which provides a solution to the mystery." John Hampson
Spec 175:274 S 21 '45 100w

"Although the long arm of coincidence and fortuitous circumstance are worked pretty hard, a very neat solution is ultimately found—two in fact—although they may or may not be really unexpected to the reader. Nevertheless, Mr. Queen should have an orchid for a definitely better than average puzzle novel." L. S. M.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 240w
Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 15 '45 30w

"A superior Queen offering." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 27 '45 140w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Rogues' gallery; the great criminals of modern fiction. 562p $3 Little

Short stories—Collections 45-8207

A collection of short stories of mystery and crime, in which the interest is centered on the criminal and not on the detective, "detective stories in reverse."

Booklist 42:150 Ja 1 '46

" 'Rogues' Gallery' definitely belongs in your bedside library, but it's no cure for insomnia." James MacBride
+ N Y Times p20 O 14 '45 360w

"A very entertaining collection."
+ New Yorker 21:100 O 6 '45 80w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 S 29 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p22 O 7 '45 180w

QUENNELL, PETER COURTNEY. Profane virtues; four studies of the eighteenth century [Eng title: Four portraits]. 220p il $3 Viking [12s 6d Collins]

928.2 Boswell, James. Gibbon, Edward. Sterne, Laurence. Wilkes, John 45-5993

"A study of eighteenth-century England (which is supposed to have been ruled by what Gibbon called 'the profane virtues of sincerity and moderation') done in the form of biographies of four of its most representative men —Boswell, Gibbon, Sterne, and John Wilkes. These names, as Mr. Quennell says, are linked with some of the most important aspects of the extremely fertile genius of the eighteenth century, and in writing about the men who bore them, he has been able to reproduce (within reasonable limits) the age in which they lived." New Yorker

---

"Those who remember Quennell's two books on Byron and his biography of Caroline of Anspach will expect to find grace and lucidity, and learning presented with wit and charm. They will not be disappointed. Quennell has definitely taken his place as one of the most polished and sophisticated writers of English today." Bergen Evans
+ Book Week p4 Je 24 '45 400w
Booklist 42:75 N 1 '45

"Mr. Quennell has written straightforward biographical studies, resisting the fashion of 'fictionizing' historical personages. . . But one is always aware that the author's knowledge is wide and deep. He writes with vigor and grace and with a wit that never degenerates into facetiousness. Altogether a most readable book, to be enjoyed by anyone who wishes to mix information with entertainment and, forgetting for a moment his own troubled time, to live for a while amid the Peace of the Augustans." S. C. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 25 '45 900w
Commonweal 42:365 Jl 27 '45 280w
Kirkus 13:172 Ap 15 '45 210w

"Mr. Peter Quennell's studies of four eminent Augustans are not so piquant nor will they be so popular as Lytton Strachey's studies of four eminent Victorians. But in their own style of portraiture, which is less audacious and more faithful to the original, they deserve to rank with that earlier volume. For Mr. Quennell, too, in his quieter manner, explodes a common misconception, the idea that the eighteenth century was a period of urbane moderation." H. I'A. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 11 '45 250w

Reviewed by Willard Thorp
New Repub 113:581 O 29 '45 850w

"The four portraits in this book are masterly. The writing is distinguished. Mr. Quennell stands at a measured distance from his models at just the right point between formality and intimacy. His grasp of character is complete, his response to life immediate, his judgment is sane, without being phlegmatic." V. S. Pritchett
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:375 Je 9 '45 1800w

"These four portraits in one of the richest traditions of English prose will delight all who with Dr. Johnson 'love the biographical part of literature.' The eighteenth century lends itself remarkably to portraiture. It has a special clarity and the psychic distance still hard to achieve in subsequent periods; it is the age when universal absorption in personality was joined with unusual sanity of observation." W. B. C. Watkins
+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 8 '45 1100w

"The author travels some well-travelled ground, but the way he does it, and his ability to write, make this one of the worth-while books of the year."
+ New Yorker 21:70 Je 23 '45 140w

" 'The Profane Virtues' is not for the run-of-the-mine reader. It assumes a considerable knowledge of eighteenth-century history and it demands constant attention during the perusal. Its whole excuse for being is that there is a world in historical time. It is a distinguished and steadying contribution to the stability of European culture." H. M. Jones
+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 Jl 28 '45 1100w

"This is a very agreeable exercise in the lighter form of popular biography, neither overloaded with industry nor puffed-up with an inordinate display of knowledge. It will serve the ordinary intelligent reader as a most excellent introduction to Boswell, Gibbon, Sterne and Wilkes, whose 'portraits' are here presented in a fashion that is, upon the whole, adequately dimensional and elegantly precise. If Mr. Quennell is unable to produce any novelties or discoveries, anything with which a student of the eighteenth century is unfamiliar, he is none the less lucid and entertaining, and he is often extremely felicitous in deduction." C. E. Vulliamy
+ Spec 174:456 My 18 '45 750w
Time 46:88 Jl 16 '45 950w

"Some of his readers may say that more might have been made of background; but at least Mr. Quennell knows that his sort of biography is a kind of history. It cannot be easy nowadays to maintain, as he does, the dignity of biography without exposing a chink to accusations of dullness and of conventional reticence. He writes biography without pretending that it is fiction. He calls his subjects by their surnames. He puts in dates—though never yet was biographer or historian who put in enough dates; and his purpose is to explain his subjects, not to be smart at their expense."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p246 My 26 '45 2900w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 1 '45 1550w

"Why Mr. Quennell, in giving us this brilliantly tinted picture of mid-eighteenth-century English society, selected these four from among all the rugged individualists he might have chosen, I do not know; but it may have been merely because he found them singularly good company, with their social talents, their vanities, their integrity, and their essential simplicity." C. H. Bennett
Yale R n s 35:379 winter '46 900w

QUENTIN, PATRICK, pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

QUILLER-COUCH, SIR ARTHUR THOMAS (Q, pseud). Memories and opinions; an unfinished autobiography, by Q; ed. with an introd. by S. C. Roberts. 105p $1.50 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

B or 92 [45-3794]

A fragment of autobiography, which carries the subject only into his twenties. The project was put aside by Quiller-Couch for years, but in 1936 he signed an agreement with his publishers to write the story of his life. At the time of his death only four chapters were finished. The notes of a fifth chapter were discovered and expanded, and all are gathered together in this small volume. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 15 '45 130w
Booklist 41:339 Jl 15 '45

"Something of the man himself emerges from this all too brief volume. Plucky, keen, a lover of sport, books, nature, and life, to whom a great line of poetry, a gallant action, or a sudden revelation of natural beauty could give a thrill the memory of which endured through his eighty-one years, Q had a gift for friendship that passed from the man himself into the very substance of his books. His failure to get

QUILLER-COUCH, A. T.—Continued
further in his story than the publication at twenty-four of his first book, Dead Man's Rock, must remain a matter of intense regret." J. J. Reilly
+ Cath World 162:184 N '45 420w

"There is a deftness of touch about these reminiscences, a delicacy of phrasing, a clarity of memory, a lively mellowness which together are wholly delightful and keep the attention of the reader, even if he is unacquainted or not familiarly acquainted, with the day-to-day details of life in a Cornish village, in English schools, or at Oxford." S. C. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 21 '45 650w

"Gentle grace, cultivated periods, characteristic of his previous writings are evident here."
+ Kirkus 13:195 My 1 '45 130w

"For all libraries and all discriminating readers." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 110w

"In this book, fragment though it be, as in so many others, 'Q' made a generous return for all that was given him. Humane, homely, richly appreciative, and written with all his careful distinction, it is full of memorable as well as simple characters and recalls the atmosphere of a vanished and happier time." H. I'A. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 29 '44 230w

"Q was a particularly happy personality, and his Memories and Opinions is, in spite of its incompleteness, a legacy to this particularly sad world which no one with any belief in the return of sanity and the values for which he stood should miss." W. P. Rilla
+ New Statesman & Nation 28:410 D 16 '44 600w

" 'Memories and Opinions' is autobiography of the sort Sir Arthur could always have been expected to write. . . Because its scenes and themes are so characteristic of the memoirs of men of Sir Arthur's time, and because it is written in the manner which they so much admired, it is a fitting capstone to the edifice of the period's autobiography." R. D. Altick
+ N Y Times p6 Je 17 '45 650w

"Q led a more than ordinarily sequestered life, even for an English don, and these autobiographical musings are as quiet as his life—a little too quiet, perhaps, to interest many people this noisy side of the Atlantic."
New Yorker 21:70 Je 23 '45 90w

Time 45:94 Je 25 '45 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p589 D 9 '44 1200w

"In the course of a long and busy life Sir Arthur was to produce more than fifty books of fiction, poetry, essays and criticism. . . Perhaps he will be longest remembered for the sure taste exhibited in his 'Oxford Book of English Verse' and its successors. His unfinished autobiography will hardly add to his fame, but it will be sincerely welcomed by his many friends and admirers." G. F. Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Jl 29 '45 800w

QUILLIAN, WILLIAM FLETCHER. Moral theory of evolutionary naturalism. 154p $3 Yale univ. press

171.7 Ethics, Evolutionary. Naturalism A45-2853

"In this book Dr. Quillian offers an analysis of a type of ethical theory which has had wide vogue but has rarely been adequately examined by its defenders or opponents. Centering attention on Darwin, W. K. Clifford, Leslie Stephens, Guyau, and Westermarck, the author distinguishes between their descriptions of the rise of morality and the value judgments which they pass on it or its standards. A careful examination of the inner coherence of evolutionary and naturalistic moral theory reveals unacknowledged assumptions and inconsistencies, especially the illogical nature of the transition from descriptive to valuational statements. It is maintained that the naturalist's affirmations are largely convincing, while their denials and exclusions remain dogmatic and unconvincing." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"If Dr. Quillian had confined himself to a study of intellectual history, this might have been a more satisfactory work. . . But those who are led by the title and the Preface to expect a review of contemporary naturalist ethics will be disappointed, for Dr. Quillian centers his fire on nineteenth-century writers only. . . The extraordinary air of unreality which pervades this book is not due to the fact that its problems are old—most philosophical ones are—but to the fact that its approach is so highly formal." Richard Hofstadter
Ann Am Acad 241:180 S '45 400w

Reviewed by D. D. Williams
Christian Century 62:1354 D 5 '45 950w

Reviewed by M. G. White
J Philos 42:361 Je 21 '45 1000w

QUIMBY, CHESTER WARREN. Paul for everyone. 176p $2 Macmillan

225.92 Paul, Saint 44-9995

"Competent study of the thought and achievements of the Apostle Paul. Giving sufficient biographical and background material to enable the reader to place Paul historically, the author proceeds to reconstruct from Paul's writings his philosophy and system of the Gospel, in a simple and masterly fashion. Although author is undoubtedly aware of all the controversial problems raised by modern scholarship concerning his subject, he scrupulously avoids discussion of them, and gives us, instead, what is probably the best introduction we have to Paul's actual teachings as found in the Epistles." Library J

"Here is a book for those who would hastily brush up on their seminary courses, for those who wish to add fact to fiction as they read Sholem Asch's novel The Apostle, and for those who lack the time and historical background to ferret out Pauline Dogma from Scripture. . . The reader will lay down the book regretting its brevity." F. E. Luchs
Christian Century 62:206 F 14 '45 600w

"We endorse the book enthusiastically. This is an everyman's book on Paul." F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 159:16 Mr 1 '45 120w

Reviewed by P. S. Minear
Crozer Q 22:286 Jl '45 180w

Reviewed by G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 69:882 O 15 '44 110w

QUINN, VERNON. Picture map geography of the Pacific islands; with maps and drawings by Frank Beaudouin. (Stokes bk) 122p $2 Lippincott

919 Islands of the Pacific 45-8283

With text and seven full-page maps this book tells briefly of the geography and the history of these islands.

Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45

"The list of contents is arranged in alphabetical sequence, so it is unusually easy to locate places in which one is interested. Children are not the only ones who will take pleasure in this enlightening book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:463 N '45 70w

"Schools and libraries will welcome this information on an increasingly significant world area."
+ Kirkus 13:316 Jl 15 '45 70w

"Information given is simple, clear and concise with emphasis on 'history, native population, and way of life' in the islands, and the pictorial maps are a helpful feature. Its use will not be limited to the ten- to twelve-year-olds for whom it seems intended." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 70:1027 N 1 '45 80w

"It is so informing in both text and drawings that it will be read by boys and girls of almost any age."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:72 N 10 '45 40w

"It is the geography of heroes. It is also history reduced to essentials, put into simple language and brought as nearly up to the moment as a book can come. . . It is offered to children from eight to fourteen, but the whole family will read it." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 30 '45 150w

R

RABER, BENEDICT FREDERICK, and HUTCHINSON, FRANCIS WILLIAM. Refrigeration and air conditioning engineering. 291p $4 Wiley

621.56 Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery. Air conditioning 45-3050

"This volume, intended as a reference tool for practicing engineers and as a text for students, is concerned with the fundamental principles of refrigeration and air conditioning, rather than with a description of actual practice and equipment. In the presentation of data and the solution of refrigeration-cycle problems, the use of graphical methods is stressed. The topics discussed include cycles of vapor refrigeration systems, complex compression cycles, adsorption cycle, periodic heat transfer, psychrometric principles, ventilation systems, and airway design, together with descriptions of such new applications as the heat pump, radiant heating, and porous-coil humidifying. Problems and brief bibliographies are given at the end of each chapter." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:13 Ja '45

RABINOWITCH, EUGENE I. Photosynthesis and related processes [v] 1, Chemistry of photosyntheses, chemosynthesis and related processes in vitro and in vivo. 599p il $8.50 Interscience

581.13342 Photosynthesis (45-7293)

"Review of the work of plant physiologists, chemists and physicists on photosynthesis, the most important biochemical process, with emphasis on papers appearing since 1925. Among the topics are: photosynthesis and its role in nature, overall reactions and products of photosynthesis, primary photochemical process, etc." Library J

"The author is to be congratulated on a successful attempt to bring scientific order out of chaos in this exceedingly complex field." E. O. Wiig
+ Chem & Eng N 23:2146 N 25 '45 450w
Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:35 Jl '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:62 D '45 300w

RADDALL, THOMAS HEAD. Roger Sudden. 358p $2.75 Doubleday

45-3238

Romantic novel based on the rivalry of the French and English in Nova Scotia in the eighteenth century. The hero is an English adventurer from Kent, a follower of Prince Charlie, exiled after Culloden, who came to the New World in search of fortune. In the course of his adventurous career he found captivity, hardship, fortune, and the woman he loved.

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45

"The historical background of the novel, set as it is in Halifax and Louisburg during the rivalry of England and France for colonial empire, is interestingly delineated. Life among the Indians is accurately and entertainingly portrayed. The characters, if one had not met them so often before, would be unbelievable. It fits the pattern. It is an historical novel."
+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 25 '45 100w

"Good period and background story, but one cannot feel very deeply concerned over the fate of the hero and heroine."
+ — Kirkus 13:5 Ja 1 '45 170w

"Following in the wake of a long line of weirdly named heroes, it is no great surprise to discover that Roger Sudden is known to his intimates as 'Sudden' Sudden. . . Between the 'ecods' and "sdeaths' the most dilatory reader will pick up an excellent idea of the precise mechanics of founding one type of New World colony. Since the hero is presented as a die-hard Jacobite, machinations against anything Hanoverian supply the necessary extra wheels." Thelma Purtell
N Y Times p25 Mr 18 '45 140w

"No review of this book would be adequate that treated it merely as a work of fiction. Too much time was spent by the author in drawing on his knowledge of Indian life, and early English behavior on these shores, to warrant minimizing these phases by passing reference. He shows sound judgment in effectively employing a sampling style in many of his historical situations. . . He gives a shrewd picture of the poverty, filth, and hatred of the Indians." Harold Fields
Sat R of Lit 28:58 Ap 14 '45 750w

"The characters are well-drawn and the technical details of language, money and songs of the period seem authentic." C. S. DuPont
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 220w

RADIR, RUTH ANDERSON. Modern dance for the youth of America. 337p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

793.3 Dancing 44-7270

"A text for high school and college teachers." (Subtitle) The book is devoted to creative group work in the dance. Contents: Modern dance in relation to our culture; The other arts in relation to dance and the culture; Our heritage in dance; a consideration of the evolution of dance in the occident; Dance as education; Experiences in group communication through dance; Approaches to creative work in dance through manipulative and exploratory experiences; Experiences with various kinds of accompaniment for dance; Extending the dance experience of students; Future directions in dance. Glossary. Self-evaluation chart. Index.

Booklist 41:86 N 15 '44

"A very specialized type of inspirational text book for the teacher of modern dance. . . For a limited and highly special market."
Kirkus 12:396 S 1 '44 100w
Theatre Arts 29:378 Je '45 150w

"For school and college libraries where there is a need, or larger public libraries."
Wis Lib Bul 41:18 Ja '45

RADZINOWICZ, LEON, ed. See Craig, R. N. and others. Mental abnormality and crime

RADZINSKY, HARRY. Making patent drawings; most of the drawings by the author and Julius H. Lutz. 96p $3 Macmillan

744.43 Mechanical drawing 45-4889

"First book written on patent drawings. This volume illustrates the special technique of drafting for patent and trade mark applications. Appendix includes many drawings by the author and Julius H. Lutz, symbols, and some of the rules of the Patent Office relative to drawings and trade mark drawings." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

"Recommended for all libraries."
+ Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:27 Ap '45

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Who wants to live forever? 230p $2 Houghton 45-6402

"Story by one of the dependable western writers who strikes a modern note here in the introduction of a Black Market gang." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 42:111 D 1 '45

"Good yarn with plenty of action. It will be a sad day for us Western fans when, as and if Fate should ever decide that it ain't gonna Raine no mo'." Baron Ireland
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 300w
Wis Lib Bul 41:113 N '45

RAISON, MILTON MICHAEL. Nobody loves a dead man. 260p $2 Murray & Gee

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 D 2 '45 130w

"Rather confusing jamboree of crime, cinema cuties, and various varieties of intrigue. Lieut. Holden, of Hollywood homicide squad, keeps matters controlled."
Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 24 '45 40w

"Here we have one of those fleshly narratives of wickedness in Hollywood, complete with natives and transients in the throes of murder, passion and wisecracks." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p20 N 4 '45 90w

RALL, HARRIS FRANKLIN. According to Paul. 272p $2.75 Scribner

227 Theology. Paul, Saint 44-41898

"This book is an effort to answer two questions: What is Christianity according to Paul, and what is the value of Paul's interpretation to us today? Its first task is historical. It seeks to present Paul's thought fairly and objectively: to see him as a man of his day, sharing in its common modes of thought... But the supreme interest lies in the second question: Are Paul's conclusions valid for our day? What help can he give us for our interpretation of Christianity?" Introd

Booklist 41:180 F 15 '45

"You readers who have been looking for a book on Paul which unites the theological and the historical interests can now close the doors of your studies and with this book nestle down to several hours richly spent. The winner of the $15,000 fiftieth anniversary Bross award has given us this Religious Book Club selection with a distinctive emphasis... Scholarship is indebted to Dr. Rall, who has presented Paul's teachings not as a theology of infallibility but as a means of salvation, not as a book of letters but as a way of life, not as a system of doctrine but as a gospel of grace." F. E. Luchs
+ Christian Century 62:430 Ap 4 '45 750w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 159:16 Ap 1 '45 330w

"The volume is the outgrowth of four lectures delivered in 1942 on the Ayer Foundation at Colgate-Rochester. The author modestly suggests that the volume is not intended for the specialist, whether in New Testament or theology. But I cordially recommend it to both with the assurance that they, together with the layman for whom it is intended, will find it of distinct moment." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 22:283 Jl '45 450w

"One may admire Dr. Rall's learning, fairmindedness and great ability without necessarily accepting his conclusions. In this book he has made a notable contribution to Christian scholarship." J. H. Holmes
+ Weekly Book Review p14 F 25 '45 600w
Wis Lib Bul 41:45 Ap '45

RAMA RAU, SANTHA. Home to India. 236p $2.50 Harper

915.4 India—Social life and customs 45-4674

The daughter of a Bombay Brahmin family, who left her native country as a child, and spent ten years in England and on the continent, and returned to her home in India at sixteen, describes her impressions of India, its social life, and economic organization as it looked to her then.

Am Hist R 51:154 O '45 30w

Reviewed by Ann Leighton
Atlantic 176:136 Ag '45 210w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
+ Book Week p4 Je 10 '45 950w
Booklist 41:299 Je 15 '45
Bookmark 6:12 N '45

"In 'Home to India' Miss Rama Rau's highly personal account of two years in her native country, the reader will be refreshed by the author's simplicity, perceptiveness, charm and humor. . . [The book] combines both literary skill and intelligent, thoroughly mature thinking." Eveline Dienes
+ Boston Globe My 31 '45 360w

Reviewed by Francis McCullagh
Cath World 161:438 Ag '45 750w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson
Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 5 '45 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

"This little book [is] delicate and delightful. . . She sees India with clear, educated, unbitter and unbiased eyes. Probably she will never see quite so clearly again, for this was for her the moment that comes to each one of us, just before he or she falls in love: a moment that seems at the heart of the whirlpool, so still and so eternal does it feel." Anne Fremantle
+ Commonweal 42:412 Ag 10 '45 350w
Foreign Affairs 24:169 O '45 20w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 21:279 Jl '45 80w

"Absorbing detail and interesting conflicts; superficial phases of the problems underline the position of the foreign-educated in their own land. Not, perhaps, important as an analysis of the Indian problem, but a very human approach to it."
+ Kirkus 13:122 Mr 15 '45 250w

"A real contribution to our understanding of India. Author's ability will no doubt establish her as a leader in her native country. Recommended." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 110w

"Her story is told with the distinction that comes from honesty and unpretentiousness. . . The slim volume has no statistics but is full of sense and sentiment. And it is one of the most useful aids I have seen to the understanding in human terms of an important segment of Indian life." Virginia Mishnun
+ Nation 161:45 Jl 14 '45 300w

"Generally the book is touched with humor and a certain shrewdness in appraising fellow-Indians and their governors. Certainly the author comes to no oversimplified conclusions. This calm, sincere little book is indeed a plea for Indian nationalism. But the grinding is done very delicately and the axe remains invisible." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p4 Je 3 '45 450w

"Written . . . with great earnestness, considerable good sense, and even a little humor. The combination is a neat one."
+ New Yorker 21:83 My 26 '45 80w

Reviewed by Robert Okin
Sat R of Lit 28:16 Je 23 '45 750w

"Santha Rama Rau is herself an attractive young woman and her whole family as described in 'Home to India' is composed of charming people. Moreover, she writes not only with ease but with real humor, and her book should be read with interest by many who have shunned weightier tomes on the 'Indian problem.' It is a very personal story, but as the experience and opinion of an intelligent Indian —European-educated and approaching India originally with western prejudices and assumptions—it is far from unimportant. Whole segments of Indian life are missing from it since the author speaks only of what she knows personally, but of her own experience she has made an attractive and interesting account of one aspect of the new Indian scene." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 30 '45 420w

"A more delightful, more honest little book it is hard to imagine. It is not as serious as Gertrude Emerson's story of an Indian village, 'Voiceless India': yet the book touches the same problems, and lifts the curtain on the endless grass roots problems of hungry India. It is enjoyable narrative, not instructive exposition, and has the flavor of private letters, written, perhaps, to some school friend far away, avid for answers to questions about customs and personal affairs." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 27 '45 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 41:83 Jl '45

RAMO, SIMON. Introduction to microwaves. 138p $1.75 McGraw

537.5 Electric waves 45-3362

"A non-mathematical description of the physical basis for all microwave phenomena, for engineers and industrial men who desire an understanding of microwaves and their application. The book covers transit-time electronics, velocity modulation, radiation, transmission lines, resonant cavities and waveguides and correlates microwaves with lower frequency electricity in simple language and with a large number of diagrams." Publisher's note

---

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:28 Ap '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:62 D '45 240w

"Dr. Ramo's book will be equally welcome to the older generation of radio men who want to enlarge their knowledge, and to the novice who wants to learn at once the principles of this important branch of the art."
+ Weekly Book Review p21 O 7 '45 260w

RANDALL, JAMES GARFIELD. Lincoln, the president; Springfield to Gettysburg. (Am. political leaders ser) 2v il maps $7.50 Dodd

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 45-10041

Biography of Lincoln covering the years from 1860 to the Gettysburg speech of November 19, 1863. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:148 Ja 1 '46

"The many pen-portraits of the contemporary scene, generals, politicians, and abolitionists lend life to the pages; while that of Lincoln himself, though not portrayed with the customary uncritical eulogy, seems somehow to take on even greater grandeur when viewed so frankly as a sorely tried and confused human being, ever earnestly trying to seek the right answer to the perplexities which beset him." O. R. Corneau
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 7 '45 550w

"The historian who sets out to revalue Lincoln is confronted by almost insuperable difficulties. . . Yet Mr. Randall has come close to performing the miracle of saying something fresh about Lincoln and challenging, if not dislodging, the stereotypes. Availing himself of the rich mass of documentary and monographic material of which he is master, dredging up new finds from innumerable manuscript collections, he has added quantitatively to our knowledge of the man and of the period. Even more important, he has brought to his material a mind singularly objective, dispassionate, analytical and judicious." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Times p5 N 18 '45 2350w

"This life, of which the first two volumes are now presented, comes on the heels, in a sense, of Carl Sandburg's great work, and it is thus bound to be examined very critically. It should stand the test. As far as it goes (the second volume brings us to Lincoln at Gettysburg), Dr. Randall's biography is in many respects just as fine a book."
+ New Yorker 21:133 D 1 '45 200w

"It is seldom that a work of history contains the varied springs of satisfaction to be found in the first two volumes of Professor Randall's study of 'Lincoln the President.' Although its happy marriage of scholarship and art make it easy as well as rewarding reading, students of politics, statecraft, and military science will find it a valuable school of experience where history teaches through examples. . . The author's Indiana background, professional training, and pertinacious industry contributed to his equipment to treat the great subject he has essayed." G. F. Milton
+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 N 17 '45 1350w

"Except for the bypaths into which his emotion about McClellan and the Radicals lead him, Randall brings off, in these volumes, a tour de force of common sense. His evaluation of William Herndon's position as a trustworthy biographer of Lincoln is judicious and discriminating and his weighing of the Ann Rutledge story is fair and reasonable, even though he scarcely conceals his private belief that the 'romance' has been extravagantly romanticized. The book is an important one to the reader who wants to know what Lincoln did and why." Lloyd Lewis
+ — Weekly Book Review p1 N 18 '45 2150w

RANKIN, MARIE. Children's interests in library books of fiction. 146p $1.85 Teachers college

028.5 Children's literature—History and criticism. Books and reading A45-2909

"The organization and content of this book are dictated largely by the fact that the author is describing the procedures and findings of an investigation. The book differs from most of the earlier studies in the field in centering attention on one kind of material, fiction, preferred by a particular age group, junior high school pupils. Various approaches to the same basic information were used, and the results synthesized in reaching final conclusions. The various chapters report at length the books of fiction most popular with the group of pupils studied, and describe certain characteristics of the books preferred." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"The study presents many suggestions that should be a valuable guide to producers of children's literature and to those who select books for schools and libraries." T. H. Allen
+ El School J 45:599 Je '45 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:27 S '45 120w

RANSOM, ELMER INGLESBY. Fishing's just luck, and other stories. 160p $2 Howell, Soskin Agr45-130

Collection of twelve hunting and fishing yarns, some of which have appeared previously in Field and Stream, Outdoor Life, The Saturday Evening Post, and Sport Afield.

"Sportsman Ransom writes with such charm of the bass lake, the camp trail and the training of setters for quail hunts, that he rouses the old hunter-and-fisher Adam in every man to a pitch of howling excitement which can only be satisfied by prompt departure for the nearest stream or field." Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p6 Mr 4 '45 450w

Booklist 41:270 My 15 '45

"Mr. Ransom rationalizes hunting and fishing as follows: 'When an animal or bird has passed its prime it soon falls a victim to one of the many predatory animals which roam the woods and swamps. Much better, then, to outwit the patriarch at his best and quickly hasten the inevitable end.' The author's tips on how to do this outwitting form the substance of his book. For those who enjoy a certain style, plot and humor redolent of the great outdoors the collection will have a further value." Fowler Hill

RANSOM, E. I.—Continued

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 15 '45 300w

"The characters are human and unforgettable: Sam, the Perfect Fisherman, is the clearest."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 18 '45 90w

RANSOM, JOHN CROWE. Selected poems. 75p $2 Knopf 811 45-5099

This volume contains the author's choice among poems written over a period of twenty-five years, and previously published in Chills and Fever (1924); Two Gentlemen in Bonds (1927) and in periodicals.

Kirkus 13:121 Mr 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
Nation 161:138 Ag 11 '45 550w

Reviewed by Jean Wahl
New Repub 113:196 Ag 13 '45 1300w

"It is difficult in such a good book to single out excellence. But in 'The Equilibrists' and 'Painted Head,' Mr. Ransom has written great poems. 'Painted Head' should serve as a model for all young poets; it is one of the finest examples of a major metaphor completely worked out to a logical conclusion. Since Mr. Ransom's artistry and precision spring from careful workmanship and revision, one is rather hard put to turn the other cheek and chide him for publishing little. One can only say, in all sincerity, what a pleasure it would be to read more of his work." Howard Moss

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 8 '45 650w

"Ransom shares with Wallace Stevens—although formally more traditional than he is—a rather quizzical and quaintly conceited vocabulary. The mannerisms of the early work, as in his poignant elegies and the unforgettable 'Piazza Piece,' are perfectly suited to his subject matter. In his later work, the material tends to fade out, leaving what he calls 'a verbal eloquence' to operate more or less on its own."

+ — New Yorker 21:67 Jl 7 '45 120w

Reviewed by Richard Eberhart
Poetry 67:212 Ja '46 750w

"Mr. Ransom's manner sometimes becomes a mannerism; the old-fashioned words he is fond of such as 'lissom' and 'thole,' tend to make some of the poems precious, over-dainty; he uses too frequently the dangerous device of rhyming an accented syllable with an unaccented one. His particular style of cavalier precision seems difficult to sustain, and the oddness which is so beguiling in the best poems, falters—in such a poem as 'Armageddon'—on the edge of triviality. Mr. Ransom seems to have realized this himself, and to have cultivated, in the five poems written since 1927, a new and denser style. . . One of these poems, 'Painted Head,' is a very fine one, but the others are disappointing. . . But the relative failure of these later poems does not detract from what Mr. Ransom has accomplished; the best poems in this volume remind us again that he occupies an enviable and special place, a permanent place, in contemporary American poetry." Theodore Spencer

+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Jl 14 '45 750w

"The selection is a careful and judicious one, providing all the evidence necessary to define the author as one of the most accomplished poets of the period. It is easy to praise Mr. Ransom's work for precise and witty phrase, for elegant finish, and for delicate irony. But it should be remembered that the precision and wit are often here an index to warmth of feeling and depth of emotion; that the elegant finish is rarely mechanical and superimposed, but in general is the result of a true fastidiousness of mind; and that the irony is not casual or irresponsible, but is soundly centered in philosophical concern."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 S '45 120w

RAPER, HOWARD RILEY. Man aganist pain; the epic of anesthesia. 337p il $3.50 Prentice-Hall
615.781 Anesthetics SG45-325

History of anesthesia from its earliest beginnings to the stream-lined operations of today. The author is an American doctor. Bibliography. Index.

"It is a fascinating story told extremely well." I. Davidsohn, M.D.

+ Book Week p8 O 7 '45 360w

Booklist 42:143 Ja 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"Conscientious factually, this is a reasonably readable survey of the field—but I doubt if it will attract too wide an interest."

+ — Kirkus 13:307 Jl 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. F. Ashley-Montagu
N Y Times p28 Ja 20 '46 400w

"This is IT: the most exciting book about medicine—for the non-medical reader—since Paul de Kruif hit the jackpot twenty years ago." A. Q. Maisel

+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 O 27 '45 1050w

"Extremely well-written and thoroughly documented book. . . His narrative is a significant contribution to the history of science and will prove truly fascinating reading for everyone who has been or soon may be relieved of pain by an anesthetic during an operation, and that, of course, includes us all." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 S '45 1000w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore
Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 850w

"A book that is both readable and scholarly."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:59 D '45 240w

"Dr. Raper seems to have cleared up an obscure epoch in medical history, showing that no one man can be considered as the sole discoverer of anesthesia. But perhaps more important, he has written a most attractive book, full of wit, high spirits and scientific honesty, which will be found good reading by many persons outside the ranks of the professionally concerned." H. M. Parshley

+ Weekly Book Review p18 O 28 '45 550w

RATCLIFF, JOHN DRURY. Yellow magic; the story of penicillin. 173p $2 Random house
615.3292411 Penicillin SG45-144

"Characterized by Dr. Keefer, himself intimately associated with the clinical trials of this wonderful drug, as a unique example of collaborative efforts—scientific, industrial, and administrative—penicillin does indeed justify the name Mr. Ratcliff has given it—yellow magic. He has carefully traced its history through the research of the men who have struggled with it. It is a dramatic story beginning with the discoveries of Alexander Fleming in England when he found a mold that destroyed certain microbes, through the work of Dubos, Rammelkamp, and others until with a 'second era of chemotherapy in full swing,' Dr. Florey and his group saw penicillin accomplish in the body of a human being what it had accomplished in test tubes and mice." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

"Ratcliff's work has the pace and clarity and the story-telling magic that one would expect from so first-rate a reporter. His organization of a perfect welter of vital material—for everything was happening at once, helter-skelter, as on a battlefield, in Britain's and America's drive to assure this boon for the wounded—is admirable. As one expects from a good reporter also, the writer never intrudes on his story." Ellwood Douglass

+ Book Week p12 Ap 22 '45 400w

Booklist 41:233 Ap 15 '45

"Taken in its entirety, this little book presents an accurate picture of the development, almost overnight, of what is potentially a hundred-million-dollar business. . . 'Yellow Magic' reads very easily, the format is pleasing to the eye, and it can be recommended to the reader, lay or scientific, who wishes an interesting three-hour account of the discovery of penicillin and developments in its manufacture and use." R. D. Coghill

+ Chem & Eng N 23:1121 Je 25 '45 200w

"Although written primarily for the non-technical reader, the story of penicillin as told by Mr. Ratcliff is absorbing reading, albeit a bit on the dramatic side." J. R. Callaham
Chem & Met Eng 52:285 N '45 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

"A second biography of the miracle drug, penicillin, which dwarfs its predecessor (Sokoloff's Saga of Penicillin) on all counts."
+ Kirkus 13:48 F 1 '45 130w

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by John Senior
Nation 160:522 My 5 '45 170w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:38 Jl '45

"The facts are simply, accurately and vividly stated. Some of Ratcliff's interpretations of what such investigators as Alexander Fleming thought and did have no basis in the medical literature that has accumulated on anti-bacterial agents. It may be doubted, for example, that Fleming has no fondness for organized research of the kind conducted in every great industrial laboratory of this country and Europe. . . Fortunately, Ratcliff is so well informed that he does little gasping in astonishment. Yet we sigh for a writer who will present the research scientist not as a wonder-worker—a Merlin or Dr. Faustus—but as a man of exceptional gifts who knows how to use the scientific method and how to question himself. The real wonder is that we had to wait for penicillin all these years, while it was right under our noses." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 25 '45 500w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 Mr '45 550w

"An informative and compact history, Yellow Magic makes an outstanding contribution to the literature of popular science. . . The reading of this accurate and understandable account of penicillin should promote respect for other hard-working pioneers in scientific research, as well as inform the general public concerning this life-saving chemical."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:44 Je '45 100w

"Mr Ratcliff is a facile journalist—almost too facile. A scientific reviewer must often raise an eyebrow. For instance, pure penicillin is not yellow but white and the present impure yellowish form may soon disappear from the market. For another instance, four milligrams is referred to as a quantity hardly enough to be visable to the naked eye, yet actually it is more than enough to heap on the head of a carpet tack. And there is too much waving of the magic wand in this book, not enough of the hard scientific research." Gerald Wendt
Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 22 '45 800w

Wis Lib Bul 41:51 My '45

RATHBONE, ALFRED DAY. Shall we scrap our merchant marine? 397p $3 McBride

387.5 Merchant marine—U.S. 45-35046

The author's answer is in the negative. After a long historical introduction, in which he goes back to the days of the Phoenician traders, he explains the contributions of a strong merchant marine and a strong navy to national economy. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. C. Cook
Am Pol Sci R 39:1235 D '45 230w

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 My 13 '45 400w

Booklist 41:333 Jl 15 '45

Foreign Affairs 24:164 O '45 20w

Kirkus 13:27 Ja 15 '45 170w

Library J 70:532 Je 1 '45 70w

"There is not a great deal that is new in 'Shall We Scrap Our Merchant Marine?' But the author has filled his shot-locker with ammunition in large quantities, borrowed from the maritime history of the nation and the world. The object lesson is old as the hills. The author simply asks that it be borne in mind day after tomorrow. He notes that the phrase, 'Trade follows the flag,' is green with age, and that it was years ago when Capt Mahan said that sea power equals warships, plus bases, plus merchant ships. But we must realize that it is just as true today, and that for security and prosperity we must keep our shipbuilding skill sharp, encourage a balanced foreign trade which is carried on with customers in an enlightened manner, and earn the world's respect, which has always been accorded a powerful and efficient maritime power." G. W. B.
Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 19 '45 600w

"In reviewing the tragic errors of the American government in connection with merchant shipping, Mr. Rathbone has presented some telling facts. Unfortunately, they are interspersed with some very queer history, indeed, and the dramatic episodes with which he has pointed up his morals are often equally dubious." H. W. Baehr
— + Weekly Book Review p10 S 2 '45 450w

RAU, SANTHA RAMA. See Rama Rau, S.

RAUCH, BASIL. History of the new deal, 1933-1938. 368p $2.50 Creative age

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 44-8426

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Rauch's History of the New Deal is well organized, readable, and interesting. It will appeal to lay and specialist readers alike. One rarely finds recent history so well put together. The author is a warm advocate of the New Deal. The material is intensely controversial. Yet he will offend the sensibilities of few readers. A few factual errors mar occasional pages. . . Yet such slips are few and far between and they detract but little from a workmanlike and useful survey." R. A. Brady
+ Am Econ R 35:723 S '45 1050w

"Mr. Rauch has made a noble attempt in a hazardous field. He has produced as good a description of the New Deal as we have, without making votes for any candidate. His struggle has been with the multiplicity of happenings in the United States between 1933 and 1938, a multiplicity any one of whose units would justify a treatise. The sum total has been obscured to the contemporary eye by world affairs and partisan politics, by the denunciation of opponents and the overpraise of friends. Until a better book has been put together, this History of the New Deal may well live at the elbow of any student of the Roosevelt period. To write a better one, the author will have to fight complexity to the very death." F. L. Paxson
+ Am Hist R 50:577 Ap '45 550w

"The style is clear, flowing, and readable. The tone is one of sympathy with the New Deal, and of warm certitude. If the author was troubled in mind as to just what he was doing as he selected, emphasized, and decided, he carried no substantial baggage of doubts and qualifications as he wrote 'the' history of the New Deal. This volume is to be followed by another dealing with the period since 1938, 'national defense' and 'global war.' Readers of the present work will look forward to the second with expectancy." C. A. Beard
Am Pol Sci R 39:196 F '45 230w

Reviewed by C. W. Shull
Ann Am Acad 240:175 Jl '45 370w

"An excellent book." Roy Hillbrook
+ Current Hist 8:153 F '45 140w

Reviewed by Katherine Smedley
Social Studies 36:373 D '45 1050w

"Mr. Rauch has the irritating quality of assuming that no one previously has tried to write about the New Deal; his book, presumably, is done from the 'source documents.' To disregard the host of historians and economists who have also engaged in speculations about the New Deal—many of whom Mr. Rauch has undoubtedly read—is supererogatory. The real political history of the New Deal obviously remains to be written when all the documents—personal recollections, correspondence, departmental files—will be available."

RAUCH, BASIL—Continued
Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 25 '45 330w

Reviewed by W. A. Sturges
Yale R n s 34:569 spring '45 1050w

RAWLINSON, ALFRED EDWARD JOHN, bp. Christ in the Gospels. 128p $2 (6s 6d) Oxford

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels. Jesus Christ—Messiahship A45-1079

This work by the Bishop of Derby "is meant for the educated man whom present-day troubles have awakened to his need for some religion but who is troubled by a vague idea that modern criticism has in some way emptied the Gospels of all value. No one can suspect Dr. Rawlinson of ignorance of, or of indifference to, modern criticism, but the picture he draws of Christ is both deeply scriptural and most appealing. As the introduction says, critical questions are not obtruded in the narrative, but in four appendices we have a clear and adequate statement of the synoptic problem, of Form criticism, of the relation between the historical and doctrinal presentation of the Gospel facts, and of what one may call the theology of crisis." (Manchester Guardian)

Christian Century 62:209 F 14 '45 110w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 159:19 Jl '45 230w

"I submit that Dr Rawlinson's casual strictures on the liberal attempts to get behind the various strata of tradition to the real Jesus (not necessarily a 'simply human Jesus' as he suggests), to the effect that they have 'failed' and 'broken down,' stand in need of drastic modification. When we study seriatim the successive pictures of Jesus given in Q (probably the work of an eye-witness), Proto-Luke, Mark, canonical Luke, canonical Matthew (very markedly), and the Fourth Gospel (still more markedly), we cannot without falsity deny that there are radical differences, however great and unique be the figure portrayed in the earliest of them, and whatever the degree of underlying unity seen to exist between them. Liberalism insists that theological eyes shall not be simply shut to these differences, or turned away from them; and it emphatically declines to be politely bowed off the stage because it insists, as against neo-orthodoxy, on proper account being taken of them." C. J. Cadoux
Hibbert J 43:190 Ja '45 1000w

"Whether or not he commands full agreement at every point, the author merits the hearty respect and gratitude of his readers. I commend the book especially to scholars in other fields who desire a 'refresher course' in current study of the Four Gospels." P. S. Minear
+ — J Religion 25:233 Jl '45 200w

"Distinctly a book for to-day." C. G.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 8 '44 180w

"A Christianity, ethical but not theological, has no root either in the earliest Christian records or in what lies behind them. That conclusion becomes steadily more plain. To the confirming of it Dr. Rawlinson has brought the accumulated resources of trained scholarship, a clear mind, and a ready pen." J. K. Mozley
+ Spec 173:202 S 1 '44 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Ag 5 '44 850w

RAY, JAMES RALPH. Story of the U.S. army air forces; the inside story of the fighting men and fighting airplanes that constitute the greatest air armada in the world; with more than 100 il. in color by the author. $1 Garden City pub. co.

623.74 U.S. Army air forces. Airplanes, Military 45-3056

In picture and text describes the organization of the Army Air forces, its personnel, material, and training. Maps on end papers show locations of sixteen Air force battle areas. Detailed charts show parts of planes and positions of guns. No index.

"The facts are here—'all that can be told'—in rather laborious style, but headlined and arranged in practical form for factual purposes."
+ Kirkus 13:137 Mr 15 '45 120w

"Worth buying pre-bound." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 70:415 My 1 '45 80w

"An authentic, comprehensive report of AAF's men and machines. . . It is an accurate, interesting account of individual technical and aerial triumphs that form a mighty pattern of victory. It should prove popular with an air-minded younger generation." J. E.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 150w

RAYNOLDS, ROBERT. The obscure enemy. 176p $2.50 Smith, Richard R. 45-4448

"In an industrial city transformed into an inferno of noise, grime, furnace heat and hideous glare to meet the demands of war, life can become almost as distorted and as frenzied as it is in the area of battle, even though the hazards are different and less heroic. Here in a novel which has touches of symbolism and haunting eloquence, Robert Raynolds describes such a city and the violence to which it is an accomplice." Weekly Book Review

Christian Century 62:838 Jl 18 '45 30w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ag 11 '45 400w

Reviewed by K. J. Cooley
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 480w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p8 Je 24 '45 130w

REA, GARDNER. Gardner Rea's sideshow. 128p il $2 McBride

741.5 Humor, Pictorial. Caricatures and cartoons 45-8617

A selection of this artist's cartoons from the pages of the New Yorker, Collier's, and other periodicals.

"Rea's ruminations will repay study, even when they are pitched in a minor key. Some of his comment on ration boards and barracks blues may seem a trifle dated now, but that is of minor importance." C. V. Terry
+ N Y Times p7 S 9 '45 90w
Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p5 D 2 '45 130w

READ, D. H. C. Prisoners' quest; a presentation of the Christian faith in a prisoners of war camp. 159p $1.50 Macmillan [6s Student]

239 Christianity. Sermons 45-980

These talks were first delivered to "Officers and their orderlies, of all ranks from Brigadier to private" in a German prison camp. The men had been captured in France in 1940, or Greece and Crete in 1941. The author, a chaplain in the British army, spoke on such subjects as: Is God a myth?; Why believe in God?; The fact of Christ; What is the New Testament?; Paul and the moral dilemma; Determinism; Humanism; The Christian doctrine of man; Atonement; Faith.

Christian Century 62:209 F 14 '45 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 159:16 My 1 '45 120w

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. World within a war. 44p $2 Harcourt [6s Faber]

821 World war, 1939—Poetry 45-2889

"This volume contains all the poems written since the publication of Poems 1914-1934 which the author cares to preserve. A few of the shorter poems have already appeared in a volume of selections (Thirty-five Poems) which was published in England in 1940, and most of them have been printed in various periodicals. The title-poem was first printed by the Hampden Press in 1943 in an edition of fifty copies." Note

Christian Century 62:910 Ag 8 '45 70w
Kirkus 13:126 Mr 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 D 27 '44 180w

"This is grave, meditative and sensitive verse, and reflects the mind of an intelligent and sincere liberal, but sometimes one feels that it is the work of one who is a poet by determination rather than instinct." Conrad Aiken
New Repub 112:514 Ap 16 '45 180w

"If Mr. Read believes that the realisation of the intrinsic nature of the self and of nature and of poetic beauty is the answer to destruction, it is not quite easy to see why he often argues so ideologically. I can't see how, if one holds that the answer to Hitler and capitalism, etc., is the sun, the inner self and 'poetry like a pennon,' one should ever want to argue with them or be anything except what one is or seek anything except to enter into the nature of things as they are. Here I think there is something unresolved in Mr. Read's philosophy. These poems seem to have emphasised this problem, and I should expect his next volume to be very different from this one." Stephen Spender
New Statesman & Nation 29:29 Ja 13 '45 550w
New Yorker 21:66 Je 16 '45 30w

"The saddest thing about the book is that it is so typical of contemporary British verse for the prevailing temper of English avant garde magazines is political without program and dimly religious without much conviction. It is hard not to see this as a sign of decadence." H. R. Hays
Poetry 66:220 Jl '45 600w

" 'A World Within a War' is his first book of verse since 'Poems 1914-1934' and, in its moving simplicity, reaches far beyond merely esthetic groups to companionship with humanity as a whole. Read has too fine a mind to rely on popular appeal, or to drop into facile or typical lines by way of illustrating the source of his deep emotion. . . Throughout the volume, one finds the influence, not of Eliot, his old friend and colleague, but of the early Imagists. But Herbert Read has advanced beyond the chiselling of perfect cameos wrought in a private world. The cadences are broader and more native to human speech." Alfred Kreymborg
+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 Mr 24 '45 300w

"Many of these poems . . . treat, as the title of the book suggests, of the war and its impact upon a mind and sensibility that had taken the impress of an earlier war and in the years between had watched with growing disillusionment. . . Yet the note is not one of despair as it is not devoid of a deep underlying pity for poor abused and persecuted man."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p575 N 25 '44 600w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Weekly Book Review p12 Je 10 '45 550w

READERS' guide to periodical literature, Nineteenth century. See Nineteenth century Readers' guide to periodical literature

REAVIS, WILLIAM CLAUDE, and COOPER, DAN HENRY. Evaluation of teacher merit in city school systems. 138p pa $1.50 Univ. of Chicago. Dept. of educ.

371.13 Teachers, Rating of A45-912

"The purpose of evaluation in relation to teaching service is not to eliminate the personal judgment of the executive but to supplement that judgment with other standards . . . and to restrict the capricious exercise of that judgment by means of verifiable records and democratic procedure. The results of the evaluation of teachers are used in determining salaries, in planning promotions, in determining tenure, in stimulating teacher growth, in providing protection to teachers, in making reports to the public, and, in the last analysis, in promoting the welfare of school children." School R

"A distinct contribution to educational research and to the improvement of teaching." V. M. Rogers
+ El School J 45:474 Ap '45 900w

"This stimulating and helpful monograph should become a guide for every school administrator, school-board member, and school supervisor who is interested in the improvement of teaching and in the welfare of children." L. M. Hauptman
+ School R 53:369 Je '45 900w

REDDEN, JOHN D., and RYAN, FRANCIS ALOYSIUS. Freedom through education. 204p $2.50 Bruce pub.

323.44 Liberty. Education—U.S. 44-9323

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by J. H. Fichter
Cath World 162:279 D '45 450w

"Readers of Freedom through Education will no doubt accept it as a frank and forceful exposition of a Catholic viewpoint in education. Those who must reject the basic assumptions underlying the application of selected tenets to the interpretation of either freedom or education may still discern many acceptable premises on which the authors have constructed a challenging appeal for the directing of the resources of education toward the achieving of more and better forms of freedom." P. W. Terry
El School J 45:359 F '45 700w

Reviewed by Thomas Haynes
N Y Times p22 Mr 11 '45 280w

"The greatest value of this study is that it presents with classic clearness the Catholic ideals of freedom and education. Here one will find the reason for the existence of church schools. If one wishes to know the case against secular education, here it is. Dr. Redden and Dr. Ryan have prepared a document on the history of American education that will be consulted by all who wish to have an authoritative statement of the educational ideals of the Catholic Church in America." H. S. Ficke
+ School & Society 61:175 Mr 17 '45 230w
Springf'd Republican p6 My 16 '45 190w

REDDING, JOHN M., and SMITH, THOR. Wake of glory. 268p $2.50 Bobbs

45-8452

A story of American fliers in England ending with the invasion of Normandy. The protagonist is Doug Bruce, appointed CO of the 834th Bombardment Group after his predecessor had been reported lost over Germany. Doug gets off to a bad start with his men and with the English beauty who had been Elliott Saunders' girl, but in the end he wins out.

Kirkus 13:260 Je 15 '45 150w

"The book is a curious mixture of credibility and obvious contrivance. The Fortress raids and the routine at the base, with Doug's anxious attempts to win the confidence of his men, are convincingly handled. By comparison the romantic aspect seems shallow and trite; Anne has only a meager reality and the episodes relating to her are little above the love-pulp level." F. W. Leary
+ — N Y Times p22 S 23 '45 310w

"Here is none of the sensitivity, poetry, or penetrating philosophy of a Saint Exupéry or a Nevil Shute, no attempt at subtlety of style or characterization, but excellent, factual reportage in the American idiom and with trimmings sure to please everyone except Aunt Prudence." G. F.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 O 6 '45 400w

"A novel of war and love which reads convincingly both ways." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p22 O 14 '45 150w

REDLICH, FRITZ. Essays in American economic history; Eric Bollmann, and studies in banking. 199p pa $2 Stechert

332 Bollmann, Erick. Banks and banking—U.S. 44-5190

"The first half of this volume is devoted to Eric Bollmann, an able adventurer who lived in America from 1796 to 1814. In addition to an attempted rescue of Lafayette from an Austrian prison and participation in the Burr fiasco, Bellmann was a merchant and manufacturer in Philadelphia and at various times wrote pamphlets on the monetary and banking systems of the United States and Great Britain. . . The rest of the volume contains three essays: 'Mercantilist Thought and Early American Banking' . . . 'Free Banking, the History of an Idea and Its Exponents' . . . ; 'A National Debt is a National Blessing.'" Am Hist R

Reviewed by W. A. Morton
Am Econ R 34:592 S '44 1050w

"These essays will interest economic historians, particularly those concerned with the history of economic ideas and their influence on American history. Among other things they show the hang-over of mercantilist thought in America after it had been largely discarded in England." H. U. Faulkner
+ Am Hist R 50:401 Ja '45 240w

REECE, BYRON HERBERT. Ballad of the bones, and other poems; introd. by Jesse Stuart. 93p $2 Dutton

811 45-7915

"Mr Reece uses the ancient ballad form, long a favorite of 16th and 17th century English writers, to narrate his American tales of our Southland. A native of Georgia, himself a farmer, his ballads deal with elemental folk who live primitive lives close to the land. His verse is always strongly cadenced and filled with unusual as well as strikingly beautiful epithets. At times there is a puckish, gossamer touch to his lines which on other occasions take on a stern biblical flavor. Often a quaint bit of philosophy will be surprisingly imbedded in the concluding two lines of his poems." Springf'd Republican

"Reece writes ballads of lyric quality in the 16th and 17th century manner and while they have charm, it is the charm of anachronism. A young man with the look of our century is parading before us in an antique costume. . . When he writes a modern poem Reece is more comfortably at home. There is a pleasant echo of Elinor Wylie in 'Send Forth the Hunter,' but the writing and the thought are gratefully of our time." Leo Kennedy
+ — Book Week p19 O 28 '45 180w

"'Here I thought, is a poet,' Jesse Stuart recalls in his introduction to the first book publication of Byron Herbert Reece. He would seem to have thought right. The poetic integrity is inescapable. . . Throughout the seven parts, paraphrasing the Bible narrative, the poet maintains the momentum, the grace and power, with which he starts. The romantic ballads, though less forceful, are charming and well written." P. P. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by S. H. Hay
Sat R of Lit 29:14 Ja 19 '46 360w

"Vigorous poems of distinctive power these, from the weird originality of the title poem to the sweet singing strength of 'A Song of Sorrow.'" C. M. Sauer
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 300w

REES, JOHN RAWLINGS. Shaping of psychiatry by war. 158p $2.50 Norton [10s 6d Chapman]

132 Psychology, Pathological. World war, 1939-1945—Psychological aspects
SG45-8

"In this book the Consulting Psychiatrist to the British Army presents a review of psychiatry in war and suggests its role in the peacetime that lies ahead. . . [He] stresses the importance of morale in both military and civilian life and looks forward to the part psychiatry can play in solving problems of mental health in communities and nations." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This reviewer recommends the book to all those with sociological, medical, and administrative interests." J. A. Kindwall
+ Ann Am Acad 241:197 S '45 550w

Reviewed by L. A. Schwartz
Book Week p14 Ap 22 '45 700w

Booklist 41:249 My 1 '45

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham
New Repub 113:540 O 22 '45 430w

Reviewed by B. D. Lewin
Sat R of Lit 28:23 Ap 28 '45 850w

"Once more we have a noteworthy book based upon lectures given in memory of Dr. Thomas W. Salmon. . . In three long chapters, 'The Frontiers Extend,' 'Opportunities Emerge,' and 'The Way Ahead,' plus an appendix, 'The Tasks of Psychiatry,' a very comprehensive picture of the changing situation in psychiatry is given, and of the responsibility of all psychiatrists 'not only to undertake the tasks that are given [them] but also to see that the standards of psychiatry and of psychiatrists are constantly improved.' Thought-provoking subtitles show how the difficult situations produced by war provide especially challenging opportunities for this branch of science. Selection of manpower and of officers, psychiatric contributions to training, the building of morale, discipline, returned prisoners of war, battle neuroses—all these mean opportunity for service to the individual as well as to the war effort."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ap '45 360w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 120w

REICH, HERBERT JOSEPH. Theory and applications of electron tubes. 2d ed 716p il $5 McGraw 537.53 Vacuum tubes. Electric circuits

44-9446

Second edition of a work first published in 1939 (Book Review Digest, 1939). This "edition brings up to date new developments during the past five years in this field. College text on vacuum tubes, electron tubes and electronics. New section on electron dynamics. Chapters on 'Detection and Modulation' and 'Oscillators' largely rewritten." (Library J)

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:653 Ag '44 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:66 O '44

REICHENBACH, HANS. Philosophic foundations of quantum mechanics. 182p $3 Univ. of Calif.

530.1 Quantum theory. Physics—Philosophy
A44-4471

"A philosophical analysis of the concepts of quantum mechanics rather than a contribution to the solution of the physical problems. Part 1 deals with the general ideas upon which quantum mechanics is based; part 2 reviews the mathematical formulations; part 3 discusses the inadequacies of the corpuscle and wave interpretations, and outlines the interpretation constructed by the author. This is expressed in terms of a three-valued logic—true, false, and indeterminate and presents the advantage of ruling out causal anomalies. A knowledge of calculus and symbolic logic is necessary for an understanding of the exposition. The author is Professor of Philosophy at the University of California." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by A. C. Benjamin
Ethics 55:320 Jl '45 330w

"Although quantum mechanics is barely twenty years old, the number of philosophical commentaries on it is legion. But not many of them—not even when written by distinguished physicists—are more than exercises in speculative imagination, woven around half-digested illustrations borrowed from modern atomic researches. Professor Reichenbach's book is a happy exception to this general rule. It does not derive a theology, a cosmology, or a system of values from the latest findings of sub-microscopic physics; but it does offer a sober analysis of the logical structure of quantum theory, with a view to exhibiting the basis for the latter's allegedly acausal assumptions. Accordingly, whatever judgment may finally be required on Professor Reichenbach's interpretation of quantum mechanics—a matter upon which specialists are still not in agreement—his book is a contribution to the serious literature of the philosophy of modern science." Ernest Nagel

+ J Philos 42:437 Ag 2 '45 3100w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:64 O '44

REIK, THEODOR. Psychology of sex relations. 243p $3; text ed $2.25 Farrar

157.3 Sex. Love

A well-known European psychologist, now resident in America, discusses the relationship between love and sex, and advances criticisms of the theories of Freud, whose pupil he once was.

Book Week p10 S 16 '45 250w

Booklist 42:90 N 15 '45

Kirkus 13:290 Jl 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber
N Y Times p30 O 28 '45 500w

"From the literary point of view, 'The Psychology of Sex Relations' is an uneven performance. In his effort to write simply enough to be understood by the intelligent layman, Dr. Reik sometimes overshoots his mark by a mile or two, but this is forgivable in an author who is writing in a borrowed language, and often very well indeed. . . But after the sweet ignorance of Dr. Marie Stopes, the moralism of Havelock Ellis, and the clinical jargon of most psychoanalytic writers, many of these pages seem almost inspired. They constitute a courageous and important expedition into what will probably always remain the dark continent." William Maxwell

+ — New Yorker 21:80 S 15 '45 430w

"Doctor Reik writes engagingly and well. Professionally he appears to be founding a school of what he calls 'neo-psychoanalysis,' Freudian in general, but arrayed against Freud's libido theory. His discussion is intelligible to the general reader, though profound and detailed, and it is well illustrated with apt material drawn from literature and from professional experience. The author is earnest and also witty, and he has some new and striking ideas that will surely tend to promote human happiness." H. M. Parshley

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 6 '46 450w

REIK, THEODOR. Unknown murderer; tr. from the German by Katherine Jones. 260p $3 Prentice-Hall [12s 6d Hogarth]

364.34 Crime and criminals. Criminal psychology. Evidence, Circumstantial 45-3774

"Translated most ably from the German by Dr. Katherine Jones, this book contains an interesting collection of facts concerning the circumstantial evidence that often connects innocent persons with murder. It also relates the methods employed in various cultures to punish the guilty persons. It devotes several pages to the psychological traits of both the criminal and the prosecutor, the Freudian theory being applied in both primitive and modern hunts for the unknown murderer. Many stories are told of actual murder and other crimes, including a chapter on 'The Canary Murder Case,' by S. S. Van Dine. Dr. Reik is a psychoanalyst of wide reputation, and was an associate of Freud for thirty years. Here he analyzes the human mind in its devious and criminal processes." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

"This publication can scarcely claim more than historical interest." Svend Riemer
Am J Soc 51:260 N '45 420w

Reviewed by W. C. Reckless
Am Soc R 10:804 D '45 650w

"It is not necessary to agree with the author in all his conclusions. We may find that he stresses some points too much and splits a hair or two in his argumentation, but the fundamental value of the book lies in the originality of its outlook. The psychology and psychopathology of the criminal have been the subject of discussions and investigations from all possible angles. Reik finds a new approach by turning the much worn problem upside down. He points out that the perfect understanding of crime and the criminal has to go hand in hand with the inquiry into the psychology of those whose duty it is to detect the culprit and to sit in judgement over him." H. Sachs

+ Harvard Law R 58:753 My '45 700w

Kirkus 13:118 Mr 15 '45 170w

New Yorker 21:92 Ap 14 '45 160w

Reviewed by B. D. Lewin, M.D.
Sat R of Lit 28:26 N 17 '45 550w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 My '45 150w

"Dr. Reik's scholarship is awesome, his documentation massive, but so, alas, is his prose. It is unfortunate that so fascinating a subject as murder should have been presented in so heavy-handed a manner. His case illustrations sound like reports of chemistry experiments. Most serious, however, is his failure to present a sufficient psychoanalytical background in support of his judgments of human instincts." Harry Daum

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 600w

"The purpose of this book is to examine the criminal and criminal justice in the light of psychoanalysis. This approach offers exciting possibilities, but Dr. Reik seems to have made his investigations under the student's lamp rather than in the field." David Dressler
Survey 81:246 S '45 450w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Murder on Angler's island. 274p $2 Random house 45-3046

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p7 My 20 '45 90w

Bookmark 6:16 My '45

Boston Globe Je 6 '45 60w

"Not top drawer for her—but good."
+ — Kirkus 13:98 Mr 1 '45 80w

"A skillful story to which a lively cast of characters enormously contributes." E. H.
+ New Repub 112:654 My 7 '45 120w

"It is a murder mystery with Inspector McKee functioning at his best." I. A.
+ N Y Times p8 My 13 '45 130w

"Not as satisfactory as the mysteries turned out by Miss Reilly in the days when she wrote like herself instead of like Mrs. Eberhart."
New Yorker 21:88 My 5 '45 100w

"Standard brand."
Sat R of Lit 28:34 My 26 '45 30w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 180w

"Mrs. Reilly works out a credible puzzle with exciting effects at every stage, adding island scenery and a peek into the WAC barracks for good measure." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 6 '45 130w

REINHOLD, HANS ANSGAR, ed. The soul afire; revelations of the mystics. 413p $3.50 Pantheon bks

149.3 Mysticism 45-4210

"The pieces chosen by Father Reinhold represent most of the great Christian writers, old and new—the Apostles and the Early Fathers of the church, oriental and western. The Mystics of the Middle Ages as well as the Mystics of the centuries which saw the development of an increasingly secular culture are represented, together with authors of the nineteenth century

REINHOLD, H. A., ed.—Continued
and contemporary writers. All of them labored to transcribe experiences which defy words into a language understandable to their fellow-men." N Y Times

"The editor has done an excellent piece of work. It is the best book of its kind in English. Fanatical mystics have seduced the masses into a war of death and hate. The effective admiration of the mystical dynamism in the Christian way of life will hasten the advent of peace in the souls of men if not in the world at large." J. S. Middleton
+ Cath World 161:182 My '45 600w

"The present volume is not a discussion of mysticism but an anthology of selections (in length, from detached sentences to passages of three or four pages) from the writings of persons who may be called mystics, or, in a few cases, of those who report the mystics' accounts of their own experiences or an observer's description. For the student of mysticism, whether credulous or critical, this is an invaluable source book. Each section is introduced by passages of Scripture. Aside from these, the only non-Catholic contributors are Plato, Plotinus, Tagore, George Herbert and John Donne. This is consistent with the Imprimatur which the book carries, with the compiler's avowed intent to exhibit a 'mysticism acceptable to the church,' and with his basic principle that 'correct theology is of course the basis of orthodox mysticism, and a mystic whose life is a contradiction to the law of the church will be regarded as a fraud.'" W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 62:400 Mr 28 '45 1550w

"Here is a delightful, but also a maddening, book. It is so full of solid spiritual nourishment that one hates to complain of the sloppiness of the serving." Anne Fremantle
+ — Commonweal 41:519 Mr 9 '45 1600w

"This will appeal not only to mystics, but to all seeking souls, Catholic and Protestant."
+ Kirkus 13:131 Mr 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
Nation 161:15 Jl 7 '45 850w

Reviewed by Sigrid Undset
N Y Times p7 Mr 4 '45 1050w

Reviewed by Robert Fontaine
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 480w

REISS, OTTO F. How to develop profitable ideas. 202p il $3 Prentice-Hall
659.1 Advertising. Inventions 45-4423

"Author, associate editor of Apparel Arts and fashion editor for Esquire, presents an analysis of methods for development of practicable ideas using those which have proved successful and many new ones plus one hundred photographs and drawings to illustrate creative thinking in advertising, publicity, designing, fashion manufacturing, retailing and other fields." Library J

Booklist 41:335 Jl 15 '45
Kirkus 13:198 My 1 '45 80w
Library J 70:687 Ag '45 70w
Special Libraries 36:210 Jl '45

"This is distinctly a 'how to' book. Replete with interesting fact stories and illustrations it is a work book of rules for development of new ideas. More than a score of ingenious 'things to do' are suggested." E. L. W.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 23 '45 240w

RELS, ADOLFO COSTA DU. See Costa du Rels, A.

RENAULT, MARY, pseud. Middle mist [Eng title: Friendly young ladies]. 282p $2.50 Morrow [9s 6d Longmans]
45-1022

Psychological novel, tracing the devious routes to happiness of three young English women. They are Leo who had run away from her dreary, fault-finding family in Cornwall, and lived on a Thames houseboat, writing novels under a masculine pseudonym; Helen, the nurse-artist with whom she shared the houseboat; and Elsie, Leo's inhibited younger sister, also a fugitive from the impossible parents.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p3 F 25 '45 360w

"Miss Renault is a good craftsman. She never lets sympathy get between her and the people she writes about. It's too bad some of them weren't less humorless, but they are written of with care and with an analytical insight which is rare. The emotional balance of the story is a delicate one and beautifully maintained."
+ Boston Globe p7 F 21 '45 190w

"A novel of elusive relationships, of psychological motivation and sensory reaction, which reveals once again a talent of considerable interest and ability. Writing with analytical delicacy, with a sharpness edged by satire, her end results are however confused by lapses into extremes, exaggeration. . . For the more discriminating reader."
+ — Kirkus 12:548 D 15 '44 170w

"A little straining after unusualness is to be perceived [but] it is vivacious and genial." Harold Brighouse
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 1 '44 80w

"The opening chapters in Cornwall are amusing, sensitive and well written. . . As soon as Elsie gets into the world of the friendly young ladies, Miss Renault's troubles begin. Thenceforward, whenever things are seen from Elsie's angle, the book is lively and real; her misunderstanding of the personal relationships around her is well done, and so are the few later actions to which her author commits her, including the final one. Unfortunately, a fog descends whenever Miss Renault tries to get inside her grown-ups, and a most promising book gets lost. . . Miss Renault is at the difficult stage of being able to express subtle thoughts and truths about personality without being able always to attach them to personalities whom they fit; but she is a very able writer, and her younger heroine alone makes her book worth reading." Henry Reed
+ — New Statesman & Nation 28:256 O 14 '44 330w

"Deft, searching little novel. . . Miss Renault has told a very lively and human story." R. E. Pitts
+ N Y Times p10 F 18 '45 500w

"Aside from the fact that 'The Middle Mist' is very capably written, it has an enormous nostalgic attractiveness. . . I imagine that we would once have considered this a superior novel, and even now it's undeniably charming." Russell Maloney
+ — New Yorker 21:73 F 24 '45 150w

"The heroine, the almost faultlessly attractive and enigmatic Leonora, struck me as particularly portentous about herself and her tragedy?—is that the word? I could not quite make out what was up with Leonora. But, as I say, the book began very well, with Leonora's foolish little sister at home in Cornwall—and I thought that something real might come of Elsie. But nothing did. She faded into being just tiresome to no purpose once she got to the houseboat and the friendly young ladies." Kate O'Brien
Spec 173:204 S 1 '44 200w

"Miss Renault has beautifully balanced her characters and has written her veiled story with warm sympathy and understanding. There is a peculiar trancelike quality to the entire novel which admirably fits the development of the theme and creates a sense of retarded drama. The author's touch is very deft, her prose exceptionally fine. Her novel relies on subtle explanation of character through meticulous accounts of little acts performed in apparently commonplace daily life, all of which build carefully to a stunning emotional climax." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 420w

"Miss Renault says some shrewd things, and sometimes says them very well. . . But the amorous complications and subtleties of emotion in which Leo, Helen, Joe and Peter are involved take the stuffing out of the tale.

Miss Renault has many gifts, but as yet seems unable, except in flashes, to use them with restraint and imaginative sincerity."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p425 S 2 '44 380w

"'The Middle Mist' is a perceptive and amusing novel, with breadth of sympathy as well as irony. Its freshness and wit make Miss Renault's work well worth watching." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p6 F 18 '45 500w

